The following is the manner in which it should be prepared, to bring the highest prices: It should be gathered when the blossoms are just beginning to come out, and dressed in the shade, but the most sure and safe way is to dry them in a dry house where there is a hot stove, then there is no danger of moulding after being packed.

THE CAPITOL BUILDING.
ITS HISTORY AND ITS WEAKNESS.
The following interesting sketch of the Capitol building at Richmond, from the New York Post, is by Mr. John R. Thompson, now connected with that paper:
The appalling disaster which has shrouded Richmond in gloom, and sent a thrill of pain throughout the country lends a vivid momentary interest to all that is connected with the occurrence and the scene.
The State House, or, as it is called, the Capitol of Virginia, is an old building, standing on the highest point of ground in the city, in the center of a park of thirteen acres, known as the Capitol Square. The grounds were some years ago laid out with taste by Notman, of Philadelphia, and adorned with some of the best statuary in America. The great monument to Washington, designed by Crawford, sate mounted by his colossal of the Pater Patrie, and flanked by heroic statues of Patrick Henry, Marshall, Jefferson, and other Virginia worthies, occupies a position but a short distance from the Capitol building, and in another part of the grounds there is a marble statue of Henry Clay from the chisel of Hart, erected by the women of Virginia.
The Capitol was built immediately at the close of the Revolution. The model chosen for it was the well known Maison Carree at Nismes, a miniature pattern of which was sent over from France by Mr. Jefferson, but the architect made many deviations from the model, whereby the effect of the building was greatly impaired. It was always an ugly, inconvenient and ill-arranged structure, though from a distance it has an imposing appearance and even looks like a Pantheon.
His historical associations are of the most interesting kind. In the basement story, where the Chancery Court was held in the old time, Henry Clay began life as a deputy clerk under Chancellor Wythe, the George Wythe of the Declaration of Independence. In its halls sat the memorable Constitutional Convention of 1789-90, which numbered among its members John Randolph, John Marshall, James Madison, James Monroe, and many others, scarcely less illustrious.
Twenty-three years before, the trial of Aaron Burr for treason had been conducted there. From the southern portion of the building it was that Daniel Webster delivered, in October, 1840, "standing beneath an October sun," the political speech which has been thought one of the finest popular expositions of the Constitution.
In the war of the rebellion, upon the removal of the Confederate government from Montgomery to Richmond, it became necessary to fit up apartments in the building for the accommodation of the Confederate Congress, and great changes were made in consequence in its interior arrangements. The building, which was originally strong, was thereby greatly weakened by the removal of supports and girders. The court room which has just given way, entailing so fearful a loss of human life, was made by throwing two apartments into one, and was occupied by the Confederate Senate throughout the war. The floor had swayed much from the true level, and settled from the sides towards the center, to such an extent that an examination was ordered into its security, and it was not until a report was made by master carpenters that it was safe, that the Senate consented to occupy the chamber. Had the examination been more thorough the alarming insecurity of the floor would have been detected, and this recent heartrending disaster would have been avoided. The Superintendent of Public Buildings in charge of the Capitol at that time, died but a few days ago.
Directly beneath the court room was the hall of the Virginia House of Delegates and in the Rotunda adjacent thereto is the marble statue of Washington by Houdon. Had the court room given way at hour later the hall and rotunda would have been filled with people and the consequences would have been yet more terrible.
This calamity differs from the well-remembered horror of the burning of the Richmond Theatre in 1811, in the fact that all of the victims were of the male sex, whereas in the destruction of the theatre, many of the fairest women of Virginia lost their lives. In viewing the desolation that reigns in Richmond at the present moment, all other feelings will be merged in sympathy for the sufferers and sorrow for the dead.

WEEK OLD—WEE COLD—WEAK OLD.

For a combination of pathos and humor, the following from the Norwich (Conn.) Advertiser, is, to say the least, very peculiar:
Close nestled in his mother's arms,
His cheeks are red as roses,
With eyes of Heaven's bluest blue,
And snubniest of noses—
Close nestled in his mother's arms,
My week-old boy reposes.

Fast mouldering on his hillside green,
Where myrtle's bloom, and roses,
His baby brother sleeps I ween
No arm his form encloses—
Fast mouldering on his hillside green,
My wee-cold boy reposes.

Sweet slumberer in loving arms—
Dear dreamer 'neath the roses—
May I at last be free from alarms
Rest when this brief life closes—
When, mouldering on the hillside green,
This week-old boy reposes.

EDUCATE YOUR CHILDREN.

Abandon them not to the cold world without any instruction. Give them the very best education your means will afford. Say not to yourselves, "I got along in the world without an education, and my child can do the same." This is a mistake. We live in an age of progress. More is demanded of us than was of our fathers; and more will be required of our children than is of us. New times, new institutions, and new duties require increased preparation to meet them in all their complications and conflicts with established systems. And without proper culture, it will be impossible for your children to discharge the numerous obligations that must devolve upon them from the revolutions constantly occurring in government, society, and institutions.

Born with a natural proclivity for association, as all your children are—impelled instinctively to seek the intercourse of their kind, it is a matter of the gravest importance that they be qualified by proper instruction to profit by that association, and that they be fortified against the impositions of sharpers who are always ready to take advantage of the uneducated to accomplish their dishonest purposes; that they be qualified also to choose and transact such businesses as will best promote their interests and happiness, and those of their fellows here, and to transact them in such a way as to secure their eternal welfare hereafter.

Your children come into the world unlike the brutes that are endowed with a fixed amount of sagacity which they can never pass, unlike these, they are born with faculties susceptible of indefinite improvement. They are thrust into life with the double nature of mortal and immortal, to run a brief career of mortality, and then to pass to a sphere of never-ending existence. Their physical nature and their secular interests, in an eminent degree, claim your guardian care and providence; but in a far more eminent degree, their intellectual and moral faculties demand your earnest and most absorbing interest. Such being the relation of your children to society and to the future state to which they are hastening, their education of right belongs to them in common with other things. The age and the circumstances under which they live demand it. Self-preservation demands it. The Author of their being claims it. Fathers of children, be wise to-day. Soon, the youth around you now must take your places upon the stage of action. The same round of business may continue as at present; but others will cultivate the fields, dole out the various articles of merchandise, fill the pulpits, make the laws, conduct the courts, and do all the country's business. All this must soon devolve upon your children. Then see to it, that you make them adequate to these responsibilities by timely instruction.

HOW A GOVERNOR OF ONE OF THE UNITED STATES TRAVELS.

—On Sunday night last, on the Western and Atlantic railroad, Gov. Bullock, of Georgia, who was en route from Washington to Atlanta, took possession of six sections of the sleeping car between Chattanooga and Atlanta, and the Superintendent of the road, Hurlbut, took the remaining sections, compelling the passengers to sit up all night. Gov. Bullock was traveling in imperial style, being attended by an officer and twenty men, armed, equipped and uniformed as United States troops. Four men and an officer stood guard on the inside of the car and two men at each door. The others were in the car adjoining the sleeping car. It is said that the valiant Governor, although so strongly guarded, was extremely fearful that he would not be permitted to reach Atlanta alive. Strange to relate, there was not the slightest attempt to disturb him at any point on the route.

RADICALISM DOOMED.
Carpet-baggers, that foul scum of creation, that have dipped so deep into the dregs of political infamy and corruption, that have well-nigh plunged the nation into the abyss of social disorder, bankruptcy, and despotism, are beginning to receive their reward of contempt from all honest people. They may attempt to palliate their acts of villainy under the plea of expediency, but their cloak of dissimulation is too transparent. Their record is written, ineffaceably written, and open to the gaze of the people, who only wait an opportunity at the polls to assert their rights, and to drive these miscreants from the positions which they have so long disgraced. O, Radicalism, we say to you, march on! We bow under the rod, and bear our necks to the yoke for the present; but know thou that the day is speeding that will put an effectual curb upon thy prodigality and licentiousness. A little more debauchery, a little more reveling in the carnival of human misery and oppression, and an outraged justice will fix forever the seal of thy doom. Thou vile monster, spring of all our national woes, drink deep of oppression, glut thyself with the people's liberties and substance, till the very earth under thy feet, and the skies over thy head, blush for shame! but know thou, arch fiend, that an outraged humanity is scowling upon thee, and the day is stealing on thee, when they, through the majesty and potency of the ballot, will deal thee a blow that will send thee reeling back to thy dark den of infamy.

For the Patriot.

THE FIRST DAY OF THE RALEIGH RADICAL CONVENTION.
The first day of the Raleigh Radical Convention this week is said to have presented scenes of a most disgraceful nature—quarreling, cursing and fighting being the order of the day, the occasion being a spirit-ed one if we may judge from the number that we learned were drunk. But the most amusing thing that occurred that day was the arresting of Senator Galloway, (colored,) from New Hanover. Galloway got too warm in the hall, and adjourning out side to do a little cursing privately, he was taken into by a negro policeman and put in the lock-up, notwithstanding the dusky Senator threatened to shoot any one that would interfere with him. This was late in the day however, and it is presumed that spirits had got the better of Galloway. Soon after G. Z. French, of Wilmington, desired to go in the guard-house to see his friend, the imprisoned Senator, but was refused admission by the negro guard, who informed French that "no one but God Almighty could enter here, and He had to move easily."

TRIED AGAIN.

It certainly looks amusing to a man up a tree to notice the maneuvers of the Greek smattered Gama Phi as he indulges in another one of his weak points, "self flattery," which among the rest may be found in the vocabulary of his misfortunes.

He doubtless feels like he had performed a miracle worthy of record by having brought about such an entire change of the mind of an insignificant being.

I don't think I can, with propriety, differ with him in one particular confession he has made, not at his having insulted his "dignity" of which he is minus, but by having his delicate feelings "rebuked," and feeling so discouraged at having missed so far the object to which the height of his ambition was directed. But I must confess that there is still a glimmering ray of hope for him, as he is so persevering, that he did not first succeed, he has tried again, and is trying to have an addition to his motto, that "labor vincit omnia."

It seems to me that that did not require any time and no labor for him to insult his own dignity, (as he says and ticks his vanity, the latter of which he has his share,) by offering consolation and advice to one who really did not feel the need of it as much as The Gama Phi did himself.

Now (as one good turn deserves another) allow me to remind you of one thing that you seem to have lost sight of, or have never heard that old folks say, Charity begins at home.

Be sure you get the beam out of your own eye, by getting both of your "old knickers" on a level, so you may be able to assist your neighbor in getting out of a hard place when he is so unfortunate as to need help. It is doubtless a catastrophe much to be dreaded by "The Gama Phi," which the Allwise being has foreordained, that he is to pass through the fiery ordeal as well as his own people, that the "dross be consumed and the gold purified," for dross is about all he is composed of, except a slight mixture of "brass," which would be worthless after the dross was gone: "Then The Gama Phi" will be no more, "Miserere me tui," poor "Gama Phi!"

I did not think I would even notice the "second trial" of The Gama Phi, to accomplish his trifling design, but when I heard of the boundless insinuations which he cast over all of our noble Southern people, for what was drawn out of him by a little love sick piece, I could not resist the temptation of giving him another chance at me.

But what does The Gama Phi mean by mentioning his "slow progress," in getting recruits in his professional career? when by such a "slight suggestion" (as he considers it), has made every body all right. Does he mean they are all lunatics, drunks, or radicals? I would advise him to be cautious, and not allow his vanity and excitable curiosity to lead him astray and cause him to wander out of the right track, by extending his insinuations over our worthy and rational citizens that he only intends for an "insignificant, disconsolate, pitiful subject" of misplaced confidence, and a moon struck swain. I wonder what he will call me next, he doubtless has an interesting vocabulary to contain so many such words.

It would be well for the public generally if the "Kn Kik" were to get the head of "The Gama Phi" in their halter before he gets every body either in the asylum or in the still more detestable confines of radicalism. It would be advisable for him to draw his head in his shell "turtle fashion" upon an approach of danger, when night comes, or he may get into a trap baited to suit the taste of "The Gama Phi" as well as radicals, and if you are once caught, you just as well sing Psalms to a dead horse as to beg for your release.

The Southern people have much to dread, as long as radicals and niggers are in power, and "The Gama Phi" is permitted to continue the practice of his profession.

A New York billiardist boast that he will give a certain player ninety-nine points in a hundred, and play caroms with his antagonist's full game, with the but end of the cue and one eye shut.

Sturgeon.—A sturgeon was caught on a trap in the river at this place, yesterday morning, which weighed 68 pounds and measured six feet.—Danville Times.

For the Patriot.

Boats Running.—Maj. Morehead's batteaux are in full blast now. He has three running regularly from Danville to Hairston's Ford, 15 miles above Madison and 65 from Danville. The boats have a capacity of ten tons down and eight up, and the charge is 25 cents per hundred each way, from Danville to Leaksville and 35 cents to Madison.

We understand, a boat, went up Smith river recently to Hairston's Mill, opposite Henry C. H.—20 miles from Leaksville. This boat was on a sounding tour, and the people all along the river were very much astonished at the novel spectacle. We are glad to hear that the boatman gave it as his opinion that, for $500, he could put 14 inches of water in the channel, which would make Smith's river navigable for the same boat that run on the Dan. The boat brought down a load of manufactured tobacco. We think $500 ought to be raised at once, and we want to see Danville showing the proper appreciation of this important enterprise, and by way of starting the ball, we would call the attention of Maj. W. T. Sutherland, Capt. W. T. Clark and J. T. Stovall, Esq., of our town who have recently purchased plantations in Henry and near the river, we believe, to this subject. Let them lead off in a subscription to remove the obstructions which it seems can be done at such a trifling cost.—Danville Times.

BURNING OF THE RICHMOND THEATRE.

The burning of the Richmond theatre in 1811, December 28th, is frequently alluded to in comparison with the terrific event at the Capitol. The first play for the night was 'The Father; or, Family Feuds.' The after piece was a pantomime called 'Raymond and Agnes; or, The Bleeding Nun.' The first play was ended without accident and the pantomime was brought on. Much scenic effect was requisite, including fire, and in the very first act the fire coming in contact with a curtain set it in a blaze, and in a minute the flames were beyond control. An actor gave the alarm, and the audience, terrified, sought to escape from the house. There was nothing like order. The crowd pressed in the direction of the doors and closed them, and packed the human weight against them so that there was no egress except by leaping from the windows. The flames overtook many in the body of the house, and first suffocating them, afterwards burned them to ashes. Some were trampled to death and afterwards burned. Others were killed jumping from the windows and were burned.

Out of six hundred persons in the theatre seventy-three were burned, including the Governor of the State (Geo. W. Smith) and a number of the most prominent citizens, and many others were severely injured.

The harrowing scenes of this catastrophe may be in some degree imagined. It was one of the most fearful calamities by fire—that terrible agent—that we have read of; and very much exceeded the horrors of the crash in the Capitol.

The Monumental church, as most of our readers know, stands on the site of the theatre, and the monument in front of the church contains the names of those who perished in the fire.—Dis-
