

SEVEN YEARS FOR PHILLIPS

For Attempted Assault On Negro Girl

ELLIOTT PAYS FINE

Lee Jackson, Who Had Been Reported Dead Draws Court Sentence In Superior Court—Other Cases Tried

In Guilford Superior court yesterday afternoon Albert Phillips, a young white man, was convicted of attempted criminal assault upon Fannie Greene, 18 years old, and sentenced by Judge W. F. Harding to serve seven years in the state prison. Testimony was introduced by the state to show that Phillips while out driving in an automobile acrossed the girl, asked her to permit him to accomplish his purpose, then fought with her, but was unsuccessful in his efforts.

In announcing the sentence Judge Harding referred to the crime as outrageous.

George Elliott, of Norfolk, Va., who last week was sentenced to 12 months on the roads for having whisky for sale, yesterday was allowed to pay a fine of $500 and the costs instead of going to the roads. The change was due to the ill health of the defendant. It was stated. The sentence of S. H. Peck, who was arrested as Elliott's chauffeur, was reduced from 12 to 10 months.

Sentence has not yet been passed in the case against John Murray, who was convicted of having whisky for sale.

Frank Thompson was found guilty of larceny of plumbing tools, but sentence has not been passed. Today arguments are being made in the case against R. M. Dixon, alias Ellis Nasser, charged with forging several checks.

Judge Harding on Tuesday imposed a road sentence of three years against each of the following negroes: Dave Davis, Johnnie J. Jones and Robert Brown. They were convicted of breaking and entering the Callum Tobacco store, on Davis street, several weeks ago, about $2,000 worth of tobacco, cigars and cigarettes having been taken. In the case against James Perry, a negro charged with a similar offense, a non-suit was ordered.

Dave Dixon, who pleaded guilty to the larceny of about $1,000 from the Wesley Long hospital, was sentenced to four years in the state prison.

Lee Jackson, found guilty of manufacturing whisky, was sentenced to six months on the county roads. Jackson had twice been reported as dead, but had a way of turning up later as a fugitive from justice. The last time he was captured in Mount Airy and brought back to Greensboro, having been in the county jail a few weeks, awaiting trial. Mason W. Gant, clerk of Guilford Superior court, was one of those instrumental in bringing Jackson back to stand trial here.

Benton Payne admitted the theft of an automobile valued at $300, and Clifton Van Linderham, tried jointly with Payne, was found guilty. Sentence has not yet been imposed.

Willie Bennett, a negro, was fined $25 for passing worthless checks.

Sentence of 60 days on the county roads was imposed upon Isahiah Williams, who was tried for assault with intent to kill. The defendant testified that he had fired in self-defense when his life was threatened by James Haskey. Judge Harding directed Sheriff D. B. Stafford to destroy the pistol and exhibit the pieces in court.

Frank Baker and Romie Nelson admitted they had broken into a store and stolen merchandise of the value of $45. Prayer for judgment was continued upon payment of the costs to Baker, who is 18 years old. Nelson, who is 14, was turned over to the judge of the juvenile court. The latter was ordered to attend Sunday school, remain at home at night and report to the court each week.

Francis Quate, charged with an assault with a deadly weapon, pleaded guilty. Prayer for judgment was continued for three years upon payment of the costs. Bond of $300 was required and the defendant was ordered to appear at the March and October terms of court for three years to show good behavior.

For forcible trespass a negro named Giles Moton was fined $25 and the costs.

The jury found a verdict of guilty in the case against E. E. Idol, who was charged with manufacturing whisky, and the defendant drew a sentence of 12 months on the roads. Wade Reynolds was found not guilty of breaking into and entering the store of C. B. Taylor. However, he was convicted of carrying a concealed weapon and receiving it while knowing it had been stolen. Sentence of four months on the roads was passed.

McKinley Ledwell and Will Odell were convicted of larceny of a horse and buggy valued at about $200. Each was sentenced to six months on the county highways.

Notice of appeal which had been entered by Jack Jurivance and Cecil Prescott following their conviction on the charge of receiving a woman into the Purviance home for the purpose of prostitution, was withdrawn Tuesday. Purviance then paid a fine of $500 and Prescott a fine of $250.

The criminal charge against E. D. Brown, of Salisbury, who last week was convicted of injuring Ed Morehead, a negro, by reason of driving an automobile recklessly, was dis-

STATE AGAIN VICTOR IN TAX BATTLE HERE

Railroads' Request For Interlocutory Injunction Forbidding Tax Certification Is Refused

Request upon the part of attorneys for five railroad systems that A. D. Watts, North Carolina commissioner of internal revenue, be restrained by an interlocutory injunction forbidding him to certify down the 1922 ad valorem valuations was refused by a three-judge federal court here Monday afternoon following argument.

That was a clear victory for the state, another in the long standing tax dispute, but it was followed by a victory for the railroads, their attorneys securing for them a 45 day stay restraining the revenue commissioner from any certification for that period.

The stay was granted in order to allow the railroads to perfect their appeal from the ruling denying them an injunction, notices of which appeal they filed as soon as the ruling was made by Judges Edmund Waddill, Jr., of Richmond, of Circuit Court of Appeals, H. G. Connor, of the Eastern North Carolina Federal district court, and James E. Boyd, Western North Carolina Federal court. The three judges were unanimous in their decision.

Should the matter be not settled by decision of the Supreme court on the appeal of the railroads as to a former chapter, the denial of injunction forbidding the collection of tax in dispute in 1921, which is scheduled to come up the first Monday in November, the railroads will be back at the end of the 45-day period asking for a continuance of the stay, it was indicated today.

The stay, however, means that while it is in force there cannot even be certification of the proportionate share of the counties, school districts and municipalities. There will not be payment of even the taxes due on the valuation admitted fair by the railroads while the stay is in force.

The sums at stake are very large. The Southern railway, appraised a ninety-six million dollars, contends that all over sixty million dollars is excessive and discriminatory. Figures for the other roads are: Atlantic Coast Line, appraised, fifty million dollars; admitted, thirty-four million; Seaboard, appraised, thirty-four million dollars, admitted twenty-seven million; Norfolk Southern, appraised, twenty-seven million dollars, admitted, eighteen million; Atlantic and Yadkin, appraised, four million dollars, admitted, two million. Those are round numbers.

Appearing for the state were Attorney General Manning, former Justice George H. Brown, of Raleigh; Thomas D. Warren, of New Bern and George Craig of Asheville. Former Governor Craig was present as a spectator.

Attorneys here for the Southern railroad and the Atlantic and Yadkin were S. L. Prince, Washington, D. C.; and W. M. Hendren, Winston-Salem; for the Coast Line, Thomas Davis, Wilmington; for the Seaboard, Murray Allen, Raleigh; for Norfolk Southern, Col. W. B. Rodman, Norfolk.

Dismissed Tuesday when lawyers announced to the court that satisfactory settlement had been made with Morehead. The civil action which Morehead had instituted against Brown also has been abandoned as a result of the settlement. It was stated. Brown was taxed with the costs of the criminal action.

Prayer for judgment was continued in the case against Clarence Gormillion, a negro, who was tried on a charge of seduction. The defendant was married to the chief prosecuting witness, a negro girl named Mildred Houston, in the county jail on Wednesday. The ceremony was witnessed by Sheriff Stafford, and the lawyers in the case, Sidney S. Alderman and A. C. Davis. Odell Henry was found not guilty of a charge of embezzlement.

Charged with having whisky for sale, Robert Stevens, failed to appear, and a capias was ordered issued.

Coy Runk, of High Point, pleaded guilty to a charge of prostitution and drew a sentence of four months on the roads, together with the costs of the case. However, it was agreed that upon payment of the costs he would be released, a capias to be issued by the solicitor.

TOBACCO MARKET HAS GREAT OPENING; GROWERS PLEASED

On First Day 125,000 Pounds of Tobacco Delivered to Co-operative Association Here and Satisfaction With Grading and Other Features Noted—Exercises Mark Opening of Season Under New System

Delivering 125,000 pounds of tobacco to the Tri-State Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Marketing association here on the opening day Tuesday, farmers of Guilford and other counties witnessed impressive evidence of the success of the new system which is designed to inject business principles into farming, and by almost universal testimony the proposition was declared an unqualified success.

From points far and near growers assembled to see the workings of the new plan and to deliver their tobacco, the product coming from Guilford, Alamance, Rockingham, Randolph, Stokes, Forsyth, Chatham and Montgomery counties. On every hand was evidence that the farmers were well pleased with the results obtained.

The new grading system was declared by growers to be ideal. The tobacco is being graded in the planters' warehouse. After it is graded it is trucked to the scales, where it is weighed and a ticket showing the grade is produced, after which the weed is taken to another part of the warehouse, then subsequently to the Guilford warehouse to be stored. The grower is given his participation receipt, showing the grades, weights and cash advances, and he also receives a check for the first advances.

It would have been impossible on Tuesday to place all the tobacco on the floor of the planters' warehouse at one time, so large were the offerings of growers. While grading and weighing was in progress on the warehouse floor many trucks and wagons outside were loaded with tobacco, which later went through the systematic processes of the association's handling.

Enthusiasm over the co-operative system was noticeable even before grading started Tuesday morning. Interesting exercises preceded the actual opening of the market. While hundreds of farmers demonstrated their approval of the association and its principles a brief session was held, presided over by John W. King, of Greensboro, president of the Central Carolina Warehousing corporation and a director of the Tri-State association.

Mr. King talked briefly of the purposes and accomplishments of the association, declaring that the success of the enterprise was already assured beyond doubt. The crowd sang "America" led by J. Foster Barnes. Dr. Charles F. Myers, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of this city, prayed, invoking divine blessings upon the wonderful plan of co-operation characterizing the association's activities.

C. B. Cheatham, of Henderson, assistant general manager of the association's leaf department, spoke briefly, referring to the uniform success of the organization in the various states. The tobacco is being sold by the association at excellent prices, he pointed out, adding that in every instance save one the sales committee had obtained prices in excess of the minimum prices fixed by the directors of the association. In one instance with a small quantity of tobacco, the price obtained was exactly the minimum.

He warned the members of the association to combat the lying propaganda circulated by enemies of the co-operative plan. Mr. Cheatham emphasized the fact that there is plenty of financial support for the plan. "We haven't touched the $300,000 made available by the War Finance corporation," he said, stating that local bankers had accorded splendid support.

J. J. Walters, of Danville, the official grader, was introduced by Mr. King. Among other officials present were R. O. Gamble, of Summerfield, manager of the Greensboro warehouse; W. D. Lambeth, of Monticello, assistant manager of the Greensboro warehouse; S. E. Coltrane, of Route 2, Guilford College, secretary-treasurer of the Central Carolina Warehousing corporation; and H. W. Lambeth, of Monticello, president of the Guilford County Tobacco Growers' Co-operative association, all of whom are directors of the Central Carolina Warehousing corporation.

Yesterday a break of 50,000 pounds was witnessed at the two modern warehouses of the association here and again general satisfaction prevailed. The market will open every week day except Saturday. Carl McGillis, of Steeds, Montgomery county, on Tuesday delivered 10 lots of tobacco to the co-operative association, receiving as cash advances $109.51. He estimated that if he had sold that tobacco under the auction system it would not have brought over $150 or $160 altogether. Under the co-operative plan it was stated that he might reasonably expect to receive altogether more than $300 for those ten piles. Naturally, Mr. McGillis is pleased with the new system.

Markets which opened in Virginia last Tuesday were Danville, South Boston, Critt, Rocky Mount, Martinsville, Chatham, Gretna, Virginsville, Clarksville, Chase City, Lenoir, Clover, Heysville, Rico, Lawrenceville, Kenbridge, South Hill, Burkeville, Emporia, Albemarle, Kinney, Petersburg, Blackstone and Drake's Branch. In Western North Carolina co-operative marketing is in full swing at Greensboro, Elkin, Reidsville, Madison, Mebane, Youngsville, Statesville, Stoneville, Walnut Cove, Mount Airy and Leaksville. It is announced.

In the old belt Tuesday, 2,000 pounds brought cash advances to thousands of growers. All deliveries from 34 grades on 24 co-operative markets in Virginia were sold to leading manufacturers, according to a statement from S. D. Frissell, of the Tri-State association.

NO DECISION YET AS TO KNOTTY ROAD ISSUE

November 11, Fixed as Day For Formal Opening of New Guilford County Home

After hearing a large number of citizens of the Pleasant Garden and Climax sections present their views regarding the Pleasant Garden road Tuesday the county commissioners announced they were not in position to make a definite statement concerning the matter.

Chairman J. A. Rankin expressed his disappointment and that of other members of the board because of the absence from the meeting of two members of the county highway commission, J. Elwood Cox and W. C. Boren, their absence resulting in delay in determining the proposition. However, it was indicated that the route for which the Pleasant Garden and Climax people were contending would be granted.

Road builders and engineers are exercising undue authority in relation to curves in the road that are not believed to be sufficiently wide and also the piling of dirt on the property of taxpayers according to statements made by members of the delegation and members of the board.

The board received a petition asking for a new road leading into Rockingham county through Washington township. Another delegation requested that the commissioners grade and sandlay the highway near Pomona mill, extending west to the intersection of the Jamestown-Guilford College road, a distance of three miles. Land owners in Jefferson and Rock Creek townships asked for a new road beginning at Wadsworth church, passing by the old Foust mill, crossing the Greensboro road and connecting with the Julian road at Mount Hope church. No definite action has yet been taken as to the three petitions.

Formal opening of the modern new Guilford county home will be an event of Saturday, November 11, at 3 o'clock, it was agreed. An interesting program will be presented and the people of the county will be invited to attend.

Chairman Rankin on Tuesday was authorized to execute notes for $22,117.10 with which to purchase land for the county tuberculosis hospital, that being the amount borrowed from the Atlantic Bank & Trust company, of this city, and the Commercial National bank of High Point.

Destruction of seven blockade stiffs, captured last month by county officers, was witnessed by the commissioners. For each still captured a bounty of $30 is paid. About 100 stiffs are captured annually in the county, it was stated.

The following jurors were selected for the November term of Guilford Superior court:

November 6—E. B. Madkins, L. A. Wharton, D. W. Shoffner, D. E. Greene, J. G. Jobe, D. C. Jobe, J. L. Hankins, I. W. Murphy, John Forsythe, J. T. Cobb, J. A. Allred, E. J. Clarida, J. P. May, N. H. The new home of Dick's laundry, which will be constructed early next year, will be located at the southwest corner of East Market and Lyndon streets, according to announcement by officials of the company. Permit for construction at that place was granted Monday afternoon by the city council.

It is planned to erect a two-story building, which will cost between $40,000 and $45,000. The lot is 105 by 158 feet. The building will be modern in every respect. It is stated, the same being true of the laundry machinery and equipment generally. It is announced that an uptown office on West market street at the present laundry site will be retained for the convenience of patrons.

Already approximately nine million pounds have been pledged to this one house. The Reidsville addition markets "never before has sold as much as eight million pounds."

FARM BUREAU MAKING GRATIFYING PROGRESS

I. N. Paine Tells of Some of Benefits Accruing to Farmers Through Development of Movement

By I. N. PAINE
(Secretary N. C. F. B. F.)

The Farm bureau movement in North Carolina is progressing reasonably well in the counties where organization work is being conducted. This is a natural outcome of the educational program of the North Carolina Farm Bureau, federation and the County Farm bureaus. For more than a year these organizations have been putting out publicity matter that explains to the farmers of the county and of the state the good that can be accomplished by a strong farmers' organization when backed by a body of influential farmers in the local communities of the counties.

This educational work has resulted in a demand from the leading farmers of a number of counties for organization work to be pressed whereby a strong organization will be built up for the purpose of securing for the farmers some measure of justice in transportation, legislation, marketing and other matters where the farmers have heretofore been unable to receive the necessary recognition for placing their operations on a successful business basis. These leading farmers no longer consider their business inferior to that of the business of any other group of citizens of the country. They consider that since they own 52 per cent of the wealth of the nation and pay 55 per cent of all freight rates, and 70 per cent of all taxes and really own and operate six and one-half million manufacturing plants from which they manufacture the raw material for the sustenance and comfort of 100 million inhabitants of the United States, and produce 44 per cent of the exports of America, that they really are business men, and that their business should be conducted on as sound a basis as that of banking, manufacturing, or any other business line of the entire country.

Feeling this way they realize that a strong organization such as that sustained by other business bodies is the means by which they can attain their proper place in their relations toward other business industries. In searching the field occupied by farm organization, the Farm bureau naturally appeals to this class of farmers as it is organized of farmers, for farmers, and by farmers, and has established different departments such as co-operative marketing, legislation, transportation, taxation, etc., with expert men in each of these lines as head of each special department. The farmers have also studied the results obtained by these departments and realize that these results justify them in aligning themselves with this organization which is nation-wide in scope, having more than one million and a half farmers in the organization with 2,500 counties organized in 47 states in the Union. They have learned that the taxation department is working strenuously to see that the owners of the other 48 per cent of the wealth of the United States shall pay more than 30 per cent of the taxes of the country. They have learned that the transportation department has been instrumental in securing a reduction which has saved to the shippers of the country $240 millions within the last 12 months, and since the farmers pay 55 per cent of all the freight charges they consider that this reduction represents a direct cash saving to each farmer in the country. They have learned that this same transportation department alone

DEMOCRATIC MEETING

Speeches in Campaign In Guilford Will Include J. W. Bailey, Clyde Hoey, Major Stedman and J. F. Spruill

One of the most interesting features of the Democratic campaign in Guilford county will be an address here on the night of October 13 by R. A. Doughton, of Sparta, Alleghany county, who for many years has been a leading figure in the State House of Representatives and who is a member of the State Highway Commission, Chairman O. C. Coe of the Guilford County Democratic Executive committee, announced.

J. W. Bailey, of Raleigh, former collector of internal revenue, will deliver an address to the voters of Guilford county here on the night of October 12. It also is announced that Clyde Hoey, of Shelby, former congressman, will speak here on October 26.

Two speeches will probably be delivered in the county by Major Charles M. Stedman, of Greensboro, congressman from the fifth district. The major will speak in Greensboro and High Point. It is believed. On the night that Congressman Stedman delivers an address in Greensboro it is expected that J. F. Spruill, of Lexington, Democratic nominee for solicitor in the 12th judicial district, also will speak here. Mr. Spruill will be heard by the voters at Gibsonville on October 10; Stokesdale, October 20, and High Point, October 26.

Governor Morrison has been invited by Chairman Cox to make a campaign speech here, but no definite arrangements have yet been made for such an address.

Norman A. Boren, of this city, secretary of the Democratic executive committee in this county, has made arrangements for a speaking campaign to extend into every section of Guilford, beginning on October 16 and continuing until the general election. Already meetings have been arranged for the following points: Summerfield, Brown Summit, Oak Ridge, Gibsonville, Osceola, Alamance, Pleasant Union, Brightwood, Whitsett, Pleasant Garden, Monticello, Jamestown, Colfax, Friendship and Guilford College. The complete schedule will be announced shortly.

Speakers who are expected to address meetings in the county include the following: Aubrey L. Brooks, Chas. A. Hines, Senator A. M. Scates, R. R. King, Jr., F. P. Hobgood, Thomas J. Murphy, Miss Louise Alexander, George A. Younce, Robert Mosley, J. V. Baggett, C. L. Shuping, R. J. M. Hobbs, E. D. Broadhurst and Julius C. Smith, of Greensboro, and J. Allen Austin and O. E. Mendenhall, of High Point.

Clapp and Williams Sentenced To Roads

For malicious injury to real property Sherman Clapp, a young white man, in Municipal court Tuesday was sentenced by Judge D. H. Collins to serve 18 months on the county roads, and a similar sentence was passed upon Nathan Williams, a negro. Judgment was suspended upon the payment of the costs in the case charging exploding dynamite. Williams had testified that he dynamited the gas tank of the Davis Street-Auto exchange, this city, after Sherman Clapp offered him $6 for the job. Clapp entered notice of appeal and his appearance bond was fixed at $5,000.

More Diphtheria In County Is Reported

Considerable increase in the number of diphtheria cases was noted in the monthly report submitted to the county commissioners, this week by Dr. William M. Jones, county health officer, who stated that largely similar conditions prevail throughout North Carolina. Thirty cases of diphtheria were reported during the month of September, the report shows.

Ten cases of scarlet fever were reported, five of them from Glimmer township, two from Morehead, and one each from Oak Ridge, Deep River and Madison. Five cases of typhoid fever were reported.

and single-handed secured a reduction of one billion seven hundred million dollars in the valuation placed upon railroad property by the owners of this property when this valuation was made for the purpose of securing a 5 per cent dividend on the property as allowed under the Eech-Cummings law. They have learned that the legislative department has secured the passage of some 17 bills which favorably affect agriculture, and has been the means of defeating a number of bills that would have been unfavorable to our industry. They have been made to realize that co-operative marketing on a commodity basis is the only satisfactory means for marketing their farm products, and so the cry is raised by the class of farmers above described, "Forward Farm Bureau."

WEEDS OR STRAWBERRIES, WHICH?
The International Sunday School Lesson,
By REV. E. F. LALLUPS,
Assistant Pastor West Market Street Methodist Church.

Luke 2:40-52

With our lesson today we begin the study of the life of Christ, studying in this lesson the childhood of Jesus, and leaving the details relating to his birth for the Christmas lesson.

Jesus has been acclaimed the perfect man. The majesty and might of his perfect manhood has appealed to the world as no other has. He is the commanding figure of all ages. While we are drawn to Him by His matchless personality, we sometimes neglect to study His childhood and youth. We study Him today not as the perfect man, but as the ideal boy.

The facts relating to His boyhood are meagre, but with this incident of Jesus before the doctors in the Temple as related by Luke and what we know of the Jewish home at the time He lived, we can construct a fairly accurate account of His boyhood days. Jesus was a normal boy. He had all the trials, hardships, and perplexities that other boys have. His daily life was like that of other children of His age and station. At six years of age he was sent to the Synagogue school, which has been described as a Sunday school and a day school in one, for the Jews of that day set a high importance on the school. It was unlawful to live where there was no school for children, and up to 10 years of age the Bible formed the chief text-book. We read that "the child grew." Jesus, being human as well as divine, was subject to all human laws, among them the laws of growth. "And waxed strong." Jesus grew physically. This is essential and is the first step in the growth and development of all children. Along with this physical development there was mental and spiritual development, for He was "filled with wisdom; and the grace of God was upon Him." The love of God was in his heart and suffusing His life. So mastered was He by His great purpose that at the age of 12 we find Him in the Temple, conversing with the doctors in such a manner that they were "amazed at His understanding and His answers" and replying to the anxious inquiry of His mother, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"

This picture of a serious minded boy interested in His Father's business is a wonderfully beautiful one, but it is no less than we expect after catching a glimpse of His beautiful home life in the background, remembering that the ambition of the pious and godly parents was to bring Him up according to the law of God.

The coming of Jesus makes us realize more the sanctity of childhood, and the responsibilities that go with the training of the youth in matters of religion. "Jesus became a child, as Irenaeus beautifully observes, that He might be the Saviour of children. He has sanctified childhood, as He has every other age and hood, as He has every other age passing through it. And the light and sanctity of this divine childhood still linger around every human child." Jesus saves the child from

FARM DEMONSTRATION

Outdoor Wintering of Bees
Effects of accumulation of feces.—It was first shown by the authors that heat-generation causes increased consumption of stores; this in turn causes an accumulation of feces within the bees, which is more rapid if the stores contain a high percentage of indigestible materials, and the presence of feces causes increased activity, often resulting in death from excessive heat-generation. Beekeepers call this condition dysentery if the accumulation is so excessive that the bees are unable to retain the feces. Dysentery causes the death of bees in winter, so far as has been seen, solely by undue activity and excessive heat-production. This detrimental effect is reduced by good stores, but obviously the proper method is to prevent an unnecessary accumulation of feces by preventing a heavy consumption of stores, chiefly by providing a sufficiently high surrounding temperature. Honey-dew honey is especially injurious because of the rapidity with which feces accumulate.

In mild climates, in which there are frequent days when bees can fly and rid themselves of feces, the injurious effects of poor stores are less noticeable, because the feces do not accumulate sufficiently to cause abnormal activity. The accumulation of feces is to be considered as an irritant, causing responses similar to disturbance by jarring or exposure to light.

Influence of the queen.—In discussions of wintering it is usually stated that to winter well a colony must have a good queen. Obviously a good queen will better prepare a colony for winter by providing a strong colony of young bees than will a poor one, while a colony that is queenless in late summer and fall has little chance of living until spring. A good queen will also increase brood-rearing rapidly in the spring, if the colony has good stores and has been properly protected during the winter. Aside from the important influence on the population of the colony, the queen probably plays no part in wintering.

Spring-dwindling.—If the individual bees of a colony are reduced in vitality by excessive heat-production, they may live until spring, but are unable to do the heavy work then needed to bring the colony back to full strength. The adult bees die more rapidly than they are replaced by emerging bees, and the population decreases. This condition, which can be produced experimentally, has long been known among beekeepers as "spring-dwindling." If this condition is observed, the bees may perhaps be slightly relieved of further unnecessary work by packing to conserve heat and by giving abundant stores, but the proper treatment is to prevent the condition by proper care in the preceding fall and winter. The term "spring-dwindling" should not be applied to death of bees from other causes.

HOME DEMONSTRATION

Call Your Flock
The hen that has been sitting for a few days or has quit laying for some other reason shows a yellow color at the edges of her beak. Her abdomen is likely to feel empty, as she will not have eaten much for a few days, and her pelvic bones are spread less than two fingers apart. At the end of three weeks the yellow color will have only faintly returned there and the abdomen will begin to feel meaty unless the hen is soon to begin laying.

The hen that is not molting and has had two or more months' rest will have regained all her yellow color. Her abdomen is likely to have a solid, meaty feel, the same as that of the typical non-producer. The hen with the brood of chicks regains all her color, but is not likely to have a fat, meaty abdomen unless after leaving her chicks she takes quite a rest before beginning to lay.

By carefully following instructions one can, with a little practice, select the hens that have been heavy layers and are likely to be heavy layers in the future. One can dispose of those hens that have been nothing but a big expense, laying too few eggs to pay for their feed. Non-layers make fine Sunday dinners.

Breed For Egg Production
Go over the entire flock at least once a year to select the best hens and keep them for breeding purposes. Get cockerels from a heavy-laying strain, as in this way the production of the flock can be increased. That it pays to cull and to breed from sons of known high-producing hens has been demonstrated by the record of one of the University of Wisconsin flocks of White Leghorns. In 1914 the average production of one strain was 112 eggs, but by culling and breeding to sons of known high-producing hens the average has been raised to 185 eggs. This is an increase of 65 per cent., an added income of $3 a hen each year. The result is that no White Leghorn hens are kept for breeding at the University unless they lay at least 200 eggs during their first 12 months of laying.

Of course it is understood that no matter how good the laying strain from which the hens are raised they should be hatched early enough to mature fully before cold weather comes. This means they should be at least six months old by November 1st if they are to be heavy layers during the winter. Very late-hatched chicks should be fattened and sold as soon as possible, for such chicks very seldom make profitable layers.

First Woman Senator Appointed in Georgia

Atlanta, Oct. 3.—A woman from Georgia today won the distinction of being the first of her sex to obtain appointment to the United States senate when Mrs. W. H. Felton, of Cartersville, Ga., long known as the "Grand Old Woman of Georgia," was appointed by Governor Thomas W. Hardwick as senator to succeed the late Thomas E. Watson until the November elections, when a successor will be chosen at the polls. Mrs. Felton is 87 years of age, and has been prominent in state political circles for nearly half a century.

Mrs. Felton has accepted the office and in expressing her gratitude for the honor stated that it was going to thrill the nation when the news is conveyed from the Lakes to the Gulf that a woman has been chosen to become a member of the United States senate.

Before tendering the appointment to Mrs. Felton, Governor Hardwick, through mutual friends, offered the office to Mrs. Thomas E. Watson, widow of Senator Watson, who, the governor said, declined it because of ill health.

In a statement today, Mrs. Felton said: "It was eminently fitting that this position should have been tendered to the widow of the late Senator Watson."

Mrs. Felton was born in DeKalb county, Georgia, June 10, 1835. She was married October 11, 1863, to Dr. W. H. Felton, who died in 1909. Five children were born to this union; but only one of them, Dr. Howard E. Felton, survives.

Earle Holt Resigns Postmaster Position

The resignation of Prof. Earle Holt as postmaster at Oak Ridge has been sent to Postmaster General Work at Washington. Professor Holt has requested that he be relieved of the position as early as possible. Because of the extensive nature of his duties as a member of the faculty of Oak Ridge Institute Mr. Holt has not the time to give to the postmastership, it is stated.

C. R. Bowman is the choice of Guilford Republicans as successor to Mr. Holt. It is said. It appears probable that he will receive a temporary appointment pending civil service examinations. Mr. Holt, a Democrat, has served as postmaster several years.

A DAY TO BE LONG REMEMBERED

It was heartening to see the way the Co-operative tobacco marketing season opened here. For some time the system has been preached; there has been a great deal of it. Tuesday, however, the actual workings, the first chapter in the actual test, was made. The apparent satisfaction which the producers got out of it seems to prove that it is working well.

Other chapters will be written as the tobacco brought in is sold by the association and the participation receipts turned into money. It appears, from the experience of the co-operative markets which opened earlier, that that, too, will not prove a disappointment.

Tuesday, October 3, will be long remembered by the members of the association who brought tobacco here. They are pioneers in a great movement. They can look back in after years and remember with pride that they were in the van, that they did not lag back, but came up, each man carrying his end of the log, walking a new road, cutting through as they journeyed, buoyed up by a great faith. They are resolute men and for them are the rewards that come to the resolute, the achievements that await those who follow the vision, the satisfaction that accompanies a thing well done.

The Co-operatives seem to know what to do, how to do it and to have the courage to go ahead and do it. No one could see those men here Tuesday and really believe in his heart that they can fall in this, their fight for independence, from an outworn, illogical system of marketing.

COME TO THE FAIR

The Central Carolina fair should draw the people of the county, from all parts of the county and those of adjoining counties. Indications are that it will be a great fair in every respect but unless the people attend it its benefits will not be what they might.

This year improvements have been made and it offers more than ever before to the person attending it. He should not allow 1922 to go by without coming to the Central Carolina fair.

The fair is one of the bright spots in the year, when one can turn up the lights and relax from the tension due to a year's hard work, take a little time off "watching the world go by" or at least a slice of it go by. The person who doesn't come to the fair will do himself—or herself—an injustice.

THE "LONG ARM"

It is mighty hard to escape the law, even where the officers of the law become forgetful and give up the chase. The plight of a former Robeson county man, arrested in Florida for a killing in Robeson 44 years ago, is an example. Nobody knew where he was. Forty-four years is a long time; a man changes in that time. The old officers of the law go; new ones come. But this man will stand trial just as if the killing had been yesterday.

Somebody is sure to remember The world is not such a large place that one may find some spot where he will be safe. There will come someone who knows; whose memory is long and the next thing is the click of the handcuffs.

Of course some crimes have not been solved, "mystery murders" and disappearances, but who would prophesy that they will not be solved? A year, two, a decade, a score of years, what are they compared to the records on the books of the sheriff? The sheriff goes, but his records remain. The law lasts; years are nothing compared with it. About the only way a man guilty of violating the law could make sure that no one would ever bring him to book would be to get on a ship and when it got in the middle of the ocean slip overboard some dark night.

Since his latest encounters with Smith, William Randolph Hearst probably considers the former governor a modern Alfred the Great.

PROMISES—THAT'S ALL

A great deal is heard of the failure of the Republicans in Congress to live up to the promises made in the last political campaign. The New York World lists some of those promises. They are:

Co-ordination of rail-water and motor transportation, no tolls for American ships through the Panama canal, exclusion of the products of convict labor from interstate commerce, reorganization of the federal department at Washington, ship subsidy, revision of the immigration and naturalization laws, forest conservation, department of public welfare, control of child labor, federal aid to education.

But what of that? Those promises were merely vote catchers. The votes caught, why worry until after the next election, if at all? Further promises can be made at any time.

That is not all. Among the measures that since the election were advocated by the President or by cabinet or Congressional blocs and which Congress has not passed The World lists:

Leasing of Muscle Shoals, advocated by the farm bloc; reclamation of waste lands in the west, also advocated by the farm bloc; a corrupt practices act that would have compelled senators and representatives to have made public their campaign expenses, an amendment to the constitution permitting the federal and state governments to tax securities that are now exempt from taxation, and a more elastic system of rural credits, advocated by the farm bloc.

What of those, too? What if Congress did dawdle around, putting off attending to things? There will be more promises made—and broken.

It is hard for the Republican party to understand, apparently, that senators and representatives are business men or should be, laying down the rules for the biggest business in the world, the United States government. That business should be conducted efficiently, with as little waste of time and loss of motion as possible does not filter into their heads.

They are too busy thinking up new promises to make.

OPTIMISM OVER AGRICULTURE

On the eve of the annual meeting of the American Bankers' association, Robert F. Mattox, of Atlanta, a former president of the organization, finds that "the South is rapidly recovering from the recent depression." Mr. Mattox, observe, is in the heart of a section that was hit hard by the depression, a cotton growing section, where the boll weevil added to the burdens of the economic depression.

The raising of more livestock and the development of the dairying business, accompaniments of diversification, is what he considers as important. While one man might overdo that, it is safe to say that the whole South, generally, still is far from the saturation point as to livestock.

There are, of course, plenty of people who will tell you that there is no money in livestock; that they have tried it and found out. There is nothing to be gained by quarreling with a man like that; he has had experience. But it is possible that he went into it without considering all the factors; that he was so situated that his mistakes were bound to be costly; that he may have gone into it a little blindly.

In general, it can be maintained that agricultural prosperity is based largely upon fertility of the soil and fertility of the soil upon livestock.

One trouble about freight rate hearings is that so many people who attend them appear to be deaf.

British statesmen are desirous of smoking the pipe of peace, but they don't want the Turkish blend.

Virginian has written to The New York World, demanding the resignation of President Harding, but it is not believed that the President has the matter under serious consideration.

Hughes in Reply To Message From Bishop

Washington, Oct. 2. — Secretary Hughes declared tonight in a cable message to Dr. James Cannon, Jr., bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, who is in Paris, that the American government, in reference to the near eastern situation, "has not failed in any way to make the sentiment of the American people understood and to take every appropriate action."

"The executive," Mr. Hughes added, "has no authority to go beyond this and there has been no action by Congress which would justify this government in an attempt by armed force to pacify the near east or to engage in acts of war in order to accomplish the results you desire with respect to the inhabitants of that territory and to determine the problems which have vexed Europe for generations."

The message was in reply to one from Bishop Cannon under date of September 30, in which he declared his personal belief that, "Christian America will insist government of the United States co-operate actively to protect Christians in Asia Minor, not only diplomatically, but if necessary, with army and navy, to secure their result."

RAINBOW'S END

Synopsis

The wife of Don Esteban Varona, rich Spanish planter in Cuba, dies giving birth to twins, Esteban, Jr., and Rosa. Shortly after Varona's second marriage the secret hiding place in an old well of his great store of gold, jewels and deeds to land passes when he is killed by his favorite slave, Sebastian, crazed by cruel treatment after Varona lost Evangelina, Sebastian's daughter, the twins' nurse, at cards, Sebastian is shot. Varona's second wife hunting the treasure, is killed by falling in the well. Pancho Cueto, plantation overseer, informs the authorities young Varona is involved in the Cuban insurrection. The twins, now grown, flee to the hut in the hills of Evangelina and her husband, Asensio, now freed. Johnnie O'Reilly, American, Rosa's fiancé, is called back to New York by his company and for some time can hear nothing from her.

O'Reilly, back in Cuba to try to find Rosa, arrested with another American, Leslie Branch, is sent to New York. Cobo, brutal Spanish chieftain, burns Asensio's hut. Esteban returns just in time to rescue Rosa from Cobo. Esteban, Rosa, Asensio and Evangelina seek refuge in the hills. Esteban and his band attack Cobo's place, killing Cueto. Esteban, terribly wounded in a skirmish followed with Cobo's troops, at Cobo's, is lost in the jungle. Asensio, Evangelina and Rosa, starving, go into Matanzas. O'Reilly, Branch and Norine Evans, rich American nurse, evading detectives, plan to sail for Cuba.

They reach Cuba are told that Esteban and Rosa are thought dead, and O'Reilly joins a force of Cuban troops, finding Esteban very ill in a Spanish dungeon after an attack on a town. Esteban is taken to the Cuban camp. O'Reilly goes into Matanzas to find Rosa.

Search for her proves unavailing and O'Reilly begins to lose heart. O'Reilly finds Rosa.

The Haunted Garden

Rosa Varona did not die. On the contrary, under her lover's care she made so amazingly swift a recovery that improvement was visible from hour to hour; she rallied like a wilted flower under a refreshing rain. It was O'Reilly's presence as much as the nourishing diet provided by his money which effected this marvel, although the certainty that Esteban was alive and safe put added force into her determination to live. Rosa found hope springing up in her breast, and one day she caught herself laughing. The marvel of it was unbelievable. O'Reilly was sitting beside her bed of leaves at the time; impulsively she pressed his hand to her lips, repeating a question she had asked him many times:

"Do you love me?"

"For answer he bent and kissed her. What he said was of no consequence.

Rosa held his hand against her cheek, at a loss for words, with which to voice her gladness.

"Such happiness as mine belongs in heaven," she managed to tell him. "Sometimes it frightens me. With you by my side this prison is a paradise and I want for nothing. War, suffering, distress—I can't imagine they longer exist."

"Nevertheless, they do, and Matanzas is anything but a paradise," said he. "It's hell, and we must get about quickly to get out of it."

"Escape, do you mean? But that is impossible. Asensio can tell you all about that. The Spaniards used to issue passes for the men to go outside the lines in search of food. It was just a trick. They never came back—all of them were killed. Every one knows better than to try now."

"Nevertheless, we can't stay here much longer." In answer to the girl's puzzled inquiry he explained: "My money is gone—all but a few cents. This is the last of our food and there is no chance of getting more. Jacket has some mysterious source of supply and he manages to bring in something every now and then, but there are five of us to feed, and he can't furnish more than enough for himself. No, we must make a move at once, while we have the strength."

Rosa had not asked the source whence came the blessed food which was bringing the life blood back into her body, and although that food was not much—a little meal, a plantain, an occasional scrap of meat or fish—it had never occurred to her that the supply might be limited. She met the problem bravely, however.

"I have been close to death so long that it means little to me," she confessed. "I have you, and—well, with you at my side I can face the worst."

"Oh, we won't give up until we have to," he assured her. "If I had money it would be a simple proposition to bribe some guard to pass us through the lines, but I have spent all that General Betancourt gave me." He smoothed back Rosa's dark hair and smiled reassuringly at her. "Well, I'll manage somehow; so don't worry your pretty head. I'll find the price, if I have to waylay old Dan Mario and rob him. Don't you think I look like a bandit? The very sight of me would terrify that fat rascal."

"To me you are beautiful," breathed the girl. Then she lowered her eyes. "La, la! How I spoil you! I have quite forgotten how to be ladylike. Isabel was right when she called me a bold and forward hussy. Now, then, please turn your face aside, for I wish to think, and so long as you look at me I cannot—I make love to you brazenly. See! Now, then, that is much better. I shall hold your hand, so. When I kiss it you may look at me again, for a moment." Drawing herself closer to O'Reilly, Rosa began thoughtfully: "Before you came I more than once was on the point of appealing to some of my former friends, but they are all Spaniards and we are no longer simpatico, you understand?"

Rosa paused for his answer. "Perfectly; I'm in the same fix. Of all the people I used to know there isn't one but would denounce me if I made myself known. Now that I've been fighting with the Insurrectos, I daren't even go to the American consul for help—if there is an American consul."

Rosa nodded, then continued hesitatingly: "I had a vivid dream last night. Perhaps it was a portent. Who knows? It was about that stepmother of mine. You remember how she met her death? I wrote you—"

"Yes, and Esteban also told me." "It was he who recovered her body from the well. One day, while we were in hiding, away up yonder in the Yumuri, he showed me an old coin—"

"I know," O'Reilly said, quickly. "He told me the whole story. He thinks that doubloon is a clue to your father's fortune, but I can't put much faith in it. In fact, I didn't believe until this moment that there was a doubloon at all."

"Oh, indeed there was! I saw it." "Then it wasn't merely a sick fancy of your brother's?"

"Indeed no, it—" Rosa broke off to exclaim, "O'Reilly, you are looking at me!"

"But you gave me the signal to look," he protested.

"Nothing of the sort; you placed your fingers upon my lips." There was a moment of silence during which the lovers were oblivious to all but each other, then Rosa murmured: "How strange! Sometimes your eyes are blue and sometimes gray. Does that mean that your love, too, can change?"

"Certainly not. But come, what about Esteban and that doubloon?"

With an effort the girl brought herself back to earth. "Well, it occurred to me, in the light of that dream last night, that Esteban may have been right. Of course nobody outside of our family credits the old story, and yet my father was considered a very rich man at one time. Pancho Cueto believed in the existence of the treasure, and he was in a position to know."

"True! Perhaps, after all—O'Reilly frowned meditatively. Rosa lifted herself upon her elbow, her eyes sparkling. "Wouldn't it be wonderful if it were true? Just think, O'Reilly, cases of Spanish gold, silver coins in casks, package of gems. Oh, I've heard Isabel talk about it often enough!"

"Don't forget those pearls from the Caribbean, as large as plums," Johnny smiled. "I could never quite swallow that. A pearl the size of a currant would buy our freedom right now." After a moment he went on, more seriously: "I've a notion to look into that old well this very afternoon. I—I dare say I'm foolish, but—somehow the story doesn't sound so improbable as I did. Perhaps it is worth investigating." He made up his mind swiftly. "I—I'm off this very instant."

When O'Reilly emerged from the hut he found Jacket industriously at work over a fragment of a grindstone which he had somewhere unearthed. The boy looked up at his friend's approach and held out for inspection a long, thin file, which was slowly shaping into a knife-blade.

"What do you think of that?" he queried, proudly. "It may come in handy when we are ready to clear out of this pesthole."

"Where did you get it?"

"Oh, I stole it. I steal everything I can lay my hands on nowadays. One can never tell when he may have a throat to cut, and a file has good steel in it."

"Since you are such an accomplished thief, do you think you could steal something for me?" O'Reilly inquired. "A piece of rope?" "Rope?" Jacket was puzzled. "Rope is only good for hanging Spaniards. My friend in the fish market has a yolandra, and—perhaps I can rob him of a halyard." Laying aside his task, Jacket arose and made off in the direction of the water front. He was back within an hour, and under his shirt he carried a coil of rope, but serviceable, rope. Without waiting to explain his need for this unusual article, O'Reilly linked arms with the boy and set out to climb La Cumbre. When at last they stood in the unused quarry and Johnnie made known his intention to explore the old well Jacket regarded him with undisguised amazement.

"What do you expect to find down there?" the latter inquired.

"To tell the truth, I don't really expect to find anything," the man confessed. "Now that I'm here, I'm beginning to feel silly; nevertheless, I'm going to have a look for the hidden treasure of the Varonas."

"Hidden treasure!" From Jacket's expression it was plain that he feared his friend was mildly mad. Even after O'Reilly had told him something about old Don Esteban's missing riches, he scouted the story. He peeped inquisitively into the dark opening of the well, then he shook his head. "Caramba! What an idea! Was the old man crazy, to throw his money away?"

"He—he had more than he knew what to do with, and he wished to save it from the Spaniards," O'Reilly explained, lamely.

"Humph! Nobody ever had more money than he wanted." The boy's disgust at such credulity was plain. "This well looks just like any other, only deeper; you'd better look out that you don't break your neck like that foolish old woman, that Dona What's-Her-Name."

O'Reilly did indeed feel that he was making himself ridiculous, nevertheless he made the rope fast and swung himself down out of the sunlight, leaving Jacket to stand guard over him. Perhaps fifteen minutes later he re-appeared, panting from his exertions. He was wet, slimy; his clothes were streaked and stained with mud. Jacket began to laugh shrilly at his appearance.

"Ha! What a big lizard is this? Your beautiful garments are spoiled. And the treasure? Where is it?" The lad was delighted. He bent double with mirth; he slapped his bare legs and stamped his feet in glee.

O'Reilly grinned good-naturedly, and replaced the planks which had covered the orifice, then hid the rope in some nearby bushes. On their way back he endured his young friend's banter absent-mindedly, but as they neared Asensio's house he started Jacket by saying, "Can you manage to find a pick-axe or a crowbar?"

Jacket's eyes opened; he stopped in the middle of the dusty road. "What did you see down there, comrade? Tell me."

"Nothing much. Just enough to make me want to see more. Do you think you can steal some sort of a tool for me?"

"I can try."

"Please do. And remember, say nothing before Asensio or his wife."

Rosa met O'Reilly just inside the door, and at sight of her he uttered an exclamation of surprise, for during his absence she had removed the stain from her face and discarded that disfigurement which Evangelina had fitted to her back prior to their departure from the Pan de Matanzas. She stood before him now straight and slim and graceful—the Rosa of his dreams, only very thin, very fragile. Her poor tatters only enhanced her prettiness, so he thought.

"Rosa, dear! Do you think this is quite safe?" he ventured, doubtfully.

Evangelina, who was bending over her husband, straightened herself and came forward with a smile upon her black face.

"She is beautiful, eh? Too beautiful to look at? What did I tell you?"

Rosa was in delightful confusion at O'Reilly's evident surprise and admiration. "Then I'm not so altogether changed?" she asked.

"Why, you haven't changed at all, except to grow more beautiful. Evangelina is right; you are too beautiful to look at. But wait!" He drew her aside and whispered, "I've been down in the well." Some tremor in his voice, some glint in his eyes, caused the girl to seize him eagerly, fiercely. "I may be wrong," he said, hurriedly; "there may be nothing in it—and yet I saw something."

"What?"

"Wooden beams, timbers of some sort, behind the store curbing." It was plain Rosa did not comprehend, so he hurried on. "At first I noticed nothing unusual, except that the bottom of the well is nearly dry—filled up, you know, with debris and stuff that has fallen in from the curbing above, then I saw that at the bottom of the well is a dark, round, smooth hole, it is entirely curved up with stones laid in mortar. That struck me as queer."

"Yes?"

"I noticed, too, in one place there was wood behind—as if timbers had been placed there to cover the entrance to a cave. You know this Cuban rock is full of caverns."

Rosa clasped her hands, she began to tremble. "You have found it, O'Reilly. You have!" she whispered.

"No, no, I've found nothing yet. But I've sent Jacket for a pick-axe and tonight I'm going to pull down those stones and see what is behind them."

"Tonight? You must let me go, too. I want to help."

"Very well. But meanwhile you mustn't let your hopes rise too high, for there is every chance that you will be disappointed. And don't mention it to Evangelina. Now then, I've a few pennies left and I'm going to buy some candles."

Rosa embraced her lover impulsively. "Something tells me it is true! Something tells me you are going to save us all."

Evangelina in the far corner of the hut muttered to her husband: "Such love-birds! They are like parakeets, forever kissing and cooing."

Jacket returned at dusk and with him he brought a rusty three-foot iron bar, evidently part of a window grating. The boy was tired, disgusted, and in a vile temper. "A pick-axe! A crowbar!" He cursed eloquently. "One might as well try to steal a cannon out of San Severino. I'm ready to do anything within reason, but—"

"Why, this will do nicely; it is just what I want," O'Reilly told him.

"Humph! I'm glad to hear it, for that rod was nearly the death of me. I broke my back wrenching at it and the villain who owned the house—may a bad lightning split him!—he ran after me until I nearly expired. If my new knife hadn't been sharp I would have turned and sent him home with it between his ribs. Tomorrow I shall put an edge on it. Believe me, I ran until my lungs burst."

poem by UNCLE JOHN

You've made yer mind up, Jenny, so there's nothin' left to say, that I reckon would impress ye to do some other way. You never was a stubborn child, or one that don't behave, but you're mighty sot, I've noticed, on the little things you crave. So, you're goin' to the City—where there's heaps of fine "careers" and worlds of "opportunities" 'round ye everywhere—I wouldn't want to tie ye to yer mother's apron strings, for life, they say, is measured by the Happiness it brings.

When I think about them "type-machines" or clerkin' in a store, where the boss ain't never satisfied, but—allers wantin' more—where there's slim respects fer purity, and everything's fer show—it overcomes me, Jenny, and I—hate—to—see—ye—go!

There's often hidden torments in the prospects that allure, and a million tons of riff-raff in the City's social sewers. And the hell of human passion, in the high as well as low, I may be wrong about it, but, I—hate—to—see—ye—go!

Yer mother'll recollect ye, when she says the evenin' prayers. Some people think a mother is the only one that cares. . . . But we'll watch the papers closer than we used to do, ye know—and we'll wonder—wonder—wonder, Child—I—hate—to—see—ye—go!

HOMIEY PHILOSOPHY for 1922

AND it is written that the miners shall go back to work and that the miners shall strike again, and that the miners shall go to work again, and that they shall continue these backward and forward movements until they shall come to see the folly of it all and understand that that which has a beginning must have an end, and that the sooner man shall avoid the beginning, when the beginning spells disaster and trouble, the better for mankind, the miners included.

And it is written that the capitalists shall pursue pretty much the same course of blind approach to the industrial problem, that they shall not seek a solution, but depend on temporary expedients until they recognize the great fundamental, that God will not allow the crushing of humanity, but has destined that man shall improve themselves included.

PUBLIC HEALTH

By Wm. M. Jones, M. D.

Scarlet Fever
This disease is now prevalent in the county, and for the last few days has been on the increase. This is to be expected, with the opening of the schools, etc., however, it is a very dangerous thing and one that cannot be cured like diphtheria. The period of incubation, that is the time from exposure to the appearance of the disease, is shorter than that of any other communicable disease. In fact, it may make its appearance in two days, and hardly ever goes longer than one week. The most dangerous eruption appears when the case shows all the symptoms of a bad cold with the addition of a sore throat and a coated and tongue with many bright red spots on it. We cannot afford to take any chances with scarlet fever, for to do so may possibly cause death, so the thing to do, of course, is to call your family doctor. The complications, which are most common are those of the ear, which produces deafness or possibly brain abscess and death, and those of the kidneys causing what we call acute Bright's Disease.
The eruption bears some resemblance to measles, but it may at times be so slight that it is overlooked entirely, so do not depend upon the eruption.

Death Claims Doctor McCain, of High Point

High Point, Oct. 3.—Dr. H. W. McCain, eminent physician and surgeon and one of High Point's most prominent citizens, died at 6 o'clock tonight at a local hospital, where he had been a patient for several days, suffering from a septic infection caused by a carbuncle on his neck.
Although Dr. McCain had been in a critical condition for several days and his death was not unexpected, it cast a gloom over High Point tonight. It was on everybody's mind and has caused profound sorrow throughout the city.
Coming to High Point nearly 12 years ago, Dr. McCain not only built a large and successful practice, but by devotion to service, public spiritedness and congenial disposition, he won for himself a wide circle of friends in every walk of the city's life.
Dr. McCain was 40 years of age, having been born in Union county on February 27, 1882. He attended the Presbyterian college at Clinton, S. C., received his A. B. degree at the University of North Carolina, attended Jefferson Medical college, Philadelphia, and also took a post graduate course of 18 months in hospital work.

Barrett Forfeits Bond

Large Crowds Attend
Sparks Circus Here

Large crowds attended the two performances of the Sparks circus here Wednesday, afternoon and night, and appeared to be greatly pleased with the performances. "The Visions of Arabia" proved one of the greatest attractions. Darling stunts were performed by bareback riders and other representatives of the circus. Japanese acrobats caught the fancy of the multitudes. The cleanliness of the show caused much favorable comment. At 10:30 yesterday morning a great crowd witnessed the street parade.

Forest Buried Under City of Washington

Evidence of the existence of an ancient swamp in which great trees flourished in days long past, possibly contemporaneous with earliest man in America, has just been discovered in Washington, D. C. At a depth of about 25 feet below the street level the excavation disclosed a layer of black swamp muck, containing large quantities of wood, tree trunks, and stumps. Some of the stumps are of great size, a few of them reaching a diameter of 9 or 10 feet. Much of the wood is well preserved, showing clearly the woody structure and the external markings of the bark. A preliminary examination indicates that one of the more common trees of this ancient swamp was cypress.

The story of these trees, however, is only a brief chapter of the whole geological history shown in the excavation, which has just been examined by Chester K. Wentworth for the United States geological survey. Ages ago this part of the Atlantic coastal plain was from time to time covered by the sea, into which streams swept vast quantities of mud, sand, and gravel and boulders which formed thick deposits that covered large areas. When the region finally emerged from the sea Potomac river cut its valley in these deposits, which were carried about here and there also by smaller streams. The larger boulders are derived from the granite on which the gravel lies, but some of the smaller pebbles come from parts of the Potomac basin beyond the Blue Ridge and others from veins of quartz in the granites of the piedmont plateau.

Over the layer of plant debris and muck in this old swamp fine clay and pebbles were laid down by streams of water during the glacial epoch, when the northern part of North America, as far south as northern Pennsylvania, was covered with immense sheets of thick ice, showing that the trees lived in the latter part of the great ice age, which is variously estimated to have ended from 20,000 to 30,000 years ago.

Major Stedman Will Push Boulevard Plan

Major Charles M. Stedman, of Greensboro, congressman from the fifth district, is planning to introduce a bill at the next session of Congress providing for an appropriation of $150,000 to finance the construction of a 24-foot boulevard between this city and Guilford Battleground, according to announcement by J. Elwood Cox, of the State Highway commission.

It is proposed to make the boulevard of concrete and asphalt with a heavy stone base. It is understood that Major Stedman will press vigorously for passage of the measure. County highway officials are naturally desirous that the project be carried forward to a successful conclusion.

FEEDING DEMONSTRATIONS FOR HOGS IS VALUABLE

Raleigh, Oct. 4.—"There is no substitute for a feeding demonstration to show whether or not hogs are being grown at a profit," says W. W. Shay, in charge of the extension work with swine in North Carolina. Mr. Shay and his assistant, J. M. Watts, have spent a large part of their time this year figuring out good rations for hogs, making up the mixtures and arranging feeding schedules. By arranging these demonstrations with the local county agent, many farmers have seen the profits from feeding and marketing their hogs properly.

Mr. Shay finds that merely increasing the number of hogs without regard to feeding and disposing of the surplus will only multiply losses in some cases and so he is offering the services of his office to those farmers who wish to put on a feeding demonstration with the view of later selling their surplus in co-operative car lot shipments. This form of selling has permitted many growers with only a few hogs each to top the market this year. About 50 cars are in sight for next season and the number will grow as the boll weevil spreads.
