EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, January 27, 1862.

President's General War Order, No. 1.

Ordered, That the 22d of February, 1862, be the day for a general movement of the land and naval forces of the United States against the insurgent forces.

That, especially,

The Army at and about Fortress Monroe,

The Army of the Potomac,

The Army of Western Virginia,

The Army near Manassas, Kentucky,

The Army and Florida at Cairo,

And a Naval Force in the Gulf of Mexico,

Be ready for a movement on that day.

That all the respective commanders, and all the subordinate commanders, be held to strict and full responsibility for the prompt execution of this order.

That the Heads of Departments, and especially the Secretaries of War and of the Navy, with all their subordinates, and the General-in-Chief with all his commanders and subordinates, of land and naval forces, will severally be held to strict and full responsibility for the prompt execution of this order.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, March 2, 1862.

President's General War Order, No. 2.

Ordered, That the Major General commanding the Army of the Potomac

Be forthwith to organize that part of said army destined to enter upon active operations, (including the reserve, but excluding the troops to be left in the fortifications about Washington,) in four army corps, to be commanded, according to seniority of rank, as follows:

1st Corps, to consist of four divisions, and to be commanded by Major General I. M. McDowell.

2d Corps, to consist of three divisions, and to be commanded by Brigadier General E. V. Sumner.

3d Corps, to consist of three divisions, and to be commanded by Brigadier General S. P. Heintzelman.

4th Corps, to consist of three divisions, and to be commanded by Brigadier General E. L. Keyes.

That the divisions now commanded by the officers above assigned to the commands of corps, shall be embraced in and form a part of their respective corps.

That the forces left for the defense of Washington will be placed a command of Brigadier General James Wardworth, who shall be Military Governor of the District of Columbia.

That an order be executed with such promptness and despatch, as not to delay the commencement of the operations hereby directed to be undertaken by the Army of the Potomac.

That Fifth Army Corps, to be commanded by Major General N. P. Banks, will be formed from the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th, 21st, 22nd, 23rd, 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, 28th, 29th, 30th, For the Patriot
THE LOVED ONES AFAR.
 COMPANY OF ROCKSBOURNE.
 When night winds are wailing
 Like spirits in the hall,
 And death walks in darkness
 Through hamlet and hall,
 Kind Angel of Mercy,
 Wherever they are,
 Watch over the slumbers
 Of loved ones afar—
 Our hearts' dearest treasures,
 The loved ones afar.
 Wherever they may wander,
 O'er land or o'er sea,
 Thou Father of Angels,
 We trust them with thee,
 Be thou to earth's pilgrims
 The day-beam and star,
 The staff of the weary
 To loved ones afar—
 Our hearts' dearest treasures,
 The loved ones afar.
 While life hath a pleasure
 Or hope hath a cheer,
 While the heart can feel kindness
 Or sorrow a tear,
 I cannot forget them,
 Nor fail in the prayer
 That God will watch over
 The loved ones afar—
 Our hearts' dearest treasures,
 The loved ones afar.
 The winter of life time
 May close round in gloom,
 And spring flowers may scatter
 Their leaves o'er my tomb,
 Yet still through the darkness
 Like evening's pale star,
 My spirit will hover
 O'er loved ones afar—
 Our hearts' dearest treasures,
 The loved ones afar.

Select Miscellany.

The Pitcher Plant.

Two brothers, Englishmen, were once traveling on foot from Dondra Head, the Southern extremity of the Island of Ceylon, towards Candy, in the interior, about one hundred and twenty miles northward. They started upon their journey very early in the morning, and expected to accomplish it in three or four days, though as the sun is so exceedingly warm in that country they intended to rest during the heat of the day under the shade of the many broad leaved palm trees that grow by the side of the road.

They had traveled some distance when the younger stopped, and gazing inquiringly around, said, "I surely heard a cry, as if some one was hurt. Let us look and see what it can be." As a low moan now distinctly reached their ears; it proceeded from a group of cocoa nut trees that grew on their right hand.

The brothers sprang hastily but cautiously forward, searched carefully around, and at last the elder exclaimed, laughing, "Here it is, Arthur; come and see;" and as his brother turned towards him, he pointed to a monkey, who having fallen from one of the branches of the fruit tree, had hurt himself very severely.

"Poor fellow!" said Arthur; and taking him up, he tore a strip from his handkerchief, and bound the wounded limb, and then turned to resume his journey with the monkey in his arms. "You surely," said Robert, "do not intend to take that disgusting animal as your companion to Candy?"

"Do you think," replied Arthur, "that I would leave the poor helpless creature to die of his wound? No; he shall be my companion until cured, and then he may return, as soon as he likes, to his home in the forest."

The two brothers travelled on their way though the elder could not sometimes refrain from joking the other about his companion. They had journeyed two days, and were about half way from the place of their destination, when the heat became exceedingly oppressive, and the numerous springs which had heretofore flowed along the side of the road, became dried up, and they began to suffer from the want of water. Their strength was failing, they felt as though they could proceed no further; and on the morning of the fourth day when within about thirty miles of Candy, both brothers sunk down at the foot of a palm tree, exhausted and parched with thirst.

"Must we die here?" exclaimed Robert with a groan.

"Trust in God," replied Arthur, raising his eyes towards heaven. Suddenly the monkey who, who was resting by his side, sprang up and ran eagerly along the road, as if he were searching for something. At last he returned, and seizing Arthur by the arm, endeavored to draw him along with him. "How strangely he acts!" said the young man, "what can he have found?" And, summoning all his strength, he arose and followed the animal.

When he reached the spot, what met his delighted eyes? There growing in luxuriant abundance was the silky, downy pitcher plant, or monkey cup, so called on account of its being sought after by those animals for the purpose of quenching their thirst. The flower is the shape of a cup, about six inches in length, and one and a half in diameter; it has a lid which opens and shuts with the changes of the weather and is filled with pure water, a secretion from the plant.

The two brothers drank of the water, and were refreshed; and when they at last reached their home, they related to their astonished friends how the monkey had been the means of saving their lives. "Lord, how mainfain are Thy works!" in wisdom hast thou made them all."

Who Turned down that Leaf.

A gentleman said: I was called to visit a person in a very anxious state of mind. She was a young woman, who had lost a pious mother by death. I had been urged to visit this person, though a perfect stranger to me. I was invited into the parlor, and while waiting for her to come, I took up a Bible from the table, with a corner of the leaf turned down, pointing to the words: "Be not afraid; only believe." The young lady soon entered and after the first salutations, I inquired, holding up the Bible in my hand—

"Who turned down that leaf?"
 "With much emotion she answered, 'My dying mother.'"
 "Well, have you ever trusted, according to these words, in the Author of these words?" I asked.

"Never," she replied.
 "Not in Jesus?"
 "Not even in Jesus," she replied calmly. "Could you do anything better?" said I. She did not answer, but the slow tear stole down her cheek.

"Your mother must have had a design in this; what could it be?"
 "I suppose, a standing direction to the child she was leaving, she meant it to be." "And you have never followed it?"
 "Never," and the tears fell fast.

"This is the first thing to be done—believe," said I.
 "I know it," she answered. "But how am I to believe when I do not believe?"
 "What if they had said so in coming to the Saviour in the days of his flesh? What an insult it would have been to his mercy and his power! Who then would have said it?"

"I know it all. And yet I have been afraid to trust him."
 "Do not be afraid; only believe," I repeated, pointing to the passage in the Bible. "The Saviour says it; and your dying mother has left this finger post, pointing to the path in which she would have her child go. Will you walk in it?"

She trembled all over like an aspen leaf. I could see that a mighty struggle was going on as she stood a moment hesitating to answer. At length she said slowly and solemnly, "I will."
 "Will what?" said I.
 "Will not be afraid, and will believe."
 "Let us pray," said I, and we dropped upon our knees. I thanked the Lord Jesus from a full heart for his encouragement and resolutions wrought by the Holy Spirit, and I prayed to Jesus to manifest himself to this young woman as a Saviour, saving to the uttermost, and saving her now, and to lead her to renounce everything for him, and to put her trust wholly in him.

Of Flowers.

Flowers are among the most beautiful of the works of nature, gratifying the eye with every variety of shade and color: from the most brilliant and gorgeous to the most modest and retiring; from the splendid tulip, to the pale and modest lily. The contemplation of a flower-garden is delightful, even as a mere sight and it is peculiarly fitted for young persons. It is, indeed almost indiscreet to be unacquainted with the nature and phenomena of these beautiful creations. The habit of contemplating them is exceedingly favorable to virtue and calmness of mind; and some of the wisest and best of our species have been remarkable for their love of this kind of study.

To a fanciful mind there is scarcely any one thing in nature from which an obvious and striking moral may not be drawn. While gazing, for instance, upon a flower garden, how naturally do we compare the difference which is so obvious among flowers, to that which exists among the various individuals of the human race. The tulip, the gaudiest and most gorgeous-colored of all the flowers, is utterly destitute of scent, and completely useless; while some of the most homely looking are characterized by the possession of the most fragrant and powerful odors. The night-violet is beautiful scented, yet it is at the same time one of the meanest, and unattractive in its appearance. A small bed of these will at dusk of evening, perfume the air for an immense distance round; and yet so little conspicuous are these odorous little flowers, that, unless previously acquainted with their appearance, no one would suspect that the beautiful fragrance sprang from them.

It is similar with mankind. The best and most admirable of our race have frequently less to boast of, as to personal appearance and mere showy accomplishments, than the worst and most worthless. The weak, the selfish, the wicked, frequently possess a sufficiency of outward ostentation to attract the attention, and secure the applause of the thoughtless million. Though destitute of solid ability, such persons frequently possess great address and great presumption; and as the majority of mankind are utterly incompetent to form a rigid and correct estimate of character, false pretensions, which are plausibly set off and boldly maintained, are frequently allowed, when really just ones are opposed or neglected. The truly good and great, on the other hand, rich in wisdom and in virtue, are very frequently modest, even to excessive and painful diffidence.

The tulip, gaudy and conspicuous, has for a season the advantage of the odorous and modest violet; but that season is but a very brief one. The eye soon tires of gazing upon glaring and beautiful colors; and the sight which at first excited admiration, in time becomes irksome, and almost painful. The delicious fragrance of the retiring violet soon attracts the student of nature from the scentless, though splendid tulip; and the good sense of most persons causes them to admit, that if the latter be the more beautiful, the former is by far the more estimable.

Thus also is it with mankind. Though the weak and the worthless may dazzle the world for a time, they can not permanently deceive it; and though the good may for awhile be left in obscurity which their native modesty induces them to choose, their good works, like the fragrance of the violet, will direct attention to them the love and estimation they deserve.

How a Christian Soldier can Die.

The Central Presbyterian contains a biographical sketch of the Rev. Dabney Carr Harrison, Captain of company K, 5th Virginia regiment, who fell while gallantly leading his men in the terrible fight at Fort Donelson. We copy a portion:—

When the sun rose on that bloody Saturday, it saw him already in the thick of the battle. Through seven hours of mortal peril he wrestled with the foe. With dauntless heart he cheered on his men. They loved him as a father and eagerly followed wherever he led. Their testimony is that he never said "go on," but always said "come on," while ever before them flashed his waving sword. At length they saw with fear and pain that his firm step faltered, that his erect form wavered and was sinking. They sprang forward and bore him from the field to die. "He had warred a good warfare, ever holding faith and a conscience."

With reverence I have taken in my hand the fat he wore in the battle; with tears and a swelling heart have I gazed on it. It is pierced by four balls. Three whistled partly through and did no harm. The fourth, partly spent, marred that beautiful brow. But these were as nothing. He calmly fought on. A more fatal aim sent a ball into his left breast above his heart, quite through his body. His men did not know it. He still cheered them on. Another deadly aim drove a ball through his right lung; just where cannot be told. His face was to the foe and his step onward even when, from loss of blood and exhaustion he began to sink.

Yet he did not die till next day. Like his brother, seven months before; like his sister seven days after; like the little one to whom we had given his name, he was to die on the Sabbath, with the calm of the eternal Sabbath filling his breast he was carried to Nashville and tenderly nursed by faithful men.

Only two incidents of his dying hours have reached us. Calling for one of his manuscript books, he took a pencil, and with a trembling hand, feebly wrote these words: "Feb. 16, 1862, Sunday—I die content and happy, trusting in the merits of my Savior, Jesus, committing my wife and children to their Father and mine. Dabney Carr Harrison." Precious legacy of love and prayer! Precious testimony of faith and blessedness!

When he felt that death was just upon him, he gathered up his remaining strength for one more effort. Resting in the arms of one of his men, and speaking as if the company, for which he had toiled, suffered, and prayed was before him he exclaimed, "Company K, you have no Captain now; but never give up; never surrender!"

That was his last breath for his country; for the young Confederacy, whose liberty, honor and righteousness were inexpressly dear to him; for which he wept and prayed, and made supplication in secret; for which he was content to "endure hardness as a good soldier," and then cheerfully to die.

These dying words beautifully connect themselves with those of his brother Peyton on the field of Manassas, and taken together, they have a special fitness to our country's present need.

When the Second Virginia regiment, fighting on our left at Manassas, was broken by a sudden and destructive flank fire of the enemy, and by the unfortunate command of its Colonel, Peyton and a few officers of like spirit, rallied a portion of the men and led them in a perilous, but splendid and victorious charge. In the midst of it, however, he fell, shot like his brother in the breast. Two of his men bore him from the field. His face was radiant with heavenly peace. He spent a few moments in dictating messages of love and in prayer for himself, his family, and his country. "What more can we do for you?" asked the affectionate young men who supported him. "Lay me down," was his answer, "I am ready to die; you can do nothing more for me; rally to the charge!"

A STRIKING THOUGHT.—"The death of an old man's wife says Lamartine, 'is like cutting down an ancient oak that has long sheltered the family mansion. Henceforth the beggar of the world, with its cares and vicissitudes, falls upon the old widower's heart, and there is nothing to break their force, or shield him from the full weight of misfortune. It is as if his right hand was withered—as if one wing of his eagle was broken, and every movement that he made brought him to the ground. His eyes are dim and glassy, and when the film of death falls over him, he misses those accustomed tones which might have smoothed his passage to the grave.'"

Call a lady "a chicken," and ten to one she is angry. Tell her she is "no chicken," and twenty to one she is still angrier.
 "I have a fresh cold," said a gentleman to his acquaintance:
 "Why do you have a fresh one: why don't you have it cured?"

The Wife.

"Oh husband, husband, go not forth,
 Again this stormy night.
 For snowy clouds have clad the earth
 Within a robe of white,
 Hark to the whistling winds that scream
 Like fiends amid their glees,
 And now, subdued, they seem to mean
 A dirge-like melody.

"Oh! husband, husband, do not leave
 Our fire so bright and warm.
 To brave the darkness of the night,
 And danger of the storm.
 The fire it burneth pleasantly
 Upon our tiny hearth—
 We may be happy here to-night,
 And join in songs of mirth.

"Think of the many joyous hours
 We have together spent.
 When of my grief your gentle voice,
 A charm of music lent.
 Think of the holy book we read,
 Ere we in prayer did bow:
 And here it is—the same good book—
 Come read it to me now.

"Look in the cradle husband, look!
 Where sleeps our baby boy:
 He wakes—he wakes—to look on thee,
 And curls his lips in joy.
 Oh, husband, go not out to-night,
 The wife, the child entreat:
 Our eve shall be a pleasant one
 And our enjoyment sweet."

He heeds not to the fond appeal,
 But thrusts his wife aside—
 That gentle being, who had been
 But one short year a bride.
 He braves the snow—he faced the storm—
 And journeyed 'ere the plain:
 But never to his wife and child,
 The drunkard came again.

Cabbage Sprouts.

Very few people take half the pains they ought with cabbages. When they are cut no matter how—the stumps are left to bring sprouts no matter when, nor how many. Now, the fact is, that when the sprouts begin to come they should be all rubbed off but the best, or at most two; but if there be only one left to grow on each stump, it will grow faster and better, and be occasionally as good as the first head that was cut; instead of which, a multitude of small ones are allowed to grow, not any of which bring good hearts, and all are, for the most part, but a poor apology for greens. When a cabbage is cut, the leaves should be cut off the stem, and as soon as the buds of the stump begin to grow, rub off or cut all that are not wanted, leaving one of the strongest and best to grow into a head, which it will do in incredibly short time; equaling more frequently excellent, the first head itself, in flavor and appearance. This is adapted for families more than market gardens, because there is some trouble in rubbing or taking off the useless shoots; but it is well worth while in the case of early cabbages, in a private family, for it forms an excellent second crop.—Selected.
