TRUCKERS AND FARMERS.—Increase your yields of grains, grasses and truck, and permanently enrich your soils by one application of "Brown's Ca-CO 3" agricultural lime at less than one-fourth your average fertilizer outlay for one crop. This fact is well founded. This lime works wonders when used in connection with either commercial or home-made fertilizers, cottonseed meal or guano. When using alone, broadcast one ton to an acre, either before or after seeding. The result will prove most gratifying as a labor saver and money maker, and will make of you a true friend and strong advocate of the universal use on all soils and for all crops of "Brown's Ca-CO 3" agricultural lime. For prices and a trial proposition, phone 807 or write Elmore-Maxwell Company, 265 Buchanan street, Greensboro, N. C.

Doctors Bixton and Ralph Dees announce the change of their office telephone to 41.

Give those fruit trees an application of lime sulphur now. For prices and relations, see the Petty-Roid Company.

Best prices on high grade furniture, pictures, rugs, cook stoves, ranges, etc. Medearis-Jones Furniture Company.

Alfalfa taking the honors at the Ohio Valley Exposition was grown in Guver county, N. C., on soil enriched by "Brown's Ca-CO 3" agricultural lime. This lime was also used as a topdressing for same, which gave a harvest of eight tons to the acre for season. Broadcast it over alfalfa, clover or grain, and your alfalfa, clover or grain will be increased, regardless of soil or atmospheric conditions. One application of one ton to the acre will show excellent results for years to come. A trial will convince the most skeptical. Ask your neighbor, who, possibly has tried it. Phone 807 or write Elmore-Maxwell Company, No. 265 Buchanan street, Greensboro, N. C. 44-4t.

Illustrating Mother's Love.

The late William James, Harvard's famous psychologist, would often illustrate a misty subject with an appropriate anecdote.

Discussing motherhood in a lecture on psychology, Professor James once said:

"A teacher asked a boy this question in fractions:

"Suppose that your mother baked an apple pie and there were seven children—the parents and five children. What part of the pie would you get for your portion?"

"A sixth, ma'am," the boy answered.

"But there are seven of you," said the teacher. "Don't you know anything about fractions?"

"Yes, ma'am," said the boy. "I know all about fractions, but I know all about mother, too. Mother'd say she didn't want no pie."

Compromise Effected in Noted Case.

In the United States court Saturday a compromise was effected in the case of Col. J. N. Staples vs. the trustee of the B. J. Fisher estate. By the terms of the compromise Col. Staples receives $2,500 as the remainder of a fee for appearing for the late Capt. Fisher in a damage suit against the Greensboro Waterworks Company. The case was settled by arbitrators several years ago, but the settlement did not suit, so the case went into Federal court, where Col. Staples was given judgment for $3,500. An appeal was taken and recently the decision of the lower court was affirmed. Then the lower court was made by a plea for a rehearing was made by the defendant, and in the meantime efforts were made to compromise the case with the above result. The remainder of the $3,500, which has been in court since judgment for that amount was rendered, was paid over to the trustee of the estate, Mr. C. A. Bray, who paid the court costs.

Making and Saving Money.

Many people who have the ability to make money have never learned how to save it, and for this reason there are fewer well-to-do people in the world than there ought to be. For the person in the world to stances the best way in the world to save money is through the medium of a savings bank—for instance, the Home Savings Bank of Greensboro, which pays 4 per cent, compound interest on all deposits. The business of this bank has increased wonderfully during the past twelve months, and today many people are spending a happier Thanksgiving on account of having an account in the Home Savings Bank. If you would be contented and happy, follow their example and open an account at once.

ONLY ONE MORE WEEK.

The Patriot's Piano Contest Drawing to a Close.

The Patriot's piano contest, which has excited so much interest among the friends of the paper far and near, is drawing to a close. In the verge of the sporting fraternity, we are entering upon the "final heat." The voting closes next Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock.

Now is the time when the contestants need all the help they can possibly get. If you have a favorite friend in the contest, come to her assistance now and do all you can to help her win the handsome piano The Patriot will give away next Thursday.

This week we have a new leader in the contest—Miss Nettie Fleming, but who will be the leader next week, when the prize is to be awarded? Don't make the mistake of believing that a few thousand more votes will make you the winner. Be on the safe side. You cannot be too sure. You cannot have too many votes. Suppose you are a few thousand votes ahead of the one who comes second, and suppose you lack only a few thousand votes of being ahead. What a terrible disappointment it would be! Don't idle away a single minute.

You have only a few days left in the contest. Make every day count. Just a word about the winners of the special prizes this week. Miss Nettie Fleming won the 30,000 bonus votes for new subscriptions and Miss Flavia Holt won the 25,000 votes for the largest amount of money collected.

Standing of Leading Contestants.

The standing of the leading contestants this week is as follows: Miss Nettie Fleming, Greensboro, 290,275. Miss Julia Rankin, Greensboro, R. F. D. 4, 350,250. Miss Flavia Holt, Greensboro, R. F. D. 4, 325,750. Miss Ethel Wells, Greensboro, R. F. D. 4, 200,200. Miss Vivian Huffman, Elon College, 57,475. Miss Valley Lambeth, Brown Summit, 13,350.

NEGRO FOUND DEAD.

Expired in His Carriage in Suburb of the City.

Raymond Moir, a colored carriage driver, who operated a carriage on the streets, was found dead in his carriage Sunday morning about 6 o'clock in the Warnersville section. The carriage had been driven to the side of the road and the horse hitched. Sergeant Jones was notified and on arriving found the body was still warm.

There were no signs or marks of violence about the body. Some of the colored people charged that he had been poisoned, because there was no evidence of foul play. So far as known the dead man had not been sick and was in his usual health.

The matter was reported to Coroner Wood, who summoned a jury and held an inquest. The jury was in session Monday and Tuesday and rendered a verdict to the effect that the deceased came to his death in a manner unknown to the jury.

Contract For Lighting the City.

The contract between the city of Greensboro and the North Carolina Public Service Company for lighting the city during the next ten years was signed in behalf of the city by Mayor Stafford and City Clerk Michaux Monday, this authority having been conferred on them by the board of aldermen Saturday night. The contract becomes effective on December 15, or as soon thereafter as possible.

There is also a separate contract between the city and the company whereby the company is to take over the poles, wiring and other street lighting equipment owned by the city at present, the company to pay for this material the sum of $6,000.

A POLITICAL BANQUET.

Chairman Sherrill Host to North-Gilmer Democrats.

One of the most delightful social events of the season was a supper given at Clegg's hotel Monday night by Mr. E. G. Sherrill, chairman of the Democratic county executive committee, complimentary to the working Democrats of North Gilmer precinct, the banner Democratic precinct in the county in the recent election. Covers were laid for 60 people, and an elegant menu was served, consisting of oysters in different styles, pickles, olives, quail on toast, ice cream, cake, cheese, crackers and coffee.

In addition to a number of the leading working Democrats of North Gilmer, several other good party men were present. Maj. Charles M. Stedman occupied the post of honor at the head of the table.

When the crowd had assembled Mr. Sherrill stated that he had promised the workers of the precinct that, if they would overcome the Republican majority of 40, he would give a winner, and inasmuch as this majority had been overcome and a Democratic majority of 62 substituted, he felt that it was his duty to fulfill his promise. He asked each candidate present to voice his thanks to the workers of North Gilmer for their efforts. Short talks were made by Maj. Stedman, Mr. J. W. Forbis, G. H. McKinney, J. Al Rankin, former Chairman C. A. Hines, Thomas Bangle, Judge N. L. Eure, Andrew Joyner, Squire Sims and T. J. Murphy.

Altogether it was one of the most delightful occasions of the kind enjoyed in Greensboro in a long while, and the guests were loud in their praise of Chairman Sherrill.

Jumped Through Car Window.

High Point Enterprise.

E. F. McKinney, a jeweler of Salisbury, and who was going from Greensboro to Salisbury last night on train No. 12, jumped through the window of the train and was badly hurt. The train was going about 15 miles an hour and was passing the Tomlinson chair factory, when it is said McKinney gave a scream and plunged through the window, head first. He landed in a cinder pile and was stunned for some time. He finally managed to summon help and was carried to the office of the Elwood where a physician was called. The man's head and face were terribly cut and his body was bruised. It was very apparent that he was under the influence of some kind of dope, as a large quantity was found on him. He was taken to Greensboro today for treatment.

Many Northern Hunters Here.

The opening of the bird season has brought many Northern sportsmen to this section. Gen. John Gill, of Baltimore, who has extensive hunting preserves near Climax, has several guests at his lodge, among the number being: Messrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., Charles Steele, J. S. Frick and J. P. Maroney, of New York. Mr. George Gould is at his lodge near High Point, with his two sons, Kingston and Jay Gould, and Messrs. Ezra P. Fentress, H. H. Stevens and Herbert Parsons. Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Bright arrived a few days ago to spend some time at their place in Rock Creek township.

Saves an Iowa Man's Life.

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Madsen, of West Burlington, Iowa, when, after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians gave him up. Then was shown the marvelous curative power of Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies or doctors, five bottles of this matchless medicine completely cured him. Its positive guarantee for Stomach, Liver or Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c at Fariss-Klutz Drug Company.

CRIPPEN PAYS PENALTY.

As End Approaches He Lost Outward Show of Bravado.

London, Nov. 23.—Dr. H. H. Crippen, was today hung in Pentonville prison for the murder of his actress wife, Belle Elmore. The execution occurred within a few minutes of the stroke of 9, which was the time officially designated. The condemned man presented a pitiable appearance as he was literally led through the short corridor from his cell to the scaffold.

His mental anguish had been too great to be covered up by outward bravado, and it was a broken man whom the wardens were obliged to assist up the steps to the drop upon which once reached, the shrinking figure all but collapsed. The first report that Crippen had met his fate calmly was contradicted by persons who were present in the prison during the man's last hours. The doomed man passed a restless night and appeared haggard and worn when awakened from his fitful slumber. He seemed to lose all fortitude as the end approached. A breakfast was brought to him, but he left it untouched. His face was colorless as he was escorted, bareheaded, to the gallows. The gruesome work was soon done. The black cap was quickly drawn over the face; the noose adjusted and the bolt drawn.

Crippen, who weighed 140 pounds, was given a drop of seven feet. Death was instantaneous.

The room adjoining Gardner's drug store on the north has been added to the store and will be used exclusively for Mr. Gardner's seed and bulb business, which has grown to considerable proportions.

Well Known Minister Restored to Health By Vinol.

Rev. D. Schneider, who is a well known minister in Rice Lake, Wis., writes:

"I had a very severe stomach trouble last year from which I was kept in bed three months. I had engaged the services of a doctor, but to no avail. I then read of Vinol and determined to try a bottle. Before it was used up I was out of bed, and four bottles made me a well man. Vinol is a splendid medicine and I can gladly recommend it."

Prominent men from all over the country do not hesitate to indorse this wonderful tonic.

For twelve years Vinol has been sold on the "money back" plan and every year strengthens its popularity and proves by continued tests that it will do what we claim for it.

DEATH OF E. G. WORTH.

Native of Guilford County Dies at Advanced Age of 88 Years.

Mr. Barzillai G. Worth, one of the state's best citizens, died at his home in Wilmington Saturday afternoon at the advanced age of 88 years. He had been confined to his home by the infirmities of age for three weeks and it was realized that the end was only a question of time. The funeral was held Monday afternoon from the First Presbyterian church in Wilmington, of which Mr. Worth had been a member for 56 years and a ruling elder for 32 years.

Mr. Worth was a native of Guilford county, having been born at the old Worth homestead, in the Center section, June 26, 1822. His ancestors were of English extraction and members of the Society of Friends. William Worth, the first of the name to come to America, fled from England in 1662 to escape religious persecution and landed on the shore of Massachusetts. Mr. E. G. Worth's grandfather, Capt. Daniel Worth, was captain of a Nantucket whaling ship, but when 30 years of age, in 1790, he came to Guilford county and established a home, where he reared a large family and died in 1839.

One of his sons, Dr. David Worth, married Miss Eunice Gardner and purchased a plantation at Center, a neighborhood which took its name from the Friends' meeting place nearby, which was known as Center meeting house. He was born in 1778 and died in 1844. He had a family of twelve children, of whom Governor Jonathan Worth was the third and oldest to reach maturity, while Barzillai, the subject of this sketch, was the youngest. The other children were: Ruth, who married Sidney Porter, of Connecticut, and lived in Greensboro, where a number of her descendants reside; Miriam, who married Barzillai Coffin and lived in Indiana; John Milton Worth, Evelyn Worth, who married Nathan Dennis, of Richmond, Ind.; Louise Worth, who married William Clark, of Randolph county, and moved to Indiana; Thomas Clarkson Worth, who married Carolina Arthur, of Nantucket; and John Addison Worth.

B. G. Worth was reared with a family of nine brothers and sisters on his father's plantation, receiving his early education in the neighborhood school promoted by his father, Dr. Worth. At the age of 18 he was sent for two years to the New Garden school, since known as Guilford College. On his return from this institution, in 1842, he took charge of Dr. John Milton Worth's business, who at that time was serving a term at Raleigh as a senator from Moore and Montgomery counties. On his brother's return from his term of service he brought a daguerrotype of himself, and Mr. Worth was so pleased with it that he at once decided it was a profession which suited him could he but find means whereby to secure the necessary training. The doctor agreed to advance his brother the money, and he went immediately to Raleigh to learn the art from an operator by the name of Smiley. It proved to be no easy art, and it was not until two years of patient application and perseverance that he was able to master it sufficiently to make it in any sense remunerative.

He went on to Philadelphia to secure better instruction and finally succeeded so far as to reimburse his brother and have, after all expenses were met, his first thousand dollars. He now felt himself equipped to marry and begin life in earnest. On June 26, 1845, he was united to Miss Mary E. Carter, of Davie county, one of a family of this name in Virginia of great prominence. Two years after his marriage, he began merchandizing in the little village of New Salem, in Randolph county. Here two children were born to him. After three years spent in this place he moved to Asheboro and became a partner in a general merchandising business with his brother, Jonathan Worth. He moved to Wilmington in 1853, and engaged in business with his brother, Dr. T. C. Worth.

The deceased was a first cousin of Mr. William H. Worth, ex-state treasurer, and one of Greensboro's best and most highly esteemed citizens.

Presbyterian Orphanage Debt Paid.

Announcement was made by Rev. Metch Clark, the pastor, at the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning, that the debt hanging over the Barium Springs orphanage had been liquidated. This was of course pleasing news to the congregation. He also announced that at the Thanksgiving service today the usual collection would be for this institution.

Mr. Clark also stated that the canvass for Union Theological Seminary the past week had been satisfactory, though the work was not yet completed, and he hoped others who had not done so would contribute at once. Something over $5,000 has been subscribed to this endowment fund, which it is hoped will reach $300,000.

New Livery Stable Company.

The King-Stewart Livery and Sale Stable Company has been incorporated by the secretary of state with a capitalization of $50,000, the incorporators being: J. L. King, J. R. Thomas, Garland Daniel, Ne'l. Elington, J. M. Stewart, A. D. Connor, W. H. Osborn and R. M. Rees. The place of business is on South Davie street—the Vanstony stables, one of the best known places in the city. The stables are open and an ready for business. THE PRIZES ARE AWARDED.

The Winners in Guilford Boys' Corn-Growing Contest.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Guilford County Agricultural Association was held at the court house in Greensboro Saturday to canvass the reports of the boys competing for the prizes offered for the boys' corn-growing contest. After canvassing the returns, it was found that Roscoe Causey, of Greene township, Julian R. F. D. 1, is the champion boy corn-grower of the county. He produced on his acre a yield of 112 bushels and received the first prize of $50 offered by the county association. In addition, he wins the $25 township prize and the special prize of $20 offered by the Guilford Foultry Association, to say nothing of his 112 bushels of corn. At 80 cents per bushel, this would give him $89.60, a total gross earning of $184.60 on one acre of ground.

The total amount of prizes offered by the agricultural association was $550, there being fourteen township prizes of $25 each and ten second county prizes of $15 each, in addition to the $50 county prize. The total number of bushels raised on the 24 acres by the 24 contestants was 1,557, an average yield of 64 7-8 bushels to acre.

The township prizes of $25 each were awarded as follows:

Washington—George A. Wagoner, 51 bushels.

Rock Creek—Joseph E. Michael, 57 bushels.

Greene—Roscoe Causey, 112 bushels.

Madison—Merlin Doggett, 59 bushels.

Clay—Zeb Coble, 65 bushels.

Moore—Shurley Schoolfield, 78 bushels.

Gilme—Vannie Summers, 56 bushels.

Fentress—Willie Weatherly, 63 bushels.

Monroe—Earl Iddings, 68 bushels.

Sumner—R. Gladstone Groome, 50 bushels.

Bruce—S. B. Moore, 57 bushels.

Friendship—Cletus Ward, 55 bushels.

Janestown—Earl Alfred, 61 bushels.

Deep River—J. J. Peoples, 58 bushels.

The following were awarded second county prizes of $15 each:

J. Lurie Jobe, 54 bushels.

Auburn C. Lambeth, 55 bushels.

Charlie Coble, 59 bushels.

Eddie Schoolfield, 59 bushels.

Wade Dorsett, 68 bushels.

Robert Sharpe, 61 bushels.

Roy Smith, 70 bushels.

Robert Kennett, 52 bushels.

S. H. Groome, 51 bushels.

Paul B. Groome, 71 bushels.

The prizes will be paid at a meeting to be held at the court house on Saturday, December 10, at 10:30 A. M. On that day the boys are to bring in the 25 ears of corn promised by each, and this corn will be sold at auction to the highest bidder. The prizes offered to the men will be awarded at this meeting.

The following committees were appointed to solicit subscriptions to be used in paying the prizes awarded to the boys:

For canvass of Greensboro—John A. Young, J. A. Rankin, S. L. Trogdon, W. J. Groome and T. R. Foust.

For canvass of Janestown—Dr. J. R. Gordon.

To have High Point and Gibsonville canvassed—J. A. Davis, president of the association.

A WOMAN'S JUDGMENT.

The Farmer's Wife Would See the Point to This Proposition Very Quickly.

Suppose the farmer who is now enjoying a season of prosperity never before enjoyed by the agricultural classes were to tell his wife something like this:

"See here, Mary Jane: I have five hundred dollars, or we have, we are partners, you know, and we keep it hidden here in the house. Suppose we take it down to the Savings Department of the Greensboro Loan and Trust company and let it draw interest awhile. They compound the interest every three months—so you see that this five hundred dollars will earn us over twenty dollars a year. Suppose we leave it in there about four years—don't you see that it would earn at least a hundred dollars and we wouldn't do a thing? Then suppose we would draw out the interest it had earned and I took the ten or so ten dollar bills and said here, Mary Jane, take this and buy you all the new dresses you have ever been looking for."

What would Mary Jane say? She would say: "My Jesus Henry, bless your old soul, I always knew you had a long head on you—let's get that money down to the Greensboro Loan and Trust company this blessed day."

Well, that would be business, and of course the wise farmer isn't going to hide his money or carry it with him. He is going to put it to work just like he works himself.

Sale by Commissioners.

Messrs. R. R. King and R. C. Strudwick, commissioners appointed by the court for J. A. Hardin and wife, sold to the highest bidder at the court house at noon Monday the following properties:

One-half interest in about three acres of land and a mill thereon, known as the S. W. Phipps' mill. The highest bid was $390 from E. G. West.

The S. W. Phipps' home place, 185 acres, together with an adjoining tract of 160 acres, was sold to H. M. Coble for $5,000.

One city lot on Pearson street was purchased by R. C. Hood for $1,075.

GUILFORD POULTRY SHOW.

Will be Held December 13-15—A Big Event Promised.

The second annual poultry show of the Guilford County Poultry Association will be held December 13-15 in the store room on South Elm street formerly occupied by the Crescent Hardware Company. The officers and members of the association are working hard to make the event a notable one. Mr. F. J. Marshall, of College Park, Ga., a poultry expert of national reputation, has been engaged as judge.

The following letter is being sent out with the premium lists and entry blanks:

"Dear Sir—We are sending you herewith premium list and entry blanks of the second annual exhibit of the Guilford Poultry Association, hoping that same may prove interesting to you and that we may enlist your aid in our effort to stimulate more interest in the breeding of pure bred poultry.

"In presenting this, our second premium list, we have no apology to make for not offering larger cash premiums in the open class and on pens, as we expect to keep within our means and pay all premiums and all our bills promptly.

"We are not organized for the purpose of making money, but are determined to do all in our power to promote an interest in pure bred poultry and shall put every dollar we make into our show the following season, offering larger cash prizes and specials.

"It is up to you, Mr. Breeder, to help us make a success of our show, and by helping us you will help yourself in a large amount of free advertising you will get. Of course only a part of the birds can win, but if your birds do not win, let it fire you with ambition to get busy and procure eggs or stock from winning pens and be ready to carry off the honors at another time.

"Judging will be by score card, and this will be of much importance to the breeder in mating up his pens, as he can see from the cards just which birds are superior. Score cards will be mailed to each exhibitor at close of show.

"This feature alone will be worth the price of entry, especially when birds are scored by Marshall, a judge of national reputation. The management has provided for uniform coops, a good hall, lights, etc., and we promise to give you a clean, honest show, conducted in a business-like manner and on the square. As far as possible, we would like for exhibitors to attend the show and get acquainted with each other. A full report of the winners will be sent each exhibitor at close of show.

"Send in your entries early, so everything may be in readiness to begin judging on Tuesday morning, December 13.

"If you can't make one of our number, send along a string of your birds and we will guarantee a treatment of your exhibit."

The following officers of the association have been elected for the ensuing year: F. H. Nicholson, president; F. D. Lewis, first vice president; A. B. High, second vice president; W. M. Montgomery, secretary; W. R. Golden, treasurer. The officers constitute the executive committee.

A "WHITE SLAVE" CASE.

Two Men to Answer Serious Charge in Federal Court.

Several cases of interest are on the docket for trial at the term of United States District court to convene in this city on the first Monday in December. The case of greatest interest, and one out of the ordinary, is an indictment against James W. Napier and E. Charles Quaster, who are charged with engaging in the white slave traffic. The defendants were arrested in Charlotte several weeks ago by Deputy Marshal Blaylock and other officers and are now in the Mecklenburg jail in default of bonds of $2,500 each.

The defendants operated a midway show at several fairs in the state, Greensboro and Raleigh excepted, and also at the Danville, Va., fair. The officers got on to their illegal operations and caught them at Charlotte. The law provides that persons convicted of this crime, which is a felony, can be fined as much as $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both, the fine and term of imprisonment to be fixed by the court, according to the merits of the case. In case the girls trafficked in are under 18 years of age, the penalty is doubled. In this case six of the nine girls were only 16 years of age. Six girls were from Danville, Va., and three from Baltimore, Md.

Napier is also charged with robbing the Southern Express Company and with using the United States mails to further his schemes. He is under a $2,500 bond in this case also. He would order a diamond ring from a Northern jewelry store, having the same sent by express C. O. D., with the privilege of examination. In examining the ring he would deliberately substitute an imitation diamond, and the exact size of the genuine stone, and when would refuse to accept the ring. The package would be returned to the company, which would at once discover that the ring returned was not genuine and would require the express company to make good the loss of the genuine stone.

Another case set for trial is that of Frank Trandle, who is charged with counterfeiting. The crime was committed in Forsyth county some years ago. The defendant has just completed a sentence in the Federal prison in Atlanta for an offense committed in Baltimore, Md. He is in Guilford jail awaiting trial.

There are a number of blockading cases for trial, and it is believed that nearly two weeks will be consumed in clearing the docket, after which several civil cases will be taken up, prominent among which is the Nick Williams libel case, regarding the seizure of some 30,000 gallons of whiskey by the federal officials to insure collection of a forfeited bond.

THE CORN-GROWING CONTEST.

Important Letters Sent Out by Secretary T. R. Foust.

To the Members of the Guilford County Agricultural Association:
The executive committee of the association met here on Saturday, November 19, and awarded the prizes in the boys' contest. As very few of the men had reported, they decided to delay awarding prizes to the men until Saturday, December 10.

Each member of the association is earnestly requested to meet here at the court house on Saturday, December 10, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. The executive committee wishes to make a full report to the association of what it has done, and wind up the year's work of the association.

Those of you who entered the men's contest will please bring with you the bushel of corn which you agreed to donate to the association when you entered the contest. This corn, together with that pledged by the boys to the association, will be sold at public auction, and the proceeds from this sale will be used in paying prizes.

Please give notice of this meeting to your neighbors and friends so that they may have the opportunity of attending this meeting. We hope to make it a great day for the agricultural interests of the county. One of the questions to be decided at that time will be whether the association shall continue its existence and work along the line it has pursued during the past year. It is, therefore, important that each member be present on the date which has been named.

Yours very truly,
THOS. R. FOUST,
Secretary Guilford County Agricultural Association.

To the Members of the Boys' Corn Club:

The executive committee of the Guilford County Agricultural Association met Saturday, November 19, and awarded the prizes in the contest. They decided to ask all the boys who entered this contest to bring to Greensboro on Saturday, December 10, the seventy-five ears of corn which each one promised to donate to the association. This corn will be sold on that day at public auction, and we hope to have all the money raised to pay off all the prizes then. This meeting will begin at 10:30 o'clock, in the court house.

You are expected to bring your 75 ears of corn, whether you reported your yield to the association or not. As you know, each boy signed an agreement to donate to the association 75 ears, and this is now due the association from each boy who signed that obligation.

The yield of those who reported is remarkably good, and I hope that we shall be able to continue this excellent work on a larger scale next year. I shall expect to see you here on Saturday, December 10, with your 75 ears of corn.

Yours very truly,
THOS. R. FOUST,
Secretary Guilford County Agricultural Association.

HOMICIDE NEAR LIBERTY.

Grover Blaylock Shot and Killed by Jake Burton.

Grover Blaylock, a young man about 23 years of age, was shot and killed by Jake Burton shortly after midnight Sunday morning at the home of Cora Burton, a white woman residing about four miles northeast of Liberty, in Alamance county. Burton went to Graham Sunday morning and surrendered to the officers and was committed to jail.

Jake Burton was in the house of the Burton woman when Blaylock appeared and demanded admission. When informed that he could not come in, Blaylock began to batter down the door, whereupon Burton seized a shotgun and took a position in a corner of the room. He fired as Blaylock burst open the door and started in the room, the entire load taking effect in the young man's breast. Blaylock fell to the floor and expired in a few minutes.

Came Near World's Record.

Winston-Salem, Nov. 22.—According to figures published by the Cincinnati Enquirer, Mr. Oscar Houser, a Forsyth county boy who raised recently 126 1/4 bushels of corn on one acre, came within 2 1/4 of a bushel of equalling the world's record. Percy G. Davis, of Granby, Mass., holds the record, being awarded $500 at the New England corn exposition recently. It is expected that Forsyth or some other North Carolina county will furnish the boy who will break the record ere long. In Forsyth the boys' clubs are flourishing and have greatly inspired the country lads.

LITTLE GIRL WALKS AT LAST.

Wonderful Cure Made in Case of Mountain Child.

Washington Times.

The endless pattering of two little feet, now as straight and strong as other people's, and a child's timid, half-frightened laugh of wonder and happiness are heard today in the corridors of the New Willard hotel.

If grumpy guests, who have wandered past remembrance from the happy land of childhood, look askance at the little girl who seems to have discovered the principle of perpetual motion, and to derive a certain ecstasy from putting it into practice, they are told that Gertrude McIntosh is using her feet for the first time in all her life of nearly five long, tragic years.

And who, pray, after finding that she owned a pair of perfectly good, usable, everyday feet could resist the temptation to take a few turns up and down the corridor?

One year ago, Gertrude McIntosh, now straight and slim like other little girls, and believed as it was intended little girls should be, was a child with mal-formed, horribly twisted legs and feet that were a cruel parody upon the freedom of childhood.

Like a bit of driftwood from the sea of human wreckage, she had found a temporary refuge in the poorhouse of Yancey county, North Carolina, to which she had been taken by her widowed mother from their cabin home in the fastness of the North Carolina mountains.

To the love of a childless man and woman, and the magic of a physician's skill, the child owes a cure more remarkable than any effected by a surgeon's knife, within the annals of modern surgery. For in the straightening of the twisted feet and legs no knife has been employed, no bones broken, and not a drop of blood spilled.

Twelve months ago little Gertrude McIntosh was removed from the Yancey county poorhouse by Superintendent and Mrs. W. B. Streeter, of the North Carolina Children's Home Society.

Mr. and Mrs. Streeter, who immediately made efforts to learn whether or not science could undo the cruel work which nature had played upon the mal-formed child came into the world, heard of the noted New York specialist in deformities, Dr. Leonard H. Sayre. They brought her to his attention, and succeeded in interesting him in the little girl, with the result that this physician, who receives princely fees from the rich, agreed to undertake without money and without price, the cure of the homeless child.

When Mr. and Mrs. Streeter, with their young charge, went to New York, little less than a year ago, a chapter of wonder and romance began to unfold in the hitherto desolate life of the mountain child. There were long interludes of pain, it is true, but in the Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, where she was under Dr. Sayre's care, there were also love and interest, and wonderful picture books, and children who were beautiful for all that they suffered.

Everything was a continuous marvel and delight to the child.

"Who fetched this frost water?" she asked in her timid drawl and mountain dialect, when she tasted the water for the first time, adding to her:

"Is it fitten ter drink?"

Days and months passed, and the wonderful cure progressed so surely that even Dr. Sayre himself could scarcely believe the efficiency of his success. By skilled manipulations, the muscles, bones and tendons of her limbs themselves were gradually twisted into natural curves and positions. Through fevers, pains and aches the child's feet and legs were kept in tortuous plaster casts, to be removed only for new manipulations and to be put again in new and still more painful casts. The day came, however, at the end of six to seven months, when she was as straight as other children.

"Uncle" and "Auntie" Streeter, anxious to see the child, accompanied her to New York for Gertrude McIntosh. Anxious to see the child, they found a home for her, as they have found for 400 other dependent North Carolina children who have come under their loving care.

The child, abandoned by her mother, a victim of a poor house, a home of charity, and wise in the knowledge of pain before her eighth birthday, was adopted by a wealthy South Carolina banker and his wife.

"The kind gentlemen my Auntie Streeter told me about has brought me through," she confided to me lately. "His name is Christ Jesus."

CRUELLY KILLS FATHER.

Whispering Son Makes Horrible Recital to the Police.

Alameda, Ind., Nov. 18.—"I thought he was dead; I loaded the body into my buggy and started for the old mill. I had the body propped up on a seat. On the way father revived a little and threw his arms around me. Then I beat him over the head again until he was quiet. Just as I was about to throw the body into the well, he groaned and gave a weak sigh."

This, according to the police, is part of the signed confession of Benjamin Smith, 22 years old, a farmer now in the Alameda jail. It was the climax of a remarkable recital of murder.

Last night, Smith, his hands smeared with blood, staggered into the home of Oscar Shaw and told a story of having been attacked by highwaymen.

Smith's father was mysteriously missing and suspicions were aroused which led to his arrest. Under examination, he finally said that he would show the police where his father's body could be found.

He led the way to an abandoned well and pointing said:

"There he is."

From out of the well the police took the body of Charles Smith, the father. The police learned that the father and son had quarreled because the father wanted young Smith to pay board.

COUNT LEO TOLSTOI DEAD.

One of the World's Famous Characters Passes Away.

Count Leo Tolstoy, the noted Russian novelist and reformer, and one of the world's famous characters, died at Astapova Sunday morning, following a week's critical illness.

Count Lyof Nikolaievich Tolstoy, usually called Count Leo Tolstoy, was born August 28, 1828, at Yasnaya Polyana, in the province of Tula, Russia. When 23 years old Tolstoy entered the army and served in the Caucasus and in the defense of Sebastopol against the British and French allied forces. He first made a reputation in literature by a series of vivid sketches written from Sebastopol and when he left the army soon after the Crimean war he devoted himself entirely to literature.

His "War and Peace," a tale of the invasion of Russia by Napoleon in 1812, is regarded in Russia as being his masterpiece, though his "Anna Karenina," which appeared in 1876, and "The Cossacks" found greater favor abroad, where his "Kreutzer Sonata," translations of which were published in 1890, also attracted wide attention.

Tolstoy wrote much on education and published a number of short stories and reminiscences of childhood and youth, but of recent years he had devoted himself to religious teaching. He made "return not evil" the keystone of the Christian faith, and insisted that the literal interpretation of the Sermon on the Mount was the only rule of the Christian life. The religious views of Tolstoy were set forth in his "Christ's Christianity" and "My Religion."

In 1901 Tolstoy was excommunicated from the Catholic church.

Tolstoy was several times threatened with expulsion from Russia and was several times, according to report, upon the point of being exiled; but he seemed on the whole to have been treated with unusual leniency in view of his strongly pronounced views, especially as set forth in a manifesto entitled "The people's rights," his criticisms of imperial acts and his open letters to the emperor. He was, however, expelled from Moscow in July, 1901, and had since resided at Yasnaya Polyana.

In July, 1904, Tolstoy wrote a strong article denouncing the Russo-Japanese war, which caused the seizure of Novotzki of St. Petersburg, which published it and a revival of the reports of the government's intention to take severe action against the author.

In January, 1905, Tolstoy published an open letter to the emperor regarding the internal conditions in Russia, which was printed throughout the world, and some time later he completed his drama "Behind the Scenes in War," the production of which was prohibited in St. Petersburg.

Several of the publishers of Tolstoy's work have been sent to prison.

Although Tolstoy came of an aristocratic family, being a descendant of Count Peter Tolstoy, the friend and comrade of Peter the Great, and received his education at Kazan University, entering the army as a lieutenant of artillery and commanding a battery at Sebastopol, he was at heart a peasant in the best sense of the word, devoted to the improvement of the condition of the Russian masses and eager to lead them in the right path. He lived the life of a peasant, in a peasant's hut on his estate at Yasnaya Polyana, partaking only of the simple peasant's food and wearing the peasant's costume—rough blouse, broad leather belt, fur cap, long beard and wide trousers tucked into high cowhide boots.

But although Tolstoy chose the existence of a peasant, his family occupied the substantial family mansion on the Yasnaya Polyana estate not far from Tolstoy's peasant hut. Although he led a countryman's life, Tolstoy was a great reader and among his recreations were chess, cycling, lawn tennis and swimming.

Over 10,000 Train Fatalities Last Year.

Washington, Nov. 19.—The death toll of American railways for 1909, it was announced today, was 3,804 lives. This only accounts for deaths upon trains. The total of deaths upon railway rights of way was more than double that number. Of serious injuries sustained by passengers and employees for the same year there were 82,347.

This ratio of accidents is serving to stir the block signal and control board of the interstate commerce commission to renewed activity. The board, which was established in 1906, has busied itself with a study of the myriad safety devices and signal appliances, but has made no definite recommendation. So far only 12 out of 371 devices submitted for examination have been found of any utility. The board is now planning control devices. Three such devices have been selected for trial, and the first test will be made this fall. It is explained by Secretary Borland that only in winter can fair tests be made.

Abstracting the Abstract.

He was a huge man of the navy species and as he stood in the witness box, counsel eyed him dubiously. He knew he would be a hard nut to crack—a very hard nut, indeed.

"What we want to get at," he began, "is who was the aggressor?"

"Eh?" said the witness, puzzled.

"Let me illustrate my meaning," said counsel. "Supposing that I should meet you in the street, and strike you in the face, I should be the aggressor."

"You'd be a fool!" said the witness, with growing emphasis.

"No—no!" said counsel, with heightened color. "You don't understand. I was speaking only in abstract. Suppose we met, and, without provocation, I struck you, I should be committing an act of aggression."

The navy hunched his huge shoulders.

"You'd be committing suicide, mister," he remarked grimly.

"You may sit down," snapped counsel.

BRIEF ITEMS OF GENERAL NEWS.

A Week's Events of More or Less Interest to the Public.

Governor Brown has appointed ex-Governor J. M. Terrell United States senator from Georgia to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Clay.

The price of coffee is advancing. Shortage in the crop in Brazil, which furnishes the greater part of the world's supply and an unfavorable crop prospect is assigned as the cause.

The census reports the population of Memphis, Tenn., at 131,105, an increase of 28,785, or 23.1 per cent. since 1900. Knoxville has 36,346, an increase of 3,709, or 11.14 per cent. since 1900.

Dave McGill and John Whisnant, both colored, living in the vicinity of King's Mountain, quarreled over the sum of ten cents, which it was alleged one owed the other. McGill killed Whisnant and escaped.

The Mitchell county Chronicle says that Jeff. Burleson was found dead in the creek at Clarissa on the evening of the 9th. "He left Ed. Young's store," says the Chronicle, "where he was one of the judges in the election Tuesday, and next day his dead body was found in the creek."

Fire which originated in the second story of the Rose hotel, at St. Stephens, S. C., Thursday night practically destroyed that place. Ten stores and residences were wiped out, the merchants losing practically all their stock in addition to the buildings. The loss will aggregate about $50,000, while the insurance will amount to about $10,000.

The Citizen says that Mr. Z. T. Corpening, of Morganton, who was visiting his brother, W. G. Corpening, in Asheville, died suddenly Thursday afternoon. He was 62 years old and was formerly a railroad contractor. Three years ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis and since then had been in feeble health. A wife and child survive.

A large grist mill at Juno, in Leicester township, Euncomb county, belonging to Young Anderson, was totally destroyed by fire Wednesday night, entailing a loss of $6,000 with $2,000 insurance. About 2,000 bushels of wheat and corn were destroyed. The origin of the fire is a mystery. Since the mill was run by water power and there was no fire in the mill.

This year's census of the Russian empire adds another five millions to the population as enumerated in 1908. The czar's subjects now number 160,000,000 and increase every year by 2,500,000, despite wars, epidemics and internal disturbances. As there is no lack of cultured soil in Russia there seems to be no reason why this big annual increase should not continue.

The saloon has gone out of existence in Jersey City. By act of the Hudson county liquor dealers' association the word "saloon" is hereafter to be submitted, therefore the name heretofore commonly employed in connection with places devoted to the purveying of alcoholic refreshments passes out. Furthermore the bar tender has been done away with, now being officially known as a "server."

Returns indicate that the voters of Oregon have adopted a constitutional amendment which will give the voters of that state the privilege of expressing their preference for president and vice president in 1912 before the national convention of the Republican and Democratic parties are held. The state treasury will pay the expenses of the national convention delegates, who will be selected by the voters.

In Union county Superior court last week Judge W. R. Allen granted a new trial to George Mahew, colored, who was convicted of murder in the first degree with Charles B. Plyler, white, at the August term of court for killing Carter Parks. Mahew was not sentenced when Plyler was sentenced to the electric chair. Judge Allen stating at that time that he would hear a motion to set aside the verdict against Mahew at the next term of court. Mahew was released on $400 bond.

FIGHTING IN MEXICO.

Texas Rangers are Detailed to Guard the Border.

Laredo, Texas, Nov. 22.—Everything is quiet and tranquil in the extreme in this city, notwithstanding an undercurrent of intense interest in the possible outcome of the situation in Mexico, which is now in the acute stage of a struggle between the government and anti-government forces at various points throughout the republic.

So far as local conditions are concerned there is very little fear of an outbreak of any kind. The United States government has an increased force here, and the state rangers are also on the ground, in spite of the general belief that their services will not be needed.

Reports which were current last night of fighting in Gomez Palacie and Torreon, Mexico, are in part confirmed by Mexican officials and army officers stationed in Nuevo Laredo, although it is denied that the battles assumed serious proportions.

It is admitted that in battles between the insurrectionists and the Mexican troops at both places several deaths resulted, the loss of life being evenly divided on both sides. It is generally understood that the government forces succeeded in quelling the disturbances at both places. Reports current yesterday were to the effect that Torreon had fallen into the hands of the revolutionists. This is denied by army officers in Nuevo Laredo, who claim to be in touch with the situation so far as points in northern Mexico are concerned.

The Mexican and American army officers are working hand-in-hand to prevent the situation assuming more serious proportions along the border.

Fertilizer From the Air.

A New Industry Being Developed by the Southern Power Company.

Charlotte Observer.

The activity of the Southern Power Company in the direction of the manufacture of commercial fertilizer from the atmosphere at its great hydro-electric plants at Great Falls, S. C., by an electro-chemical process is something in which every American and certainly every Southerner should be keenly interested. In an address before the Engineering Society of the South some five or six years ago Mr. W. S. Lee, vice president and general manager of this company, voiced the belief that the day would come when every farmer residing in the general transmission field of any great hydro-electric plant, where surplus power was available at certain times of the year very cheap, could connect up his small individual plant and by means of this process manufacture as much fertilizer as he would need for the coming year. The saving of this plan may be appreciated when it is said that this manufacture of fertilizer could be achieved during the flood season of the winter or early spring, when the farmers would not be able to do outside work on their farms. The South, being still largely agricultural and a great consumer of commercial fertilizer, will reap a great correspondingly great benefit.

As previously stated, the Southern Power Company has arranged for the erection of a 4,000 horsepower plant at Great Falls the first of next year for the purpose of perfecting the process already acquired and adapting it for commercial utilization. The machinery, much of it had to be made abroad, is already on the way and the plant will probably be in shape for operation early in the summer. Experts employed by the company have been working on the process for the past four or five years and much of the groundwork looking towards its adoption has been achieved. In other words, when the first plant is finished, the Southern Power Company will be ready to go right ahead. That this is manifest is evidenced by the fact that a second plant is already being designed. This is to be of 20,000 horsepower capacity. With the completion of this plant and the development of the other water sites, bringing the total available power for consumption up to something like 200,000 horsepower, then an abundance of energy will be available for almost any demand, for manufacturing purposes, trolley development, city lighting, fertilizer production, etc.

The extraction of nitric acid and the manufacture of nitrates artificially from the air has been known for four or five years in the commercial stage, according to Prof. Sylvanus Thompson, D. Sc. F. R. S., who presided at the meeting of the Royal Society of Arts in London some time ago. Professor Thompson introduced to the society Henry Sam Eyde, of Christiania, Norway, who spoke of the well-known Birkeland-Eyde process for the extraction of nitrates from the atmosphere electrically, and in connection with his introduction, told something of the stages in the discovery of this revolutionizing process. Professor Thompson's remarks are herewith reproduced, for they apply with equal force to almost all inventions now perfected. And their application will be of interest in connection with the work of the Southern Power Company, for they will show that the so-called experimental stage has been passed and the question now is the adaptation of the invention to the peculiar conditions that obtain at the individual points.

More Than a Century Ago.

"In all industrial advances one naturally goes back to a beginning, and I suppose I would not be far wrong in saying that in every advance there are four or five stages."

There is first the initial stage of discovery, when it seemed comparatively unimportant, an addition to the useless knowledge of the world. Such a discovery was made by Cavendish 125 years ago when he found that the nitrogen of the air was oxidized by the electric spark.

And then came—often much later—the realization that apparently useless knowledge was of some importance and might have practical application.

And that happened about 1898 when Sir William Crookes dared to point out—prophet-like—that the time might come when the world's supply of food would be improved by the increase of population and the increase of the wheat-consuming peoples of the world, and when, therefore, agriculture would fail to keep pace with the food needs of mankind, unless new sources of artificial manures be discovered to replace the limited supply of natural fertilizing agents. For it was too well known that the supply of nitrate of soda from Chili was limited, and would come to an end before long.

Technical Realization.

The third stage was that of technical relation. The inventor came along and discovered the way of putting the piece of useless knowledge into shape.

And here enters a gentleman whose name is well-known to science, Professor Birkeland, whose researches began with the aurora borealis and turned on the question of the effect of producing electrical discharges in the presence of a magnetic field. He observed a remarkable and singular electric flame, which at once appeared to him to lend itself to new developments. Calling to his aid, Herr Eyde, an engineer of great experience, they together perfected the particular electric arc furnaces in which air could be burned electrically.

The nitrogen of the atmosphere, inert in itself, combined with a portion of the oxygen, and as a result gases were produced which could be absorbed and turned into nitric acid or nitrate of lime.

Commercialization.

"Then came the stage of commercialization. The invention having been made it was put into operation on a sufficiently large scale. And in the exploitation of the invention our friends of Norway showed themselves amply equal to the occasion."

"Several years ago I had the opportunity of visiting the first little factory in Notodden, which has since developed into a very large place, utilizing many thousands of horsepower in the production of the new nitrate of lime and thus the great commercial development of the new industry has begun."

"Lastly there is the stage of the utilization of the products of the new industry where the question has turned on their agricultural value and their value in other industries, such as the manufacture of explosives, and of coal tar products. Thus it is a very industry, which has made itself felt and is still making itself in different directions which has appealed to a very large section of the civilized world."

With this preface, the Journal of the Royal Arts Society proceeds to print a paper by Herr Sam Eyde, explaining in very lucid fashion on the essential details of the Birkeland-Eyde process, which in general is claimed to be similar in principle to the majority of other processes.

A few extracts of this address are herewith reproduced. Said Herr Eyde:

The Basic Principle.

"I venture here to express my belief that, however many systems may be discovered in the future, and whatever improvements any of these systems may effect, with regard either to the product or the method of production, they will all, in a greater or lesser degree, require to employ large quantities of energy in the electric arc."

"In order to explain the Birkeland-Eyde method, it is necessary first to describe the flames, consisting of arcs of light, which are used in the electric furnaces."

"The formation of the flames occurs through an arc of the electric flame being formed between the points of the electrodes, which are close to each other. By this an easily movable and flexible current is established, which with the arrangements made, will be found in a highly magnetized field. The electric arc that has been formed moves on account of this magnetic field with great velocity perpendicularly to the lines of the force and the electric arcs foot draws back from the point of the electrodes. When the length of the electric arc increases, the electric resistance becomes greater and the tension increases, until it becomes so great that a new electric arc starts from the points of the electrodes."

"To regulate the current, an inductive resistance is used in series with the flame. With alternating current, all these arcs are formed in opposite directions and appear to the eye to be circular discs. It appears that we have discovered in this flame a powerful technical means for the oxidation of the nitrogen of the air. The flame in our furnaces burns with a steadiness that is really astonishing."

Circular Chamber.

"On electrodes of 1.5 cm. thick copper tubing, through which water passes for cooling them, one can take up over 1,500 horsepower with a flame 1.8 m. in diameter. The chamber in which the flame burns is circular, of only a few centimeters width, and about 2 meters diameter. After the oxide of nitrogen is formed in the furnace, it is converted in the oxidation tank into dioxide of nitrogen and in the absorption towers into nitric acid. From furnaces no larger than could be held in the hand and which took an energy of some few horsepowers, we have attained types which can, as mentioned, take an energy of over 1,500 horsepower, and from absorption apparatus of glass globes of a few litres capacity of 600 cubic metres each. We have in the course of this period of developing our method had four experimental stations. The first attempts were made at Foognerkilans factory in 1903."

Other Details.

This general description of the flames was followed by a description of the furnace house, its temperatures, steam boiler house, the cooling chambers, where a suitable absorption is obtained, and then the oxidation tanks and finally the absorption towers, from which issued as a liquid in to a granite cistern, whence it is repeatedly pumped up into the towers in order to acquire a sufficient strength. Of course details were mentioned as the contents and arrangements of these chambers and towers and the chemical changes that occurred in each. The last product appeared as a brittle, crystalline mass which in the crushing machines became a white granular substance, nitrate of lime.

Nitrate of Soda.

"It now remains only to mention the further treatment of the nitrate formed in the alkaline towers. When this is pumped away from the towers, it contains, besides nitrate and water, also some nitrite of soda, and bicarbonate."

The further process is designed to separate the pure nitrate from the other substances. This is accomplished by first boiling away some of the water, which is done, as in the case of the nitrate solution, heated by the steam boilers, heated by the furnace gases. The nitrate solution, concentrated to a suitable boiling state, is run into crystallization pans, in which the crystallization of the ni-trite takes place. The crystals are separated by centrifugal means and are conveyed by a screw transporter to a drying apparatus, where they are subjected to a current of hot air. The finished product is then run into cases containing 800 kilos each. These are likewise made in our own shops. This nitrate of soda is used as the raw material in the manufacture of certain kind of aniline colors. The manufacture of nitrite is carried on in a special building."

"In the entire process of manufacture, both of nitrite and nitrate, no coal is used; all the machinery is worked by electric power, and for heating and evaporating the nitrate and nitrite solutions the only steam employed is that obtained by the hot gases passing through a system of steam boilers."

"We are, moreover, in our industry, not confined to the two products hitherto mentioned, nitrate of lime and nitrate of soda; we have possibilities for the development of a whole series of new industries, of which I will especially name the production of nitric acid, nitrate of ammonium, nitrate of potassium and others."

"We have succeeded, in conjunction with the Nobel (nitro glycerine) syndicate in concentrating our weak acids, by means of gases from our furnaces, to acids of high percentage which can be transported."

Agriculture.

"In recent years a number of well known men and institutes connected with agriculture have undertaken numerous experiments for the purpose of testing the effect of the nitrate of lime under various climatic and other conditions and on various kinds of soils. These trials have been made in Norway, Sweden, France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Italy and also in the United Kingdom."

"All the experiments have fully confirmed the expectation which was held forth by men of science when this new manure first appeared, viz., that one pound of nitrogen in the form of nitrate of lime had the same effect, both in quality and quantity as a similar amount of nitrogen in the shape of nitrate of soda, or, in other words, that nitrate of lime is equal to nitrate of soda as a manure."

"At times, variations may be observed one way or the other, in one case in favor of nitrate of soda, in another in favor of nitrate of lime. But especially in soils deficient in lime, the nitrate of lime has proved superior."

His Dishonesty Inherited.

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 17.—"Inherited dishonesty" was the plea made by Leroy Roush, of Pittsburg, when arraigned on charges of burglary and forgery. "I remember nothing of the occurrence," he told the recorder. "I was drinking. My grandfather, when drinking, would commit crimes unwittingly, and I have inherited the tendency to be dishonest when drinking." The novel plea did not save him from being held for the grand jury.

Not Sorry For Blunder.

"If my friends hadn't blundered in thinking I was a doomed victim of consumption, I might not be alive now," writes D. T. Sanders, of Harrodsburg, Ky., "but for years they saw every attempt to cure a lung-racking cough fail. At last I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. The effect was wonderful. It soon stopped the cough and I am now in better health than I have had for years. This wonderful life-saver is an unrivaled remedy for coughs, colds, la-grippe, asthma, croup, hemorrhages, whooping cough or weak lungs. 50c, $1. Trial bottle free. THE DAIRY COW.

Does More Than Bring Financial Success to Her Owner.

The dairy cow does more than bring financial success to the dairy farmer. She makes him a better citizen than he would otherwise be. Her influence upon home conditions is a most pleasing contribution to those factors which are responsible for the changed conditions which prevail in the farm homes of today. Thousands of these homes are now characterized by comfort and happiness where formerly they were blighted by drudgery and unhappiness.

Better financial conditions have contributed to this change, and the dairy cow has been in no small measure responsible. She has contributed in still another way. The dairy cow teaches kindness. Her owner soon learns that only by treating her kindly can he secure the highest possible returns from her, and she responds quickly to kind words and proper care. Her disposition is one that the human family might well emulate. She is patient and long suffering, acquiescing meekly in the arrangements made by her owner for carrying on the dairy business, striving at all times to repay him for every effort made for her care and comfort.

The members of the family, as they come in contact with her and her kindly disposition, are influenced for good. As they appreciate the financial benefit to come from caring for her well they take a deeper interest in her. In doing so they unconsciously cultivate those qualities which make them better citizens.

The dairy cow—the prototype of man's best friend—is wielding a greater influence than she is generally credited with. She has always been found in the front ranks in the march of civilization and no agricultural country can long prosper without her. She is a potent factor in the upbuilding of such a country, financially and socially, and a wise people will appreciate her and encourage the industry of which she is the foundation.

SAVING THE RACE.

"Eugenics" is a word better known perhaps in Great Britain, where Sir Francis Galton, the distinguished relative of Darwin, continues in his old age to preach the doctrine that he founded, than it is in this country. But eugenics—call it a theory, doctrine, religion, what you will—has one enthusiastic devotee at least on this side of the water in the person of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, who spoke to his congregation of the Free Synagogue on the subject of race culture at Carnegie hall, in New York, a few days ago.

"Eugenics aims to emphasize parental responsibility and to bring about the quickening and guidance, if not control, of such sense of responsibility by the state," he told an intelligent audience. "The science of eugenics has suffered because of the confusion of the terms race suicide and race culture. Between race culture and race suicide there is a difference between earnestly bent upon bettering and perpetuating itself and a race not only too indolent to concern itself with remote posterity, but even too basely self-indulgent to be ready to bear the burden of parenthood."

"Eugenics demands the birth of children well born, normally born—that is, born to an hereditary and environment that are likely to promise a normal and wholesome life. Nothing is as important and inclusive as the right of the child to be well born; nothing can wholly repair the wrong done to a child that is still-born. No question can be more truly religious than the question which, rightly answered, means the bringing to pass the birth of a generation that shall be better fitted to live and that shall not only find its worth living, but be enabled to live worthily."

"For centuries the second commandment has been viewed as symptomatic of the vindictiveness of the God of Israel, and now we find that is nothing more than the utterance of a scientific truth. The sins of the fathers are visited upon the children, unto the third and fourth generation."

"It is eugenics that would avert race suicide, that would make it impossible by virtue of its concern with the problem that the largest number of the right kind of children be born and not any number of any kind of children. It is an attempt to restore the dignity of motherhood. We must go back to the apothecis of motherhood of every mother who shares in the civic order, processes which give life to man and man to life."

"It may prove to be the function of eugenics to remodel our educational ideas, but, as Havelock Ellis has said, it matters comparatively little what sort of an education we give our children; the primary matter is what sort of children we have to educate. We have no greater need than to recognize that education must include preparation for the supreme duty of parenthood."

"Eugenic science insists upon a thorough education for our youth touching sex hygiene and sex physiology, and if we can't get lady teachers for this we will get women teachers. Women shall yet be as deeply concerned in their future husbands' moral standards as the fathers in their son-in-laws' financial standing."

"Eugenics will undoubtedly give rise to a new statesmanship that shall help us to a true conception of national wealth and national health, that shall move us to understand that the nation is richest that contains the largest number of well-born, healthy, contented, upright citizens. It may yet teach England to understand that the chief thing is not to reduce the number of Germans, but to see to it that more Englishmen are born of the right kind. Society will come to realize that it is under the necessity of protecting itself against the perpetuation of incurable diseases—physical, mental, and moral—by making it impossible for those who are so afflicted to reproduce their kind."

He went on to show how this theory of living would completely eliminate child labor, so it would force the state to regulate for its own advantage the work of women and prophesied that some day the state would be "wise enough to pension a needy mother who gives life to another, and who can alone be the maintainer of that life—a pension, not through life, but adequate for maintenance during the crucial years of dependent childhood."

ECONOMY KITCHIN'S SLOGAN.

Hon. Claude Kitchin, the representative in the lower house of Congress from the Second North Carolina district, who is recognized as one of the ablest and most formidable debaters in the national legislative body, has some pronounced ideas as to what the Democratic house of representatives should do in an effort to check Republican extravagance. In discussing the matter with a Washington newspaper correspondent Tuesday, Mr. Kitchin expressed the opinion that, while the Democratic house was elected in the belief that there would be an honest revision of the tariff, there were other influences that prompted the voters to deprive the Republican party of power. The reckless extravagance of the Republicans, which has been increasing yearly, was not overlooked by the intelligent voter, "and I for one shall urge economy and retrenchment at every turn in the sixty-second Congress," said Mr. Kitchin. "As soon as the Democratic caucus meets I shall introduce a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee to weed out the useless offices around the house of representatives. Year after year the Republicans have put additional employees on the payroll, and now they are so numerous that a member can hardly make his way around the building without treading on their heels. I am abolishing these useless positions I am satisfied we can effect an annual saving of $200,000. The new Democratic house must show the nation that it did not seek power for the sake of patronage. How better could we encompass the demand for economical government than by striking down less, extravagant and dead to all back and call?" Continuing, Mr. Kitchin said:

"The Democratic party in the next house should follow the example of the late Samuel J. Tilden, and give the people an economical government. Fifteen years in undisputed power has made the Republican party reckless, extravagant and dead to all pleas for economy. Expenses have piled up year after year with little justification. We ought to investigate every department and see how things have been going. Graft and extravagance must be exposed. Such investigations will better enable us to put into effect economy in the government service."

The name of the excellent and wholesome religious weekly paper published in this city by Rev. J. F. McCulloch as the organ of the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Protestant church has been changed from Our Church Record to the Methodist Protestant Herald. The Patriot wishes for both the editor and the paper the greatest degree of prosperity. We trust that the Methodist Protestant Herald may receive the measure of support deserved by Our Church Record.

Our friendly neighbor, the Daily Record, celebrated its twentieth birthday a few days ago, and while it failed to adorn itself with frills and furbelows, a few of its friends did not forget the record's birthday. The Patriot hopes that the Record will continue under its present management for at least a century and that the hand of Editor Reese will never become palsied.

It develops that the Democrats will have a majority of 63 in the house of the sixty-second Congress, which will convene on the first Monday in December, 1911.

One Consolation.

During the time he acted as United States consul in Glasgow Bret Harte occasionally indulged in a day's sport with the gun, and it was during one of his shooting excursions that the humorist met, with an accident which might have disfigured him for the remainder of his life, his face being badly cut through the recoil of an overloaded gun. Fortunately the doctor's skill prevented him from being permanently marked.

Writing about the occurrence to his friend, T. Edgar Pemberton, who quotes the letter in his "Tribute to Bret Harte," the novelist concludes his letter by telling of an amusing effort which was made to console him on account of the accident.

"When the surgeon was stitching me together," he wrote, "the son of the house, a boy of twelve, came timidly to the door of my room."

"Told Mr. Bret Harte it's all right," he said. "He killed the hare."

CURIOUS COLOR NAMES.

There Was Once an Extensive Group of Flea Shades.

"Flea," which was for a long time the name given an exceedingly popular hue, is when translated from the French simply "flea." It appears that the accidental admission of a flea at a court festivity in France and the subsequent discovery and capture of the uninvited guest gave rise to a host of jokes and anecdotes, and so a new color was jocularly named in the insect's honor. Indeed, there was an extensive group of flea shades—old flea, young flea, flea's foot, lively flea and others. Flea, which was a kind of drab, is still familiar to the reading public through its frequent mention in literature, drama and letters of noted personages in the past.

Few of us, however, know anything of the following colors, each of which was a favorite in its day and as familiar to the speech of fashionable ladies and gentlemen as are the cerise, old rose, etc., of our own time. Here is a little list of them:

Marathon blue, drooping poppy, green of the Oreads, triumph of Aspasia, robe of Venus, bridal blush, canary's tail, merry hunter, flying chaff, dolphin about to die, thundercloud, innocent infant, caterpillar brown, fading hope, Cinderella russet, smoke of Vesuvius, penitent hermit, dissolving pearl, Cupid's feather, captain's glory, beautiful savage, ambushes wild beast, rose of Eden, faithful shepherd, weary traveler's shoe, agitated nymph and dream of the beloved one pink.—Exchange.

SLIPS IN WRITING.

Curious Blunders Made by Reporters and Correspondents.

Every once in awhile some school-teacher comes forward with a list of ludicrous mistakes made in composition by her infant charges. The following laughable "breaks" were not made by school children, but by newspaper reporters and correspondents. Writing is their business, but they often make ridiculous mistakes in the haste of "catching an edition."

In a story about a mad dog scare on Staten Island the reporter wrote, "Police-man Jones drove the dog into a bush and killed it."

The head of a prominent Wall street house, in telling about the action of the directors of a certain company, was quoted as saying, "It came like a cannon ball out of a clear sky."

The report of the result of a damage suit: "Carmini Carusini was awarded a verdict of $2,000 for injuries received by the jury from the Erie Railroad company."

This from a Brooklyn reporter: "He tried to end his life by suicide."

This one might have been due to an error in typewriting: "The girl was afflicted with typhoid fever."

A correspondent in a small town on Long Island, evidently laboring under great excitement, wired, "Mrs. George K. Blank was the heroine of the holocaust." (She played a garden hose on a burning barn.) In further describing the blaze he said, "The flames swept into furious environment."—New York World.

NOISE OF THUNDER.

Due to Heating of Gases Along the Line of Electric Discharge.

To Professor Trowbridge we owe an experiment to explain the noise of thunder. It has usually been thought that the noise is caused by the closing up of the vacuum created by the passage of lightning, the air rushing in from all sides with a clap, but the intensity of the noise is rather disproportionate, and it is now supposed that the thunder is due to the intense heating of the gases, especially the gas of water vapor along the line of the electric discharge, and the consequent conversion of suspended moisture into steam at enormous pressure.

In this way the crackle with which a peal of thunder sometimes begins might be regarded as the sound of steam explosions on a small scale, caused by inductive discharges before the main flash. The rumble would be the overlapping steam explosions, and the final clap, which soundest loudest, would be the steam explosion nearest to the auditor. In the case of rumbling thunder the lightning is passing from cloud to cloud. When the flash passes from the earth to the clouds the clap is loudest at the beginning.

Professor Trowbridge gave substance to these suppositions by causing electric flashes to pass from point to point through terminals clothed in soaked cotton wool, and he succeeded in magnifying the crackle of the electric spark to a terrifying extent.—London Graphic.

THE BIG DIPPER.

It is the Hour Hand of the Woodman's Celestial Clock.

The pole star is really the most important of the stars in our sky. It marks the north at all times. It alone is fixed in the heavens. All the other stars seem to swing around it once in twenty-four hours.

But the pole star of Polaris is not a very bright one, and it would be hard to identify but for the help of the so-called pointers in the "Big Dipper," or "Great Bear." The outer rim of the dipper points nearly to Polaris at a distance equal to three times the space that separates the two stars of the dipper's outer side. Various Indians called the pole star the "Home Star" and the "Star That Never Moves," and the dipper they call the "Broken Back." The "Great Bear" is also to be remembered as the pointers for another reason. It is the hour hand of the woodman's clock. It goes once around the north star in about twenty-four hours, the reverse way of the hands of a watch—that is, it goes the same way as the sun—and for the same reason—that it is the earth that is going and leaving them behind.—Country Life in America.

Force of an Oil Well.

Oil has been ejected from the Bakken wells with such force and accompanied with so much sand that steel blocks twelve inches thick placed over the mouth of the well to deflect the flow were perforated in a few hours and had to be replaced. The casing with which the wells were lined was often torn to shreds and eventually collapsed, and hundreds of thousands of tons of sand which accumulated in the vicinity necessitated the services of large bodies of workmen.—London Mail.

G. M. Kimrey has moved into his beautiful new home on the Siler City road.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Yow, of Greensboro, came down last week to visit Mrs. B. S. Scott.

It is said that a thousand colonies of bees are called into service annually in the cucumber greenhouses of Massachusetts to carry the fertilizing pollen from blossom to blossom.

A soil supplied with humus is not only richer and better suited to producing plant growth than one that is not, but holds the moisture which it receives far better and does not pack or bake.

In latitudes where the snowfall is not usually heavy and the winter weather severe it will be better for the lawn grass if the leaves are allowed to lie during the winter as they fall from the trees.

There is no particular connection between the manure spreader and the telephone, yet both have had a whole lot to do with making farm work more endurable and life on the farm more cheery and enjoyable.

Blackleg is a disease which usually affects calves and young stock only. It is incurable by any treatment known at present, but may be prevented by vaccination, a job that should be performed by a competent veterinarian.

There is little excuse that can be made for the type of shiftlessness and poor management so often noticed in the use of a good part of the worth of the winter fire drying out green wood that ought to have been cured and seasoned in the summer sun.

When alkalis are present in the soil of semiarid sections in quantities which will cause trouble when water is applied on the land the fact is often indicated by the presence of the greasewood, while the presence of the creosote bush is usually accepted as evidence that alkali is not present in harmful quantities.

Now that the leaves will soon be off the apple and other fruit trees it is a good idea to make a tour of inspection for the purpose of bolting up any splits in the trunks or big limbs as well as painting over scars left by heavy pruning in order to prevent checking and decay of the exposed wood.

An observing chap down in Rhode Island—we think it is—claims to have noticed that a hen housed near some pigeons gradually laid smaller and smaller eggs until they were but little larger than those of the pigeons. He thinks it is a case of imitation and a bad environment and has decided to continue her near the geese to see if he can get her to reverse the process.

The chief defect with this socialistic idea that all property ought to be divided equally is that if it were thus distributed tonight by tomorrow night there would be a large number of witless, improvident, shiftless chaps who had squandered all they had and would be asking for another distribution or hanging around at their neighbors' back doors, asking for a hand-out.

To an exceptional degree hog raisers of the country have sustained fewer losses from hog cholera or plague the past year than for a long time past. The situation is doubtless due to the high prices of corn, moderate feeding of immature corn last fall, but perhaps more than all to greater care in the matter of providing sanitary quarters and giving intelligent care, while the prompt inoculation of affected herds or hanging around at their neighbors' back doors, asking for a hand-out.

That the Plymouth Rock breed still ranks as the most popular fowl in the United States is shown in the report of the secretary of the American Poultry association for the year 1909, which states that in the poultry shows of that year there were 12,000 entries of Plymouth Rocks, 10,000 Wyandottes and 8,000 Leghorns, with Rhode Island Reds and Orpingtons ranking next in order. It is likely that these exhibit entries are fairly representative of the total number of these several varieties kept in the country.

The health of the home during the winter months does not depend half so much on having a competent physician engaged as it does in making the house sweet and clean from cellar to garret—particularly cellar—and letting in just as much of the health giving outside sunshine and fresh air as possible. These are the worst competitors the medical fraternity have yet, and slightly few folks are awake to the fact. There should be abundance of fresh air in all the sleeping rooms at night and a thorough airing out of the living rooms at least once a day.

If the herd bull on the farm was called on more often than he is to furnish motor power which is often supplied by wind or gasoline he would not only more fully meet his owner's expectations as a progenitor of healthy offspring, but would be far more civil and gentle and safer to have around.

A hen which has a record of close to 250 eggs, whose case has lately been reported in agricultural papers, persists during the winter months in roosting in a cold but well ventilated scratching shed when the warmer hen house is available as a shelter for the night. Quite likely her vigor and healthy constitution are in part due to the fresh air she thus gets in generous quantities.

During the year 1908 it cost the government $2,536,098, or 1 1/2 cents per acre, to administer and protect the 143 national forests in the nineteen states and territories and Alaska. Of the above amount $502,169 was spent for improvements of a permanent character, including the construction of 3,400 miles of trails, 100 miles of wagon roads, 3,200 miles of telephone lines and 40 miles of fire lines.

The Chinese or golden pheasant has proved an exception to the general rule that imported game birds have not thrived under conditions which prevail in the United States. In the instance mentioned, however, the mild climate prevailing on the Pacific slope has furnished a very congenial home for the oriental bird, and it is increasing in numbers rapidly under the laws which have been passed for its protection.

It is estimated that floods and freshets in the United States do damage totaling fully $100,000,000 annually. Doubtless a part of this loss is unavoidable. All too great a part, however, is traceable to the wanton strippling and denuding of vast forest areas on creek and river watersheds. Unfortunately the cure—re-forestation—can only be effected by a slow and tedious process which will call for much faith and painstaking labor.

With one pound of corn worth four pounds of potatoes in point of feeding value, a bushel of potatoes would be worth as feed just one-fourth of the price of a bushel of corn. Were this 60 cents the tubers would be worth for feeding purposes 15 cents. Potatoes make an excellent ration for hogs and when fed should be given in a ration of about twenty pounds of potatoes to ten of corn, with a pound of tankage to furnish the needed protein. If the corn is fed ground the tankage should be mixed with it and the potatoes fed raw, or all may be cooked and mixed if one is fixed for it.

In the enthusiasm of the very wholesome and commendable "back to the land" movement which is just now receiving a good deal of attention it may be in point to suggest that a large measure of success will hardly be achieved in a tillage of the soil or in horticultural lines by those who through lack of brains, initiative or energy have made a dismal failure of every other business enterprise in which they have embarked. The returns from agricultural and allied pursuits are generous, but only in proportion to intelligent, persistent and well directed effort. The realm of agriculture is no place for weaklings or incompetents.

The secret of winter eggs lies not in newfangled recipe or nostrum, but in two very practical considerations—making the hens scratch for what they get and in feeding them such rations as will most readily supply the ingredients contained in the eggs which they are expected to lay—namely, bran, oats, a little oilmeal, tankage, clover and alfalfa, with grit for grinding, lime for eggshells and enough corn to provide the yolks. For the service which she is expected to perform the hen needs a balanced ration, as does the dairy cow, and neither should be expected to do much on a ration fit for the steer in the feeding lot.

A lot of farmers have considerable grief on their hands this fall in the shape of fields infested with noxious weeds of one kind or another through penny wise economy in the purchase of their grass seeds last spring. It seems to be a hard lesson to learn that there is nothing gained in the end by scrimping on the price of grass seeds, and the only way some fellows seem to be able to get the idea into their noddies is to have a dose of grief of the kind above referred to. Experience of this character is a mighty dear school, but there is a class of men who will learn in no other. The philosopher who originated the "experience is a dear school" epigram called them "fools."

In making plans for the new kitchen addition it is well to remember that it is just as easy to make the mistake of getting it too large as too small. Whatever else it is, it should be convenient, with as little space as possible just to chase around on and to keep mopped and swept. Of the improvements in the kitchen which have in view saving labor the most valuable will be an abundant water supply and drainage facilities from the sink which will do away with the necessity of emptying pails. If it is near the good wife's birthday she would appreciate no practical present more than a kitchen cabinet, which she will use every day in the year and which will save much time and many steps. There are other conveniences which may be included in the kitchen economy, but the three named will go a long way toward simplifying the work.

A TIMELY BULLETIN.

At the close of a season when forest fires have exacted the heaviest toll in forest wealth, buildings and human life in many years the bulletin recently put in print by Chief Forester Graves is very timely, treating, as it does, of forest fires and the best methods of effective control. After stating that, while the conditions can never be eliminated which make forest fires possible, they can be largely prevented and the damage kept down to a very small amount Mr. Graves says:

"A careful supervision of patrol during the dry season is one of the most important measures in organized forest protection. This makes possible carrying out one of the most fundamental principles in fire protection—namely, detecting fires and attacking them in their incipency." After pointing out the value of lookouts, telephone and signal communication and the several methods of control the forester continues: "The principles of fighting forest fires are essentially the same as those recognized in fighting fires in cities, the following points being of great importance: First, quick arrival at fire; second, an adequate force; third, proper equipment; fourth, a thorough organization of the fighting crew, and, fifth, skill in attacking and fighting the fires. The efficiency of a fire fighting crew depends very largely on its skill and experience, and particularly on the skill and experience of the man directing the work. It is not only a matter of knowing how to assign each man where his work will be most effective, but judgment must be exercised in determining the general method of attack. This will depend upon the character of the forest, the condition of the atmosphere and strength and direction of the wind."

"Surface fires may be extinguished by beating, by throwing loose earth on them and by other methods, but when under headway the heat is so intense that it is impossible to meet it directly. One method under such circumstances is to direct the course of the fire. The attack is made on the sides near the front, separating the forward portion of the fire from the main wings. A part of the crew attacks the forward part, and others run down and extinguish the wings. The front of the fire attacked from the sides is forced gradually and constantly into a narrow path. Usually the front can be directed toward some cleared space, stream or other fire barrier. This plan of giving direction to a fire has often been successfully carried out when the fighting crew has been too small for a direct attack. In case of fires which have gained headway and are moving rapidly back firing is often necessary, but this method should be used only when absolutely necessary. In such cases a point should be selected in front of the fire from which to set the new fire. This must be a point where it is safe to start a back fire, such as a road, fire line, stream or other barrier. The leaves should be ignited at intervals of from five feet to a rod covering a distance not greater than the estimated width of the head of the fire. The small fires meet and form a continuous line, eating back against the wind. A part of the crew is stationed across the road or other break to extinguish small fires started from the back fires. This usually stops the head of the main fire, when the wings can be put out in the ordinary manner." The bulletin concludes with the statement that "a fire is never out until the last spark is extinguished, as often a log or snag will smolder unnoticed after the flames have apparently been consumed, only to break out afresh with a rising wind. After the fire fighting crew has left the ground it is always well to assign at least one man to patrol the edge of the burnt area until it is certain that the fire is entirely out."

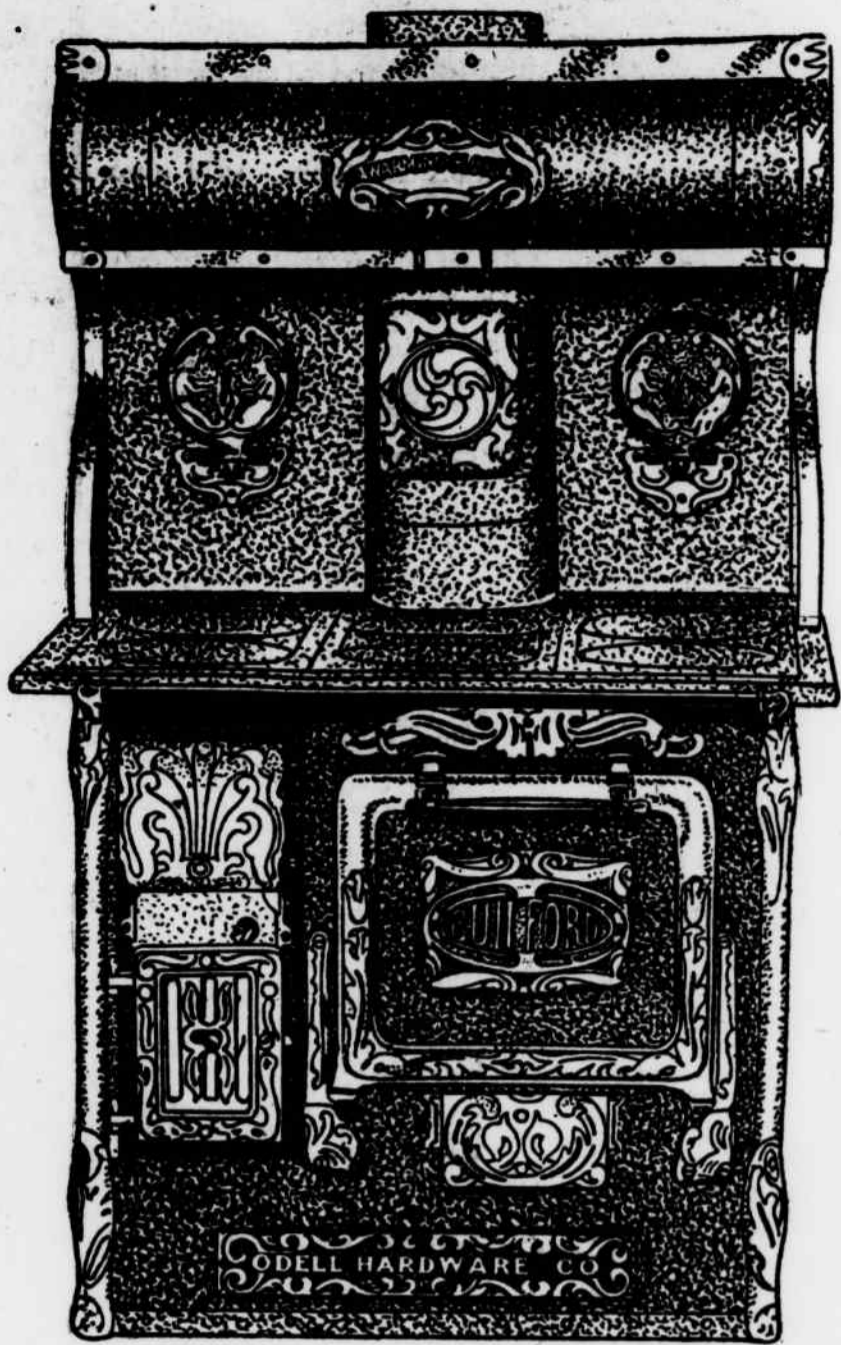

CAUSE FOR THANKSGIVING.

Now that a sort of birdseye view of the season's crop operations can be had it is clear that the effects of the widely extended midsummer drought were not so serious as anticipated. While the yield of small grains was materially reduced in some sections, not in a couple of decades has grain quality been better than that harvested in the season just closed, while in many sections the yield also was all that could be desired. The great staple, corn, is up to record levels in the matter of yield, while an unusually long ripening season will insure an excellent quality. If seed corn in abundance and of excellent germinating powers is not on hand next spring it will not be chargeable to the weather or Providence, but to carelessness in storing in a damp place. Instead of potatoes going to the two dollar mark, as seemed likely the first week of August, when they were $1.40, the late rains came just in time, and hundreds of fields from which little return was expected yielded bountiful crops, and prices for the producers are now hanging around 50 cents. Whatever earlier promise of field and garden may have been, there will be the usual real ground for rejoicing at Thanksgiving time. In a vast majority of homes there will be the conventional turkey, or its substitute, and plum pudding and cranberry sauce. As the day is celebrated it should prove a reminder of the blessing of living in a land of prodigious fertility, of favorable climatic conditions and an economic order which makes it possible for the laborer as a general rule to reap a fair return for his season's labors.

Health Talks For Public Schools.

No. 2—Our Chief Asset.

The relation of health to progress is well brought out by Professor Irving Fisher in National Vitality. He says: "Just as in warfare it is not so much the gun as the man behind the gun that makes for success, so in industry, as Doctor Shadwell has shown, skill, knowledge, and inventiveness are the chief factors in determining commercial success and supremacy. The backward nations, like China, are characterized by lack of modern inventions. The nations which are industrially most advanced have the railway, the steamship, the power loom, metal working, and innumerable arts and crafts. The change of Japan from a backward to a forward nation is at bottom the introduction of inventions. . . . Future industrial competition will be increasingly a contest of invention. The world rivalry to develop the best system of wireless telegraphy or the best airships is but one example. The future will see the greatest strides taken by the nation which is the most inventive. Now, the primary condition of invention is vitality, a clear brain in a normal body. It is no accident that Edison is a health culturist, or that Krupp, Westinghouse and other pioneers in industrial development have been men of vigor of mind and body. . . . Finally, the conservation of health will promote the conservation of other resources by keeping and strengthening the faculty of foresight. One cause of poverty in the individual and the nation is lack of foresight."

"One of the greatest symptoms of racial degeneracy is decay of foresight. Normal, healthy men care for and provide for their descendants. A normal, healthy race of men, and such alone, will enact the laws or develop the public sentiment needed to conserve natural resources for generations yet unborn. When in Rome foresight was lost, care for future generations practically ceased. Physical degeneracy brought with it mental and intellectual degeneracy. Instead of conserving their resources the spendthrift Romans, from the emperor down, began to feed on their colonies and to eat up their capital. Instead of building new structures they used their old Colosseum as a quarry and a metal mine. . . . The value of health is the value of man. And what is the value of the average man? Man, like any other animal—like the sheep, or cow, or horse—has an economic value. A half century ago men capable of furnishing only the cheapest labor—unskilled labor—were bought and sold at from $750 to $1,000 apiece. The average immigrant pays taxes, and produces property on which others pay taxes, thereby increasing the government's revenue to the extent of an amount equal to the interest on a principal of $875. The value, therefore, of the newly landed immigrant is $875. Experts on fixing values basing their estimates on statistics applying to hundreds of thousands of individual lives, have found that the average American produces $200 more than he consumes. The first assets of the United States would be $2,000,000,000 lives x $2,900, the value of each, or $5,800,000,000,000. The material wealth of our country, estimated by a government expert, amounts to $108,000,000,000."

But, "is not the body more than pigment and life more than meat?" Man is more than an animal; man has in addition to his economic value—a humanitarian value. Surely, the value existing in all, but in such quantity as to stand out in bold relief in the lives of Washington, Lincoln, Franklin, Lee, Pasteur, Shakespeare and Tennyson, can not be reduced to cold, dead metal. Who can estimate the world's loss had any of these made one of the deaths from preventable disease which destroys 25 per cent. of all people before their twentieth year is reached? Who can compute the world's loss when untimely and preventable tuberculosis cut off in their prime John Paul Jones, Robert Louis Stevenson, John Keats, Schiller, Von Weber, Chopin, Pichat, Laennec, Timmer, Artimus Ward, Thoreau, and many others? And yet how many of us as these do we bury every year with the forty thousand babies dead of preventable disease—the sacrifice of our boasted civilization to the Moloch of ignorance and indifference? Think of the unnecessary infant graves over which might truthfully be inscribed,

"Some mute, insidious Milton here may rest,
Some Cromwell guiltless of his country's blood."

WITNESSED THE BATTLE.

Indiana Man Who Saw Battle of Guilford Court House.

To the Editor of The Patriot:

You will confer a great favor if you will allow the enclosed to appear in your paper, both the letter from Mr. A. B. Andrews, Jr., and the extract from the Charlotte Democrat of 1874. I trust you will agree with me that they will prove of interest to your many readers and most helpful to the battle ground enterprise. I am especially interested at this time in enlisting the helpful interest of the public press in this cause, as the Morehead bill in the lower house has for the first time received notice and has been pushed to a favorable report. Though since 1902 this bill for a donation to the grounds has been repeatedly passed in the senate, and I have heard from parties high in authority in the house intimate that there was no use in spending money when there was no considerable body of the people wanting it. In view of the fact our public press, individuals and the legislature have persistently manifested the greatest interest in the reclamation of this famous North Carolina revolutionary field (his opinion is unaccountable. This bill gives the state for these grounds $30,000, and comes up for its final passage in the house at its next session.

JOSEPH M. MOREHEAD.

November 11, 1910.

Major Joseph M. Morehead,
Greensboro, N. C.

My Dear Sir—Looking over the files of some bound volumes of newspapers at the state library, I came across the issue of the Charlotte Democrat of June 22, 1874, which contained the enclosed item in regard to William Ross, who was then living near Bloomington, Indiana, aged 115, and was an eye-witness of the Battle of Guilford Court House.

Thinking you might be interested to see the item, I have taken the liberty of copying it and herewith enclose you the same.

With kindest and best regards, I am Very truly yours,
A. B. ANDREWS, JR.

Copied from third page of Charlotte Democrat, June 22, 1874:

A North Carolinian Now Living in Indiana Who Saw the Battle of Guilford Court House.

To the Editor of the Louisville (Ky.) Journal:

Having noticed in several journals articles claiming for the various localities the honor of having in their midst the "oldest voter," I concluded to put in the claims of Monroe county, Indiana.

Near Bloomington lives an old friend, William Ross who, according to his own account and the family record, was born at Guilford Court House, North Carolina, May 17, 1759; consequently is one hundred and fifty-one years old the 17th of last month.

Father Ross is in splendid health, visits Bloomington frequently during the pleasant weather of summer, kills squirrels with his rifle, chops wood, works in his own garden, and occasionally follows the plow, and says he feels as young as he did half a century ago.

Father Ross was not in the revolutionary war, but was an eye-witness of the battle of Guilford Court House, North Carolina, and made no claim to having been a member of the military family of General Washington, or even of having seen the general. He has voted for ninety-four years, but does not remember how many votes he has cast within that time, but must have been well on to two hundred times; and has invariably voted the regular old Democratic ticket, and never fails to pay his taxes. He is certainly the oldest man in the United States, if not in the world.

What Did He Think?

"X" Feidler, whose name was John Xenophon Feidler, or something very much like that, but who always was called "X," and who was one of the famous Montana pioneers as well as a vigilante, was out on the plains one day with Livereating Johnson, another well-known Montana character, when they were chased by a band of Indians.

Johnson had a better horse than "X" and was soon ahead. He turned several times and urged Feidler to hurry up.

"Hurry up, 'X,' he yelled. 'Get a move on!'"

"Dod-gast you, Johnson!" shouted Feidler as he spurred his horse; "do you think I'm trying to throw this race?"

A WARNING TO DRUGGISTS.

State Board of Pharmacy Issues Notice as to Sale of Narcotics.

Owing to the large amount of cocaine and similar drugs that are being used in this section of the country at this time, the state board of pharmacy has issued a warning to the druggists of North Carolina calling upon all law-abiding members of this profession to regard the laws that have been enacted in regard to the sale of such pernicious drugs. The warning is as follows:

"From information derived from rumors and indefinite reports, this board believes that the anti-narcotic law is being, in some sections of the state, evaded or surreptitiously violated, by the sale of morphine in its various forms, opium, laudanum, cocaine and other narcotic habit-forming drugs, the sale of which is strictly forbidden, except upon the written prescription of a licensed practicing physician, and such other restrictions as the law specifies.

"This warning notice is given to all concerned that violation must cease or prosecution will result upon sufficient evidence, to obtain which the secretary has been authorized to secure the aid of professional detectives, when needed.

"From the righteous, honorable and law-abiding dealer and citizen the board solicits earnest co-operation with it and the local authorities in suppressing the abnormal practice above mentioned.

"By order of the board,
"F. W. HANCOCK, Secretary."

The anti-narcotic law as passed by the last legislature forbids the sale or giving away of cocaine and other narcotic drugs or their salts and compounds, except upon the original written order or prescription of a lawful practitioner of medicine. The prescription must be retained on file by the firm who fills it and it must not be refilled. The law provides that "it shall be the duty under this act of all judges of the Superior courts in this state, at every regular term thereof, to charge all regularly empaneled grand jurors to diligently inquire into and investigate all cases of the violation of the provision of this act and to make a true presentment of all persons guilty of such violation."

The board of pharmacy realizes the terrible menace of the promiscuous use of the drug. There is scarcely a day passes but that there are several cocaine drunks in the various cities, or that there is not some crime committed which was instigated by the use of the drug. Cocaine is becoming a greater menace to the colored race than is the opium habit to the Oriental races. This board of pharmacy realizes this fact and is stirring a persistent campaign against its illegal sale.

Allen Jay Memorial Church.

Richmond, Ind., Nov. 18.—Members of the Friends or Quaker church in the South, and their number has of late years increased quite rapidly, will be asked to contribute toward the erection of a church in this city that is to be a national memorial to the late Rev. Allen Jay, one of the most conspicuous Quakers of the past half-century, and whose work was more largely among the American yearly meetings than it was in the immediate territory in which he lived. Mr. Jay traveled from New England to California, aiding the meetings and educational institutions in raising money to increase endowments or lift debts, and in this capacity he had no equal in the church. One institution that he aided greatly was Guilford College, North Carolina, and another was Southland College, Arkansas. He also worked to some extent among the English and Irish Friends, who may also contribute to the memorial. The proposed church, which is to cost $50,000, and seat 1,500, will be located on the campus of Earlham College, the principal western school of the Friends, and the two are to serve as a national center for this denomination, this city also being the head of the Indiana Yearly Meeting, which has the largest membership of any yearly meeting in the world.

Resolutions by Church of the Covenant.

Whereas, an all-wise providence, in His infinite goodness and love, has taken from us our beloved elder, Dr. Thomas R. Little, we his co-workers in the Church of the Covenant, desire to express ourselves in the following statement to be spread upon the minutes of our session, and sent to the wife of our deceased brother with expressions of our deep sympathy for her and the other members of the family:

Shortly after the organization of our church Dr. Little transferred his membership from the Church of the Covenant because he felt that his influence and work were more needed in the newly organized church in his community. Our church, recognizing his true worth, in March of this year, elected him one of its ruling elders. Since his election to the position of ruling elder we have seen his real devotion to the interest of the church. He was always studying her welfare, and he frequently suggested to our pastor some line of procedure, after having paved the way for effective work.

Whenever the church sessions met he always made a special effort to be present, and we know that he had a sympathetic interest in every question which came to us for action. He was careful, conscientious and intelligent in the discharge of every duty. While we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, yet we will miss his wise counsel and devoted interest. R. Murphy Williams, pastor; J. G. Foushee, W. L. Clement, J. R. Brown, W. R. Denny, T. R. Foust, elders.

THE NEW HEART

A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you a heart of flesh.—Ezekiel, xxxvi, 26.

Oh have we felt it beat within on mornings sweet and fine With sunshine of a golden day and air of ruddy wine; Oh have we felt a changing stream of purpose and of will Surge through the heart with youthful flood and ever-freshening thrill.

The new heart, like a bloom it comes, And dead the old heart lies, And over us a new world looms, Fresh in our dreaming eyes.

The old heart was a heavy weight, so stone-like and so drear, But now it is a morn of spring that rings with music clear; The shadow and the pain and care have softened it, till lo, Round it the golden streams of life in murmuring gladness flow!

The new heart that He gives us, sweet, Through amplitudes of grace To blossom in the soul and take The old heart's stony place!

But yesterday, we cry, our care, our grief were as the night, Dark seemed the straight and narrow way beyond a hopeless light; Death and distress and loss and care and pain and woes were ours, Lo, in the golden valleys now, green grass and freshening flowers!

The new heart is a magic thing, Around it sunbeams play, And hatred and the vain cares And lesser pass away.

It is a heart of flesh to feel another's grief and care; It is a heart of joy to drink the gladness of the air; It is a heart to beat for those whose need before our own Years for the tender human love they thought forever flown.

The new heart is a morning bird, A voice, a song, a gleam; A throbbing of the outer world wings Toward the gates of dream.

Oh, for a new heart in my breast each day to go again Strong with the spirit of some help among my fellow men; Sweet with the singing spring of life, the dewy joy of morn With fairies on a far-off hill with lips on fairy horn!

The new heart and cheer and heal To warm and cheer and heal Those for whose sufferin' and whose wrong God teaches me to feel!

A NEW PATRIOTISM

Rev. John I. Yellott in the Baltimore Sun.

For we are members one of another.—Ephesians, iv, 25.

Efforts have been made to reconcile the American people to the existence and domination of trusts on the ground that they are not only economic necessities, but also triumphs of civilization. Young Mr. Rockefeller's simile of the American Beauty rose will be recalled as a more or less happy illustration of the latter point.

Now, the fact of the matter is that while the trust principle may be peculiarly a modern idea, morally considered trusts are not a product of civilization at all, but embody instead the spirit of mediæval feudalism and even of pure and unadorned savagery.

That is to say, the primitive man had no obligations or duties—except to the members of his own household. When he met with a man unrelated to himself he did not hesitate to take from him his life or his property. The idea that the public, i. e., humanity not related to oneself, exists to be utilized, despoiled, plundered, is accordingly, distinctly savage. The principle of civilization is interdependence, fraternalism, mutual need and help.

Now, the primary needs of humanity, as every schoolboy knows, are food, shelter and clothing. To assist men to obtain these natural requisites is to serve them, simply and surely. To render it difficult or impossible for our fellow-men to obtain these necessary things in proper quantity and quality, in order that we may secure a correspondingly larger share for ourselves and ours, is to despoil and plunder them; it is to display the spirit of the savage.

The man who makes two blades of grass grow where one grew before is accounted a public benefactor. And so he is, in posse. The public benefactor in esse, however, is he who helps his fellow-men secure both, or one, of those blades of grass that God and intelligent men have caused to grow for man's comfort and happiness. To talk of possessing parks and pictures by contemplation is permissible poetic license, but you cannot enjoy food and shelter vicariously.

We talk much today about high prices from an economic and political standpoint. We don't realize the physical, moral and spiritual evil of those same high prices. Why, there are millions of men, women and children in this highly favored land today who are suffering—not starving, of course, but suffering, made anxious and miserable—in mind, body and soul, because for reasons which we are easily able to discover and in part at least to remedy they are not receiving a living share of the overflowing plenty with which a bountiful Providence has blessed us as a people.

There can be no more timely, helpful, needful service rendered humanity than for a man, or a company of men, to the full extent of their fellow-men live as it is manifest: the good God desires His children to live. That does not mean for an instant that the ministers are to preach contentment and resignation to whatever conditions happen to exist. It means that the world's workers led by the captains of industry should honestly, earnestly plan and strive to enable the children of men to obtain a reasonable share of the comforts and conveniences of life. The proper, God-intended aim and purpose of business and commerce, and of the professions as well, and especially of legislators and statesmen, is simply this, that persons who are willing to work should be enabled to live in reasonable comfort and security.

How utterly lacking in imagination, and consequently in insight, we men are in our dealings with our fellows, even those of us whose formal mission in life is to serve and save! How strangely inconsiderate we are of our brother man's real happiness and welfare. The highest scope of professional ethics is that of the physician. He is forbidden to patent a medical discovery or invention that may help humanity, the claims of many being held superior to his individual advantage. Doctors do an immense amount of free work, of course, and a great deal more for which they are only partly compensated.

And yet despite all this the fact remains that when a physician becomes an expert, a specialist—in short, when his ability to help his fellowmen has reached its maximum—his professional services are restricted, practically, to the wealthy, or to the free wards in the hospital. The ordinary man's need may be as urgent as that of the man of wealth, but he is virtually debarred from the services of the expert—in anything. Why? Because the fees expected are prohibitive to persons of ordinary means, expertness and expertness being synonymous terms.

The man who applies the trust principle to the distribution of his personal skill and knowledge, thereby depriving the rank and file of humanity of the things they need, occupies virtually the same position as a capitalist or combination of capitalists, who through manipulation and control place articles of ordinary consumption out of the reach of the masses. Both alike in the larger sense exploit humanity rather than serve it; the difference between them is one of degree rather than kind.

The ideal social system would probably be that under which the labor of one normal man could be exchanged for that of another, each conceived of as doing his best. Whatever may be our personal opinion as to that, however, we shall probably all agree that it ought not to be, even now, that one man working an hour or a day should be able, or willing, to mortgage the proceeds of a fellow-man's equally diligent, faithful labor for weeks and months. Such a condition as that ought to be intolerable to anyone who only respects his fellowmen.

We do not need socialism to bring in the millennium, and fortunately so. We need a new spirit rather than a new system. The spirit of Christ, who was among men as one that served; who, though He was rich, yet for our sakes, our redemption, became poor, applied even to our existing social institutions would bring a large measure of rest and peace and satisfaction to our souls and our bodies. And no artificial system of production and distribution, that would ever be conceived by the spirit of Christian service could hope to do nearly so much.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Bits of News and Information Picked Up Here and There.

During the nine months ended in September exports of the United States amounted to $1,193,321,512, and the visible imports to $1,172,387,363, or only about $20,000,000 less. If the invisible trade of the enterprising smuggler under the encouragement and temptation of exorbitant duties could be ascertained the imports would be seen to greatly exceed the exports.

Significant changes in social conditions in Great Britain in the past nine years are shown by official statistics. It appears that, as compared with 1901, there was a decrease in the use of beer of 18 per cent.; in the use of spirits, 50 per cent.; in the consumption of wine, 33 per cent.; while there was an increase in the use of tea of 29 per cent.; cocoa, 18 per cent.; tobacco, 2.7 per cent., and a falling off in the consumption of coffee of 14 per cent. Apparently these changes in drinking habits are not the result of temperance proselytism, but of a gradual tendency to better and cleaner living among all classes.

Philadelphia Record: It has been almost an ordinary life-time since Pennsylvania had a high-grade statesman to speak for it in the United States senate. What better response could the Republican party make to the popular vote of woe of confidence at the late election than by making amends for past default by replacing a second-class man with a first-rater? It is a great opportunity.

At a special election held in San Francisco last week to determine whether or not party designations, squares or emblems should be continued in use on ballots a vote of four to one was cast for the abolition of all party or political markings. The San Francisco voters will hereafter have a free and untrammelled choice without undue first aid or suggestion. It is a change which will make the practical politicians tear their hair. Philadelphia Record: A news item that has received scarcely any attention is that concerning the final disposition of the government's $30,000,000 suit against the Standard Oil Company. The big fine imposed by Judge Landis was annulled on appeal on the ground that the trial court had treated each shipment under the alleged rebating agreement as a separate offense. And now on the second trial Judge McCall instructed the jury that the preferential rates secured by the oil octopuses from the railroad company amounted to nothing more than "an ordinary business transaction," and a verdict of "not guilty" was found by direction of the court. Thus indignantly has ended one of the greatest and best-advised trust-busting exploits of the Roosevelt administration.

During the last fiscal year the exports of cattle, hogs and dairy products from the United States amounted in value to $130,632,633. In the returns cattle figure for $12,200,154; hogs for $18,381,059; hams and shoulders for $17,837,375; fresh beef for $7,333,751, and lard for $50,188,994.

Socialism.

Bolton Hall, the social reformer, was discussing socialism at a Princeton banquet, says the Milwaukee Sentinel.

"The public ignorance as to socialism is decreasing," he said, "but there are still far too many intelligent people to whom this philosophy means no more than it did to the two crude millionaires."

"Two crude millionaires, relying in a hugh French limousine, talked of socialism scornfully."

"Socialism, as far as I can make it out," said the first millionaire, "means that you must divide with your fellowman."

"Oh, no; you are wrong. Socialism means that you must make your fellowmen divide with you."

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. "ON THE CORNER"

A Diplomat

How He Got His Start in His Profession.

By SAMUEL E. BRANT.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

James Maitland, son of an admiral in the U. S. navy, fell in love with and married Mlle. Julie de Lavalie, the daughter of a French diplomat who had spent many years in the French service, a considerable portion of which time he resided in Washington. M. de Lavalie never represented his country as ambassador; he was an adept at secret methods then in vogue between nations, but, since the open diplomacy of the late Secretary Hay, now largely done away with. When any quick Machiavellian work was to be executed it fell to Lavalie.

Maitland and Mlle. de Lavalie were married while the groom was employed in the state department. At the time the Panama canal was being located and there was any amount of chicanery perpetrated both as to its location and the prevention of its location both by Central and North Americans. Then came young Maitland's opportunity. One morning the secretary sent for him, handed him a dispatch and told him that he wished him to take it to the United States consul at Vera Cruz, who would see that it reached its destination.

Delighted at being thus enabled to make a beginning in his profession, Maitland took the dispatch—it was placed in an official envelope of the state department addressed to the consul—and was about to leave when the secretary said to him:

"It is essential that the information contained in that envelope reaches our consul in Vera Cruz on or before the 13th. After that date it will be too late. It is well that you should know that its prompt delivery will involve the making of the failure to make millions of dollars by certain capitalists. You will therefore be very guarded in speaking of your mission and watch well the dispatch. I send it to Vera Cruz by you in order that no one in this country may know its ultimate destination. Nevertheless there are plenty of spies about, and we may have them right here in the state department. Be careful, and good luck to you."

When Maitland went home and with the exhilaration of youth told his wife of his mission, its importance, considering the interests involved, and all that, she failed to show a similar enthusiasm.

"What is it, pet?" he said. "You don't seem pleased."

"Jimmie," she replied, "you will never get it through."

"Why not?"

"They will steal it from you."

"What makes you think so, Julie?"

"From a little girl I have heard my father tell the ways people take to outwit one another. I know all about it. You know nothing."

However, the little woman packed her husband's suit case—all the baggage he proposed to take—then took the dispatch to the library, and when she returned handed her husband a box of cigars. He opened it and removed the top layers and below was an envelope addressed to Senora Sanchez, Mexico City, in Mme. Maitland's own hand.

"Little one, you're a brick," said the young diplomat. "I see your scheme. It would never do to leave the dispatch in my suit case under cover of a state department envelope, would it?"

"No. Now, Jimmie, be careful of the suit case and don't let it out of your sight a moment."

Maitland gave her a dozen kisses, picked up the suit case, called a carriage and started for the train. He reached New York during the afternoon and went at once on board the steamer which was to sail early the next morning. He was about to lock his stateroom door on the suit case, when, remembering that there might be other keys that would unlock it, he took the dispatch out from under the cigars and put it in his pocket. If he was followed, with a view of stealing the document, his baggage was surely the first place the thief would look for it. In order to discover if the case had been opened for the purpose, on replacing the cigars he laid all of those on the top row with the ends in the same direction except one, which he reversed. Having done this he went on deck for air.

The next morning Maitland found himself out on the Atlantic ocean heading for the Gulf of Mexico. He walked the deck alone, having resolved not to make a single acquaintance. In the afternoon he went to his stateroom for a nap, and before lying down it occurred to him to examine his suitcase. Not that he really expected to find evidence of any one having been there, but simply to satisfy himself that it was as he had left it.

What was his astonishment to find every cigar in the box laid in the same direction. The one he had placed differently had been reversed.

The discovery took his breath away. After all, his wife was right. If there were those on his track who had already shown such skill in hunting for the document, what more would they do? Instinctively he clasped his hand to his breast pocket. The dispatch was there. But he did not feel assured that it would be there when he arrived at Vera Cruz. He vowed that no one should during the passage come within arm's length of him.

He napped in his berth and read a novel which he had brought with him during the afternoon and evening, not leaving his stateroom. The next morning he passed on deck. He expected every moment that some man would attempt to make his acquaintance. No man did, but a very pretty young woman sitting in a steamer chair looked at him as he passed her and cast down her long Spanish lashes. Every time he passed in pacing back and forth she gave him the same glance and the same downward sweep. He suspected her at once and put himself on his guard.

With the exception of the Spanish woman there was no evidence of any person or persons shadowing him. But on the second day out an old lady with very white hair came up the companionway and looked about for a seat. The ship was rolling, and Maitland, taking hold of her arm, supported her to a steamer chair. She thanked him, but he would have nothing to do with her. Surely he had reason to suspect every one. The old lady besides thanking him made some commonplace remark, to which it would have been polite for him to respond, but he turned from her as though she had some infectious disease.

Several times after that he surveyed her from a distance and noticed that she looked very peculiar. Indeed, after scrutinizing her one afternoon as she sat dozing in her steamer chair it occurred to him that she was a young person disguised as an old woman. When the day before the ship was due at Vera Cruz he saw her and the young Spanish woman sitting side by side and talking confidentially he made up his mind that they had been sent out from Washington to steal his dispatch and that one or both of them had already opened his suit case. Probably one did the work while the other kept watch.

A few hours before his arrival in port Maitland went to his stateroom, took the dispatch from his pocket and looked at it. He felt very happy. If he had got it so far on the journey despite those who were trying to get it from him surely he could do what little remained. Replacing it, he picked up his cigarette case, which he had left on a shelf, lighted a cigarette and, lying down with his novel, began to read. He soon became drowsy and fell asleep.

When he awoke the ship was in port. He felt nauseated. Something had happened. He clasped his hand to his side pocket.

The dispatch was gone.

"Beaten after all," he moaned.

Starting up, he staggered out and on to the deck. No one had gone ashore. A last hope occurred to him. He would have the two women arrested on a trumped up charge. There they were near the companionway. He rushed forward and, seeing a policeman on the deck, beckoned to him. The man met him on the companionway, and Maitland, slipping a ten dollar bill into his hand, told him that there were two women thieves on board who had robbed him. When the women reached the deck they were taken into custody. They made a great ado at their arrest, asserting their innocence.

"I am an American," said the old lady, "and I demand to be taken before the United States consul."

"I will take you to the consulate," said Maitland, "provided your confederate will consent to go with us."

The old lady persuaded the other woman to make no objection, assuring her that it was their best course. Maitland called a carriage, and the three travelers entered, the policeman climbing to the box. On reaching the consulate, Maitland insisted that the Spanish woman go in with them. He did not dare leave her in the carriage. She seemed indifferent about it, and the three went in together. The consul being engaged at the time they were placed in the waiting room.

While waiting, Maitland, facing the old lady, scrutinized her. What was there that was familiar about her? Suddenly—the Spanish woman's back was turned—she gave him a smile.

He recognized his wife.

Rising, Julie went into the hall. Maitland following her.

"Don't worry," she said. "It's safe."

"Where?"

"In my corsage."

"How did you come by it?"

"I've had it all the time. When I handed you the cigar box in Washington it contained a dummy. I kept the dispatch."

"Who opened my suit case?"

"The woman in there."

"How do you know?"

"I saw plainly that she had been sent to delay the delivery of the dispatch and, pretending that I was on the same errand, won her confidence, and we agreed to work together. After she found the envelope was not in your suit case she was sure you had it on your person. You were very careless to leave your cigarettes in your stateroom. She picked the lock with a skeleton key, went in and replaced your cigarettes with those that had been drugged. When you were asleep she robbed you."

"And the dummy? What did she say when she discovered that?"

"She cried. Had she secured the dispatch she would have been paid $100,000."

While Julie was explaining she was opening her dress, took out the real dispatch and handed it to her husband. Returning to the room he had left, he told the Spanish woman that he had found the missing article, apologized and said she might go where she liked.

When Maitland delivered his dispatch his wife did not appear in the transaction. He was well launched in the profession he had chosen.
