DENIES ONE OF TWO HOLD-UPS

Ferguson Says Not Guilty of Summerfield Robbery

IN JAIL AT RANDOLPH

Ferguson Allowed To See His Wife
At High Point On His Way Back
From New Orleans

Randleman, June 12.—Grady Ferguson, brought back from New Orleans Sunday and placed in Randolph county jail at Ashboro, to face charges of having held up Claude Newlin, teller of the Bank of Randleman, in the bank, on May 24, and taking about $500, declares that he had nothing to do with the robbery of the Bank of Summerfield on May 29.

When the Bank of Summerfield was robbed, Ferguson declares, he was in Thompson, Ga., and he asserts that he can prove it. He was registered at a hotel there, he declares.

Ferguson arrived in High Point Sunday afternoon a little after 1 o'clock, in the custody of George Hasty, who was deputized to go to New Orleans and get him. Ferguson had surrendered to the police in the Louisiana city, declaring that he wanted to go back to Randleman and "face the music." He told them he robbed the bank at Randleman, they said.

When Hasty and his prisoner got to High Point the latter was allowed to visit his wife, in a hospital there for an hour. The meeting between the two was very affecting to both. Then he was placed in an automobile and whirled to the Randolph jail, via Randleman. A hearing will be held soon.

Ferguson stated that he had only two cents when he got to New Orleans and was in a wretched condition. In New Orleans, he said it was impossible to get anything, even a drink of water, without paying for it, so he surrendered to the police. Ferguson told Newlin when he robbed the Bank of Randleman that he had to have the money for his wife, but inquiry at the hospital showed the bills had been promptly paid.

IDENTIFIED PHOTOGRAPH AS THAT OF FERGUSON

Howard Simpson, cashier of the Bank of Summerfield, and B. H. Hoskins, a director, both declared, when shown a photograph of Ferguson shortly after the Bank of Summerfield was robbed, that it was a likeness of the man who shoved a pistol in their faces on May 29 and took $1,500 from the bank.

LET CONTRACT FOR DAM AT REEDY FORK

Work Will Begin Soon On $83,346
Structure—May Change Location of Dam

The W. W. Boxley company, of Roanoke, Va., on Monday afternoon was awarded the contract for the construction of a dam to create a six billion-gallon reservoir at Reedy Fork, at a cost of $83,346.

The contract for the construction of a complete pumping unit was awarded to Isaac Hardeman, of Charlotte, at $8,496. As the council desires further information concerning the gates and operating machinery, no award has yet been made as to them.

Work is to be started in the next few days and from four to six months will be required for its completion. This reservoir of water will give the city a sufficiency to supply its needs for months. Last summer, owing to a long continued drought, Reedy Fork ran low, thereby diminishing the supply of water in the present reservoir to such an extent that persons in the city had to be conservative in the use of it. Since then the council has been planning to provide a reservoir which would hold enough water to insure the city's supply.

It is possible that the location of the dam may be changed from above the bridge to the bridge site.

Merchants Endorse Co-operative Plan

The board of directors of the Merchants' association of this city went on record Thursday afternoon in unanimous endorsement of the co-operative marketing of tobacco. The action was taken at the regular monthly meeting of the board. Delegates to the annual convention of the North Carolina Retail Merchants' association to be held at Wrightsville Beach, June 20 to 22, were elected, B. T. Baynes and C. L. Jenkins being chosen. S. L. Everhardt was elected a member of the association.

CONSTRUCTING SCHOOL HOUSE

Handsome Building Going Up at Pleasant Garden

FINISH IT JANUARY 1

Two-Storyed Brick Structure Will Contain 12 Rooms—Cost Equipment Will Be About $35,000.
Spacious Grounds

Construction of a modern high school building at Pleasant Garden is going forward, ground having been broken and the work started Thursday. Work will continue steadily and it is expected that the building will be completed by next January 1.

When finished it will be one of the best rural school buildings in the state, with modern equipment throughout. It will cost about $35,000 equipped. W. B. Hunt, of Pleasant Garden, is the contractor.

The structure will have 12 class rooms, a half-basement and three smaller office rooms. First plans called for eight class rooms with an auditorium, but it was decided to take the space that would have been taken up by the auditorium and make it into four class rooms. The building will be two stories, of brick construction. The design is a beautiful one and the building will be a handsome structure.

It will face on the main street of Pleasant Garden, in the rear of the present school building. An additional acre of ground was purchased from the Rois heirs in the rear of and adjoining the school property in order that there may be plenty of space for the new building and grounds, which, added to the old grounds, gives the school an abundance of room. It is intended to beautify the grounds.

The present building will continue in use for the primary and grammar grades. It is understood that the program ultimately contemplates a new building for the primary and grammar grades also, with the removal of the present building. The school population of Pleasant Garden is a large one and is increasing. The enrollment last year was large.

Material is being laid down rapidly on the grounds as the work progresses and it is the intention of Mr. Hunt to make good progress on the building. With open weather the remainder of the summer and autumn, it is thought there will be no trouble in completing it on schedule time.

School committeemen charged with the duty of building the structure are M. L. Allred, P. R. Tucker, Cicero Rudd and Ed Coble. Mr. Hunt was a member of the school committee, but resigned as he could not be the contractor erecting the building and a committeeman also.

The people of Pleasant Garden are naturally much pleased that the building is going up. A modern high school building has been one of their aims for some time.

It is considered fortunate that Mr. Hunt has the contract for the building. He built the handsome new Methodist church at Pleasant Garden.

THREE SCORE DIE IN STORM

Thirty-Eight Drowned Off Island At New York

FERRIS WHEEL FALLS

Shrieks of Mirth Turn to Cries of Fear and Agony as Wheel Plunges
Into Water—Large Property Loss

New York, June 11.—A violent storm accompanied by shifting winds that reached a velocity of 38 miles an hour, took the lives of at least three score persons, injured more than 100, and caused enormous property loss in the metropolitan section late today.

Thirty-eight persons are reported to have drowned off City Island in Long Island sound when the mad storm that hit the city capsize scores of small pleasure craft. Eight bodies have been recovered and 30 more persons are reported missing.

Twenty thousand holiday makers went to City Island today and half went out on the waters of Pelham Bay. It was jammed with boats of every description when the storm hit it. Few had opportunity to get ashore. The known casualties occurred off Execution Light, which is about six miles east of City Island; Rat Island, about three miles east, and another island nearby.

Extensive property damage from wind and lightning was reported from all boroughs of the city and outlying districts.

So fierce was the fury of the storm that a 17-year-old girl, walking with a companion along the reservoir road at Oasling was blown into the water and drowned.

The fury of the storm broke suddenly over a little amusement park at Clason's Point, the Bronx, dashed into a ferris wheel crowded with young people, crushed it to the ground and passed on, leaving five dead and more than 40 injured.

Shrieks of mirth broke from the steel cars of the wheel as it carried its cargo of youth high up into the breezes. Then the storm and mad-dened cries of fear and agony as the upper half broke away and was catapulted by the winds into the shallow waters of Long Island sound. The lower half buckled and fell into twisted steel, girders and human bodies.

Members of the crew operating the wheel declared the storm broke so suddenly that it was impossible to remove the passengers. They said about 60 persons were in the cars when the storm struck.

COUNT SHOWS GARRETT WINS

Board Rules He Is Nominee For Commissioner

WILL BE NO RECOUNT

No Doubt About Julian Man Having Nine More Votes Than Huffines.
Oversight at High Point Explained

G. A. Garrett, of Julian, was declared winner over D. R. Huffines, of Greensboro, for the Democratic nomination for a place on the board of county commissioners by the Guilford board of elections at a meeting held by the board late Thursday afternoon. Mr. Garrett's vote was 1,734; Mr. Huffines, 1,715; the Julian man going over by 19 votes.

Announcement as to the winner, who is third man on the Democratic list of nominees for the board, was held up because of an oversight on one set of returns. The return made for High Point precinct No. 1 to the registrar of deeds, R. H. Wharton, gave Mr. Garrett 68 votes and Mr. Huffines 31, and was regular in every way. The return sent into Thomas C. Hoyle, chairman of the county board of elections, had four names and five sets of figures, one of the candidates' names being left off.

There was no suggestion of fraud or false count, as was pointed out by Mr. Hoyle and R. D. Douglas, another member of the board of elections, to C. L. Sapp, attorney for Mr. Huffines, who asked a recount of the entire vote of the county for commissioners, and no irregularity in the one return except from the High Point precinct. That was simply an oversight, officials of the precinct stated to the board, testifying that the vote was correctly returned, but that one name was inadvertently dropped on the return sent the board, and that the return sent the registrar of deeds was correct.

The following statement was issued by Mr. Hoyle:

"Upon a consideration of the request made by O. L. Sapp, esq., as attorney for D. R. Huffines, that the board of elections of Guilford county order a recount of the ballots cast for county commissioners in every precinct in the county in the primary election held June 3, 1922.

"The board of election is of the opinion, and so decides that under the provisions of section 6043 of the consolidated statutes the board of election has the right under certain conditions and circumstances to have a recount of the ballots made; but the board is of the opinion in this case that as there is no suggestion of any fraud or false count in any precinct in the county, and no irregularity in the return except from High Point No. 1 precinct, and the irregularity in the returns from said precinct, having been explained by the registrar and judges of election in a manner satisfactory to the board of elections no allegations are made nor facts presented which would justify the board in the sound exercise of its discretionary powers to grant the request for a recount.

"The request for a recount is therefore refused."

The other winners in the primary were announced in last Monday's issue of The Patriot, and the count in full given in Thursday's issue. Today The Patriot gives the official tabulated count by precincts.

GAMBLE IS BOUND OVER TO HIGH COURT

Prosecution Offers Witness To Try To Show That Gamble Premeditated the Murder

Stacy Gamble, of Danville, Va., who shot and killed M. C. Spry, of Salisbury, on the afternoon of May 29, near the Southern station here, was bound over to Superior court Friday morning by Judge D. H. Collins, in Municipal court and ordered held without bond on the charge of murder.

The defense offered no testimony and Gamble did not go on the stand. A. C. Davis and Sidney Alderman appeared for the defense, and Judge W. P. Bynum, also of counsel for the defense, was present for a while.

There was little testimony offered that was not developed at the time of the shooting. It appears that there had been bad blood between the two for some time, and that they had been quarrelling for half an hour before the shooting.

A negro, Nathan Williams, testified that Spry had some time before the shooting, a knife in his hand and later put it in his pocket, saying, "I'm not going to use a knife or a pistol, but I'm going to beat you with my fist." Again, using much profanity, witnesses say he told Gamble, "I'm going to get you old Gamble, or I'm going to get you either here or in Fayetteville."

In the barber shop, where the trouble began, Gamble wrote down the names of witnesses, and called attention to the fact that Spry had threatened him, and that he himself was unarmed. He then placed his gun in a drawer in the barber shop. James M. Simpson, former health officer, Roy Spry, brother of the dead man, G. C. Cranford and other eye witnesses, say that after the two men left the barber shop, Spry made no move towards Gamble, but that Gamble deliberately pulled his pistol and shot Spry five times in the back. On the strength of this Solicitor E. D. Kuykendall asked that Gamble be held for first degree murder, and Judge Collins so held.

EVENTS 80 YEARS AGO

It is the purpose of this paper to publish at frequent intervals comparatively brief references to events chronicled in The Greensboro (as it was then) Patriot of 80 years ago. In this enterprise valuable assistance is rendered by members of the staff of the Greensboro Public Library.

(June 14, 1842)
INCOME TAX.—An English paper remarks that since Sir Robert Peel has proposed a tax on incomes, the people who before vied with each other in showing how much they were worth, are now just as earnest in proving how very poor they are.

The Methodist cause in this country is advocated by nine weekly papers, issuing weekly about seven thousand copies. The Christian Advocate is the oldest, having been published 16 years.

COMMERCE OF BALTIMORE.—There arrived at Baltimore in 1841, from foreign ports, 64 ships, 49 barks, 166 brigs, and 123 schooners. Total 402. Coastwise arrivals, 14 ships, 35 barks, 206 brigs, 497 schooners, and 6 sloops. Total, coastwise, 758. Grand totals of arrivals, 1,160.

There were 6,293 passengers landed at New York during the week ending on the 21st and 3,850 last week—making 26,143 since the 1st of January, last.

The editor of the Perry (Ala.) Democrat gives notice that he shall insert no marriage notices unless accompanied by the sum of one dollar. The Boston Transcript, more gallant, says he will insert all such notices for a kiss of the bride. We accept on the same terms.

OUR ARMY.—The total number of all ranks in it amounts to 12,000—about one-fourth of the army of France.

SOUTH BUFFALO LAND FOR SALE.—The subscriber offers for sale his tract of land on South Buffalo, 2 miles southeast of Greensboro and adjoining the lands of John Hanner, James Hall and others and containing 322 acres.

PUBLIC HEALTH

By Wm. M. Jones, M. D.

Keeping the Baby Well

In many families the care of the baby falls to the lot of an older sister or sometimes a brother. So it is very necessary that they know what to do and what not to do. We all know that a baby is a very delicate thing and cannot stand what a larger and older child or a grown person could, but we do not always act like we know it. Health is the normal condition of the body, just as it is for the grown person and most cases of sickness in babies can be prevented. Of course it is lots easier to prevent than to cure, though it is not always so spectacular. Young children get sick in a great majority of incidences because we do not care for them properly, some times their lack of care is due to carelessness and some times to ignorance in not knowing how to feed and clothe the child.

Feeding the baby. The only thoroughly safe food for a baby under nine months of age is mother's milk. Cow's milk is different from human milk. It has sugar, but more fat, and protein and the protein is more difficult of digestion than is the protein of human milk. The young baby is very sensitive to to fat and in summer when given uncooked cow's milk, that in the majority of incidences has grown in it, and the general low body resistance, the natural thing to expect is a cold of "summer complaint."

This of course may not be fatal to the child, but statistics show that a breast-fed baby has ten times the chance of living than a bottle baby has.

FARM DEMONSTRATION

Aaron Sapiro, speaking in the interest of the Tobacco Growers' Co-operative association, has been shell-ing out some hot shot in the eastern part of the state. The Californian, who has seen what great good co-operative marketing has done for the fruit and produce growers of that state, and who knows that it will be of great benefit to the tobacco grow-ers, said in a recent speech:

"The average income of the grow-er for a period of six years has been less than $340 a family. Of this tobacco that everybody else makes a profit; and the government says that $1,500 a year can keep an American family on a decent standard of liv-ing."

"We say the merchant is entitled to a profit, the banker is entitled to a profit, the warehouseman is en-titled to a profit, the manufacturer, the distributor, and the retailer, they are all entitled to a profit, but so is the grower—and all we try to do in co-operative marketing is to work out a system where everybody shall make a fairly reasonable profit on a thing for which the consumer always pays a good price and in which there is enough money to real-ly give a profit all the way down the line, including the little boy and the little girl who are sent out in the field to pick off the tobacco worms."

Again he said:

"In California we have associa-tions which started out with a few faithful men. Now 92 per cent. of the raisins, 90 per cent. of the prunes, 97 per cent. of all the vari-ous products in central California is marketed through one central office in Fresno. Our growers swear by co-operative marketing."

"I would like for those men who have been handling our circulars (against co-operative marketing) to hand them out in any California town. It is not the growers—it is the merchants and the bankers who would drive them out, because this movement has made everybody in the rural districts prosperous and it keeps the profits at home, where they were raised, with the farmers and the local merchants and the local bankers."

TICKS IN INFESTED AREAS ARE DANGER

Menace To Purebred Herds In 81 Counties That Are Tick-Free—Big Loss

Raleigh, June 11.—Cattle ticks in 15 quarantined counties in North Carolina are a continual menace to purebred herds in the other 81 coun-ties of the state because it is almost impossible to keep every tick with-in the 15 quarantined counties, ac-cording to Dr. Hartnell Robbins, in-spector in charge of tick eradication.

Records of reinfestation of for-merly tick-free counties show that within recent months Randolph, Nash and Lenoir counties have been reinfested and many farms in these counties are now under quarantine.

Owners of cattle in these reinfest-ed counties may lose upwards of $30,000 worth of cows as a result of the re-entry of cattle ticks, while estimates of the cost of again eradi-cating ticks in these counties place the money necessary at more than $1,000. This amount will be spent by county, state and federal govern-ments for clean-up work in these counties before owners of purebred stock in this territory can sleep soundly at night.

Cattle in sections once freed from cattle tick are very susceptible to tick fever and do not possess the immunity of the scrub cattle in areas where ticks have long been present.

N. C. C. W. Summer School To Begin On June 14th

With the largest enrollment in its history, the North Carolina College for Women summer school will open June 14. Dr. J. H. Cook, director of the summer courses, says that practically all available room has been taken, and many students ex-pect to live outside the campus. Al-though other courses are offered, the most of the courses are offered to the public and high school teachers of the state.

HOME DEMONSTRATION

Following are some directions as to canning preliminary. Steps to be taken when canning:

Sterilizing.—Sterilize all cans which are to be used by first wash-ing to remove any trash or dirt. Place them in a canner where wa-ter is boiling. Let them remain 10 minutes. Remove and turn open end down on table that no dust or insect may enter before they are used.

Sorting and Grading Fruit.—Se-lect only fresh, sound, thoroughly ripe fruit and vegetables, and grad-e as to size and color. Thoroughly clean or peel.

Blanching.—Where the recipe calls for blanching, never omit. This is necessary with string beans, lima beans, etc., and with most fruits and berries. The flavor of the vegetable is made more delicate and the vege-table itself more pliable. Packing is made easier and the liquor in the can is made clearer, also, by the process. To blanch, place vege-tables or fruit in the wire basket of canner or in a thin muslin sack and plunge into boiling water. (Time of blanching is given in a later time-table to be printed in a later issue of The Patriot.) Plunge into cold water immediately afterward.

Packing.—After fruit or vege-tables are blanched, pack them in sterilized cans until the can is fill-sterilized cans until the can is fill-ed to about one-quarter inch of the top. Begin to pack firmly with top. Begin to pack firmly with spoon or paddle when the first bit of fruit or vegetable is put into a can, pressing down gently until the can is filled. Add brine or syrup as can be filled. Tomatoes must packing proceeds. Tomatoes must have no water added. Sufficient juice will be present to fill crevices. Be sure every filled can is up to standard weight. This is known by placing can on the scales and con-sulting table. Do not pack the can so full that the fruit touches the cap. The hot steel will force steam from the fruit and pin holes will be blown in the solder. If the can will not seal, remove a portion of the fruit and try again.

Paddling.—In packing canned or preserved products in glass it is necessary to use a thin flexible wood or reed blade. This is used to help place fruit in the jar and also to remove air bubbles. The paddle is also quite useful in packing tin cans.

Fluxing.—Apply soldering flux with a small brush to the edge of the can openings, thus roughening the tin and permitting the solder to ad-here more easily.

Capping.—After the can has been packed seal the cap with a capping steel. Always wipe around the edge of the opening with soldering flux before using the capping steel. Mark the name of the product and the owner on the can with pencil. It will not boil off. The side seam is a good place. The table on which sealing is done should be level and steady. To insure a good seal the can must not be over full and cap-ping steel must be clean, hot, and well tinned.

Exhausting.—After the can is packed and capped it is placed in the canner of boiling water, where it remains the required number of minutes, usually three, indicated on the time-table. This is done to force the air from the can through the opening in the top, and is called ex-hausting. Cans that are not ex-hausted frequently bulge after pro-cessing and are looked upon with suspicion. Cans exhausted too long frequently cave in at the sides. The time-table should be used carefully and followed strictly in this part of the process.

Tipping.—Seal with a drop of sol-der the small hole in the top of can. This is done immediately after the can has been exhausted and makes it ready for processing. Always put soldering flux around the opening be-fore attempting to tip.

Fairness To Boston.—"Some jokesmiths seem to think it is funny to yab about intellectual Boston." "The stuff is in poor taste. Bos-ton has won as many baseball and pugilistic championships as any city."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Yes, unfortunately, home gardening begins at home.

OF INTEREST TO READERS

The Patriot is fortunate in the acquisition of M. L. Banks, Jr., as a member of its staff. Mr. Banks already has assumed his new duties and is rapidly becoming familiar with the various phases of the work.

The new member of the staff comes from Hartsville, S. C., where he has been teaching in the city schools. He is an alumnus of Wofford college and also of Clemson college, two of the leading institutions of higher learning in South Carolina. With natural aptitude for journalism and marked enthusiasm for such activities, Mr. Banks should attain noteworthy success in his chosen profession. He will be engaged both in the editorial and business departments of the paper, rendering valuable assistance to the editor and manager. Much of his time and effort will be devoted to reportorial work, a highly important part of modern newspaper-making. The coming of Mr. Banks signifies enlargement of the staff, making possible continued improvements in The Patriot, which already is recognized as a great, constructive force in the sphere of newspaperdom. It is evidence of The Patriots' determination to furnish its clientele the best semi-weekly newspaper in North Carolina. To friends of the paper we unhesitatingly commend Mr. Banks as a young man worthy of the full measure of popular confidence.

At the same time The Patriot is pleased to announce that W. R. Gordon has become a member of the mechanical department. Mr. Gordon operates the linotype machine and performs other important work in the composition and press room, rendering service of highly meritorious nature. He has had a number of years of experience in large newspaper shops and is exceptionally well qualified by training and natural ability for his post here. The new member of the staff recently resigned as foreman of the composition room of The Greensboro Daily Record and became identified with The Patriot.

Lacy Crawford is a recent addition to The Patriots' mechanical department. He is serving his apprenticeship in the printing trade under the guidance of Mr. Gordon and H. J. Elam. Mr. Elam has been and is a notable factor in the expansion of The Patriot, being widely known as one of the most capable men in the fourth estate in North Carolina. It is confidently expected that Lacy Crawford will become an increasingly valuable member of this newspaper's organization.

Constantly the management is striving to make the paper conform to the highest standards of excellence, a publication meriting the full confidence of readers and advertisers everywhere.

FIGHTING BRUTALITY

Mr. Maxwell, of the North Carolina Corporation commission, does well to quit a place on a commission sitting at Atlanta to hear proposals that freight rates be increased from points on the Ohio river to the Carolinas, taking a place among those fighting such increases. With his knowledge of rates he should be of very great assistance in the struggle.

What rate reductions as have been won have come as the result of long, persistent fighting and a proposal to increase them now does seem, on the face of it "brutal." The word is Mr. Maxwell's. He is no demagogue, using that term against the railroads as a cheap politician would. He is not appealing to the masses. He is a level-headed man, with a fine understanding of the intricacies of rate-making, and it must be regarded as a carefully considered utterance.

Retention of the fruits of victory in rate battles is difficult. It calls for everlasting watchfulness and care. It demands the attention of the representatives of the people at all times. Such a case as this, when one of them must get down from the umpire's place to that of the active contestants, is indicative of the necessity of being on guard always.

MAKING PARADISES

When Governor Morrison told the girls graduating from the North Carolina College for Women to keep cows and bees and plant gardens and grapevines and the like he was giving them good advice. He could have got a lot of applause by telling them to go make over the world, not giving exact direction, just vague advice, but the girls would have known no more about making it over when he got through than when he started. As it was, he told them something which, if carried out, while it may not make the state a paradise, will go considerably toward making it one.

Upon the woman of the home depends, more than upon the man, the responsibility for making it a real home instead of just a place to get in out of the rain. A foolish, thriftless wife can work a man to death, a death in poverty. She can, as has been stated by some wise philosopher, "throw out faster with a spoon than he can throw in with a shovel." There can be plenty at the house or want, just as she pleases. Of course there are exceptions to the rule, but generally a woman, unless she be married to a hopeless incompetent or a very lazy man, can make her home what she pleases. She can manage a husband; most women manage their husbands.

It is not necessary for her to take upon herself all the work in connection with the cows and the bees and the orchard and the garden, but she has a very great deal to do with the work. She can be the motive power behind it. Unless she is, such things are very likely to be neglected, for in some respects they are like housework, poorly planned and carried out by men. The men folks are busy planning their field work. She can see, however, that the man takes time to do something around the house. She can look ahead with such things. They are matters that require looking ahead. People who have such things do not get them just by accident or luck.

Getting those things, which mean prosperity, the others will come. Education, culture, the fine things of life, generally are the result of very material things, the result of prosperity. It is hard for them to grow with poverty, nearly impossible. The home that has plenty of cows and bees and orchards and all that around it will be very likely to have plenty of books and such inside it.

WHAT IS THE NEXT DOSE?

Reduction in freight rates was announced with a great blowing of trumpets by the Republican administration. Look, it was said, what we have done to reduce the cost of living. Look how we have made the railroads be normal.

But that was followed by a reduction in wages; the rate reduction is being passed on. Those on whom it is shouldered will find themselves with reduced incomes, and decreased buying power will result in less for everybody. Is that normalcy?

There is threat of strike, of a great walkout by the employees of the railroads? Is that normalcy? With the transportation systems tied up, raw products held at the point of production, manufactured goods at the factories, factories shutting down because there can be no movement to and from them—is that normalcy?

Better the other thing—the opposite of normalcy. Better anything than that. The cure-all that the Republican administration said that it had in its possession turns out to be valueless. The country stands to become sicker than ever.

It is bitter medicine to take after having been promised that the sickness would be speedily cured and the patient least on three big square meals a day.

What next will it give us, what dosage of normalcy physic? Hadn't the country better place its affairs in the hands of men who do not promise to be manufacturers of normalcy cure-alls, but who did not pass on whatever of relief was given the country as a whole to some one particular class?

MOSTLY NONSENSE

By Gee Gee Dee.

THE OPTIMISTS' CLUB should award the prize to Senator McCumber, Republican, as the country's champion optimist. In the senate last week Mr. McCumber, who is chairman of the senate finance committee, had the following to say: "In the very near future I hope to be able to lay aside the tariff bill for a day or so for the purpose of considering, and passing if possible, the compensation bill."

After months and months of argument concerning the bonus bill Congress has made no progress toward definite disposition of that measure, so far as the casual observer is able to observe casually. Almost innumerable plans have been suggested: a. i. p's. have been rejected. Republicans in Congress are determined to pass a bonus bill which will defer the time of taxation to distant dates, while the Republican President appears equally determined to reject such plans. So long as the White House and the Republican majority fail to get together in regard to a bonus plan the chances of enactment of a compensation bill are rather meager. What Mr. McCumber hopes to accomplish in "a day or so" will require at least a century for accomplishment, judging by past performances.

As a matter of fact, little co-operation between the national administration and Republican congressmen is evidenced. Furthermore, the ultra-regular Republicans, the devotees of standpatism, have been sustaining a number of reverses recently. Of painful memory, judged from the standpoint of none-too-progressive Republicans, are the results in recent primaries in Pennsylvania and Indiana. In Pennsylvania the regular administration candidate, Mr. Alter, was defeated by Pinchot, erstwhile Bull Moose, while in the Hoosier state Mr. Beveridge, a progressive who is recognized to be out of harmony with major policies of the Harding administration, especially objecting to the four-power treaty, administered a licking to Mr. New, close friend of Mr. Harding and eminently regular Republican. Now an even more distressing blow has been delivered to the Republican old-timers by the victory of Smith W. Brookhart in Iowa over the Old Guard of his party. Friends of Mr. Harding earnestly endeavored to prevent the nomination of Mr. Brookhart, who ran as a radical. The successful candidate triumphed by standing upon anti-administration issues.

Day by day, the rift in the Republican party becomes more noticeable. President Harding is the apostle of normalcy for the nation, albeit that quality seems to be undiscoverable under his administration.

Now he is finding that normalcy in his own party is unattainable. How ungrateful, he probably muses, are so many people who call themselves Republicans!

Federal court here has been busy with cases arising from violation of the prohibition law. Today it began a one-week civil term. Liquor cases ended Saturday included actions against F. E. Willard and C. D. James, Davie county, $50 each and the cost. Luke Flowers, Sol Cornwell and Charles Witherpoon, negroes, of Winston-Salem, were fined, Flowers $50 and the other two $100 each.

Dorsey Norman, 16 years old, on Friday was sentenced to serve two years in the National Training school at Washington. He pleaded guilty of signing his name to an $83 postal check.

Prohibition cases Friday included: Zach Hogan, Montgomery county, $50 and the costs; Jacob Mann, Stokes, $50; Hubert Scarlet, Orange, one month in jail; Charles Burch, Orange, $150; Grover Bullock, Orange, $150; William Gilmer, Yadkin, $50; William Glenn, Yadkin, $50; W. F. Craig and J. M. Knight, both of Stokes county, were found guilty.

Thursday W. C. Newton, pleading guilty to violation of the White Slave act, was fined $400. The prosecuting witness was Florence McLean, 21-year-old stenographer, of Glovers, S. C., who testified that she met Newton on a street car in the suburbs of Charlotte in May, 1922, that they exchanged cards, a three months' courtship following. They went to Rockingham, she said, where she "thought" they were married, from there to Columbia, where she learned he had a wife, thence to Birmingham, Ala. She said that when she discovered that Newton was married he said that he had a divorce.

Sentences for violation of the prohibition law included: I. T. Cook, Forsyth county, $250; Charlie Freeman, Montgomery, $75; Jeter Garrett, Orange, $250; George Rich, Montgomery, $125. Charlie Sheppard, Stokes, was found not guilty. John Tilley, Stokes, found guilty, had prayer for judgment continued.

S. J. Bennett and E. Garland Brown, lawyers, of Winston-Salem, were fined one penny each on a charge of charging too much for collecting war risk insurance and compensation for beneficiaries of dead soldiers. They said they had no knowledge that it is against the law to charge over $3 and showed that they had been to considerable trouble in adjusting the claims, making four trips to Washington in behalf of the women beneficiaries.

COURTHOUSE FLASK VANISHES AT NIGHT

Thirty Person Bursts Open Cornerstone and Gets Booze 50 Years Old

A quart of whisky which some persons thought was in the cornerstone of the old courthouse, placed there when it was built nearly 50 years ago, has disappeared. Some time Friday night some person broke into the cornerstone and the place was empty. There had either been no whisky there or some one took it. There was an open space in the cornerstone, large enough to have held a quart bottle, but there was nothing in it.

It is said by some of the old-timers that a quart of fine whisky was put in the cornerstone when the building was erected, but that may be a myth, although in these old days liquor was sometimes put in courthouse cornerstones.

The Story Thus Far:

Virgil Drace, a young northerner of wealth and position, traveled south, bound on a mission of revenge for the hanging of his father and the kidnapping of a woman and her child by a band of guerrillas led by Stepho la Vitte, a Creole whom the elder Drace had discharged for piracy. Virgil was joined in his adventure by Liberty Shottle, a new friend, a young man of good family but with an insatiable appetite for gambling. A girl of striking beauty, who had attracted Virgil's attention, proved to be Nadine, daughter of old Stepho la Vitte. Following a riot, during which Virgil rescued a man from hanging, the La Vittes left New Orleans; and the police warned Virgil that he and Liberty must leave the city by the Bumblebee, northwardbound. When Liberty discovered a case of wine addressed to Stepho la Vitte at Far-num's Landing, he decided that they would visit his uncle, General Bethpage, at the landing next to Far-num's.

They were hospitably entertained by the wealthy old general and his young wife, Liberty's aunt. Liberty borrowed five hundred dollars from the general, and left to build a junk factory—he said. With a hangman's rope in his canoe, Virgil explored a swamp in which stood a small house built of periwinkle shells cemented. Through its door came Nadine la Vitte.

She begged him to leave lest he lose his life, and promised that he might return the following Thursday, when Stepho and his men would be away. On his way back to Bethpage's Landing he gave a lift to three men, who overpowered him, tied him in an old cabin in which they piled dry rubbish and bark, and set fire to the pile, then left him. Nadine rescued him, and conducted him on foot through the swamp to safety. The next day, Stepho told her she would marry Boyce, to whom he owed much. As Stepho slept in his chair, Nadine halted Toney, his man, who wanted to talk to him.

At Natchez, Virgil struck the dirk from the hand of a man who attempted to stab General Bethpage. It was Stepho la Vitte.

Thursday he kept his tryst with Nadine. When he told her his name, Virgil, she knew he was the man her father threatened to kill because he had interfered with the stabbing of the general. Virgil said he would make her his wife, but she said it could not be.

The next day, repenting of his softness, Virgil set out to wreak vengeance on Stepho, the murderer of his father. He did not find Stepho, but Nadine met him and once more he came under her spell. "Till Thursday," they said at parting, and "Till Thursday," muttered old Stepho; who, unseen, had overheard. Liberty returned in great splendor to pay his debts, having gambled away his $500 and then won a large sum in a lottery.

CHAPTER XI.

Tytle hugged him; Drace shook his hand; and the general exclaimed his astonishment.

"Well, that beats anything I ever heard in my life. It doesn't seem possible, sir."

"No, and I was somewhat taken by surprise, Uncle Howard. But is often success in a change of occupation, and I had tried everything else. It took me a few moments to adjust myself; then I got a draft, and in Mobile received premium enough on my gold certificate to pay my debts. And now it gives me great pleasure to perform that duty. I owe you, Uncle Howard, twelve hundred and thirty dollars, all told. Aunt Tytle, I owe you five hundred. Virgil, I owe you—but we'll get at that later. Worthy and patient creditors, here we are!"

He took out a roll of bank notes, counted the amount of his indebtedness to his aunt and showered her lap with greenbacks. Then he turned to the general.

"No, Liberty, I don't want the money," protested Bethpage. "If you pay me, it will be the first time you ever returned borrowed money to me, and I don't care to have you establish a precedent that might bring disappointment in the future."

After the family bedtime Shottle came into Drace's room and requested him to report as to what progress he had made; and Drace told him all that had occurred.

"And now let me tell you a notion of mine," said Shottle then. "If you are waiting for that old sharkbone to decay, you'll perhaps wait twenty years. Attention: I'm going on a little trip tomorrow. In two days, when I come back, I'll drive down to a convenient point; you fetch the girl, into the carriage you jump, and away we go, drive over to some place where we can catch a train, and Cincinnati before old Stepho knows which way we've gone. What do you say?"

"But—what becomes of my oath? Oh, don't think that because I dally I have forgotten it or that in one jot I shall fail to keep it. If I should, in all after-life I'd have a contempt for myself."

"Till Thursday!" Drace had cried. Nadine had echoed it; and another voice, hidden in the cane, had muttered the words with how different a meaning: Now Thursday was come again; and Virgil Drace, infirm of purpose, again made his way down the river and through the swamp to his tryst with Nadine.

But Death sought to make a third at that tryst. From afar the sentinel Toney had seen Drace coming. And hardly had the northerner's canoe touched the bank when from out the cane Tony and Stepho leaped upon him and bore him to the ground, dazed by a blow from an oar.

"Ha! My fine carthorper! You seize my wrist and keep my knife from the old general! You steal here to make love to my daughter! Ha! Who will now keep my knife from you? In a little while, now, you will be deep in the marsh, and the green mold will be on your bones. And the old fool at the big house, he die too, for my men will cut his throat. And then—"

A piercing cry from the house, and Nadine ran to them, a knife that mated Stepho's dirk clutched in her hand.

"No—no!" she cried. "You shall not."

Stepho looked up. "Take the girl away, Tony," he commanded.

But Nadine threatened him off with her knife. Then she turned the blade in another direction and spoke again. "If you do not let Virgil go," she said, "I will kill myself—now."

Stepho knew Nadine—the wild heart of her. "You promise never to see this man again, and to marry Monsieur Boyce, like I wish?"

"I promise nothing—except that I will kill myself if you do not let him go."

Stepho hesitated a moment, craft fighting with anger. Then craft won; he or Tony would stroll up to the Bethpage plantation and make an end of the general and Drace that night.

"All right," he snarled. "He can go. But let him never come back here or— He drew the back of his dirk across his own throat in a significant gesture. Then with Tony he lifted Drace into his canoe; and the young man, still dazed from the blow, feebly made his way out of the swamp.

When he had passed from sight, Nadine dropped her knife and sank to the ground, sobbing. Old Stepho turned savagely upon her.

"You liar! You she-wolf! I would kill you, but I promise you to the man Boyce. An' now there come something that I tell you. In you there is not the blood of Stepho la Vitte. But you never shall know your name. You she-wolf!"

He thrust himself toward her, his fangs gleaming in his merciless mouth, but without finching she now laughed in his face.

"Oh, you make me so thankful that I am not your child. You hang his father and would murder him! But he will be gone; and if you kill me, it makes no matter. And you think I will stay here and let the man come to marry me! I will—"

He seized her, and convenient Tony ran in to help. She fought with the dirk, but they wrenched it from her hand, held her helpless, dragged her into her room; and she lay for a time on the floor while she heard them fastening her in her prison. It was now dark. She got up, went to the window and found that heavy bars had been nailed across it. She lighted her lamp, and with a pencil began to write a note to Drace, praying in her heart that she might find some way to send it to him. Little she slept, and in the dawn she was at the window, the vinces all of them gone. She heard footsteps near, and she tried to look out to discover who it might be, but she could gaze neither to the right nor the left, so closely was she mewed. She spoke softly, louder; and then there drew near the darkened form of a man, Batoche, an old frog-hunter whom once before she had employed.

"I am here to borrow the muskrat-spear for the one day, for mine he was broke; but they are still asleep."

"Come closer, good Batoche, and listen to me. Take this note to Monsieur Drace, at General Bethpage's house—quick, with no one to see you, and I will give you a diamond when you come back."

"Give me the note, an' I be there soon."

She gave him the note, and he hastened away. She stood at the door, wondering why she had not heard her father stirring about. Once she thought she heard him call Tony. After a long time Tony came, and she heard them together as they went out. Then all was silent.

Sick in mind and body, Drace made his way back to Bethpage. He made himself as presentable as possible before he entered the house; fortunately, too, the attention of Tytle and the general was at that moment centered on Colonel Josh, who had stopped off to pay them a call—and who showed astonishment when asked to walk out to dinner, though he yielded with astonishing alacrity to the pressure of the general's hand upon his arm. He was busy with a helping of late mustard greens and hog's jowl, when Tytle inquired:

"And how is dear Lucy?"

"Madam," said Josh, "I am grieved to impart to you a distressful piece of news. She is soon to be married to a man named Spivan."

"Oh, I'm so sorry, Colonel Josh."

"Madam, it is a calamity. Luke Spivan!"

"What's the matter with him?" the general inquired. "Isn't broke, is he?"

"General, the man has money. But do you know what his calling is? I shall enlighten you, sir. This fellow is a dealer in oysters, the— the excrement of the sea, you might say. And not only that, but he deals in crawfish as well, back-crawling crawfish, sir. I offered her my heart and my home. I told her that I would devote my life to her, and from week to week she put me off. But when this fellow Spivan asked her, I understood she accepted him at a jump, sir. And now I advise him to keep out of my way."

"Oysters and crawfish, eh?" said the general, winking at Drace.

"Those were my words, general—not only oysters but crawfish. I would not have believed it if she had not assured me with her own lips, like that I have worshipped—Madam, you will please pardon my nearness to profanity."

Tytle's sympathy went out to old Josh, haloed him; and with her eyes she begged the general to drop the subject, but it was sweeter to him than any sugar ever grained in his mill.

After dinner they were in the parlor when they saw a vagabond equipage stop at the gate, an old carry-all drawn by a staggering horse driven by a ragged negro. There was one passenger in the habiliments of a scarecrow, topped off with a yellow cotton hat—enough to disguise any man on earth save one, and this man was the exception!

"Tytle, what did I tell you!" cried the general. "I knew it as well as I knew my name. Now look at him!"

They looked at him, went out into the hall to meet him, Tytle in convenient tears. The visitor kissed her and shook hands with the men.

"It is not necessary for me to assert that I hold no commission, civil or military," said the vagrant.

"Sit down, sir," commanded the general. And then, surveying him slowly from head to foot: "Will you please state as to whether or not you regard yourself a human being?"

"General," said Tytle, "please don't scold him, for I'm sure he must be hungry."

"My dear, I shall not scold him; but I don't see anything about him that calls for congratulations."

"Liberty," said Virgil, "tomorrow we'll go over and have the parish surveyor run you off a suit of clothes."

"My dear relatives, I thank you for these little attentions; and as to your question, Uncle Howard, let me say, sir, that my claims as to being a human are somewhat vague. One of the first things I discovered about myself was my unreality. When do we eat?"

Tytle ran out and returned with a piece of frosted cake that looked like a corner broken off a marble mantelpiece. The general was laughing.

"Well, Liberty, we are always glad to see you, anyway. It is the unreality, if I may so speak, that spices our lives; and when you come with your gilded worries, you enliven us. Where have you been, anyhow?"

"I've been wherever there is," said Shottle, gesturing with his cake. "First I went to Memphis, to the races, and gave old Skinny Hughes two hundred for a sure card on the entries. Lost ten thousand. Then I followed the horses to Lexington, with my bank account leaking like a sprinkling cart. But why linger when nothing can be swifter than the approach of poverty? Finally I sold my clothes to a negro preacher and invested my all in lottery tickets. It seemed that I possessed myself of all the figures of the multiplication table, didn't see how I could possibly miss, but I did. It wasn't laid out for me to win again. A fellow never has but one real fling. He gets to a certain pinnacle of fortune, slips off, and spends the rest of his life struggling to get back. When do we eat?"

Long after bedtime Shottle came to Virgil's room.

"Virgil, you know I've got to hit on something of a permanent nature. So the question is, now that I've quit gambling, what am I going to do? If you'll not go to sleep, I'll tell you of a plan. Mark me: I have observed, along with thousands of others, that nothing dries deeper after rainy-day money than a circus and menagerie. It is known that the poor man of the south, and especially the negro, will sell his cookstove to buy a circus ticket. Now comes my plan, and mind you I strive to keep it from being too sudden. Attention! You buy a circus and I'll go along as ring-master. That is the one thing I am really fitted for. You never saw me crack a whip, did you?"

"Don't believe I ever did."

"All right, you've got something to look forward to. . . . Yes, I'll be the ring-master, and—"

"And bet an elephant on the turn of a card," said Virgil.

"Ah, one of my own, perhaps, but not one entrusted to me. I am not an embezzler of elephants. I wouldn't bet a garter-snake on a sure thing. Besides, I told you I'd quit gambling—that it, I'm quitting. It isn't wise to expose my constitution to the shock of a sudden change. . . . Well, good night."

"T" MODEL FORD IS ALL OVER COUNTRY

Four Out of Five Ford Cars and Trucks Since 1908 Still in Operation

The six millionth model "T" Ford motor was produced May 18, in the Ford factory at Detroit. In other words, from the time back in 1908 when the Ford Motor company began marketing the new famous model "T" motor car until May 18, 1922, a total of six million Ford cars and trucks have been produced. Out of this total 5,517,956 were delivered to purchasers in the United States alone, and, according to the latest statistics, 5,578,248 of these Ford cars and trucks are still in daily service.

Thus it will be seen that out of every five Ford cars and trucks sold to retain purchasers in the United States along during the past 14 years, four are still in actual dalliance, which is really remarkable when the hard service of commercial cars is taken into consideration. This seems to forcibly confirm the popular knowledge of the longevity of Ford cars.

That Ford products have been quite evenly distributed throughout the United States is borne out by the fact that through the sparsely settled communities in the west to the densely populated cities in the east, practically the same ratio of Ford cars and trucks to population exists.

Ohio leads with a total of 290,769 Ford cars and trucks in daily use; Illinois comes second; Pennsylvania third; Texas fourth, and Michigan fifth, with a total of 234,031. New York, Iowa and California follow in the order named, each having more than 200,000.

An idea of the important part played by Ford cars and trucks in the daily transportation of goods and persons in the United States can be gained by realization of the fact that with the Ford cars now in operation, averaging a minimum of 8,000 miles per year each, they would pile up a total of 25,000,000,000 transportation miles, equivalent to more than a million trips around the world.

AGRICULTURAL TARIFF SCRAP

Little Protection On Products of Farmers

MANUFACTURES HIGH

Democrats Want To Know Why Farmer Gets Only 21 1-2 Per Cent. Protection and Manufacturers 80 Per Cent.

Washington, June 10.—Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, and Senator Gooding, of Idaho, the latter chairman of the Republican agricultural tariff bloc, engaged in a sharp fight in the senate yesterday over tariff duties on farm products.
A charge by Senator Simmons that many of the rates on farm products never would have gotten into the tariff bill but for a "surrender" on the part of the "proclaimed friends of the farmer" to high duties on manufactured products, brought a denial from Senator Gooding that any agreement along that line had been made by members of the tariff bloc.
"Oh, the senator has denied that before," returned Senator Simmons, "but a denial doesn't prove anything. I say that the impression is that the finance committee could not have reported out his bill carrying high rates on manufacturing products if it had not been for the granting of duties on farm products."
Senator Gooding said that might be the senator's impression, but that he was mistaken, adding that the votes in the senate on individual items showed "that senators have voted their convictions."
"But for the placing duties for the farmers, the finance committee would not be able to pass this bill through the senate," returned Senator Simmons.
He added that the average protection for farm products in the bill—21 1-2 per cent.—was not as high as the average protection given manufacturers under the Underwood bill.
Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, wanted to know how the friends of the farmer could be satisfied with 21 1-2 per cent. protection when the manufacturers were getting 70 to 80 per cent.
