

FIRST WEEK IS SUCCESS

Growers Pleased With Co-operative Plan

MUCH TOBACCO HERE

During Week Nearly 200,000 Pounds Delivered at Greensboro Warehouses and First Advances Indicate Excellent Prices

Nearly 200,000 pounds of tobacco were delivered at the Greensboro warehouses of the co-operative system last week, the first week of the new season, according to W. D. Lambeth, of Monticello, assistant manager of the local warehouses, who refers to the general satisfaction attending deliveries and other operations of the market.

R. O. Gamble, of Summerfield, manager of the Greensboro warehouses, and other officials of the association express pleasure because of the excellent results attending the opening and the market during the first week of the season. Farmers generally appear to be much pleased with the initial cash advances and other evidences of the success of the new system.

Continued dry weather proved an important factor in influencing farmers to bring their tobacco to the market, the quantity received here last week being even larger than had been anticipated. However, the facilities of the Tri-State Tobacco Growers' Co-operative association for handling the crop have caused much favorable comment. The up-to-the-minute system of grading has been a special source of gratification.

Tobacco is being delivered in the Planters warehouse, where it is graded and weighed. There the growers receive their participation receipts, showing the volume and grade of offerings, together with the first cash advance and their checks for same. Subsequently the product is stored in the Guilford warehouse.

Because of the rains of Friday night and Saturday, other farm operations will now be possible, and it is hardly probable that this week's break will be as great as that of last week.

Initial cash advances last week ranged from $2 to $25 per hundred pounds, it is announced. On every hand is evidence that the growers are pleased with the co-operative system, which is expected to increase steadily in popularity. Many new signers of the co-operative contracts were secured last week, some of them coming forward voluntarily and thus demonstrating their faith in the improved system.

With about 90,000 pounds of tobacco stored here now, it is expected that a considerable quantity will be moved shortly. Reports to date indicate that the sales committee's activities have been conducted on a most successful basis.

Warehouse officials and employes are becoming more familiar with the new forms and a high degree of efficiency in handling the crop here is being developed, according to observers. Much tobacco from other counties, as well as a great deal from Guilford, is being received.

BIG FAIR WILL OPEN TUESDAY MORNING

Plans For Central Carolina Fair Complete and Officials Are Confident It Will Be Great Success

The Central Carolina fair, 1922 model, will formally open at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, and there is every indication that the four-day exposition will prove the greatest thing of the kind ever staged here.

At the fair grounds, a short distance west of the city, many forms of activity may be witnessed. Exhibits in many booths already have been placed and today others are being put in shape. The main exhibition building, which will serve as the home of the Pure Food show, is virtually ready for public inspection. It is handsomely decorated and will afford a wealth of interesting displays, as well as extensive sampling.

Among the spectacular events, according to Secretary Fred N. Taylor, of the Central Carolina Fair association, will be the horse races, the card this year being more comprehensive than in any previous year. There are several race purses of $1,000 each, it is stated, and a number of $400 purses. Entries from many states have been noted and some exceptionally fast racing is in prospect.

Exhibits covering a wide range of activity will be shown in the various departments—livestock, poultry, dairy products and a multitude of pantry supplies and a multitude of others. The best exhibits from the various community fairs held in Guilford county last week are expected to prove highly interesting features.

Secretary Taylor announces that on Friday, "School Day," all the school children of Guilford county joining counties can secure admission to the fair grounds without charge; they will not even have to produce passes. It is expected that Friday will prove one of the most enjoyable days of the fair.

The midway attractions this year are said to be very numerous and pleasing. Many free attractions have been arranged. People of Guilford and adjacent counties are participating four days and nights of pleasurable activity at the big fair here.

HOPEFUL NOW IN NEAR EAST

Greeks to Evacuate Eastern Thrace

OTHER DIFFICULTIES

Question of Number of Gendarmes Turks to Send to Thrace Not Yet Determined—The Allies Firm

Although it is generally admitted that difficult questions at the Mudania conference remain unsolved, the situation in the Near East is decidedly more hopeful of peaceful results, according to news dispatches.

One of the most encouraging developments, in the opinions of allied diplomats, is the reported willingness of the Greek government to evacuate Eastern Thrace. This decision on the part of Greek officials is understood to be in conformity with advice from former Premier Venizelos that Thrace must be considered as lost to Greece.

However, Greece will try to obtain two months' stay of time to permit the evacuation of her army, and the Greek civilian population, estimated to total 250,000.

Reports from Madania indicate that the allied diplomats are presenting a solid front in the conference there and that the Turks will be forced to yield. The allies appear confident that the Turks will accept their demands, although it is agreed that friction may develop over the question of the number of gendarmes to be placed in Thrace by the Turks.

Instructions received by the British delegates were insistent upon these points: Fixation of the number of gendarmes in Thrace, withdrawal of all Turkish troops from the neutral zones, and military occupation of Thrace by the Turks to take place only after the signing of the peace treaty.

Lord Curzon, secretary of foreign affairs, declared in London yesterday that there was foundation for hope that a reasonable settlement would be reached.

World Series Won By Giants From Yankees

The world's baseball championship again is the possession of the New York Giants, who yesterday afternoon defeated the New York Yankees in the fifth game of the world series, having won four games and tied one. Although the American league club had been picked by many sports writers to win, the National leaguers under the generalship of John J. McGraw appeared to win with comparative ease.

Joe Bush, pitching for the Yankees in the first contest on Wednesday, was replaced in the eighth by Hoyt. The Giants, with Neft on the mound, won 3 to 2. Thursday's game resulted in a 3-3 score, the game having been called at the end of the 10th inning. That game was a pitching duel between Shawkey, of the Yankees, and Barnes, of the Giants. On Friday Walter Hoyt was Manager Huggins' selection for mound duty, while Jack Scott, a North Carolina boy, hurled for the Giants, who won 3 to 0. In Saturday's game McQuillan pitched a winning brand for the Giants, Mays doing the twirling for the Yankees. The score was 3 to 3. Joe Bush was the losing pitcher Sunday, while Neft's pitching was an important factor in the Giants' victory of 5 to 3.

COMMUNITY FAIRS IN GUILFORD SUCCESES

Fine Results At Mount Pleasant, Whitesett, Jamestown, Monticello and Deep River Expositions

The five community fairs held in Guilford county last week proved highly successful, according to observers, being characterized by splendid exhibits, a fine spirit of cooperation and other evidences of progressive activity. On Tuesday the fair at Mount Pleasant was held; Whitesett, Wednesday; Jamestown, Thursday; Monticello Friday, and Deep River, Saturday.

People of Mount Pleasant and Pleasant Union communities cooperated in staging the fair at Mount Pleasant school. Excellent exhibits from the various departments were shown, the list including farm crops, fruits, vegetables, canned products, sewing and other fancy work. This was Mount Pleasant's first fair, but it is thought that others will be held there each year.

Details regarding the Whitesett fair will be found in the "Neighborhood News" on page 5 of this issue. The fair at Jamestown school attracted much admiring comment. The exhibits of the farm life school and the home economics department were especially comprehensive, having been prepared under the direction of Mr. Henley, farm life school instructor, and Miss Katherine Mather, home economics teacher.

Monticello's second annual fair was featured by more than 700 entries and many inspiring exhibits. Among the exhibits which were accorded much favorable attention were those of the educational department, home economics department, farm and field products department. Livestock and poultry were here in attractive display. Short addresses were delivered by Prof. T. E. Whitaker, of Oak Ridge, and J. F. Sprull, of Lexington. President H. W. Lambeth, Secretary David Hopkins and other fair officials were much pleased with the results of the exposition.

Although the Deep River fair was the first one staged here, it was considered an event of pleasing character and it is believed that it will become an annual institution. More than 500 entries were received, the exhibits covering a wide range of activity. Exhibits in domestic science, domestic art, livestock, farm and field departments were the objects of much complimentary attention. Prof. T. E. Whitaker, of Oak Ridge, talked briefly.

The judging at the five community fairs was done mainly by F. S. Walker, Rockingham county farm demonstration agent, and Mrs. Ethel Wells Moore, Rockingham county home demonstration agent. Valuable assistance in staging the fairs was rendered by E. B. Garrett, Guilford county farm demonstration agent; Miss Addie Houston, Guilford county home demonstration agent; Miss Addie Houston, Guilford county health nurse.

At least some of the community fairs will exhibit their best products at the Central Carolina fair here this week. Many prizes were awarded at the community fairs last week.

ELLIS NASSAR IS SENTENCED

DUKE PLEAS GUILTY

Former Deputy Sheriff Pays Fine and Costs of $243 In Guilford Superior Court

Reduction of the appearance bond of Ellis Nassar, Syrian, from $5,000 to $3,500, ordered in Guilford Superior court on Friday by Judge W. F. Horton, following his conviction on two charges of forging checks. Nassar appealed from the decision of the court when he was sentenced to serve two years in the state prison.

The defendant was alleged to have written a check on the Peoples' National bank, of Winston-Salem, on August 4 to the order of R. M. Dixon and signed, A. C. or A. B. Corbett. It also was charged that he forged a $210 check on August 6 written on the Merchants Bank and Trust company, of Winston-Salem. Judge W. S. O. B. Robinson, of Goldsboro, of counsel for the prosecution, declared that Nassar had received postal inspectors and the district attorney in Eastern North Carolina. It was claimed that the defendant had been involved in numerous failures. Testimony tending to show the good character of Nassar was introduced by the defendant through his attorneys, A. C. Davis, of Greensboro, and Mr. Gaylord, of Greenville.

O. W. Duke, of Pomona, former deputy sheriff, pleaded guilty to the various charges preferred against him following his misconduct at a baseball game at Monticello. On three charges he was fined, while on the other three charges prayer for judgment was continued.

Duke was fined $25 and the costs on a charge of nuisance. For an assault he was fined $50 and the costs, while a fine of $50 and the costs was assessed against him for carrying a concealed weapon. Prayer for judgment was continued upon payment of the costs in the case charging the former officer with an assault with a deadly weapon, resisting an officer and pointing a pistol. The fines and costs in the cases against Duke aggregated $342.

Claude Tysor, a negro, who was charged with the murder of a negro named Henry Martin, pleaded guilty to manslaughter. He was sentenced to six months on the county highways. Martin, according to the testimony, was serving five years on the county roads; he drove to the home of his wife and tried to beat her. Her brother, Claude Tysor, defended her and in the scuffle that ensued Tysor stabbed Martin in the head with an ice pick, inflicting fatal injuries. Policemen testified that Martin was a negro of bad character; while the defendant was given a good character.

On Friday two months were added to the six-months sentence which had been imposed upon Lee Jackson, who had twice been reported dead and who was convicted of manufacturing whisky.

For the larceny of an automobile valued at $300 two negroes, Benton Payne and Clifton Van Lindenham, were sentenced to two years each on the county roads.

Taking the position that Padrick was the brains of the whole illegal business hereabouts and that Lewis was an innocent victim dragged into it, Judge Horton pronounced the judgment that Padrick should serve not less than five and not more than eight years at hard labor and that Lewis should be confined for not less than 18 months and not more than three years.

Both defendants, through their attorneys, gave notice of appeal.

EVENTS 80 YEARS AGO

It is the purpose of this paper to publish at frequent intervals comparatively brief references to events chronicled in The Greensborough (as it was then) Patriot of 80 years ago. In this enterprise valuable assistance is rendered by members of the staff of the Greensboro Public Library.

(October 8, 1842)

We learn that monstrously exaggerated reports of the sickness and mortality in Greensborough are circulated through the county; for instance, it has been told in some places that from five to nine persons die here daily. That there are not enough persons in health to wait upon the sick and dying. That scarlet fever, and even yellow fever are among the malignant diseases which prevail. In short to such a pitch of exaggeration have some of these stories grown that a stranger must needs believe the town utterly depopulated, not even a spot of grease remaining to indicate the place where Greensborough once stood. Now these mis-statements work a very unnecessary prejudice against our populous and flourishing village and we take this occasion to correct them by stating the following facts:

From the first of September to the present date (7th of October), only 11 deaths have occurred in Greensborough, out of a population of between 1,500 and 2,000. Of these deaths, three were of bilious, and one of intermittent fever; two of consumption; one of disease incident to old age; two of putrid sore throat, (one adult and one child); one child of croup; and one child of an infection of the head of long standing.

It must be remarked that very few of these deaths were from the prevalent autumn fever; but take them altogether, the mortality is not great in a population of nearly 2,000. It is true that sickness prevails to an unusual extent; but it is principally confined to the eastern part of the town, where the air is no doubt infected by the foul run in that neighborhood. It should be remarked that in the schools a single death has not occurred, and not a case of sickness to our knowledge, since the prevalence of the epidemic.

Lady Coventry, the celebrated beauty, killed herself with painting. She daubed herself with it so as to stop the perspiration. Lady Mary Worthley Montague was more prudent—she went often into the hot bath to scrape off the paint, which was almost as thick as the plaster on the wall.

Two Men Pardoned By Governor Lee Trinkle

Richmond, Oct. 6—Sidna Edwards and Friel Allen, two of six men convicted of shooting up the courthouse at Hillsville in 1912, were given conditional pardons today by Governor E. Lee Trinkle.

At the same time the governor refused pardons to Sidney Allen and Wesley Edwards, sentenced to 35 and 25 years' imprisonment, respectively, for their part in the affair in which the presiding judge, Thomas L. Massey, Commonwealth's Attorney W. M. Foster, Sheriff W. F. Webb were killed, and Dexter Goad, the clerk, and several jurymen were wounded. Sidna Edwards was under sentence of 15 years and Friel Allen was serving 18 years, both being convicted of murder in the second degree.

Governor Trinkle, in announcing the pardons to Sidna Edwards and Friel Allen, declared that their prison record "has been without a mark during the entire period" of their confinement, that both are reformed young men and will in the future lead law-abiding lives and in addition he was led to believe Sidna Edwards "of a rather weak mentality." He said he believed the purpose of the law to have been accomplished by the length of time they had served, and for "these and other reasons was granting them a new trial in life."

PUBLIC HEALTH

By Wm. M. Jones, M. D.

Report of Wm. M. Jones, M. D., to the commissioners of Guilford county for the month of September, 1922:

County home.—We have had one death at the home since the last report, and there are several who are in a serious condition. Six visits have been made.

Camp.—Here eighteen visits have been made. There are no sick cases among the men on the roads, except of a minor nature. One "trusty," was killed, but this was by an outsider. The man was carried to the hospital, but died in about 15 minutes, never regaining consciousness.

Jail.—Here twelve calls have been made, most of which have been on account of drug habits and usual cases. We now have three drug habits and two insane cases in jail.

There has been two insane cases admitted during the month, one a white woman, the other a negro man.

Miscellaneous.—Insane examined, 5; office calls 97; charity calls 11; examinations N. C. C. L. L., 21; examinations marriage license 10; nuisances examined 9; nuisances corrected 6; witness at court 5 days; smallpox vaccinations 216; typhoid fever vaccinations 61; press articles 9.

Communicable Diseases.—Scarlet fever, 16, 5 Gilmer, 2 Morehead, 1 Oak Ridge, 1 Madison, 1 Deep River; typhoid fever, 5, 4 Gilmer, 1 Morehead; diphtheria 30, 6 Gilmer, 1 Oak Ridge, 5 Morehead, 1 Deep River, 6 Friendship, 2 Washington, 1 Greene, 1 Center Grove, 3 High Point, 2 Rock Creek, 1 Jamestown, 1 Jefferson.

Diphtheria is more general over the county than it has ever been before and from reports I note that it is in more or less epidemic form over the state.

FARM DEMONSTRATION

Outdoor Wintering of Bees
A common cause of the death of colonies in winter is starvation, which is more certainly due to carelessness on the part of the beekeeper than is unnecessary heat-production. The greater the necessity for heat production, the more necessary it becomes for every colony to have an abundance of stores of good quality. The amount required varies with the length of the winter, and also with the amount of heat which is generated. It is, of course, necessary also to provide or leave stores enough for brood-rearing in late winter or spring, before sufficient stores come to the hive from natural sources.

Comparison of the Colony With a Furnace
Let us assume that we have a furnace for heating a building so constructed that ashes may be removed only when the temperature of the outer air is warm. If the house has thin walls and many openings, the furnace can not maintain a high temperature in extreme cold weather, the amount of fuel consumed is increased, the ashes accumulate rapidly and clog the furnace, and in a desperate effort to raise the house temperature we should probably burn out the furnace. On the other hand, if the house is well built and heavily insulated, a low fire will suffice, and as a result there will be a minimum amount of ashes. The better the fuel, the less the amount of ashes in either case.

It is permissible to compare a colony of bees as a unit of heat-production with this furnace. If the bees are in a single-walled hive in a cold climate, the colony must generate a great amount of heat, must consume much more honey, and feces will accumulate rapidly. As the bees are unable to discharge their feces until the temperature of the outer air is high enough for flight, the "furnace" is clogged. The bees are "burned out" by the excessive heat-production, and, even worse than in the case of the furnace, the irritation resulting from the presence of feces causes still more heat-production. On the other hand, if abundantly insulated, the heat generated is conserved, the consumption of stores and amount of feces are reduced, and the bees can readily retain the feces until a flight day, in any place in which bees can be kept. The better the stores the less the amount of feces in either case.

We should not expect much of a furnace in an open shed, and we have no more right to expect good results from a colony wintered in a thin-walled hive in a cold climate, or even in a better hive placed in a windy location.

Suit Against Railway For $25,000 Is Filed

Damages of $25,000 are asked by J. J. Stafford, executor of the estate of Nellie M. Draughton, deceased, in a suit against the North Carolina Railroad company started in Guilford Superior court. The suit is the aftermath of a grade crossing accident at High Point on May 1 when Mrs. Draughton and another occupant of an automobile were killed. The plaintiff alleges that the train—No. 46—was being operated at an excessive rate of speed through a populous section of the city of High Point.

Refuses To Give Evidence

Hot Springs, Ark., Oct. 6.—Raymond Cole, young mountaineer, serving a life sentence for the slaying of Mrs. Anna McKennon in Montgomery county last year, refused to testify today when placed on the stand in the second trial of Rev. Harding M. Hughes, superannuated minister, charged with murder in connection with the slaying of Mrs. McKennon. Judge Wood, trying the case, and a minister in the courtroom, urged Cole to tell the truth, but he absolutely refused to give any evidence.

Say Charges Against Wizard Are Untrue

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 6.—Denial that charges against Edward Young Clarke, imperial wizard pro tem of the Ku Klux Klan, who yesterday was indicted on allegation of "using the mails to effect a scheme to defraud" were true, was contained in a statement of the imperial klan cium, the ruling body of the klan, made public here today. "The charges made against Mr. Clarke, and on which the indictment was found," said the statement signed by W. J. Simmons, imperial wizard, and other members of the klan cium, "were charges presented by the same crowd of former employees, who were discharged from the organization and who have filed one lawsuit after another ever since they were removed from the payroll." Clarke was not arrested by federal officers and carried to the federal building, "but on the contrary when he learned of the indictment, drove to the United States court, made bond and went about his business." Clarke's bond was assessed at $500.

Suffering From Poison

Spencer, Oct. 6.—Mrs. Josie Blackwelder, age 30, wife of E. W. Blackwelder, well known restaurant keeper here, was carried to a hospital tonight in a critical condition, as the result, it is said, of an overdose of bichloride of mercury. She was found in a semi-conscious condition in great suffering and was unable to explain whether the medicine was taken accidentally or otherwise. It is said a box, supposed to have contained poison, was found in her pocket when a physician was called to her aid. Her condition late tonight is considered serious, although the best medical service is being rendered.

FOUNDERS DAY HERE

Distinguished Visitor Pays Tribute to Dr. Charles Duncan McIver, First President of N. C. C. W.

The contribution of Dr. Charles Duncan McIver to the cause of education in this country "has been rated by competent critics as second only to that of Horace Mann," declared Dr. J. J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of education, in the principal address at the Founder's day exercises of North Carolina College for Women on Thursday.

Approximately 1,500 persons attended the exercises which were held at Spring Garden Street Methodist church, the crowd including the faculty and student body of the college. They assembled to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the founding of the institution and to honor the memory of Charles Duncan McIver, founder of the college.

President Julius I. Foust referred to the great foundations laid by Dr. McIver, the first president of the institution. The opening prayer was by Rev. G. T. Bond, pastor of the church, and the benediction by Dr. S. B. Turrentine, president of Greensboro college. The students' singing was led by Alberta Thompson.

Interestingly Dr. Tigert reviewed educational conditions in the United States, devoting special attention to the South as it was in the late eighties when Dr. McIver began to exert himself as a great educational force in North Carolina. In 1886 the average teacher's salary in this state was $80 a year, while the state spent approximately $1.50 a year for each student's education. The relation of education to industrial progress was the basic theme of the speaker. "I challenge anyone," he said, "to point to a state or a city which has become wealthy which did not do so as the result of education. He alluded to North Carolina as one of the ten wealthiest states of the Union, a fact which he attributed largely to educational development in the state.

TRIAL OF HEDGECOCK IS AGAIN POSTPONED

Judge Harding Refuses Motion To Quash Indictment Against Former Cashier—Switzer Absent

With the opposing forces lined up for the beginning of the Hedgecock embezzlement and false entry charges trial in Guilford Superior court here Thursday afternoon, motion was made by attorneys for the defense that the indictment against Basil H. Hedgecock, former cashier of the Home Savings bank, of High Point, which was closed on last April 29, be quashed.

Judge W. F. Harding refused to quash the indictment, whereupon the defense asked for postponement of trial, which was, after considerable argument, granted by Judge Harding, December 18 being set for the beginning of trial. Postponement was asked on the ground of Judge R. C. Strudwick being called away on legal business in Washington. He is one of the counsel for Hedgecock.

Plea for quashing of the indictment was based on the argument that the bill of indictment was improperly drawn in that it stated that, among others, Hedgecock was accused of defrauding "persons unknown" to the grand jury.

It was announced to the court that Will Switzer, High Point merchant, indicted with Hedgecock on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the bank, is in New York being treated for mental trouble, developed since the charges were brought against him. Capias instanter was issued for him.

A. B. Huff, High Point theater man, is indicted also with Hedgecock on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the bank.

It is charged that Hedgecock misappropriated $67,000 of the funds of the bank and made false entries as to $50,000 more. The Switzer and Huff indictments are in addition to the charges against Hedgecock.

Merchant With Wife Faces Grave Charges

Wilmington, Oct. 6.—Probable cause was found in Recorder's court today against J. B. Greer, 60-year-old storekeeper, on charges of having criminally attacked two white girls, ages 13 and 16. He was committed to jail without bail to await the November term of Superior court.

Immediately after the completion of the trial of Greer, his wife, Mrs. Lizzie Greer, age 50 and the mother of 10 children, was arraigned on an assault charge, it being alleged that she held the two girls while Greer is alleged to have committed the crimes. Probable cause was found against the woman and she is also being held without bail for the November term of Superior court. Both Greer and his wife will be tried for their lives.

Dry Flavor Observed In Judicial Ruling

Washington, Oct. 6.—All vessels, American and foreign owned, are prohibited from having liquor on board in American territorial waters under an interpretation of the prohibition amendment and the enforcement act handed down today by the Department of Justice. Moreover, the transportation or sale of intoxicants on American craft, wherever operated, was held to be unlawful. American territorial waters were construed to include those not only within the three-mile limit of continental United States, but also those within the same limit of the Philippines, the Hawaiian Islands, Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Alaska.

Business Men of Allied Debt Problem

New York, Oct. 6.—The allied debts to the United States and German reparations and settlement of these problems as they may affect the industry and commerce of the United States were the outstanding topics of interest at the third and closing session of the convention of the American Bankers' association here Thursday.

While Sir Reginald McKenna, former chancellor of the British exchequer, in an interview said he believed the new tariff law would increase prices in this country to such an extent that foreign merchants would be able to leap the tariff barriers and remain in the American market, the bankers expressed the hope that "the President will not hesitate to make use of the power granted him by the new tariff law to make such adjustments in the schedules as may be necessary from time to time for a restoration of our international commerce."

Suspension of the debts of France, Italy and other European debtors of the United States for a period of 10 years was recommended by President Alvin W. Krech, of the Equitable Trust company as a means of taking the allied debt question out of politics for a definite period and creating an atmosphere of judicial aloofness in which the subject might be approached.

Any cancellation of Europe's debts to the United States at the present time would not assist either France or Italy in collecting reparations from Germany, he asserted. America must and will keep faith with Europe, he concluded, but Europe must do her part and keep faith with herself.

HIGH REPUBLICAN TAXES
 The Republican party campaigners in North Carolina are making a great noise about taxation. They charge that the Democrats are taxing the people to death. It is one of their pet charges. But in the counties where the administration of affairs is in Republican hands the tax rate is higher than in those counties in Democratic hands. That is, the taxes are highest in Republican counties. The following from the Democratic Handbook is illuminating:

"But it is said that taxes are too high and that the Democratic party is responsible. Let us see about that. The state of North Carolina neither levies nor collects a cent of taxes upon your or my property, real or personal, as a direct property tax. The counties of the state do, however, levy such a tax. Now, there are counties in the state being administered by Democrats and there are counties in the state administered by Republicans. Democratic county commissioners fix the tax rate for Democratic counties. The average tax rate in the 71 Democratic counties of the state is 85 and 7-10 cents on every hundred dollars worth of property taxed. In the 29 Republican counties the average tax rate is $1.02 on every one hundred dollars worth of property taxed; a difference in favor of the Democratic counties of more than 16 cents on every hundred dollars property taxed. Obviously Republicans prefer their taxes over 19 per cent. higher than do Democrats. So, then, those who prefer low taxes, should live in Democratic counties. The cheapest way to do this is to vote the Democratic ticket—it is cheaper than moving to a Democratic county. Make your county Democratic and save money."

Guilford is already Democratic, so it is not necessary to make it Democratic or to move to another county. But the voters of Guilford should remember that matter of higher taxation in Republican counties when they go to vote, and show what they think of the Republicans in Guilford who ask them, in all seriousness, to vote the Republican ticket.

When they are approached by a Republican worker and told that "taxes are too high" the voters of Guilford should ask the Republican to explain how it is that they are higher in Republican counties than in Democratic counties. They should ask him whether, if Republicans should get control of Guilford county, they would act like the Republicans in other counties and raise taxes.

That charge of high taxation against the Democrats can not hold. It is simply a charge with nothing to support it, with the evidence that it is in Republican counties that taxation is highest.

WHAT CAUSES "SOCIALISM?"

The father of President Harding, George Harding, is quite disgusted with socialism, so much so that he says if he lived in Iowa he would vote for the Democratic nominee for senator in preference to Brookhart, nominee of the Republicans, who walloped a regular Republican in the primaries. The father of the President forgets the cause for such "socialism."

The cause is the conduct of the regular Republicans themselves, persons like President Harding. They have so held back the wheels of progress, so added to the burdens of the masses of the people, that in Iowa the Republican party itself repudiated the regulars at the polls and named Brookhart for nominee. The father of the President should blame his own son, not Brookhart and the men who voted for Brookhart.

Yet he would do exactly the right thing if he lived in Iowa in voting for the Democratic candidate. The Democrats stand between the standard, reactionary Republicans and the radicalism of which the father of the President complains. The Democrats offer the sane, sensible, logical way out of the welter into which the affairs of the country have fallen.

ORGANIZATION AGAINST LOSS
 Thomas W. Lamont, who is a partner of J. Pierpont Morgan in the banking business, in a speech to the American Bankers' association, "sought to console the farmers who he said, complain that 'though this is a big season for crops, our net money be low.'" Mr. Lamont said that he "never knew a country to go broke because of its abundant crops."

The secretary of commerce, Herbert Hoover, a while back stated quite as a matter of fact that the farmers of the country would have to bear the biggest burden of the losses due to the strike of railway shopmen. Their losses would be heaviest because of the delays of transportation, things like embargoes.

The farmers are getting just a little bit tired of that. There are others like Mr. Lamont and Mr. Hoover, who say that they regret it, but that somehow it can't be helped—the farmer has to take the biggest loss.

Maybe they can help it some time. Maybe by organization they can do something to avoid being always, forever and eternally, the goat. Maybe it will get so when the big guns make a speech or a statement, they will not have to say that they feel sad because the farmers will just have to take the biggest losses.

Organization is the only thing that will stop that sort of business. When losses have to be taken there is a general disposition to have somebody else take them. Taking losses was never a popular sport, so they have been shifted on the people who have not been able to help themselves, on the people who, while strong in numbers, were strong in nothing else, who have been, for the most part, every man for himself. The result is that it has been mostly a one-man game against a combination and the answer was easy—the combination won.

It is by organization that the agricultural interests will get out of the habit of being goats, and by organization alone. They are making progress in that direction and the fact that they are expected to take all the losses, lose while others win, should hasten the day of better organization.

REAL RICHES

When Dr. John J. Tigert, United States commissioner of education, speaking at the Founder's day exercises at the North Carolina College for Women, declared that what makes North Carolina rich is not her fertile soil, not her natural resources, but the brains of the men and women utilizing them he was pointing out the great need of the development of brains.

There are other sections of the earth's surface that are just as rich as North Carolina in natural resources, in climate, in the advantages a generous nature provides, but their people are poor, living miserable lives. They do not know how to utilize those advantages. When they are utilized it is mostly outsiders who get the benefit, milking away for their own financial advantage.

Fertile soil, underground wealth, the energy of the streams, the riches of the forests are nothing if a people does not know what to do with them. They await the brain of man before they yield their wealth. Inert, they spring to life only when people know how to unlock the treasure-house.

The schoolhouse is the key. There will be found the means for getting the material advantages in shape for material enjoyment. It is when a land is rich in educated people that it blossoms. Education changes the barren soil into gold mines. That has been proved over and over. Train the brains of boys and girls and they are fitted to wrest nature's wealth from her, making the most of the natural resources.

Well, in view of weather conditions, winter coming on and everything, the girls can soon begin to store their furs and buy some georgette crepe shirtwaists.

OCTOBER COMES BUT ONCE
 A year, but its beauties are so numerous and varied that all of us may enjoy them. There are only 11 other months in the year in which people who live in the rural sections have distinct advantages over city residents in the form of opportunities for witnessing nature's glories, but in October those charms are more resplendent and alluring than in most of the other months. Wild plant life as a rule retains much of its vigor, but in addition it takes on that mature aspect which comes shortly before decay. Oaks, hickories, maples and other trees are bedecked in their most colorful apparel. They yield part of their foliage to the influence of the half-caressing, half-reproving autumn wind. Leaves go a-scurrying in every direction, some of them brushing the cheeks of two fairly youthful members of a Mutual Admiration Society, others securing free passage on a woodland stream, while the movements of others defy classification. Over yonder a red-bird plaintively reminds her mate that moving day is imminent and nearby a proverbially provident squirrel takes anxious inventory of the hickorynut crop.

In a late cornfield one discovers the last watermelon of the season. The plant "just came up" and, like Longfellow's turnip, it grew and it grew and it grew, finally affording members of the harvesting party a delicious early morning luncheon. Then a field of goldenrod makes the brag magazine covers look like the handiwork of kindergarten pupils. Lustily exercising his vocal organs Major General J. Bird proclaims to the sylvan world his discovery of one of the latest muscadines of the year, while a flock of crows may be seen in the distance inspecting the best yield of corn within easy reach. After breakfasting on an amazingly large quantity of collards an indolent rabbit is sighted by the hound and for a while both pretend to be intensely interested in the half-hearted race which follows.

Without consulting any scientific authorities as to the opportuneness or inopportuneness of the season for such activity, various young fellows of the community organize a night fishing expedition. Their catch is not of such proportions as to excite the envy of the boys who remained at home or who went to a corn shucking, but the victims include an eel that had graduated from the flapper class, but which clung to the flapper principles until death did them part. One of the members of the company who wouldn't recognize Old Man Dyspepsia if he met him in the big road suggests that the eel be baked then and there. The suggestion is adopted, albeit the once slippery specimen, minus salt and minus pepper, mightily challenges and gastronomic capacities of the young fishermen. The shades of night have fallen and the merriment which marked the gathering in the earlier hours of the evening is displaced by drowsiness. One fellow sets an old dry stump afire and the members of the party soon are asleep. Later in the night, however, one boy awakes with a yell that must have terrorized every fish within a mile of the camp and with speed which would have made many trained athletes feel woefully insignificant he dashes through the canebroke, jumps into the creek, putting an end to the fire which has already burned a hole clear through his clothes. For a brief period he fails to appreciate the wonderful autumnal beauties about him. That burning stump was no friend of his.

But one of the greatest of October's beauties hasn't yet been mentioned here, reference being to our old friend Jack Frost. Already the more or less inveterate weather the time of his coming; before the end of the month he will surely be with us, presenting pictures which no human artist could possibly equal.

And occupying a proud place among those present at October's Nature Fashion Show, it should not be forgotten, are the prettiest pumpkins—or punkins as they are known to 999 out of every 1,000 inhabitants.

Supreme Court Hears Guilford's Test Case

It is thought that a decision will probably be handed down within the next week or 10 days by North Carolina Supreme court in the Guilford county school equalization tax case which was argued before the court at Raleigh last Thursday. Col. G. S. Bradshaw and H. L. Kooztz appeared for D. Grant Coble, who started this test case, while the county commissioners and board of education were represented by John N. Wilson, county attorney, and Judge James S. Manning, attorney general.

This action involves the act adopted by voters of the county last April, applying the principle of equalization in school taxes. The plaintiff contends that the measure is unconstitutional, but that contention is denied by the defendants. The validity of the act was upheld in Guilford Superior court by Judge W. F. Harding, the plaintiff having appealed from that ruling.

Will Go to Rockingham

Next week Miss Addie Houston, Guilford county home demonstrator, will go to Wentworth to assist in judging the exhibits at the Rockingham county fair.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS

WHITSETT

The Whitsett fair held Wednesday pleased the large crowds who filled the grounds throughout the day. The number of visitors from distant points was larger than ever, and the entire surrounding community for miles around was in full force. The day was filled with much to amuse, entertain, and instruct. Last year Whitsett took the first prize over the entire county of Guilford at the Greensboro fair, and was living up this year to her fine reputation.

Among the special prizes Rev. G. W. Clay took first prize for bringing the largest number to the fair in a Ford; he had 18; Robert Shaver guessed the number of beans as 988 and won the fine pig; Miss Thelma Taylor was awarded the $5 box of candy as the prettiest girl; S. M. Clapp won the $5 for the best violin music, and M. E. Clapp $2.50 for violin music.

The Whitsett school had fine exhibits in school work under the direction of Professors Smith and Henries. In drawing and paper cutting the work was especially noticeable.

The county agents were on hand for helping and judging; E. B. Garrett in farm products and livestock; Miss Houston in domestic science; Mrs. Dorothy Hayden in health work.

Interesting talks were made in the auditorium during the afternoon by J. F. Spruill of Lexington; John W. King, of Greensboro, and Prof. T. E. Whitaker, of Oak Ridge.

Miss Minnie Clapp and her capable assistants were praised for the fine manner in which they handled the catereria which fed the crowds during the day; everybody was well served and their rooms were a great attraction throughout the fair.

The officers this year were E. B. Wheeler, president; L. S. Ingle, vice-president; W. T. Ingle, secretary and Mrs. R. O. Walker, assistant secretary.

One especially notable thing this year was the fine co-operation rendered by Gibsonville. During the day hundreds attended from Gibsonville and on committees, and departments. Gibsonville folks helped at every turn; many special prizes were also offered by Gibsonville firms. Gibsonville's big community day Saturday, was a great event.

Whitsett and Gibsonville and the surrounding territory are proud of another fine and successful Eastern Guilford Community fair, representing mutual helpfulness and co-operation, and a get-together spirit.

The campus was alive with poultry, livestock, and farm products, the rooms of the school building were chock full of everything from the home garden and farm, and the folks were there in large numbers to enjoy it to the utmost.

It was a regular reunion day for old friends and scores from Greensboro, Burlington, and all nearby towns found it a day for renewing old friendships, and forming new ones. The marching and singing of the school children proved one of the very pleasing features of the occasion.

We Need More Burbanks

The boy in school fifty years ago seeking upon the map of the United States in his geography found the vast territory between the Pacific coast and the Mississippi river designated as the Great American Desert.

Since that time the surveyor has clearly defined the state lines, and into these states hundreds of thousands of brave people have pioneered.

There today great cities stand, skyscrapers pierce the sky, the hammer is heard, business thrives, the parched lands are kissed with irrigation ditches that drain the glaciers' melting flow and spread bounty and prosperity into the lap of an aggressively progressive people.

On that desert land the great Burbank lives. From out that hopeless wilderness he brought forth fruits that have been the wonder of the world.

Daniel Webster was a wise man. But amazement would make him wiser were he alive today. On the floor of the United States senate he opposed the acquisition of the Oregon territory because he said, "You cannot roll a wheel out there."

Soon after Daniel made this declaration a fellow by the name of Whitman rolled a wheel out there. On his wheel Whitman laid a load of apple tree roots. With them he planted out there what have grown to be the greatest apple orchards in the world.

The changed map has taught anew the old lesson that all things are possible to the men who deny defeat to the men who dare.

Twenty years ago we used to speak of undeveloped sections as "the last west." As we have closed in on these unsettled places we found the new west.

While developing ways to fertile fields in what was once the desolate desert we learned much. Now abandoned farms in New York and New England are attracting the college Carolinas and the Southern states about them are revealing farms that are the lowan, than whom there is no better farmer known. Florida, long looked upon as a tangled mass of semi-tropical verdure, is proving to be a matchless garden spot. Good land is everywhere.

Our agricultural colleges are turning out engineers to irrigate and drain; chemists who teach us how to replenish the soil, agronomists who tell us how to grow better grain and captains of commerce who show us how to make a better product-pack and find a better market. These colleges are changing farming from drudgery to a scientific profession.

Lincoln said, "I always plucked the thistle and planted a flower wherever I thought a flower would grow."

Give us more Burbanks; give us more scientifically trained men, and we have land enough in the United States to feed and clothe all the people in the whole wide world.

"Yes, my dear," replied Mr. Nagatem, "and I was watching the darling little boy, too. I'm too old to get caught on that bent pin stuff."—Houston Post.

Synopsis

The wife of Don Esteban Varona, rich Spanish planter in Cuba, dies giving birth to twins, Esteban, Jr., and Rosa. Shortly after Varona's second marriage the secret hiding place in an old well of his great store of gold, jewels and deeds to land passes when he is killed by his favorite slave, Sebastian, crazed by cruel treatment after Varona lost Evangelina, Sebastian's daughter, the twins' nurse, at cards. Sebastian is shot. Varona's second wife, hunting the treasure, is killed by falling in the well. Pancho Cueto, plantation overseer, informs the authorities young Varona is involved in the Cuban insurrection. The twins, now grown, flee to the hut in the hills of Evangelina and her husband, Asensio, now freed. Johnnie O'Reilly, American, Rosa's fiance, is called back to New York by his company and for some time can hear nothing from her.

O'Reilly, back in Cuba to try to find Rosa, arrested with another American, Leslie Branch, is sent to New York. Cobo, brutal Spanish chieftain, burns Asensio's hut. Esteban returns just in time to rescue Rosa from Cobo. Esteban, Rosa, Asensio and Evangelina seek refuge in the hills. Esteban and his band attack Cueto's place, killing Cueto. Esteban, terribly wounded in a skirmish followed by Cobo's troops, at Cueto's, is lost in the jungle. Asensio, Evangelina and Rosa, starving, go into Matanzas. O'Reilly, Branch and Norine Evans, rich American nurse, evading detectives, plan to sail for Cuba.

They reach Cuba, are told that Esteban and Rosa are thought dead, and O'Reilly joins a force of Cuban troops, finding Esteban very ill in a Spanish dungeon after an attack on a town. Esteban is taken to the Cuban camp. O'Reilly goes into Matanzas to hunt Rosa.

Search for her proves unavailing and O'Reilly begins to lose heart.

O'Reilly finds Rosa. O'Reilly plans to hunt for the Varona treasure and to escape with Rosa from Matanzas.

The Haunted Garden

Little food remained in the hut, barely enough for Asensio and the woman, and inasmuch as O'Reilly had spent his last centavo for candles he and Jacket were forced to go hungry again. Late that evening, after the wretched prison quarters had grown quiet, the three treasure-hunters stole out of their hovel and wound up the hill. In spite of their excitement they went slowly, for none of them had the strength to hurry. Fortunately, there were few prowlers within the lines, hunger having robbed the reconcentrados of the spirit to venture forth, and in consequence Spanish vigilance had relaxed; it was now confined to the far-flung girdle of intrenchments which encircled the city. The trio encountered no one.

Leaving Jacket on guard at the crest of the hill, O'Reilly stationed Rosa at the mouth of the well, then lowered himself once more into it. Lighting his candle, he made a careful examination of the place, with the result that Esteban's theory of the missing riches seemed ever less improbable than it had earlier in the day. The masonry-work he discovered, had been done with a painstaking thoroughness which spoke of the abundance of slave labor, and time had barely begun to affect it. Here and there a piece of the mortar had loosened and come away, but for the most part it stood as solid as the stones between which it was laid. Shoulder-high to O'Reilly there appeared to be a section of the curbing less smoothly fitted than the rest, and through an interstice in this he detected what seemed to be a damp wooden beam. At this point he brought his iron bar into play.

It was not long before he discovered that his work was cut out for him. The cement was like flint and his blunt makeshift implement was almost useless against it. Angled deep in the maddy water, he patiently pecked and pounded and chipped, endeavoring to enlarge the crevice, so as to use his bar as a lever. The sweat streamed from him and he became dismayed at his own weakness. He was forced to rest frequently.

Rosa hung over the orifice above, encouraging him, inquiring eagerly as to his progress. During his frequent breathing spells he could discern her white face dimly illumined by the candle-light from below.

"After he had worked for an hour or two, he made a report: 'It begins to look as if there really was a bulkhead or a door in there.'"

The girl clapped her hands and laughed with delight. "Do hurry, dear; I'm dying of suspense."

O'Reilly groaned: "That fellow, Sebastian, knew his business. This cement is like steel, and I'm afraid of breaking my crowbar."

Rosa found a leaf, folded a kiss into it, and dropped it to him. "That will give you strength," she declared.

O'Reilly lost count of time after a while and he was incredulous when Jacket came to warn him that daylight was less than an hour away. "Why, I haven't started!" he protested. He discovered, much to his surprise, that he was ready to drop from fatigue and that his hands were torn and blistered; when he had climbed the rope to the upper air he fell exhausted in the deep grass. "I—I'm not-myself at all," he apologized: "nothing to eat, you know. But the work will go faster now, for I've made a beginning."

"Do you still think—" Rosa hesitated to voice the question which trembled on her lips.

"I'll know for sure tonight." He directed Jacket to replace the planks over the well; then the three of them stole away.

O'Reilly spent most of that day in a profound stupor of exhaustion, while Rosa watched anxiously over him. Jacket, it seemed, had peacefully slumbered on picket duty, he occupied himself by grinding at his knife. The last scraps of food disappeared that evening.

When night fell and it came time to return to the top of La Cumbre, O'Reilly asked himself if his strength would prove sufficient for the task in hand. He was spiritless, sore, weak; he ached in every bone and muscle, and it required all his determination to propel himself up the hill. He wondered if he were wise thus to sacrifice his waning energies on a hope so forlorn as this but by now he had begun to more than half believe in the existence of the Varona treasure and he felt an almost irresistible curiosity to learn what secret, if any, was concealed behind those water-soaked timbers at the bottom of the well. He realized, of course, that every hour he remained here, now that food and money were gone, lessened the chances of escape; but, on the other hand, he reasoned, with equal force, that if he had indeed stumbled upon the missing hoard salvation for all of them was assured. The stake, it seemed to him, was worth the hazard.

Given tempered tools to work with, it would have been no great undertaking to tear down that cemented wall of stones, but, armed with nothing except his bare hands and that soft iron bar, O'Reilly spent nearly the whole night at his task. Long before the last rock had yielded, however, he beheld that which caused him to turn a strained face upward to Rosa.

"There's a little door, as sure as you live," he told her.

The girl was beside herself with excitement. "Yes? What else? What more do you see?"

"Nothing. It appears to be made of solid timbers, and has two huge hand-wrought locks."

"Locks! Then we have found it." Rosa closed her eyes, she swayed momentarily. "Esteban was right. Locks, indeed! That means something to hide. Oh, if I could only help you."

"God! If I only had something—anything to work with!" muttered the American as he fell to with redoubled energy. He no longer tried to conserve his strength, for the treasure-seeker's lust beset him. Rosa looked on, wringing her hands and urging him to greater haste.

But the low, thick door was built of some hard, native wood; it was wet and tough and slippery. O'Reilly's blows made no impression upon it, nor upon the heavy hawsps and staples with which it was secured in place. The latter were deeply rusted, to be sure, but they withstood his efforts, and he was finally forced to rest, baffled, enraged, half hysterical from weakness and fatigue.

Daylight was at hand once more, but he refused to give up, and worked on stubbornly, furiously, until Rosa, in an agony, besought him to desist.

Johnnie again collapsed on the grass and lay panting while the other two replaced the planks.

"Another hour and I'd have been into it," he declared, huskily.

"You will kill yourself," Jacket told him.

Rosa bent over him with shining eyes and parted lips. "Yes," said she. "Be patient. We will come back, O'Reilly, and tonight we shall be rich."

Colonel Cobo lit a black cigarette, leaned back in his chair, and exhaled two fierce jets of smoke through his nostrils. For a full moment he scowled forbiddingly at the sergeant who had asked to see him.

"What's this you are telling me?" he inquired, finally.

The sergeant, a mean-faced, low-browed man, stirred uneasily. "It is God's truth. There are spirits on La Cumbre, and I wish to see the priest about it."

"Spirits? What kind of spirits?" The fellow shrugged. "Evil spirits—spirits from hell. The men are buying charms."

"Bah! I took you to be a sensible person."

"You don't believe me? Well, I didn't believe them when they told me about it. But I saw with my own eyes."

Cobo leaned forward, mildly astonished. Of all his villainous troop, this man was the last one he had credited with imagination of this sort. "What did you see?"

"A ghost, my Colonel, nothing else. La Cumbre is no place for an honest Christian."

The colonel burst into a mocking laugh. "An honest Christian! You! Of all my vile ruffians, you are the vilest. Why, you're a thief, a liar, and an assassin! You are lying to me now. Come—the truth for once before I give you the compote."

"As God is my judge, I'm telling you the truth," protested the soldier.

"Plog me if you will—rather the compote than another night in those trenches. You know that old quinta?"

"Where Pancho Cueto made a goat of himself? Perfectly. Do you mean to say that you saw old Esteban Varona walking with his head in his hands?"

"No, but I saw that she-devil who fell in the well and broke her neck."

"Eh? When did you behold this—this marvel?"

"Two nights ago. She was there beside the well and her face shone through the night like a lantern. Christ! There was fire upon it. She came and went, like a moth in the lamplight. I tell you I repented my sins. Some of the men laughed at me when I told them, as they had laughed at the others. But last night two of the doubters went up there."

"Exactly. And they saw nothing."

"Your pardon, my Colonel. They came back in a cold sweat, and they spent the night on their knees. The woman was there again. You have seen the salt sea at night? You her face was white, and that, as they said. They heard the clanking of chains, too, and the sound of hammers, coming from the very bowels of the earth. It is all plain enough, when you know the story. But it is terrifying."

"This is indeed amazing," Cobo acknowledged, "but of course there is some simple explanation. Spirits, if indeed there are such things, are made of nothing—they are like thin air. How, then, could they rattle chains? You probably saw some wretched pacifists in search of food and imagined the rest."

"Indeed? Then what did I hear with these very ears? Whispers, murmurs, groans, the clinkety-clink of old Sebastian's chain. For his sins the old slave is chained in some cavern of the mountain. Soundless! I'm no baby! I know when I'm asleep, and I know when I'm awake. That place is accursed, and I want no more of it."

Cobo fell into frowning meditation, allowing his cigarette to smolder down until it burned his thick fingers. He was not a superstitious man and he put no faith in the supernatural, nevertheless he was convinced that his sergeant was not lying, and reference to Pancho Cueto had set his mind to working along strange channels. He had known Cueto well, and the latter's stubborn belief in the existence of that Varona treasure had more than once impressed him. He wondered now if others shared that faith, or if by chance they had discovered a clue to the whereabouts of the money and were conducting a secret search. It was a fantastic idea, nevertheless Cobo told himself that if people were prying about those deserted premises it was with some object, and their actions would warrant observation. The presence of the woman—a woman—with the glow of phosphorus upon her face was puzzling. He determined to investigate. After a time he murmured, "I should like to see this spirit."

The sergeant shrugged. It was plain from his expression that he

Imperial Potentate

James McCandless, Imperial Potentate of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, was greeted by fifty thousand nobles from all parts of the U. S. when he appeared at the annual convulse at Atlantic City.

"Another night is coming, and I shall visit the place, and if I see anything unusual I will believe what you have told me. Meanwhile, go see your priest by all means. It will do you no harm."

Gold Tells Story of Mountainous Search

Taylorville, Oct. 7.—J. C. Gold, special detective of the Imperial Order, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, relating his experiences while in the mountains searching for men believed to have been implicated in the "frame-up" assault on Margaret Smith near here some weeks ago, told an interesting story. For several days, until late at night, he worked with the hope of establishing a clue as to the guilty parties. While mingling with the mountaineers in many instances he was suspected of being a revenuer and in consequence of this fact he was confronted with many handicaps.

Untiring in his efforts to conclude the matter, he was forced to much deprivation. However, through his efforts, the alleged guilty parties have been located—two in Alleghany county and three in Ashe county. S. L. Jenkins, who is said to have engaged these men, and at this time serving a two years' sentence on the Guilford county road, will be brought there with these men for trial, which will be held some time the latter part of next week. Warrants issued here yesterday afternoon were mailed to sheriffs in Alleghany and Ashe counties for the arrest of these men by Sheriff W. H. Carson, of this county. Fifteen witnesses will also render evidence at the preliminary hearing set for next week.

Liquor Pouring in Asheboro

Asheboro, Oct. 7.—Much excitement was aroused in Asheboro when one hundred and five gallons of whiskey were poured out on Main street. The sewer pipes were filled with the odor of the liquid and a throng of the citizens of the town gathered near to get a smell. Prohibition Agent Lemons, with Deputy Sheriff Brown and Jailer Jenkins made the find. The still and whiskey were located in Union township near Eleazer church, and for some time, it has been reported that whiskey was being made in this section. An 80-gallon still was also brought in. The officers report that a man ran.

Increase in Convictions

Washington, Oct. 7.—An increase of approximately 100 per cent. during the past year in the convictions obtained for violation of the federal narcotic laws is reported in a statement issued by Prohibition Commissioner Haynes.

U. D. C. Convention Dates

Birmingham, Oct. 7.—Confusion in the different states concerning the date for the annual meeting here of the United Daughters of the Confederacy brought an announcement by general chairman that the convention will take place November 14-20. Six hundred delegates are expected.

BUREAU EFFORT VERY VALUABLE TO FARMER

This Is Day of Organization, Says Mr. Millsaps, Who Urges Farmers To Work With Bureau

By E. S. MILLSAPS
(District Agent)

This is a day of organization. Some people think the nation is over-organized, but since organization has gone so far it is safe to claim that the greatest industry in the country should not be left out. Manufacturing, mining, commerce, transportation, the various classes of labor, the profession, and even the small trades are organized, and why not farming?

Various and sundry attempts have been made to organize farmers. The national grange, the farmers' alliance, and the farmers' union are farm organizations which have had national recognition among farmers, and they have all served great purposes, and the grange and farmers' union are still doing a great work.

During the last few years a new organization has sprung up among farmers which seems to appeal to them as no other one ever has, and it is rapidly covering the entire country. This is the farm bureau. It is not a secret organization, and is both educational and commercial. It undertakes by co-operation with the county agricultural agents to improve cultural methods—to standardize farm products both as to crops and livestock, to control insect pests and plant diseases, and then through its own agencies or agencies created by it to guide, pack and market co-operatively farm products. The county units may serve the farmers of a county in many ways. The purchasing department may buy co-operatively fertilizers, seeds and other supplies. The educational department undertakes to protect farmers against the speculator, the fraudulent dealer and himself. This last should be explained. The farmer is not in a position to keep himself informed on the big things that affect him and his business most. The farm bureau undertakes to solve the farm problems and keep its members informed of all matters pertaining to the farming business. The organization's experts stand between the farmer and every other interest such as legislation, transportation, distribution and consumption, and keep him informed as to what is best for him to do to protect his business.
