3 YEARS FOR SHOOTING WIFE

B. R. Foster Gets Another Year For Having Gun

SPEED RECORD CASE

Charles Allen Arrested, Tried and Sentenced to Four Years Less Than 24 Hours After He Took Automobile

B. R. Foster, a barber of this city, was sentenced to serve three years on the county roads, following his conviction in Guilford Superior court Wednesday on a charge of shooting his wife in the back on last April 4. He was given an additional sentence of one year for carrying concealed weapons. Trial of the case was begun Tuesday.

Judge B. F. Long, of Statesville, presiding over the court, intimated that he might allow Foster to give a bond that he would support his wife and two children, and let the sentence be suspended, but final decision as to that has not been made. Judge Long stated that if a suspended sentence was allowed it would be because of sympathy for the two children of the couple.

The Foster case went to the jury at 10 p. m. Tuesday. The day was given over to the taking of testimony, both Foster and his wife being put on the stand.

Mrs. Foster testified that she had shot at her husband, but only to frighten him and keep him from beating her. She admitted that she had thrown an alarm clock at him once but denied that she had stuck him with hatpins. The story of their married life, as disclosed by both, tended to show much domestic unhappiness.

Foster left his wife in March, after she shot at him when he came in late one night. Shortly after that he went, with Deputy Sheriff Floyd Brown, to get some of his effects from her rooms, on Jackson street. While Brown was moving a trunk down the steps the man and woman quarreled and Foster shot her, in the back, with a .32-caliber pistol. Mrs. Foster testified that after she slapped the man she went to the steps to go down the stairs and Foster shot her. She was in a serious condition for some time.

During the trial the two children of the Fosters were in court, one a girl about six years old, another a boy about two. They stayed with their mother, except for a while when the little boy went to his father, while the latter was on the witness stand.

Fast Work, Four Years

Charles Allen, young High Point man, holds the speed record for Guilford court. He made it with an automobile. Less than 24 hours after he took a car belonging to E. A. Farlow, of High Point, he was arrested, arraigned, admitted taking the automobile and was sentenced to serve four years on the county roads. Allen said that he was drunk at the time he took the car late Tuesday afternoon and did not know what he was doing, that he had no intention of stealing it. He was sentenced Wednesday morning.

Carl Palmer, Winston-Salem man, pleaded guilty Wednesday to stealing an automobile belonging to T. W. Kellam, of Winston-Salem. Sentence has not yet been passed. The automobile was stolen from in front of the Guilford courthouse Monday afternoon and found Tuesday night near Spencer after a chase with Forsyth, Davidson and Rowan county officers taking part in it.

Guilt was admitted Wednesday by Fred Tice and E. M. Miller, of Winston-Salem, young white men, charged with forging the name of Dr. John Bynum, of Winston-Salem, to an order for morphine, the order being presented to the Justice Drug company here. Tice was given from one to three years in the state penitentiary, Miller from one to two years. Judge Long ordered that the men, who are drug addicts, be put in the care of the prison physician.

Pleading guilty to a charge of abandonment, C. C. Gardner was sentenced to serve eight months on the county roads.

A case against Buddy Sineath, charged with embezzlement, was continued until Friday on account of the absence of a witness, J. E. Hall. Hall was fined $50 for not being in court when the case was called.

A verdict of acquittal was rendered in the case of Junius Wallace, a negro, tried on a charge of assault with intent to rape, the chief prosecuting witness being a negro girl, Flossie Adams. He put up an alibi.

Other Cases

Judge Long outlined to the grand jury measures which he said would stop the failure of state banks. He stated that an officer or employee of a bank getting a loan from it should be made to put up sufficient collateral; that the directors should go on the notes of officers borrowing; that the banks should be examined every 60 days and the report of the examination be published, that every loan made to an officer or employee be published, and that it be one requirement for a board of directors that it be worth a sum equal to at least above the liabilities.

C. C. Johnson, a negro, found guilty of soliciting insurance without license, was sentenced to 14 months on the roads.

Old Vets Applaud Reference To Wilson

Richmond, Va., June 21.—A veritable uproar of applause was created at the opening session of the United Confederate Veterans here yesterday when Douglas Freeman gave a side-light into the life of Woodrow Wilson which he said he believed never before has been told. When General Lee went to Georgia to visit his father's grave on one occasion, he was surrounded by a group of veterans. Through the group a small boy found his way to a point where he could look up at the face of the general.

VETERANS AT THEIR REUNION

Confederates Open 32nd Reunion In Richmond

BIG CROWD ATTENDS

Over 50,000 Veterans and Their Friends Throng Confederate Capital Which Is Well Prepared For the Big Event

Richmond, Va., June 22.—Gen. Julian S. Carr, of Durham, N. C., was re-elected as commander-in-chief of the United Confederate veterans at the session of the reunion yesterday and New Orleans was selected as the 1923 convention city.

Other officers named were: Gen. J. A. Thomas, commander of the army of Tennessee; Lt. Gen. C. D. Howry, Washington, D. C., commander of the Army of Northern Virginia; Lieut. Gen. E. W. Kirkpatrick, of Texas, commander of the Trans-Mississippi department.

Today is the closing day of the reunion. The program includes a great parade, in which veterans of three wars participated, laying the cornerstone of the Matthew Fontaine Maury monument and a grand ball at night will conclude the reunion.

Richmond, Va., June 20.—Surrounded by rich traditions of the old South, in a city hallowed by history, into which are woven records of high devotion, sacrifice and courage, the men who 60 years ago fought over an ideal officially opened their 32nd annual reunion here today.

Called to order by Gen. William B. Freeman, commander of the Virginia division, Confederate veterans, the opening session of the reunion got under way in the auditorium at an early hour. Despite a hard rain which swept the city through the night, the old soldiers were in their places fresh and undaunted. Following brief preliminaries, Gen. Julian S. Carr, venerable commander-in-chief of the veterans, took the chair.

Governor E. Lee Trinkle, of Virginia, welcomed the veterans and declared that those who bled and died 60 years ago did not go to battle in vain.

General Carr, in a stirring vein, saw in the assembly, he said, dreams, reincarnate of an ideal that still glows in the breasts of the old soldiers, and which will be passed like a torch to future generations.

Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, reunion orator, discussed the Confederate contribution to the life of the nation. "The leadership of character, a continued idealism, a unity above class and a patience in adversity. Of all these contributions," said the speaker, "the nation would have need."

With characteristic word and gesture, United States Senator Par Harrison, of Mississippi, warmed the enthusiasm of his audience with the statement that never in the history of the world was a war fought so nobly as that between the states, and never before has a cause remained so cherished in memory, though it be true that these same men who followed Lee and Jackson now lift their heads as proudly when the Star Spangled Banner waves in the breeze of a new and stronger nation.

All the speakers were generously applauded. The addresses were followed by brief speeches from prominent veterans, called to the platform by their comrades. The old soldiers in their joy raised a storm of noise for favorites, yells, cries and rhythmic rapping of canes upon the floor bringing the speakers to their feet.

Such utterances as "we did not fight for what we thought was right; but we fought for what we knew was right," brought on a paroxysm of joy, gray-haired, be-whiskered veterans here and there waving their hats, some throwing their head-gear excitedly across the auditorium. To heighten the fever the band played "Dixie." Then a veritable storm of noise raged until with the dying away of the music, through the din, the quick tattoos of the gavel brought silence.

About 4,000 veterans are attending, who with other visitors, bring the reunion crowd to 50,000.

CONFEDERATE VETERANS OFF FOR REUNION IN RICHMOND

Twelve Confederate veterans, members of Guilford camp, United Confederate Veterans, left the city Monday night on Southern train No. 12 for Richmond, Va., to attend the annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans. Adjutant Walter Greene was in charge of the party, and appeared very enthusiastic over the trip and reunion. He has recently acquired a new uniform and he has a snappy military appearance.

The county commissioners provided money for the veterans' railroad fares.

Those who left are: Walter Greene, M. L. Eiland, H. S. Rayle, T. W. Long, C. W. Taylor, S. J. Lamb, T. T. Brooks, F. M. Brooks, F. M. Keith, J. B. Minor, W. H. Turner, Thompson Siler, and S. G. J. Dalton

TRYING OAKES IN ALAMANCE

For Killing Robertson, Occupant of "Murder Car"

ARGUING TO THE JURY

Evidence Quickly Concluded and Jury Gets Case Some Time Today—Oakes Cool and Lawyers Can't Shake His Story

D. B. Oakes, former Greensboro policeman, was placed on trial in Alamance Superior court at Graham Tuesday afternoon, charged with the killing of Tom Robertson, in Rockingham county, on the evening of May 4, 1921, shortly after policeman Tom McCuiston, another Greensboro policeman, had been shot to death from a liquor car on East Washington street here. Robertson, Carl Talley and Lewis Edwards were in the liquor car at the time.

The jury was empanelled Tuesday afternoon and the introduction of evidence began Wednesday. The state rested its case shortly after 10 o'clock Wednesday and the defense began its case immediately. That was concluded and argument begun. Argument was resumed this morning, with the prospect of the case going to the jury this afternoon.

State's Witnesses
Witnesses for the state included Dr. S. C. Jett, of Reidsville, who testified that he was called to view the body of Robertson, slain in Rockingham county, in the chase that followed the murder of McCuiston. Either of the two bullets would have caused the death, he said.

R. A. Griffin, a farmer living on the Southfield-Madison highway, testified to seeing two cars pass at a high rate of speed, 15 feet apart, the lead car pulling out to the main road, going a few feet into a side road, then backing, colliding with the other car, then there was shooting. Robertson lived about 10 minutes, he said, but never spoke, only groaning several times. Griffin swore that he heard Oakes say "I killed him and I might as well have done it as for him to go to the electric chair later." There was whisky in the car of the man killed, he said, about 18 gallons.

Another witness, A. B. Hooper, swore that he heard Oakes say he killed Robertson.

Oakes as a witness was cool and calm and told a story that Solicitor Sam Gattis was unable to shake. He told of the murder of McCuiston and his starting in pursuit. Seeing he could not overtake the car in his own automobile, he asked Clyde Cobb, whom he saw at a filling station, for his automobile. The two were approached by a man giving him the name as Hale who offered his assistance and the three set out. He said they followed Robertson on the Summerfield road, lost track, went by the Guilford battleground and picked up the track again on the Reidsville road, after covering about 35 miles. He swore that when the murder car went in the side road and backed again he thought the driver was trying to wreck the pursuing car and he called on Robertson to halt or surrender and, receiving no reply, fired twice in the rear of the car, thinking there were two occupants. He found whisky in the murder car.

A New Witness
E. R. Holt, of Montgomery, Ala., a new witness in the case, who has been sought in vain at other hearings, was introduced. He told of having his car filled with gas at a filling station when Oakes dashed up after the murder of McCuiston. He said he offered his services. He was a salesman for the Remington Arms company and had a sample pistol, a .38, which he loaded, and went along with Oakes and Cobb. He told of the Robertson car going in to side road and backing out. He said that he was prepared to shoot if there were other men in the car.

Clyde Cobb told of being at the filling station when Oakes drove up and demanded his car for the pursuit. He told of the murder car going in to side road and backing out. He said that he was prepared to shoot if there were other men in the car.

Chief of Police Jackson, of Reidsville, swore that Robertson was a dangerous man. He said that he had been arrested on a charge of shooting into a car bearing police officers. Chief of Police Dallas, of Leaksville-Spray, also testified that Robertson was a dangerous man and had shot at him (Dallas).

M. W. Gant, clerk of Guilford Superior court, was called to the stand to testify in regard to the trial of Lewis Edwards, but the court would not allow the testimony.

Carl Talley has never been captured. Lewis Edwards, the other occupant of the car with Talley and Robertson, was arrested near the Battleground on the evening of the murder and was tried in Guilford Superior court and given a 10-year penitentiary sentence.

Appearing for Oakes are Judge W. P. Bynum, of this city, Judge R. C. Strudwick, also of this city, and Parker and Long, of Graham. Solicitor Gattis and A. D. Ivey, of the Rockingham bar, are prosecuting.

MERCHANTS MEET IN ANNUAL CONVENTION

Addesses, Group Meetings and Business Sessions Feature Meeting of State's Merchants

Wilmington, June 22.—The North Carolina Merchants' association met in annual convention at Wilmington Tuesday, sessions continuing through today.

Tuesday the reports of officers, directors and standing committees were heard, also some addresses, Group meetings were held.

The meeting was opened by President B. F. Roark, of Charlotte. He stated that he is proud that the organization has been able to serve the merchants of the state. The merchants are a great force in the state, he said, stating that in each city the retail merchants are the leading business men and that they can be a great power for good.

Andreas Burkhardt, of Cincinnati, made a strong speech. He made a vigorous attack upon the tariff bill now in Congress. He said that it is a monstrous proposal to take from the public money that should remain with the consumer. He declared that in general industrial, agricultural and business conditions are better than they were a year ago. He is much heartened by the better prospect for agriculture.

Group meetings were held in the afternoon. Bascom T. Baynes, of Odell's, of Greensboro, led the hardware group. Others meeting were the department stores, grocers, furniture dealers, retail clothing, music merchants and shoe dealers.

Today was given over to business and addresses. Addresses were made by M. E. Newsome, Durham; C. A. Williams, Charlotte; William Perlin, Raleigh, and Mrs. Ella Tuttle, Asheville. Election of officers was set for this afternoon.

DRAKE CASE VERY PUZZLING

Some Positive Evidence Is Mays, a Murderer

OTHER SAY HE IS NOT

Both Here and At Raleigh There Is Dispute Over Identity of Pomona Man Arrested on Murder Charge

Is S. F. Drake, Pomona mill weaver, accused of the murder of Cleve Watkins in Raleigh on June 23, 1914, Will Mays, the man who is known to have done the killing, and who flitted away from the scene of the crime a few hours later, evading all efforts these eight long years?

The question has not yet been answered. Drake, who was arrested at his home in the mill Monday, was taken to Raleigh Tuesday and is still in the custody of the authorities there, while they continue to puzzle over the question of identity.

Several persons here, seeing Drake, stated positively that he is Mays. Others are just as positive that he is not. In Raleigh others declared that he is Mays, but others were just as positive that he is not. Drake himself is not worrying. He says that he can prove that he is not Mays. When Detective Tom Crabtree, of Raleigh, came for him Drake said, "Am I Will Mays?" The detective responded, "I do not know, but there are people in Raleigh who do." At that Drake said, "Well, let's go there then." But the matter, this late after the arrest, has not been settled.

Wednesday a man named Atherton, working at the Pomona mills, with whom Drake boarded for a while, stated that he knew him years ago in Columbus, Griffin and other Georgia cities, and that he was Drake then. He also said that men who worked in the mill with Drake when he was a boy declare emphatically that he is not Mays.

The wife and children of Drake are visiting in Virginia, and he was hopeful that he would be released before they learned of his arrest, so that they would not be worried. He has a brother in College Park, Ga., a suburb of Atlanta, and gave his address to Mr. Atherton, but when the latter wanted to wire him he said, "Don't do it. I will be freed before he could get here."

In Raleigh Chief Glenn found a number of men who say that Drake is the same Will Mays who worked at Pilot and Caraleigh mills there before fleeing the city after the death of Watkins. There are others, however, who say that Drake is not Will Mays.

A scar on the forehead may furnish a mark of identification. Three operatives of Caraleigh mills referred to a scar on Will Mays' forehead and, it is said, a scar in the same place as described by these men was found on Drake's forehead when examined in jail.

An interesting part of the identification process at Raleigh was a visit by Cy Beasley, a witness who will be used if there is a trial. Beasley was in the room at the time Watkins was shot, according to police. Beasley looked carefully at Drake, watched his movements and then told the police that the prisoner is not Will Mays, because of the absence of a bent finger and deformity of one arm.

Prosecutor Beckwith at Raleigh is proceeding cautiously with the process of identification and within the next few days will seek to bring Dr. R. S. McGeachy, a former well known physician of Raleigh, who was with Watkins, Mays and others in the little room where Watkins was killed. Dr. McGeachy is living in Fayetteville.

TOO NOISY FOR COURT SAYS JUDGE LONG HERE

Judge B. F. Long, presiding over Superior court, yesterday declared that the noise caused by motorists around the courthouse has become a nuisance, and it appeared to him that the city authorities should provide a quiet place for holding Superior court. Many times the court was forced to stop proceedings yesterday because of the noise on the outside. The judge said he thought the sheriff would be justified in arresting those responsible for the noise.

THE IDEALS OF A NATION

The International Sunday School Lesson,
By REV. E. P. BILLUPS,
Assistant Pastor West Market Street Methodist Church.

Psalm 88:12

In our study of the history of Judah during the past three months we have been introduced to kings, princes, priests, prophets, common folk, and slaves. And to study the history of Judah is simply to study the lives of these, particularly with reference to their religious convictions. We find that these, as is true with all mankind, can be classified as good kings and bad kings, princes wise and unwise, prophets true and false, and commonfolk who are loyal and faithful and those who are disloyal and wicked. We find kings who were righteous and God-fearing, as Asa and Josiah. We find one like Uzziah who made a good beginning, as Jehoiakim, who tried to destroy God's word and Zedekiah whose vacillating policy led to the downfall and destruction of the nation. The whole history is a struggle for freedom and national greatness under the reforms of Hezekiah and the ideals of Isaiah and Jeremiah only to be overshadowed by complete disaster which came as a result of superstitions, witchcraft, sorcery, and the basest forms of idolatry introduced by foolish and wicked kings. Everything was overtaken by calamity and darkness when God was forgotten.

This record of Judah is more than the history of the religious struggles of a great people; it is an everlasting reminder that when a nation forgets God disaster and sore trial are sure to follow. It should cause us to remember, "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." And from the history of this people there are a few lessons which should be called to mind today.

1. God's word is for a nation as well as the individual. God expects to be honored in the corporate life of the community. There is no corporation, or labor organization, or class that can say this does not apply to us. At a meeting of one of the labor organizations in Wheeling, W. Va., a few months ago a resolution was passed stating that the golden rule was sufficient to settle all labor disputes. If men could only come together on a basis of common understanding, manifesting the true spirit of Christ in all their relations, what a host of grievances would sink into insignificance.

2. God is patient with His people. Time after time God, through His prophets, warned Judah of her sins and called her back to true worship. And when Judah returned she found forgiveness. Today the Jeremiahs and Isaiahs are calling men to true worship; calling them to cease their mad rush after things and seek those things which are of eternal value. The long-suffering of the Lord is our salvation. In His appeals to men God is always compassionate.

3. God's righteousness must visit sin with its just penalty. "God will not always chide, neither will He keep His anger forever." Judah's downfall came as a direct result of continued disobedience. A lesson for us today. With frantic boasts and foolish words we prate about our national greatness and in our selfish isolation we lose sight of our high destiny; and unless we can rid ourselves of the selfishness, the sordidness, the commercialism, the greed, the conglomeration of our war-damaged times and turn back to the high and holy purpose inwrought in the very fabric of our nation the fate of America will be like that of Judah.

4. When Judah returned to God, it was not by turning over a new leaf, or by adopting a new code of morals; Judah returned to the true worship in the spirit of humility and reverence. The high crime of our day is the spirit of irreverence. Men think nothing of treading on holy ground without removing their sandals. They enter the great cathedrals without removing their hats or having a single holy inspiration. There is altogether too prevalent the spirit of irreverence for the sacredness of the law; there are too many who, adorning themselves with the cloak of respectability in the form of church membership, brush the law aside for their own selfish interests. Then there is a lack of reverence on the part of many for the house of God and for the divine service. Many people have better theater manners than they have church manners. It is thoughtlessness, no doubt, on the part of many; nevertheless, there can be no true worship without reverence. It is a problem of the pastor, parent, teacher, judge, and policeman; the spirit of reverence must be inculcated in the life of our youth.

What is America's need today? This is answered in a cartoon which appeared in one of our recent magazines. Uncle Sam is out driving in a high-powered machine. He has with him a carload of radicals. He has come to a sign on which are painted many "isms." Each radical is pointing out the way of his peculiar "ism." Uncle Sam is confused. There appears to him the spirit of Lincoln. He carries an axe, a textbook on geometry. These are symbols of honest and unrelenting toil, of simple and untrifling faith, of thorough and fundamental learning. To the speedster of the road of progress, the spirit of the rail-splitter gives this advice: "Turn back to the little red schoolhouse and the white church; then go straight ahead." Sound and good advice. We've neglected the things that gave us our national greatness. We need to turn back to the counsels of our fathers.

Woman Is Nominated In Minnesota Primary

St. Paul, Minn., June 21.—A woman has been nominated for the United States senate by a major political party for the first time in the history of the country. This became apparent last night when returns from half the precincts participating in Monday's primary election showed Mrs. Anna Dickie Olsen had won the senatorial nomination of the Democratic party over two male opponents.

When 1,715 of the state's 3,348 precincts had reported, Mrs. Olsen had a margin of 4,200 votes over Thomas Meighan, her nearest opponent, the count then standing: Mrs. Olsen, 18,212; Meighan, 14,019. Opposing Mrs. Olsen in the November election will be Minnesota's junior senator, Frank B. Kellogg, who was renominated on the Republican ticket with other state officers endorsed by the party's state convention. Henrik Shipstead, farmer-labor candidate, also will be an opponent.

Seeking Information

A very stout man mounted the scales in the store and dropped a penny in the slot. There was some wait, then the clanking and rattling of the inward of the contraption, and the pointer finally came to rest somewhere not far from the 300 mark.

There was an unseen witness to the ceremony, and as the fat man woefully contemplated the result the voice of a wee, small boy piped up from behind him: "Say, mister, how many times did it go around?" —Minneapolis Tribune.

Duke, deputy sheriff, and the Pomona mills, was filed in the office of Mason W. Gant, Guilford clerk of Superior court, Monday. FARM DEMONSTRATION

The watermelon is very susceptible to injury by the root-knot nematode, a pest very widely distributed in the South on most vegetables, cotton, cowpeas, etc., and some losses to melon growers have occurred.

The aboveground effect of root-knot is mainly a stunting or reduction in vigor of vine and size of fruit. The roots are the seat of the injury and these are greatly swollen, distorted, and knotted.

Root-knot is a pest of old fields, and the practice of growing melons on new lands fortunately avoids much loss. Growers should, however, bear in mind the susceptibility of this crop to root-knot whenever considering the planting of old fields.

Root-knot can be controlled in a practical way only by a system of rotation with nonsusceptible crops, such as winter grains, corn, velvet beans, and iron or other resistant cowpeas. For full discussion of this important matter, consult Farmer's Bulletin 648, "The Control of Root-knot," which will be sent free upon application to the Department of Agriculture.

Anthracnose

One of the most troublesome watermelon diseases is anthracnose. This affects the leaves and vine as well as the fruit. Irregular, dark, dead spots appear on the leaves, which dry up and die prematurely. The stems may be spotted in a similar way.

The melons may develop spots, at first water-soaked and later covered and with a pink growth of spores. Hundreds of those spots of varying size may appear on a single fruit. At first shallow, they may become deeper and result in the decay of the flesh when followed by other fungi. In any case the melons are disfigured and their market value much lessened.

Cause of Anthracnose

Anthracnose is due to a fungus widely prevalent not only on watermelons, but also on cucumbers, cantaloupes, and other plants of the cucurbit family. Closely related but different fungi cause the anthracnose of cotton, bean, and sugar cane, citrus wither-tip, and similar diseases of many crops.

The fungus, which is itself a plant, penetrates the watermelon and develops there in the form of minute moldlike threads. It is spread widely and rapidly by its tiny seed bodies, or spores, produced in uncountable numbers on the spotted leaves and fruit. Without moisture these spores cannot germinate or infect the plant; hence anthracnose may not appear at all during dry weather, but it develops very rapidly during periods of rain or heavy dews, particularly if the weather is warm. The anthracnose fungus has a peculiar ability to remain dormant in the melon rind and to develop, into visible spots later when heat and moisture conditions are favorable; consequently, the disease often appears overnight on whole carloads en route to market if the weather is warm and muggy. The original infection, however, is traced back to the field, where the foliage was blighted.

The premature death of leaves has unfavorable consequences in that the melons cannot ripen normally and their flavor is inferior. The fruit is no longer shaded from the sun and tends to sunburn.

Decision Reserved In Baxter Shemwell Case

Lawyers in a hearing over an effort of minority stockholders of the Mays Manufacturing company, of Lexington, to oust Baxter Shemwell, formerly of Lexington, from control of the company, came to a close in Federal court here Wednesday. The case was started Monday. Judge James E. Boyd, presiding, reserved his decision until Saturday, giving the disputants an opportunity to settle the matter amicably.

The Mays Manufacturing company was organized to manufacture a computing machine, and some of the stockholders complained that Shemwell looted the treasury of about $212,000. A temporary receiver was appointed and the complainants were endeavoring to have it made permanent.

INDIGNANT OVER INCINERATOR SITE

Citizens of South Greensboro Draw Up Resolutions Opposing Incinerator On South Buffalo

Between 300 and 400 people met in the South Buffalo schoolhouse Tuesday night in an indignation meeting over the steps taken by the city council towards placing an incinerator on South Buffalo creek.

The body assembled emphatically declared that the plan of the city council was a decided injustice to the people of South Greensboro. A petition was circulated Tuesday afternoon and met with favor in every part of South Greensboro. The women are greatly opposed to do all they can to have the proposed site changed.

Resolutions were adopted to be presented to the city council on Monday afternoon, asking the city commissioners to reconsider their decision to place the incinerator on South Buffalo.

CAROLINA WEDDINGS

(From "A Vision of Sir Launfal")
And what is so rare as a day in June?

Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then Heaven tries earth if it be in tune,
And o'er it softly her warm ear lays:

Whether we look, or whether we listen,
We hear life murmur, or see it glisten;

Every clod feels a stir of might,
An instinct within it that reaches and towers,

And, grasping blindly above it for light,
Climbs to a soul in grass and flowers;

The flush of life may well be seen
Thrilling back over hills and valleys;

The cowslip starts in meadows green,
The buttercup catches the sun in its chalice,

And there's never a leaf or a blade too mean
To be some happy creature's palace;

The little bird sits at his door in the sun,
Attilike a blossom among the leaves,

And lets his illumined being o'errun
With the deluge of summer is receives;

His mate feels the eggs beneath her wings,
And the heart in her dumb breast flutters and sings;

He sings to the wide world, and she to her nest,—
In the nice ear of Nature which song is the best?

THE SHIPPING BOARD IN A HOLE

The proposition that the sale of liquor on Shipping board vessels be continued is absurd. The United States has adopted prohibition and wherever the American flag floats there should be prohibition.

The following special dispatch appeared in the New York World:

"The Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal church, which handles the publicity for the Anti-Saloon league, recently made public some correspondence it had with the Shipping board in regard to advertisements that were appearing in European papers of the wine lists on American ships. In this correspondence D. E. Brundage, who directs the advertising for the Shipping board, wrote last November:

"By the direction of the chairman, that foreign agents of the lines would be at once dismissed. If further found guilty of printing this misinformation and illegal advertising."

"Later Mr. Brundage wrote: 'I have never known liquor to be sold on Shipping board vessels, and I do know that the sale of liquor on these vessels would be absolutely contrary to the policy of the Shipping board, and the instructions, the Shipping board has given the operators.'"

It appears that the Shipping board was not aware that liquors were being served on board American ships, although their foreign agents evidently considered the fact that they were served the greatest advertising boost. If the Shipping board was aware of this fact they were equally sure that the American public should know nothing of it. Why? Because the serving of liquors to Americans, as well as others, on American vessels, is to the average American citizen, a direct breach of the Volstead act. It is in direct opposition to the American constitution.

Now it comes to light that liquors are served on American vessels, and the Shipping board through its chairman, Mr. Lasker, says that it is necessary to the life of the business of the ships. Should any business be dependent on anything that is deteriorating to the morals and health of a nation? That the vessels cannot be operated in competition with those of foreign countries unless liquor is sold is to admit that the United States is not engaged, with its merchant marine, in shipping, but in selling liquor.

It is very probable that there is plenty of money in the liquor business for some people now, but do the people of the United States want to be saloon keepers? That is what the Shipping board promises when its chairman, Mr. Lasker, states that there must be liquor sold on the boats.

"We need the money" is one of the most contemptible arguments ever made in the liquor selling business. Do the American people want that kind of money? The 18th amendment adequately answers the question.

Let us have prohibition everywhere the flag goes.

LACKING BREAD AND MEAT

Guilford ranks 98th in the counties of the state in the matter of livestock. Remember that there are only 100 counties. It is not something to cause pride.

The department of rural economics, University of North Carolina, makes the rating, "based on the 1920 census of quantities of bread and meat produced, on the consuming population of folks and farm animals, on standard staple farm and garden products, not extras, dainties and luxuries, and on the per capita averages used in a former University News Letter."

Only three counties of the state are rated as self-feeding—Currituck, Alleghany and Camden, the first with a surplus production of $298,849; the second with $107,473; the third with $32,239. All the others have deficits.

Guilford's deficit is $9,255,145. Yet we say that agriculture is practiced in Guilford county, that farming is an occupation. Is it any wonder that many people complain that it is not a profitable occupation? How can it be profitable when there is a deficit of over nine million dollars in bread and meat?

Is it agriculture that is practiced? Rather is it not just planting? Are the farmers of Guilford county, the majority of them, really farmers?

O, prosperity, we all wall, return! Come back! We forget that that prosperity was based on abnormal conditions, with a world at war, clamoring for all sorts of raw materials, all sorts of finished goods, willing to pay any price. It would take another war to bring back that sort of prosperity and there will be no more wars, not for a long time, at least.

Stable prosperity in an agricultural country is based on livestock. The farm without them is at an insuperable disadvantage. It is not only the meat that they furnish in the bread-and-meat program that makes them valuable; there can be no fertility of the soil where there is not enough livestock. Lacking fertility, the bread part of the program is reduced.

But can not we put our land in "money crops" and buy bread and meat from others, making more on the money crops, and taking a fat profit that way? That sounds good, but it hasn't worked out well. The fact is, it has not worked out at all. The cities of the state, along with those of the other states of the south, have turned to the livestock regions for their bread and meat, paying high prices and high freight rates. Buying bread and meat from afar, the farmer himself has paid dear and the profit—where is it? The livestock farming people got it. Ninety-eight among 100 states. Ninety-fifth among 97 that do not raise their bread and meat. It is not an enviable record.

The farmers of Guilford should resolve to climb higher in the list. Surely they will not allow themselves to stay that low on the bread-and-meat program.

They will find when they get more livestock they will have more money. They will not have to worry so much about the price of what they have to buy then, for they will not have to buy so much. Freight rates will not cause them so much concern.

AGE HAS NOT WORN THEIR SPIRIT

The fighting spirit of the Confederate soldier has not abated with age. Old, worn with long years of toll, the hearts of veterans attending the reunion at Richmond are live as the day they put on Confederate gray and stepped gallily to war. Indomitable men, they attend what will be the last meeting for some of them with heads up, hearts strong. Their steps may falter, their bodies being worn, but the spirit of the veterans is still high, unsurpassed.

The South is proud of those men. Never in history did men fight such fearful odds. Their feats at arms remain the wonder of a world that has seen hundreds of years of war, waged under all sorts of conditions, by all sorts of men. Without adequate arms, without anything like a sufficiency of war material, they fought for four long years, and at last, not beaten, merely overcome by sheer weight of numbers and resources, they returned to their ruined homes, building up again a great South with the same unbeatable spirit they had shown in war.

These men and their comrades who could not attend the reunion, those who died in battle and since the war, were real men. Always will the whole world honor their valor. The place they hold in the hearts of their own people is fixed forever.

Stories of tax frauds sometimes tax one's credulity.

Roger Peckinpaugh, of the Washington club, has written an article under the caption, "How to Play Ball." Why not ask some of the stars in the Guilford County league?

MOSTLY NONSENSE

By Gee Gee Dee.

FOR PRESIDENT HARDING forced to abandon his plans for a trip to Alaska this summer, we are very sorry. Surely that would have proved a delightful vacation for the chief executive. It is true that he has managed to slip away from Washington on a number of week-end parties, but often on those voyages up and down the Potomac he has been accompanied by members of his official family, in some cases by cabinet officers who doubtless prevented the President from obtaining real rest. For instance, Attorney General Daugherty, the man about whose attitude toward the prosecution of war fraud cases and kindred matters keen interest recently has been evidenced by Senator Carraway and some millions of other American citizens, often has accompanied the President on those excursions from the national capital. It is inconceivable that the attorney general, whose resignation was being sought by such staunch Republican journals as The New York Tribune, permitted his chief and close personal friend to engage in unalloyed vacation fancies at such seasons.

What a relief it would have been for Mr. Harding to spend a few weeks in distant Alaska, nice, cool, comfortable Alaska, where shade trees are unnecessary. For Alaska is a territory in which such things as ship subsidy bills, bonus measures, liquor-laden United States sea-going passenger liners, tariff schedules and Blair-Dover controversies evidently are not matters that greatly concern the people. Surely there he would have found nothing electrifying, not even electric fans would have been needed. Fishing around for brief surcease from legislative woes, the President could have devoted much time to consideration of the salmon industry; temporarily he might have forgotten the frenzied Republican politicians, led by 150 senators and representatives, who through the Washington Post, served notice on the titular head of their party that all is not well that does not end well for would-be-Republican office-holders.

Incomprehensible is the ingratitude of President Harding's Republican friends in Washington. Has he not restored to the vocabulary for statesmen and near-statesmen that magic word normalcy? Has he not indeed restored normalcy itself? Foresooth, these are troublous days for the nation's chief magistrate when he cannot discipline the boys sufficiently to enable him to go a-vacationing in Alaska.

Of course there is the prospect of the fall elections as a disturbing element in the thoughts of Mr. Harding. Then there is the painful memory of sharp reverses which the national administration's friends sustained in recent Republican primaries, notably Indiana, Pennsylvania and Iowa. Will the Republicans lose control of Congress next fall? And if they do, what of Mr. Harding's chances two years hence? On the one hand, Republican senators and representatives are defying Harding cabinet members and attacking their policies; on the other hand, the people are exhibiting symptoms of disappointment with the state of affairs which the President has been pleased to term normalcy. Verily, one does not have to strain one's credulity to accept as entirely veracious newspaper reports that of late Mr. Harding has almost forgotten how to produce his once famous smile. Alaska, once visualized as a summer resort for the chief of the G. O. P., has become Alaska the inaccessible; it's going to be a long, hot summer in administrative circles at Washington.

It's about time to inter some of Russia's internal woes.

NEXT TO THE SOIL--LEGUMES VALUABLE--CO-OPS INCREASING

MAY SAVE MONEY BY PLANTING LEGUMES

Fertilizer Bills May Be Reduced By Planting Clover, Vetch, Cow Peas, and Other Legumes

Raleigh, May 8.—North Carolina will use this year probably 900,000 tons of fertilizer at a cost of approximately $27,000,000.

That total is nearly three times the value of last year's sweet potato crop in North Carolina; nearly four times the value of the peanut crop; more than one-third the value of the tobacco crop; more than four times the value of the wheat crop; two-thirds the value of the entire corn crop; nearly twice the value of the hay crop; and more than 40 per cent of the value of the cotton crop.

Of the $27,000,000 which North Carolina will spend this year for fertilizer, something like $13,500,000 will be for nitrogen. This element, the most costly ingredient of fertilizer, may be produced at home instead of being purchased if farmers will but diversify their crops and produce legumes, such as clover, vetch, cow peas, velvet beans, soy beans and others.

On a farm which produces feed for its livestock, particularly where a considerable number of cattle are kept, the production of ample legumes is so altogether logical that it can hardly be avoided, and of course, the legumes are returned to the soil in the form of manure. On farms where sufficient livestock are not kept to consume the quantity of legumes which should be grown in order to provide the nitrogen required for fertilizer, clover, vetch beans, cow peas or other legumes should be grown simply for green manure to be turned under purely for the benefit to be derived from the fertilizer elements and humus.

It is rather difficult for a short-sighted farmer to make up his mind to turn under a good growth of clover or any other legume. If he could see one, two, three or four years ahead it would not be so hard. Land of comparatively low fertility frequently has its productivity doubled through the turning under of one legume crop.

The farmers who are moving ahead most satisfactorily are those who not only study means of making money, but means of saving money, and a farmer who can, in the course of a few years, cut his fertilizer expenditures practically in half through the use of legumes is certainly saving money. He simply banks it in the soil where it can be drawn out through larger crop yields during succeeding years. This is a big step in "living at home" and in winning economic independence.

At the end of this year North Carolina will have used more than 5,000,000 tons of fertilizer during the past seven years at a cost of $150,000,000. Unquestionably it pays to use fertilizer, and North Carolina farmers have gotten good results from the fertilizers they have used, but it does not pay to expend ten, twelve or fifteen million dollars a year for nitrogen which the farmer can himself draw from the air above his head through the use of legumes.

Manufacturers Now Have Use For All of Apple

The thoroughness with which the apple is now worked over and utilized by some manufacturers makes it comparable with the packing-house pig that leaves only a futile squeal. The apple is not transformed into such a variety of products as the pig, but all are useful and when the last of the series has been made hardly a smell is left.

In many of the apple-using factories the apples are first pressed to produce cider, which may be sold as such or may be manufactured into vinegar. After thorough pressing the pomace is treated with hot water to remove the pectin, which, after purification, is sold in either liquid or solid form to manufacturers of jellies and similar products and to housewives. The much-wasted and squeezed residue is dried, ground, and sold as cattle feed.

CUT ALFALFA WHEN NEARLY IN BLOOM

Experiments Indicate That Yields Are Larger Over a Period of Years When Cut in Bloom

Delaying the cutting of alfalfa until it is nearly in full bloom has been found a better practice than mowing it soon after blooming starts. Trials made by the United States department of agriculture and state experiment stations indicate that the yields are larger over a period of years, and that the life of the stand is prolonged by delaying harvesting until the plants are nearly in full bloom.

Hay made when the plants are nearly in full bloom possibly is offset by the gain in quantity of hay. The fields that were cut prior to or at the beginning of blooming showed a tendency to die out sooner. Cutting a crop late in the fall so that not enough growth was left for protection in the winter also had much to do with thinning stands. The department recommends that alfalfa be given time to reach a height of 6 to 8 inches before cold weather shuts off the sap flow.

In the past the growing of alfalfa in rows in dry regions has been recommended, but experimental evidence gathered by the department in the last few years shows that, with the exception of a few rare varieties, the seed of which sells for a high price, this method is seldom successful. Where the rainfall is not sufficient to grow alfalfa in broadcast stands it can not usually be grown profitably in rows. A slightly larger yield may be produced, but not enough to pay for the added expense. Also the hay harvested on this cultivated ground is apt to be dirty and it is hard to cut and load.

Accumulating experience also has exploded some old notions about the value of cultivation of broadcast stands. It has been found that harrowing a field of alfalfa ordinarily does not increase the yield; neither does it prolong the life of the stand to any noticeable extent. The modified spring-tooth harrow does not injure the plants, but the disk often kills many and reduces the stand. Some sort of cultivation appears advisable in irrigated regions where the water carries a great deal of silt or where the soil has been compacted by the tramping of cattle pastured on the alfalfa. The department believes there is usually little to be gained by cultivating broadcast fields when the stand is good. If weeds and grass work in and reduce the stand it is better to plow up the field and put in another crop for a year or two. It is hard to thicken a thin stand by cultivating it and sowing more seed; in fact, it is a waste of time, the department believes.

FEDERAL AID HIGHWAYS TO APRIL 11,017 MILES

Federal aid roads completed since 1916 totaled 11,017 miles on March 31, an increase of 8,016 miles during the preceding 12 months, says the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture. A great many different types and widths were constructed, the general average cost per mile for the United States being $17,120.

In total mileage completed the leading states were Minnesota 1,093 miles, Texas 919, Wisconsin 657, Illinois 489, Ohio 465, and Arkansas 401.

CALIFORNIA FARM AGENTS RANK WITH PROFESSORS

Under the California plan of organization of extension work in cooperation with the United States department of agriculture, county agents have the rank of assistant professors in the university and are entitled to all the rights and privileges of the resident teaching force. Accordingly one county agent who has now served eight years in this present position has been granted sabbatical leave, which he will spend in Europe studying rural co-operation. This is the first time in the history of the work that such recognition has been given a county agent.

LIVE AT HOME THE WAY TO MAKE MONEY

Farmers Should Not Expect To Become Rich Off of One Crop, Must Raise Foodstuffs

The production of crop values in North Carolina in 1921 averaged $38.32 per cultivated acre. Only eight states made a better showing and of these only California was an agricultural state of any consequence.

It was more than twice the average for the United States as a whole, which was $17.47.

It was more than five times the average crop yield of the Dakotas; it was almost exactly four times the average of Kansas and Nebraska; almost exactly three times the average of Indiana, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota and Montana; and almost twice the average of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Our high rank in total crop values and in per-acre average is due to cotton and tobacco, which produce around three-fourths of our crop wealth from year to year.

If cotton and tobacco farming alone could make us rich, we would long ago have been the richest farm people in the Union.

But swapping cotton and tobacco dollars for imported food and feed is no way to accumulate wealth, no matter how much cotton and tobacco we have or what the price levels are. The bread-and-meat farmers of the middle west take our cotton and tobacco money and get rich; we raise cotton and tobacco and stay poor. They produce small crop values per acre, but they are food values; we produce enormous crop values per acre, but they are non-food values, and seven of every ten cotton and tobacco dollars go out of the state to pay for imported bread and meat, grain, hay, and forage.

The middle western farmers live at home and bountiful where they live; we live around in cotton and tobacco patches and board in the middle west. When hard times come they have little ready cash, but more food and feed than they know what to do with. When hard times come in tobacco and cotton areas, we have little ready cash, little bread and meat at home to live on, and even less credit to tide us over till the next harvest season.

Wise or otherwise, everybody knows that the farmers of North Carolina can never get rich buying food and feed supplies with tobacco and cotton dollars.

Wisconsin was a one-crop state until she went broke in the early eighties. Now she is a money-crop, livestock state. She raises binder tobacco and other cash crops, to be sure, but she raises these on a bread-and-meat basis.

We must always raise cotton and tobacco, but if we are wise we will produce the crop with our pantries, barns and smoke-houses filled with home-raised food and feed.—University News-Letter.

Green Manuring Ancient Means of Improving Soil

Green manuring—plowing under green crops—as a means of soil improvement, although it has been emphasized in recent years, can hardly be called a new discovery, says the United States department of agriculture. It is really one of the oldest methods. Crops for this purpose were used by the ancients, the Romans using lupines, which were sown in September and turned under in May for the benefit of the following crop.

In Germany the use of lupines began in the middle of the nineteenth century and has proved an important factor in reclaiming the sandy lands of parts of Prussia. In England legumes and other plants are commonly used; in India and Japan the farmers gather green plants of many kinds, sometimes even cutting twigs from the trees and carrying them to the rice fields.

In the United States the use of special green-manure crops is much more general in the South than in the North. Under irrigation they play an important part in the orchard culture in the West, but not under dry-farming conditions.

PALMETTO FARMERS SIGN WITH CO-OPS

South Carolina Farmers Rapidly Joining the Ranks of the Tri-State Co-operative Association

With only a few days left in which to sign up this year's crop with the marketing association, tobacco growers of South Carolina are rapidly joining the great Tri-State Co-operative association.

The meeting of association and warehousemen from 38 marketing points of the South Carolina belt is being followed by the most extensive drive which has reached tobacco growers of the Palmetto state.

Coming all the way from Kentucky, leaders of the Burley Tobacco Growers' association will tell the same message of successful co-operation which resulted recently in bringing thousands of new contracts from eastern Carolina growers to Raleigh headquarters of the association.

The three vice-presidents of the Tobacco Growers' Co-operative association, J. Y. Joyner, of North Carolina, Joseph M. Hurt, of Virginia, and Bright Williamson, of South Carolina, officials of extension division from several states, veteran leaders of the greatest co-operative in America representing various types of tobacco take part in this mammoth drive.

"We are ready," said T. C. Watkins, Jr., director of warehouses, when asked whether the 38 warehouses of the association would be prepared to receive the tobacco of South Carolina growers in the near future.

At a directors' meeting in Raleigh the 22 tobacco farmers on the board will complete all details of their plan for receiving the crop of South Carolina in the near future.

Judging from recent announcements of the leaf and warehouse departments the association will not only give its members unexcelled service in warehousing and grading, but, according to Oliver J. Sands, executive manager of the association, millions of dollars have been assured the association to meet the first payments to South Carolina growers upon delivery of their tobacco.

Mapping Out New System For the Country's Roads

A system of highways that will serve the whole country and will be far superior to any other in the world is being mapped out by federal and state engineers. It is estimated that the system will comprise 180,000 miles of road. The federal highway act recently enacted specifically requires that all federal aid be spent on a connected system of highways consisting of not more than 7 per cent of the road mileage in each state, and that this system shall consist of interstate or primary roads and intercounty or secondary roads.

Proposed systems have been received by the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States department of agriculture from all but eight states. They are plotted on a large map of the United States and carefully examined as to co-ordination with the roads of adjacent states and service to all sections of the country. Where co-ordination is not satisfactory conferences are held with all interested state highway officials and routes adjusted.

Many states have already adjusted difficult problems with their neighbors. As an example the system sent in by Nebraska showed a big gap in an important road along the northern boundary. It was learned, however, that South Dakota would follow with a system that would fit like pictures on toy blocks. Since the federal highway act of last November became a law, only roads certain to be on the system have been approved for construction.

TEST MANY CATTLE IN NORTH CAROLINA

North Carolina Making Good Showing in Fight Against Cattle Tuberculosis, 9161 Cows in Month

Raleigh, June 20.—In the fight against tuberculosis, according to Dr. William Moore, state veterinarian, North Carolina leads in area with 15 counties being worked. During the month of April there was a total of 9,161 cattle tested, of which number 87 reacted to the test. Buncombe county heads the list 1,709 cattle and Forsyth is second with 1,104 tested.

Many other states exceed in total number of cattle tested, but considering the difference in size of herds, North Carolina is making as good if not a better showing than any other state.

In one month, Nebraska, working on the area plan, tested 21,000 cattle, while North Carolina tested only 9,161, but herds in Nebraska average 30 head against five in North Carolina.

Figures for the past six months show 274 herds, with a total of 33,780 cattle, tested for this disease. While the total number appears small, work is being pushed to completion in several counties and indications are that North Carolina will soon be up with the leading states in the work of eradicating bovine tuberculosis.

WOOD ALCOHOL BUSINESS AND UNDERTAKING RISKY

The investigation of an automobile risk offered to one of the prominent companies for insurance of the fire and theft risks revealed a uniquely correlated business of the prospective assured. The applicant was operating an undertaking establishment; formerly run by his cousin, who is now in jail for bootlegging. The applicant is also a bootlegger, and, in addition, manufactures and sells wood alcohol. The company declined the risk when the inspection showed a wood alcohol and undertaking business being run jointly by the applicant.

CHURCH BUILT BY ONE MAN

It is said that the wonderful cathedrals of Europe were constructed by the laymen and skilled workers of the church. L. D. Cornuelle, formerly a Cincinnati man, built this elaborate edifice single-handed, filling the role of architect, mason and carpenter. He worked from a pencil sketch only and finished the work in a year and eight months. The church stands at Sierra Madre, California, and nestles in the foothills back of the little town.

PUBLIC HEALTH

By Wm. M. Jones, M. D.

The Sanitary Privy

You will find in the Public Laws of 1919, Chapter 71, Section 2: "No person shall maintain or use a residence, located within 300 yards of a public water supply, that is not provided with sewage or with septic tanks approved by the North Carolina Board of Health, or with a sanitary privy which complies in construction and maintenance with the requirements of the act."

Section 4. "Every privy located within 300 yards of the residence of any person other than that of the owner or tenant thereof shall be maintained in a sanitary manner and in accordance with reasonable rules and regulations to be prescribed by the North Carolina State Board of Health and posted in suitable form inside of the privy by an officer of the said board."

This is the law of the state and applies to each and every county alike. A. M. Surratt, a state inspector of the privies. He is a man of wide experience and comes to us at my earnest solicitation, to help us solve this important question. The proper disposal of human excrement is one of the most difficult questions in rural disease prevention.

Had we the sanitary privy in every country home in Guilford County, we would have fewer cases of typhoid fever, diarrhea and summer complaints, and, of course, would have fewer deaths from those causes. This law does not work an inconvenience upon anybody and, if carried out, will save much sickness and many deaths.

RETURN TRUE BILLS IN TWO BIG CASES

Hedgecock Charged With Embezzlement and Stacy Gamble with the Murder of M. C. Spry—Special Term of Court

On Tuesday a true bill was returned by the Guilford grand jury charging Basil H. Hedgecock, former cashier of the Home Banking Company, of High Point, with embezzlement.

In Mr. Hedgecock's accounts a shortage of $100,000 was found at the bank at High Point of which he was cashier. It is alleged. The bank was closed several weeks ago, and Mr. Hedgecock was given a preliminary hearing in High Point and held over for Superior court under bond of $20,000. For several days he remained in jail because he was not able to raise the required bond. The grand jury also returned a true bill charging Stacy Gamble with the murder of M. C. Spry about three weeks ago near the railway station here. He was given a preliminary hearing before Judge D. H. Collins and held for the Superior court without bond. It is thought that the state will be satisfied with a verdict of second degree murder, and will not ask for one in the first degree.

The special term of court which begins next Monday with Judge G. S. Ferguson, of Waynesville, presiding, was called for the purpose of clearing the criminal docket of the county, so far as possible. The case of Stacy Gamble, charged with the killing of M. C. Spry, will probably be called Tuesday or Wednesday, and it is thought that most of the week will be taken up with the hearing of minor cases. As the case against Mr. Hedgecock on the charge of embezzlement will likely require much time, it is probable that it will not be called next week.

Much local interest is being shown in the case of Claude and Clarence Schoonfield, brothers, charged with forgery in connection with their obtaining $10,000 from the American Exchange National bank, although it is not likely that the case will be called before next week, as a large number of cases of minor importance will be disposed of first. The case will require considerable time. Dr. Parran Jarboe, a witness for the state, is ill and not able to attend court, so the case has been postponed until his recovery.

MANY SPRAYS MAY BE USED AGAINST LAWN ANTS

To get rid of lawn ants entomologists of the United States department of agriculture suggest drenching the nests with boiling water or pouring in a small quantity of kerosene oil. Similar treatment may be applied to nests between or beneath paving stones. Spraying the lawn with kerosene emulsion or with very strong soap wash is also recommended. For large ant nests disulphid of carbon injected into the nest by means of an oil can or a small spritzer is recommended to kill the ants. The fumes of disulphid of carbon have a very disagreeable odor and are injurious, but they are not injurious to higher animals in the open air.

GHOSTS BACK AFTER LAPSE OF 14 YEARS

Spirit of Luther Barrow, Dead 14 Years, Sends Message, People Say

Raleigh, June 20.—What disquieting thing has roused Luther Barrow out of the eternal sleep into which he stumbled these fourteen years ago that he should come nightly to the house of W. H. Haley, a respected white farmer living half a mile from Forestville, and there pour out his woes into the ears of a stranger who knew not that he had ever lived in the earth until he revealed himself the fourteenth of January.

To a score or more respected and responsible citizens of that community Luther Barrow has spoken coherently, but only to Mr. Haley and to Mrs. Haley has he confided the thing that disquiets him, and neither of his confidants will disclose aught of the secrets that the spirit has given into their keeping. Many have heard him, but only these two are in his confidence, save Jack Griffith, a well known citizen living at Falls of the Neuse.

The former wife of the deceased Luther Barrow, formerly Miss Geneva Fort and now Mrs. William Edwards, of Wake Forest, has heard what purports to be the voice of her first husband, and her present husband has talked with the spirit, but neither are able to understand what he says to them, according to Mr. Haley. Mr. Haley declares that he understood perfectly the messages from the spirit to his former wife and to her present husband, but he declines flatly to divulge it.

All of which has brought turmoil to the usually quiet community about Forestville, 15 miles out from Raleigh on the Wake Forest road. Nightly there come many people to the simple farm house where Mr. Haley, his wife, his daughter and his four sons live, eager to catch a whisper of the voice of the spirit that has come intermittently for five months. Never a night passes but some neighbor knocks at the door and wants to hear the "ghost."

Mr. Haley is 61 years old. Last December he rented the place where he lives from Samuel Fort, of Forestville, and moved there with his family. He has lived in the northern half of the county all of his life, and moved to his present location from the Falls of the Neuse neighborhood. He has never seen a spirit before, none of his family have ever seen a spirit, never believed in "ghosts," and do not now believe in them. Mr. Haley is an honest, hard-working farmer, and not a man whose appearance would prompt anybody to suspect him of phantasmagoria.

The dwelling is a frame structure on the left side of the road toward Wake Forest, a very neat place with a hedge around and a Rambler rose over the front gate. A hallway runs through the dwelling, and stairways lead to the half-story above. Mr. Haley and his family are the only tenants. Two sons occupy the front room to the right of the entrance and a daughter the room to the left. All of them work hard on the farm. The youngest boy is 17.

Last January, six weeks after Mr. Haley had moved there, he was awakened one night by a loud knocking on the front porch. He went out, but nothing was there. Somewhat perplexed, he went back to bed. The thing was repeated the next night, and the next. Finally Mr. Haley hit upon the plan of going around the end of the house and watching when the knocking came, and looking hard at the spot from which came the sounds. In broad moonlight, he was able to see nothing.

Eventually a voice spoke to him. Mr. Haley is not such a man as one would think to be afraid. He declares that he felt "funny," but not afraid. The voice called distinctly the name "Geneva." The Fort family had lived in the house at one time, and it was said that Mr. and Mrs. Edwards have lived there at one time since the death of Luther Barrow.
