The Veteran Saw It All.

[From the New York Times.] On Saturday last an old man with silvery hair was led into the Cyclorama of Gettysburg by a bright faced little miss in a jaunty gypsy hat and dress, and sat down while she described to him the features of the picture in detail, occasionally asking her a question or shaking his head slowly as if account. She had described to him in her own way the on rush of Pickett's men and the hand tohand conflict at the stone fence where the Pennsylvania veterans FOR ASSOCIATE JUSTICES OF SUPREMECOURT | met the charge of the Southerners, when he asked: "But where's the artiflery, Mag?"

"Oh, you mean the big guns? They're over here on the hill in a FOW." "All in a rowl" he asked.

"Yes," she replied. He shook his head. "Look round," said he. "There must be some more that are not in line." "Yes," she said. "There are o down here, but they are upset-seem to be broken. I think they are bursted."

"Is that where the men are com ing over the stone wall!" "Yes, grandpa."

"Is there a grove of trees?" "Yes, grandpa. It seems to be full of men, but the smoke is so thick you cannot see them."

"Oh, I can see them," he cried. It was then noticed by several people who were listening to him that he was blind. The little girl said: "Oh, no, grandpa: you can't see them.

"Yes, I cau," he answered. "I can see them very well, and the broken camon, too."

The child booked at him with in nocent surprise as she said: "You are joking now."

"No, my dear," replied the old What will be the judgment of man, "No. That was the last any intelligent, fair-minded man, thoughever saw on earth. PEOPLE OF THE BALKANS .- AS showing the strange, cosmopolitan character of the people of the Balkan peninsula it is often sufficient to merely pass from one village to another, or even from one house to another, in the same place, to find strange contrasts. Both Greeks and Bulgarians cling to old estab lished customs that no amount of fusion and progress seems able to modify. A Bulgarian family and a Greek family occupy houses side by side. In each family, is a marriageable daughter. In the former house, friends of the would be sonin law are bargaining with the father as to the amount he is to receive for his daughter. In the house of the Greek family the neg otiators are finding out how much the father is willing to give with the daughter. Nothing but a wall separates the two houses, yet in one a young woman is being dowered, and in the other a young woman is being sold. Each family is following the custom of its own people in ancient times

THE WORLD'S COTTON YIELD. -Though known from prehistoric times, the use of cotton for cloth did not become general until after the first successful American cultivation of the fibre in 1760. In 1791 the world's yield was 490,-000,000 pounds and that of the United States 2,000,000 pounds. Since then the American development of the industry has been stupendous, the present production of the United States being six times as great as that of the whole world a century ago, and its in doubt of the accuracy of her home consumption being equal to the world's product fifty years ago. It has been calculated that, with the appliances of 1790, the manufacture of the world's cotton in 1826 would have occupied about 50,000,000 people, while it would require 300,000,000 persons at the present time.

IN MOONLIGHT.

The white moon fills the silent sky. And, stirring at her feet, The white floods rise and leap the shore-Bold lovers, rash and fleet.

But a swifter flood to feel her sway. And rush in a restless tide,

Is the love that leaps from my heart in For her whom I walk beside.

The white moon slips from the silent sky, The sea slips from the shore. And back from my silent, happy heart Sweeps the flood of words once more.

But not till the waves have kiss'd the beach And the moon has kissed the sea, and not until, sweetheart, I too Have kissed—been kissed by thee.
