CURB MARKET OPEN TUESDAY

Plans Complete For Direct
Sale Of Produce Here.

BUYERS IN NUMBERS

Busy Time Expected In Sale Of Tobacco Warehouses—Farmers Urged To Bring In Much Produce.

Plans are complete for the opening of the curb market here on Tuesday,
May 16.

The market will be located in front of the two new tobacco warehouses here on Greene street, the Guilford and the Planters. There will be no license, no rent, no fee of any sort, no tax, no interference to prevent the sale of produce by the farmers. The produce they bring to the curb must be their own, produced by them of course, in order that they be exempt from license.

The Women's club here has pledged itself to see that there be not less than 100 women on hand at the opening. They asked, in turn, that the men responsible for the market see that there be several wagons of produce. It is realized by those who have worked to see the plan inaugurated that the success of the market depends upon there being a sufficiency of produce offered and plenty of buyers on hand.

Many Advantages.
It is believed that the market will be a big success. The advantages are many, both for seller and buyer. The former saves time in not having to peddle from house to house and will,
it is confidently believed, have no trouble in receiving a better price than is offered at the grocery stores of the city, for the latter must have a profit on handling the produce again. But there are no restrictions as to selling at the market alone.

From the standpoint of the housewife of the city the market should be a success because they will be enabled to supply themselves with food for their families first hand, getting it fresh from the country, before it has passed into another's hands. In addition there is the advantage of being able to have such a variety to select from as will be offered at the curb market.

The market will be held six days
in the week.
The agricultural bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, the Women's club, and the Guilford Farm bureau have worked hard to establish the market. They urge the farmers to be sure and come to the market, early, with their best produce, much of it.

Benefits Both.
The following statement in regard to the market was made by E. B.
Garrett, Guilford farm demonstration agent:

"The desire of the producer to sell direct to the consumer is fully realized by the fact that many farmers are selling their produce direct to the consumer by going from house to house in the city. This is an expensive method for both the consumer and grower. Because it takes more of the farmer's time to peddle from house to house than it would if they had a place to meet on the curb and have a place to display their goods.

"This is a very tiresome task, too,
for the farmer, for he does not know where the buyer for his product is unless he has an old established trade. If he has to resort to a house-to-house canvass to sell his products he is considered a pest by many and is treated as such for he is always ringing the door bell to know if the housewife wants any of his products.

"Then, too, the housewife is placed at a disadvantage, for she has only one wagon to choose her produce from. If she could go to the curb where there are a number of growers there with their produce she could choose her variety of vegetables from the best that comes from the market and the producer would be able to sell just a bit cheaper at the curb than if he had to peddle his truck over the city.

Wonderful Opportunity.
"I see in the curb market a wonderful opportunity for the grower who grows a good product and grades it before he offers it to the consumer to command a premium over his neighbor who has products of the same class to sell, but dumps them on the market with three or four grades in one bucket. It will put business into his methods. No business concern could run on the slipshod methods most farmers operate their business on.

"The farmers of Guilford county are very fortunate in having a place offered them by the city of Greensboro where they can meet the housewives of the city to sell their produce to them. The housewives are anxious to buy direct from the producer and I know the spirit of the farmers of Guilford is to make this curb market a place where the buyers will want to come to buy from them.

"The place offered the farmers is the concrete space just in front of house—Graves Decorated and Dinner Served To Veterans.

Memorial Day was observed here Wednesday, with an interesting program, carried out at the courthouse, after which the graves of Confederate veterans were decorated and a dinner served to the veterans.

The exercises began at 10:30 with "Dixie" led by Ralph Hodgkin, the entire audience singing. Rev. H. O.
Nash, pastor of St. Andrew's Episcopal church here, offered the invocation.
Soleos were rendered by Mrs.
Clem Boren, Mrs. Henry Ware and Ralph Hodgkin, accompanied by Miss Nell Westcott and Miss Helen Rankin. Then O. C. Cox, a member of the local bar, introduced the speaker of the day, A. L. Brooks, of this city.
Mr. Brooks made a simple but impressive speech, paying tribute to the Confederate soldier.

Automobiles carried the veterans and their friends to Green Hill cemetry, there decorating the graves of others, the procession being led by the Sons of Veterans.
The dinner to the veterans was served in the annex of West Market street Methodist church. It was given by the Sons of Veterans, and was a very enjoyable affair.

WISE METHODS OF REFORM

The International Sunday School Lesson,

By REV. E. P. BILLUPS,

Assistant Pastor West Market Street Methodist Church.

II Chronicles 30:1-27.

The Good King.—This week we study Hezekiah, the good king and wise ruler of Judah.

Hezekiah "trusted in the Lord God of Israel, so that after him was none like him of all the kings of Judah, nor any that were before him." When he came to the throne, the nation was trembling on the verge of destruction; for from his father he inherited "an empty treasury, a ruined peasantry, an unprotected frontier, and a shattered army." But the most deplorable condition that the young king found was the decadence of religion on the part of the people, and he knew that the first step towards a peaceful and prosperous reign was to bring the people back to the religion of their fathers. This he did. He cleansed the temple and made it ready for worship, offered sacrifices, and summoned the people to the feast of the passover. And it should not be overlooked that Hezekiah's wisdom and righteousness was due to the prophet Isaiah, whose convictions and teachings Hezekiah wrought into deeds.

The People Summoned.—Hezekiah sent out messengers, summoning the people "from Beersheba even to Dan, that they should come to keep the passover unto Jehovah, the God of Israel, at Jerusalem." It was a call back to the ancient faith of their fathers. And is not this precisely the need of today? We boast of our greatness, and we are a great nation; but it is a "frantic boast and foolish word" if we fail to recognize that we owe this greatness to the religious faith of our fathers. In the past we have owed much to a sound religion, and at every crisis in our national life we have been guided by the counsels of faith. But it seems that the rugged faith of our fathers has given way to a species of intellectualism that denies the fundamentalism of faith. We have made great material advances, but we have not made corresponding moral advancement. We are obsessed with the spirit of commercialism; we are in a mad rush after things, and have lost our peace and our power; and the only way to regain our peace and our power is to return to God. The need of the hour, from the exalted office of the Presidency to that of the humblest justice of the peace, is a sane leadership in the fundamentals of faith. It is addressed to us even more urgently than to Israel. God invites us "by His providence, by His voice within, by the voice of Jesus Himself, who is ever saying to each of us, by His death and passion, by His resurrection and ascension, 'Turn ye, turn ye, why will ye die?'" The voice is not always heeded. Hezekiah's widespread invitation was not graciously received for some mocked. But "God is not mocked." One man and God can work miracles. Like Hezekiah, He trusts; perseveres and is unafraid.

Wise Reforms.—Great reforms are not always sweeping, as in the time of Luther and Wesley. Whether or not they come as great cataclysms depends upon the conditions which exist when they take place. There are some things that must go, but generally speaking there is no need for the services of "I Smash'em and You Wreck'em Company." Wise reforms are always gradual and constructive. Men talk today of a need of a reformation; they are always talking it, but there is no need of such. Not a reformation but a transformation is the need of the work. Men need to be transformed by the renewing of their minds. Our need is soul reform, and that means first of all a thorough house cleaning. It means the banishment of sin from our lives and the enthroning of Christ. The world will be saved by individuals being saved through Christ. It is a slow process—slow perhaps because we are slow to carry out the divine command; but in obedience to the commandment of love we are moving steadily to "That far off divine event, Toward which creation moves."

GREAT NUMBER OF TOBACCO CONTRACTS

Campaign For New Members In Co-operative Marketing Association Meeting With Success.

Raleigh, May 9.—Over 500 contracts reaching the Raleigh headquarters of the Tobacco Growers' Co-operative association during the past week indicate the success of the campaign for new members throughout North Carolina.

The greatest meeting ever held in western North Carolina, according to J. B. Swain, field representative of the association, took place at Dobson in Surry county, where 1,500 tobacco growers pledged to increase the present sign-up of 8,000,000 pounds of their tobacco to a total of over 10,000,000 pounds.

Over a thousand acres of tobacco were signed up recently in Person county, following the announcement of H. W. Winscled, warehouse man, at Roxboro, that Person county was out to lead the state.

With 7,000,000 pounds out of 11,000,000 pounds signed up before this announcement Person county is rapidly advancing to first place.

Fifty merchants and business men of Goldsboro after meeting with President Norwood of the association have pledged their unqualified support in helping to gain an overwhelming membership for Wayne county.

Oliver J. Sands, general manager of the association, addressing the state convention of North Carolina bankers, said, "No wonder that no great economist, no great thinker, no great editor, no man devoted to the common weal anywhere, has been found who opposes the co-operative principle." Mr. Sands said "The co-operative marketing associations have come to build and not destroy. They exist for the benefit of all the people and not for any particular number."

According to the official leader of 70,000 organized tobacco growers, who is recognized as one of the south's outstanding bankers, "The banking business would go to smash if the borrower always fixed the rate of interest and the conditions under which money is loaned. The merchant could not long continue in business if the buyer always fixed the prices. Exactly this happens with the farmer. The grower and the producer has been without a representative in the marketing of his product. The new system proposes to change this and have the grower represented."

Look To Lightning Bug To Alter Radio Methods

Peoria, Ill., May 11.—If science can discover how the lightning bug's sending apparatus flashes light waves present day radio science may be superseded, E. G. Shalkhauser, professor of physics and radio science at Bradley Polytechnical Institute here, said today.

Professor Shalkhauser believes that the fire fly can send out an electric magnetic wave, but its source is still a mystery and this he is investigating.

"If we could find this source, I think we could throw away all our antennae, audion bulbs, and other apparatus, because in my belief the lightning bug may have a little power plant of his own more highly perfect than any fruit of radio science," said Professor Shalkhauser. "It has been proved repeatedly that the wave transmitted by the bug is a cold light wave. The light wave, heat wave and radio wave are the same in a sense because they have the same frequency. It may be possible to tune down to a sufficiently low wave length to discern the bug code."

FARM DEMONSTRATION

Six hundred and eighty-four dollars of accumulated wealth in farm properties per country dweller in North Carolina in 1919, according to the last census.

The grand total of farm wealth in lands, buildings, machinery, and livestock was one and a quarter billion dollars, but the average per country inhabitant was less than $700.

After two and a half centuries, that's what the farmers of the state have been able to save out of their enormous crop totals and per-acre yields year by year.

Six hundred and eighty-four dollars looks like a pittance when compared with a per capita country wealth of $8,113 in Iowa, $7,261 in South Dakota, and $6,826 in Nebraska.

Forty states make a better showing in this particular, and among them are twelve southern states—Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arizona, Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee, South Carolina, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, and Florida.

In all the Union only seven states rank below North Carolina in the accumulated farm wealth per country inhabitant.

5th in total gross crop values—that was our rank in 1921.

9th in the per-acre production of gross crop values in 1921.

And—

1st every year in the south in the per-acre production of cotton and tobacco values.

But—

32nd in the per-worker production of crop-wealth in the census year 1919.

And only—

41st in the per capita accumulation of wealth in farm properties the same year.—University News Letter.

PLANS FOR ERECTION OF MODERN MARKET HERE

Plans for the erection of a modern market here, for the merchants of the city, to cost $350,000, were laid before directors of the Chamber of Commerce Monday night. The market company has the backing of several companies manufacturing equipment and ice machines and proposes to buy the land and erect a building in which there would probably be space for the marketing business of 30 merchants. The merchants would be furnished service, heat, refrigeration and janitor service. The company wants nothing but the moral support of the Chamber of Commerce.

HOME DEMONSTRATION

The care of growing chicks, especially during very warm weather, is most important, and every boy or girl who is a member of a poultry club or is raising chickens should give them the best of care at this time if he or she wishes to succeed. The baby chicks may be smart little fellows from strong, vigorous parent stock, and they may have been brooded carefully for the first two or three weeks, but unless they receive proper care and management during their later growing period they will not develop properly, and many of them will be lost through sickness or disease.

The chief essentials to proper growth are good coops or houses, cleanliness, proper feed and water, shade and free range.

Coops and Houses.

Growing chicks should be provided with large, roomy coops or houses which will give them a comfortable place to stay at night and during stormy weather. No particular kind of house is necessary, but it should be so built that it will provide the chicks with lots of light, pure air and sunshine and protect them from dampness and storms of all kinds. It should also be arranged so that it can be cleaned easily and frequently, which is very important.

If brood coops are used, do not let too many chicks go into one coop at night, as crowding will cause them to become overheated, resulting in improper growth and sometimes in dead chicks. As the season advances and the chicks become larger, some should be removed and placed in other coops to prevent crowding. When possible, it is best to provide larger quarters. A good house can be built from dry-goods and piano boxes at a small cost. In a house of this sort the same care should be taken as in brood coops not to crowd the chicks.

FINDS WEDDING RING LOST IN A BARN 25 YEARS AGO

Franklinton, May 11.—While catching chickens in a barn 25 years ago, Mrs. J. O. Green, Sr., lost her wedding ring. There was a diligent search made, but it had long since been given up as lost for good. A few days ago it was found in a corn field half a mile from the house. It is in a perfect state of preservation, even the engraving is perfect. No doubt the ring was hauled out into the field with the barn yard manure. The field has been in constant cultivation ever since.

NEW BERN'S CURB MARKET IS SUCCESS

Housewives Quick To Take Advantage Of Opportunity—Farmers Well Pleased With It.

In view of the fact that the curb market will open here Tuesday morning, May 16, the following from the New Bern Sun-Journal on the opening of a similar market there last Saturday is of interest:

New Bern's first experience with the "curb market" today was a decided success, in spite of the rain and generally inclement and unseasonable weather.

Early this morning the farmers began to arrive in town with a big variety of produce. Tables were placed on the lawn adjoining the curb in front of the court house and on these were placed hams, lettuce, chickens, vegetables of all sorts, eggs, etc.

The housewives were not slow in responding. The first purchase was made by Mrs. Clyde Eby shortly before 8 o'clock. The women began gathering shortly afterwards and many dollars worth of produce was bought by them.

So successful was the first day of the "curb market" that it will be held again next Saturday. It is hoped to make the affair permanent throughout the summer. Both the farmers and the housewives seemed greatly pleased with the result of today's sales and purchases. Some of the farmers said they were rather skeptical about bringing their produce, because they were not sure that the women would buy. After the sale this morning, however, they stated that they would bring a large variety of articles next Saturday and would also tell their neighbors about the success of the market.

Mrs. Sedgewick Trying To Recover Automobile

Suit against Sheriff D. B. Stafford was started Thursday by Mrs. Basil H. Sedgewick, of High Point, for the recovery of her automobile, seized for the Home Banking company, of that city, after her husband was arrested on a charge of misappropriating funds of the bank.

It is complained in the suit that the car is Mrs. Sedgewick's, not her husband's.

FEDERAL AID ROAD SYSTEM MILEAGE WILL BE 180,000

When the federal-aid highway system, provided for by the recently enacted federal highway act, is completed there will be a network of roads 180,000 miles in length covering the whole United States. The time required for the completion of the system will depend upon the rate at which the necessary federal funds are provided, say officials of the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture, which administers federal-aid money.

An idea of what these roads will mean to the country can be gained by studying the effect of roads built in recent years and picturing what would happen should they be torn up and left in their former condition.

TRYING TO FIND WHAT IS FAVORITE PERFUME OF FLY

Washington, May 11.—What perfume does a fly prefer?

Uncle Sam would like to know. "If we knew," said Dr. L. O. Howard, chief entomologist, "we'd mix it with poison and kill off the pests at one swoop."

Lacking such a weapon, Uncle Sam is going ahead with the usual campaign against flies this summer. Traps and poisons are urged, and especially careful elimination or disinfection of possible breeding places. This must be done on a wide range, says Dr. Howard, for tests with 260,000 flies show that they range as far as 15 miles from their breeding places.

SHOULD GET ABOARD.

A significant report from Lexington, Ky., was printed in The Patriot last Monday, to the effect that members of the Tobacco Growers' Cooperative association in Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio will receive on May 20 a second payment on their crops aggregating $9,000,000. The first payment was for the same amount.

Somebody is buying a lot of tobacco from the association and paying an immense sum for it. There is no getting around that.

Those farmers who plant tobacco in Guilford county who have not yet joined the association should not hang back any longer. When the flying squadron covers the county on the week beginning Monday, May 15, those who are out should be prepared to get in, to get aboard and to go along with the others.

Let them ask all the questions they want to ask. That is the reason the flying squadron will make the trip.

They want to answer questions, to explain the plan fully. There is nothing to conceal, nothing doubtful, nothing to hold back. It is a business proposition through and through, the association a collection of farmers determined to get a fair price for their tobacco, which means a fair price for their labor, and for the labor, in many cases, of their families.

The men who have set their hands to the plow are not looking back. They mean business. They remember the long years behind them, when they worked, slaved, for nothing and they are sick and tired of that. If they are to make a living, a fair living, something more than a mere existence, they must have a fair price for their tobacco.

In past years the tobacco farmers have tried to do something to the price of tobacco by meeting and passing resolutions. That is past now. Everybody knows that nothing is accomplished by passing resolutions, least of all anything affecting the price of farm products. It can not be done that way. Who cares for resolutions that the price of tobacco should be higher? But this is business. Good men, men who know what to do and then go ahead and do it, are in charge. With the tobacco growers behind them, success seems assured.

The farmers who have got behind them are to be praised. Those who are still outside should get behind.

COLLEGE NEXT.

The boys and girls being turned out now by the high schools of the county should not consider their education finished. There are still vast stores of knowledge before them, much training to be acquired. Their development is far from complete.

Commencement should be with them, as many of them as can make it so, the beginning of a fuller, more complete education. They should not stop now, but all of them who can should prepare themselves further for the struggle of life by acquiring a college education.

It is true that a college education is not free. It costs something, but there is before every boy and girl the knowledge that others have conquered obstacles in the way of scanty funds for prosecuting their studies further, thousands and thousands of boys and girls who made the most of their scanty opportunities and wrote their names high. They found a way, at a time when it was harder than it is now to go through college.

The parents of this year's high school graduates who are able to send their children through college should do so by all means. The young man and young woman need all the equipment they can get for life. The money that a man has can be no better invested than in educating his children. He can leave them his money, it is true, but he has no guarantee that it will not be wasted. He does not know what will happen to it. Others may get it, but what his children put in their heads can not be taken away. It can not be squandered. It can not be pawned.

It stays with them. It is theirs alone.

But what does a farmer need with a college education? It is asked. He will be a better farmer because of it. He will be better able to meet other men, with whom he will be obliged to come in contact. Aside from the personal benefits derived from culture, he will be worth more to himself, his family and the community, the state, as a general thing. Of course there may be exceptions, but as a broad rule it can be stated that he will be worth more with an education.

But what will a farmer girl want with a college education? It is asked. It will make her more alive to the responsibilities, make her more capable for the many duties devolving upon the rural woman, worth more to herself, her family and the community.

Don't stop.

NOISE, THAT'S ALL.

Shouting that taxation is too high, the Republicans of the state have launched their attack on the Democratic administration. They say that they would reduce taxes.

Yet the state of North Carolina levies no taxes for state purposes on the property of the citizens of the state. It derives its income from corporation and franchise and corporation income taxes, inheritance taxes and on the incomes of persons able to pay them. How would the Republicans decrease those taxes? How can they decrease taxes that do not exist? An ad valorem tax is levied by the counties, but the state administration gets none of it.

But the taxes on business are so severe, Republicans claim. Would they have the state to remit those against the big corporations? Besides, the federal taxes on business are greater obstacle to recuperation than the state taxes, but the Republican state convention had the audacity to commend the national administration, with the whole country sweating under the load of taxation imposed by a federal Congress.

The Republican candidates for Congress from North Carolina will have—in fact are already having—a lot to say about the burden of taxation. It was their party members, with a majority in Congress, that levied those taxes. Do the Republican candidates for Congress mean to say that they would go to Congress and work against the leaders of their own party, the ones who imposed those levies, the "high taxes on business"? Surely none of them would have the nerve to go to Mr. Moxie, the Republican house leader, and say to him, "Mr. Moxie, in the interest of the people of North Carolina, I must ask you to reduce the burden of taxation. If you do not I will have to do something to you." Imagine, if you can, a Republican congressman from this state, newly elected, saying that. You can't imagine it; nobody can.

From the way some of these Republicans, wanting to go to Congress, talk about the necessity of reducing taxes you would think that it was a Democratic majority in Congress that set the levies now in force. But they did not, for the simple reason that the Republicans are in power and they wrote and adopted the tax bill.

The federal government spends money like water. It maintains an army of civil workers. Washington is packed with them and they are flung all over the country. You are helping, through the prices you pay for what you have to buy, the wages of that big army. The federal government is now in the hands of the Republican party. Yet shall we send more up there to join in the program?

Taxes too high! That is a peculiar thing to hear Republican candidates for Congress say. Who do they think fixed those taxes?

Mexico's continued absence from the front page does not necessarily imply that she is a back number. It may simply mean that the Mexicans have decided to go to work.

MOSTLY NONSENSE

By Gee Gee Dee.

THE FOSSIL tooth of a large ape that lived in the region of Nebraska thousands of years ago has recently been discovered by a geologist. In fact, the geologist, Harold J. Cook, declares the tooth half a million years old. It is a molar tooth, about half an inch wide at the top.

Perhaps some people who have trouble with aching teeth feel that their teeth must be about half a million years old; otherwise, they could not ache so effectively. But one of the most painful experiences must be the cutting of political wisdom teeth. All politicians undergo such an experience. Should they kiss the babies during the campaign? Should they be quick to make promises and slow to keep them? Ought they to spend a lot of money in an effort to secure the popular verdict? Those are some of the questions which must be answered and the answering of which often is accompanied by the cutting of political wisdom teeth. However, sometimes the wisdom teeth simply will not come through. In such cases the politician should seek another profession, for he will never make a fair percentage of hits in the political firmament without such wisdom teeth.

The scientist can tell you just exactly at what rate of speed the rays of the sun travel. He knows how far the moon is from the earth and can calculate with a remarkable degree of nicety the distance between Jupiter and Saturn, for instance. But political stars have a disturbing habit of shooting wildly, without due regard for mathematical laws. Furthermore, the voters have a disconcerting way of stepping on the feelings, in a manner of speaking, of the aspiring politician. The orthodox rules of science will not apply, nor can the ingenuity of the politically inclined person avail to determine future movements of the popular will. Political lightning often strikes in unexpected places; similarly, at times, it manages to avoid the ballistics of the hopeful. The politician knows that two and two make four, but he cannot tell just how the pollholders will get along with the counting of the ballots on election day; there never are enough votes to go around for all aspirants.

The truth of the matter is that few things could be more uncertain than political prophecies, while, on the other hand, few things are more fascinating. Some men ordinarily accounted astute prophets in the political sphere confidently predicted that Harry S. New would defeat Albert J. Beveridge for the Republican senatorial nomination in Indiana the other day, but Mr. Beveridge won by a rather imposing majority. Similarly, during recent months many prophets have volubly emitted prophecies to the general effect that Woodrow Wilson no longer could exercise any real influence in American political life. To such persons the recent demonstration of a large number of ladies who went to the Wilson home to acclaim him as a great man must have proved very enlightening. Then during recent weeks Mr. Wilson has had a number of illuminating things to say about James A. Reed, who is seeking the Democratic renomination for senator in Missouri. The former President's openly expressed opposition to Mr. Reed may have a potent effect upon the latter's chances at the polls; in fact, it may be a deciding factor against the plans of the obstructionist senator for popular vindication. But, there now, we are about to become drawn into that ever fascinating field of political prophecy. Let's change the subject before we make a brace of predictions that may or may not be sustained by subsequent events.

Breaking into the movies some time is easier than breaking out of them.

TWO NEW CANDIDATES IN GUILFORD COUNTY

Prof. T. E. Whitaker Offers For Re-election To Legislature; George A. Garrett For County Board.

Prof. T. E. Whitaker, principal of Oak Ridge institute, has definitely decided to offer for re-election as a member of the state house of representatives from Guilford county. He made this fact known yesterday when questioned by a representative of The Patriot in Greensboro.

For some weeks Professor Whitaker has been considering the matter carefully. It is known that a large number of citizens of the county have been urging him to permit his name to be used as a candidate for the legislature, but he did not reach a definite decision until yesterday. Professor Whitaker was named by the Democratic executive committee of the county last year as the party's nominee for the legislature to fill the vacancy caused when D. L. Donnell, then one of Guilford's representatives in the general assembly, was appointed on the board of county commissioners to succeed the late W. C. Tucker. The Oak Ridge principal also served with distinction in two sessions of the legislature about a score of years ago. Last fall the Republicans placed no candidate in the field against him.

In this issue of The Patriot George A. Garrett, well known citizen of Julian, definitely announces his candidacy for county commissioner. For some time friends of Mr. Garrett have insistently mentioned his name for a place on the county board, such representations having been especially strong from the southeastern section of the county in which he resides, and he finally decided to offer for the Democratic nomination.

DEMONSTRATION IN HONOR OF WILSON

Methodists In General Conference Pay Tribute To Former President—Flood Of Cheers.

Hot Springs, Ark., May 10.—A demonstration in honor of former President Wilson; adoption of resolutions of greetings to Mr. Wilson; President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes; the reading of reports on the collection and disbursement of centenary funds; the transaction of a quantity of routine business occupied the attention here yesterday of delegates to the nineteenth quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south.

The outburst came with the introduction of a special resolution which lauded the former president for his efforts toward the establishment of international accord and congratulated President Harding and Secretary Hughes on the work done by the Washington conference. When the reading clerk spoke Mr. Wilson's name his succeeding words were drowned in the flood of cheers and applause.

WILSON IS FIGHTING CANDIDACY OF REED

Former President Calls Missouri Senator a Marplot and Asks His Defeat.

St. Louis, May 10.—Referring to United States Senator James A. Reed as a "marplot," former President Wilson, in a letter to Governor Lon V. Stephens, made public today, asked the defeat of Missouri's senior senator to "redeem the reputation" of the Democratic party.

The letter under date of April 27 to Mr. Stephens, follows: "My dear Governor Stephens:

"Your letter of April 22nd has gratified me. I am glad to be sustained in my own judgment of Reed by your own closer knowledge of him and I shall hope and confidently expect to see him repudiated by the Democrats at the primaries. Certainly Missouri can not afford to be represented by such a marplot and it might check the enthusiasm of Democrats throughout the country if their comrades in Missouri should not redeem the reputation of the party by substituting for Reed a man of the true breed of Democratic principle. I am sure your own great influence will contribute to the desired and expected redemption.

"Please accept assurances of my entire confidence in the Missouri Democrats and believe me, with best wishes,

"Sincerely yours,
"WOODROW WILSON."

Will Go Past Quota In Near East Relief

The $15,000 quota for Guilford county in the Near East Relief campaign has been raised, according to announcement from Charles A. Hines, of this city, chairman in charge of raising the amount. All the contributions are not yet in, but he is confident that the 250 children this county is expected to take care of are provided for, that the quota will be exceeded.

Of the amount subscribed, it is stated that about $13,000 was given by Greensboro people, $1,000 in High Point and $1,000 was received from persons in the county outside those two cities.

This campaign was different from the ordinary type of campaign for funds in that no one was solicited after the fashion of the usual "drive," but reliance was placed in appeals through the newspapers.

D. F. SILER IS NOW WITH F. & M. FARM AND TRUST CO.

Announcement of the appointment of D. F. Siler as assistant cashier of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank and Trust company, of South Greensboro, is made elsewhere in this issue of The Patriot. Mr. Siler is considered a banker of splendid capabilities and his wide experience also an important factor. His connection with the F. & M. became effective yesterday.

A Happy Man.

A Georgia paper claims to have found the happiest man in the world. The man lives in north Georgia. He has six fiddles, ten children, thirteen hounds, a deaf and dumb wife and a moonshine still that has never been spotted by enforcement officers. No doubt the Georgian is a happy man, but we believe we know a gentler homo who is getting more joy out of life than the Georgian. Our hero is a negro, about 6 feet high. He preaches in the summertime and shoots craps in the winter. He can wear an overcoat in August without discomfort, and a seeducker in January without feeling the cold. Any body's shoes will fit him and all of his neighbors raise chickens. He wields a razor so savagely that every negro in the community is afraid to kick one of his dogs.—Honey Grove Signal.

PERIWINKLE HOUSE

The Story Thus Far:

Virgil Drace, a young Northerner of wealth and position, journeyed south a few years after the Civil War, bound upon a secret mission. On the Mississippi river steamboat he came face to face with a girl of striking beauty, who disappeared before he could discover her identity. Drace made friends with Liberty Shottle, a young man of good family, good education, a sense of humor and a passion for gambling, who sold himself to Virgil for money with which to play.

CHAPTER II.

Drace sat musing over the strange creature who had just left him, but soon his mind flowed down another channel, far different from a whim or an amusement—his mission in the South, secret, grim and desperate. But life on a river steamboat in that day left little time for brooding; for, a few moments after Shottle left to risk his liberty and Drace's hundred, a roustabout thrust his head in at the door and announced that down on deck there was to be a throwing and tying match. The big fireman of the Leona was about to encounter Vicksburg Joe for the championship of the river.

In an instant Drace was on his feet, all his instincts keen and ready to jump. He was something of a boxer and wrestler, but he had not been taught in this peculiar art of tying an adversary once one has thrown him. And there was that in his mind which made the acquisition of this knowledge seem to him desirable indeed.

As he joined a group of men making their way below, he overheard the Colonel, Miss Lucy, and another, explaining the gentle game. "Tying a man once you have thrown him," the Colonel was saying, "is the climax of prowess. I saw Edgett throw and tie Nick Pat in at a barbecue at Mount Zion campground, and I have cause to remember it, for the young lady I went with deserted me for the hero, sir—actually stuck flowers into his hair. Here we are."

Two enormous fellows were struggling, while nearby lay a convenient rope. Finally Vicksburg Joe tied the fireman, and he lay helpless, unable to get up.

"I will give you five dollars if you can throw me and tie me that way," called Drace to the victor when the excitement had a little subsided.

Joe looked at Drace a moment. The young man looked powerful enough to be dangerous, but—five dollars was five dollars. He smiled, bowed, spread out the wrinkled rug and took Drace by the hand to lead him forth. To the astonishment of all, Drace threw Master Joe; but he could not tie the champion.

"Show me how it's done," said Virgil, "and I'll give you the money."

For a long time, and until the Colonel and Shottle were worn out with waiting, the two struggled; and so apt was the student that he succeeded finally in turning the master over and tying him. But it seemed that the burly champion was too willing, and Drace insisted on another fall. And now, though the struggle was genuine on Joe's part, Drace tied him. Still more, another five promised, and Virgil was willing to quit.

"Finest sport I ever had!" he said as he turned away to the upper deck again to avoid the questions and congratulations showered upon him.

Drace was musing—not, it must be confessed, upon the serious purposes which had brought him to the South, but upon that girl of the red roses—when Shottle appeared again. Liberty stood in his presence, not with a droop but straight in the manly resolution to discharge the duties an adverse fate had thrust upon him. In the belief that he would make him look more like a slave, he now wore his coat turned wrong side out.

"Master, I salute you," he remarked.

"All right," said Drace. "Turn your coat. I want my slave, the grinder of my mill, to appear respectably clad. You may sit down."

"I thank you, sir."

"You didn't last long."

"No, master. The tangled-hairer bag kicked me sideways, like a cow. In only two pots! But what can you expect of a man that has an ace-fall beaten. How long can a man preserve his freedom at that rate? And a fellow with a spindle chin and a nose no bigger than the average would beat me with four jacks. Crush me! And he would have crushed Julius Caesar just the same. Well, after all, freedom has many responsibilities. As a slave I'll cultivate what virtues I can get hold of, and look toward old age and a cabin on the hillside. And now, as it is natural for every man to hide his degradation, will you permit me to call you Virgil in the presence of other people?"

"I thought you didn't believe in the natural thing! But all right; I grant your request. And now I suppose I'd better give you some pocket-change. It isn't well for even a slave to be broke."

The slave's face brightened with hope. "You couldn't make it as much as five dollars, could you?"

"No, thirty cents."

Shottle took the money and sat drooping. Drace gave him a cigar, and they smoked for a time in silence. At last Shottle looked toward Drace, his face guileless of the whimsical humor that had hitherto possessed it.

"Master," he said, "I don't want to be inquisitive, and if I'm prying into what's none of my business, I won't mind your saying so. But I want to be a faithful slave, and I can serve you best if I know what—what are my master's purposes in life. For example, was there any special reason for your learning to throw and tie that way? Is there anybody in particular I could help you to put the rope on?"

Drace made no answer for a moment, but bent a searching eye upon his new servant. Somehow the man's soul seemed to shine transparent in his face; and through it Drace saw sincerity; moreover the longing of youth for comradeship was strong within his lonely soul and won him from reticence.

"Liberty," he said, "did you ever hear of a man named Stepho la Vitte?"

Liberty nodded. "Yes, I've heard of him; they say he's an outlaw, a smuggler."

"And worse," said Drace. "He's the man who—Liberty, give me your word, your oath, that you'll keep this a sacred secret!"

Liberty gave his word and his oath with a certain quaint dignity, and Drace went on:

"Liberty, before the war my father, Alfred Drace, was manager of a line of steamboats on the Ohio. His employer was the creole Stepho la Vitte. After a time it came to my father's knowledge that Stepho was not only dishonest in ordinary dealings but had been guilty of piracy along the Gulf coast. And so my father dismissed Stepho from a position which the creole's dishonesty had made lucrative and valuable to him."

"Just after that," Drace went on, "the war broke out. La Vitte became a guerilla—one of the men of Quantrell's stamp, who kept out of the army but who gathered in bands and lived by crime along the border. I was only a little boy, Liberty, when La Vitte's band of guerillas crossed the Ohio near Cincinnati and raided the little town where we lived. But the horror of that night still burns like a flame in my brain, Liberty."

Drace stopped, drew from a breast pocket a card and handed it to Shottle. On it was written in both black and red: "Stepho la Vitte, with the compliments of Alfred Drace's son Virgil."

Shottle read the card, then looked inquiringly at Drace.

"Liberty," the young man explained, "those guerillas under La Vitte burned our little town and killed nearly every grown man in it. For word was brought of their coming, and the men—nearly all of them married men or old—who had no gone to the war seized weapons and went out to defend their homes."

"They were massacred almost to a man. . . . And it was not plunder that let them choose our little town for outrage, Liberty, but a passion for revenge. For next morning my father was found hanging to a tree. And on his breast was pinned a card that read: 'Alfred Drace, with compliments of Stepho la Vitte.'"

Liberty looked again at the card held in his hand, then handed it back to Drace. "I reckon I understand now, master," he said. "You are huntin' this Stepho to—"

"To hang him as high as Haman and to pin that card on his breast," declared Drace passionately. "While my mother lived, Liberty, I could do nothing. You know how women are in such matters. But—she died this spring, Liberty, after long years of grieving for the man that damned outlaw foully murdered. Now I am free to strike for my honor and my father's memory—to carry justice to that murderer."

With an awkward gesture Liberty stretched forth a hand, caught Drace's and wrung it warmly. "You're like—like Hamlet!" he exclaimed. "I'll do my best to help you. Hamlet. Let me be your Horatio as well as your slave."

Drace returned the fervent handshake. "My Horatio!" he agreed. And then, solemn again, he added: "It's a worthy cause, Liberty. It's not alone my private vengeance, but the wrongs of a whole community that the ordinary machine of justice can never right. Why, Liberty, dozens of men were murdered by those drunken fiends; little children were trodden under the hoofs of their horses; and women—Near our house, Liberty, an old couple are living in poverty. At the time of Stepho's raid, their son and his young wife lived next door to them; they were well-to-do and prosperous. The day of the raid the son had received ten thousand dollars from the sale of some lands. When rumor of the raiders came, he hurriedly hid the money somewhere in the neighborhood, scribbled on a piece of paper the location of that treasure and gave it to his wife before he went out with the other men to fight. Next morning he had been shot; and the young wife had been carried off by those devils—her child with her, after the Indian custom, to keep her from suicide. No one knows what became of her. Nor has that money ever been found. Liberty, if I could find Stepho, get him in my power, I believe I could at least learn what became of that poor young woman—possibly find that paper and learn where to find the money those poor people so sorely need; for once, some years ago, a mysterious fellow was caught digging about their yard. . . . But I've talked enough, Liberty. Action! Do you know any more about La Vitte?"

"Not much," replied Liberty. "I believe he is often seen up the river and sometimes down on the coast. He has his friends, and nearly everybody else is afraid of him. So you—we—must keep dark till we get our chance. And you mustn't show your feelings in your face. Remember, master, you're just a young man out to see the world. I'm—here comes Colonel Josh. Suppose we talk to him. He was a mule-buyer in the War and may know something about Stepho."

The door was darkened. In came Joshua Mortimer, the man whom Miss Lucy had plied with a question concerning Drace. He had dodged in for a smoke, he said, when Shottle had introduced him to his master, and it was evident that it was his aim to impress Drace with his military bearing. He had not been actually in the army, but had acquired the title of Colonel from his adventurous work of buying mules for the Confederate government. The Colonel "took it" that Drace was from the North.

"Yes, but some of my people were from the South."

"Ah! I congratulate you, sir. I have a match, thank you."

Drace had offered him a light. He filled his pipe with tobacco crumbled out of his breeches pocket, and long legs crossed, sat back to enjoy himself.

"Well, sir, Mr. Drace, the war has been ended some years; and if I forgot an evil as easily as a virtue, sir, it will soon be only a dim memory. I had enough of it."

"But you were not really in the army, Colonel Josh," the slave spoke up.

The Colonel pulled at his pipe, stretched his neck and appeared to fish for something down in his collar.

"Liberty, my duty was scouting and the incidental picking up of mules, as the records of the war department will be pleased to exhibit, sir."

After a few minutes' more conversation the Colonel rose. "I will not go back to the ballroom," he declared himself. "Liberty, I came aboard tonight with your third cousin, Miss Lucy Sanders."

"That so? Come down, Mars Drace, and I'll introduce you to her."

"I think, sir, that she has retired," the Colonel was quick to interpose, realizing that he had thoughtlessly suggested an invasion of his own territory.

"Not while there is a fiddle going," said Shottle. "Come on."

Into Virgil's heart flew the hope that the slave's cousin might be the barbaric girl with the roses; there could be no mistaking her, after meeting her, for in that brief gaze he had carried away a master's painting of her, etched in his mind. So he was quick to hasten below with Shottle, the Colonel panting behind them.

Miss Lucy had just left off dancing. No, she was not the thrilling barbarian, but Drace swallowed his disappointment dry, like a swamp man taking quinine. Shottle might have reflected that never before had his kinswoman been so glad to see him. On his arm she hung as she cooed, but her eyes were on Drace, and he listened, not to her words, but to the music of her accent, soft as the notes of a dove. Like a frost-bitten Shanghai, the Colonel stood first on one foot and then on the other. Drace politely asked Miss Lucy to dance with him, and the Colonel dropped onto a chair. Shottle sat beside him.

"She takes to him like a duck to water," said the slave, looking after his master and his third cousin.

The Colonel sighed. "Liberty Shottle," he said, "I am going to tell you something."

"Out with it."

"It is not a matter to be spoken of so lightly, sir."

"All right; go ahead."

Liberty Shottle, it is this: "I am deeply in love with your cousin, and before the dawn of another day I shall pop the question to her."

"Pop the deuce! Lend me ten dollars."

"You shock me, sir."

"Tell you what I'll do," persisted Shottle. "Let me have ten, and I'll make her a speech in your favor that will kink her hair."

"Shottle!"

"And I can do it. They've got me speech on the Periclean Age hung up right now at the University. The Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina, just after making his historic remark about its being a long time between drinks, that it was the most powerful speech he ever heard."

The Colonel scowled, and swore his refusal to enter into any financial transaction involving his heart; and Shottle, realizing that his efforts were vain, sank down into melancholy silence. Miss Lucy, meanwhile, was introducing Drace to some of her friends, not to young women, but to men and to ladies well advanced along the path. Drace soon realized that this society was far from the pretentious that Shottle and Colonel Josh might reflect; for the most part it was composed of ladies of exalted refinement, and men strong in the dignity of medicine or the law.

"You have not chosen an opportune time to visit New Orleans," remarked Judge to Drace. "We are forced to live under the infamy of a carpetbag government, sir. Political scoundrels, who in the North could never attain to even the meanest office, come down here where we are disfranchised and elect themselves legislators, governors—representatives of parishes that they have never seen. Heavy taxes are levied and they pocket the money. The Governor was not elected, but named by a gang of freebooters. The residents of the State have no vote; their former slaves and the crooks who now manage them control the ballot-box. This is the true state of affairs. Wait till you see New Orleans, sir."

This talk was too serious for Miss Lucy. She plucked Drace away to walk with her, and she hung laughing on his arm as everywhere his eyes searched for the girl with the roses in vain! And presently he excused himself and went disconsolately to bed.

PUBLIC HEALTH

By Wm. M. Jones, M. D.

The Guilford County Medical society at its last regular meeting invited the North Carolina state board of health to conduct a campaign in High Point and Greensboro to see to what extent syphilis existed among people not able to pay for the administration of salvarsan.

Similar invitations have been extended by physicians in Richmond, Anson, Union, Robeson, Duplin, Sampson, Wayne, Lenoir, Craven, Beaufort, Bertie, Martin, Pitt, Wilkes, Edgecombe, Halifax, Northampton, Vance, Granville, Person, Iredell and Johnston counties.

Through the co-operation of local physicians who have been behind these demonstrations, surprising and satisfactory results have been obtained. One thousand nine hundred ninety-one examinations have been made and 418, or 21 per cent, found to be in need of treatment. One thousand, two hundred one treatments have been given. About 50 per cent of these thought themselves to be perfectly well, but the "blood test" which they applied for revealed the hidden truth that they had syphilis.

The intent of the demonstration is to make permanent provisions for treatment for the class of patients who for financial reasons have neglected themselves. The plan is worked out and approved by local medical societies. The idea is being carried out in most counties where demonstrations have been completed.

In Lenoir county much interest has been shown by the physicians and they have co-operated with the local health department in the work. The demonstrations conducted in February found 30 people in need of treatment. The profession saw the great need of continuing the work. Since then over 70 additional cases have been to the clinic run by the physicians and over 700 treatments given. As high as 91 have been treated in one week.

A large percentage of people visiting these clinics are negroes—the people who do your washings, and cook your food.

The above facts seem to be of sufficient interest to demand the attention of everybody in this county.

SHARP ATTACKS MADE ON REPORT OF BUDGET BUREAU

Washington, May 10.—Sharp Democratic attacks were made in the house Thursday on the report by Director Dawes, of the budget bureau, transmitted to the appropriations committee by President Harding, setting forth reductions in government expenditures.

Representative Byrnes, Tennessee, ranking Democrat of the committee, who had asked for specific information in a resolution charged that careful analysis of the report showed that the figures were "plainly deceptive," and that they had been "manipulated in an effort to mislead the public into the belief that some economy has been effected by the administration."

STANDARDS

It seems that everything in life has a standard by which it is judged. You and I are as good as this person or worse than that one, we are as wealthy as John Jones or as poor as Jim Smith. We are as able as Jack Green or less able than George Brown. Take silver for instance, the standard is STERLING. Sugar has a certain standard, soap a certain purity such as 99 and 99-100.

AUTOMOBILES HAVE A STANDARD TOO, each in its class and the automobile world is divided into four distinct classes.

1st comes the Ford, a good cheap car. Then the Dodge, a better car, then the BUICK standard in the medium price class in both four and six cylinder models and then the Cadillac, standard of the world. Most people now-a-days buy an automobile from the standpoint of comfort and economy of operation rather than from first cost. That is why BUICK FACTORIES CANNOT SUPPLY DEMAND. People who look ahead would rather buy a car that is STANDARD in every respect and which will cost less per mile than any other car built, than to experiment below standard at a loss to themselves.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT, BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

THE DAY OF THE OX TEAM IS PAST

Mr. Farmer, the day of the ox team is past. Present-day farming conditions compel the use of modern farm implements with which to do your work.

To successfully fight the boll weevil and other farm pests you must plow deep and starve him out before he starves you. This means that you should use power farm machinery. It is not only more economical, but it saves time, labor and expense and at the same time enables you to get better results on your farm.

This bank is vitally interested in the success of the farmers of Guilford county. For years it has been our pleasure to assist them in bettering their condition and improve their farms.

This bank has made a study of better farming. If you will drop in the next time you are in town we will gladly give you the benefit of this information.

LINDEMAN RESIGNS PLACE AT COLLEGE

Says "Order" To Leave Is Not Responsible For Resigning As Professor Here.

Dr. E. C. Lindeman, professor of social economics at the North Carolina College for Women, has resigned, effective September 1. He has not yet decided where he will go. He has several attractive offers under consideration, he said when turning the report of his resignation. Several weeks ago it was rumored that a party had been given by Dr. Lindeman's cook at the Lindeman home here. The party was the cook's, attended by 15 of her women friends, held in the basement of the Lindeman home, and Mr. and Mrs. Lindeman had nothing to do with it. It was stated, but it was followed by other rumors that the Ku Klux Klan here advised Dr. Lindeman to leave the city and asked the college to discharge him. Dr. Lindeman said that he had been asked to leave by persons he supposed to be members of the Ku Klux Klan. A letter was also written to the president of the college, Dr. J. I. Foust, charging the professor with being an atheist, a socialist and having permitted his cook to entertain friends in his home. Dr. Lindeman said that the warning had something to do with his decision to resign, but was not the chief factor, the main reason being the offers made him elsewhere, he declared.

Man In Case Has His Sentence Suspended—Girl Tried To Kill Self.

Nellie Maybe, the girl who tried to throw herself out a third story window at police headquarters here Sunday night, following her arrest on East Washington street, drunk and scantily clothed, was given six months in the county jail at a trial in Municipal court here Tuesday, on a charge of drunkenness. It was ordered by Judge D. H. Collins that she be hired out at the instance of Mrs. Blanche Carr Stone, county superintendent of public welfare, otherwise to be assigned to the county home.

J. Neese, Jr., the man in the case, was fined $50 and the costs, given a suspended "jail" sentence of six months, and placed under bond of $300 for his appearance in court every Monday morning for period of six months. Charles Bain, who testified that she did was to take the pair in his automobile at the request of Neese, to get some fresh air, was fined $50 and the costs.
