

Agriculture is Making Great Strides

The time was when the farmer scoffed the idea of reading from a newspaper an article on farming. They called it book farming, but since the intelligent farmer has learned the value of agricultural papers, like The Progressive Farmer and others, and that these papers are edited and contributed to by practical farmers—sure enough men that till the soil—they've gotten busy and read and work accordingly.

The same intelligence has been put into the manufacture of men's clothes. The farmer wears good clothes—clothes that fit and look well,—and right now if he wants an ALL-WOOL suit at a reduced price, see us and see us quick.

Recently a good deal of new railroad talk has been heard in Greensboro, the latest being a proposition to build a line from this city to Floyd, Va., by way of Winston-Salem and Danbury. The line has been surveyed from Winston-Salem to Floyd and contracts awarded for a portion of the construction work. It is proposed to employ gasoline engines for the motive power.

The combination clubbing offer we are now running in connection with the Progressive Farmer, the details of which are explained in an advertisement on the fifth page, is decidedly the best clubbing proposition The Patriot has been able to make, and dozens of people have taken advantage of it. In the words of the department store advertiser, "Never before was there so much value off red for so little money."

Our offer to send The Patriot, the Progressive Farmer, Every Woman's Magazine and the National Poultry Journal one year, and in addition give a pair of 4-inch shears and a book of 115 needles, applies only to those who pay their subscriptions to The Patriot a year in advance and are not now subscribers to the Progressive Farmer. Good Words For Guilford's Good Roads.

Ashboro Courier.

Guilford is the only county in the state rich enough to build good roads by direct taxation, and yet Guilford is the only county in the state which has built its roads by a bond issue. A few years ago Guilford voted a bond issue of $300,000 for good roads. Since the building of good roads a revolution has taken place in that county. In the last ten years the increase in population is greater in that county than in any other county in the state, and the increase in property has been greater than in any other county in the state.

Ten years ago Randolph stood next to Guilford in white voting population, now Guilford has twice the population of Randolph and nearly a third more voting population. A few weeks ago the people of Guilford got together to consider the question of issuing more bonds for good roads. Upon investigation it was found that the county had a surplus each year, after paying the roads and paying the interest on bonds and providing the sinking fund for said bonds, of $44,000 which could be used in building more good roads. Of course a county which has a surplus of nearly $50,000 it can put in good roads every year does not need a bond issue, and yet the tax rate in Guilford is only 79 cents on the $100 valuation of property. Keep in mind that the only county in North Carolina that is now able to build good roads by direct taxation is the county of Guilford—the only county which has built its roads with a bond issue. That looks good again. Who will dispute it? Is there any ground left for the opponents of a bond issue to stand on?

Summary of Some of the Things the State Brags On.

Mr. Joseph E. Pogue, secretary of the North Carolina state fair, is sending out a post card announcing the dates of the next state fair, October 16 to 20, inclusive, and makes the interesting statement that the fair has grown 200 per cent. in the last three years. But this is not the only thing in our state that he notes on the post card. He gives a compilation, which should be observed and proudly viewed by every Tar, making it a point to bear the date in mind. This compilation, covering 1910, is as follows:

North Carolina has a population of 2,206,287.

North Carolina has 11,216 teachers in her public schools.

North Carolina's percentage of enrolled school population is 72 per cent.

North Carolina raised 129,600,000 pounds of tobacco.

North Carolina raised 718,380 bales of cotton.

North Carolina raised 262,000 tons of hay.

North Carolina raised 7,433,000 bushels of wheat.

North Carolina raised 3,458,000 bushels of oats.

North Carolina assessed 366,971 horses and mules.

North Carolina assessed 1,190,560 hogs.

North Carolina assessed 693,950 cattle.

North Carolina banks have $73,463,058.88 in deposits.

Notice to Taxpayers.

State and county taxes for 1910 have been due since the first Monday of last September, and have been delinquent and subject to advertisement and cost since March 15, 1911. An extension of thirty days was granted by the county commissioners, and this is to notify all taxpayers that there will be no further extension of time, and that they must pay up at once to keep out of the advertised list, which will be made up from A to Z and sent to newspaper office when completed April 15 to 20. This is the last call; don't risk later than April 20.

It also saved my little boy when taken with a severe bronchial trouble." This matchless medicine has no equal for throat and lung troubles. Price 50c and $1. Trial to be free. Friday afternoon three unknown white men, who are supposed to have been common tramps, held up the inmates of a Southern Railway "shanty" car at Rudd, a few miles north of the city, and took everything in sight they wanted. The cook and his helper were the only occupants of the car at the time, and when a revolver was shoved into their faces by the intruders, they quite naturally offered no resistance. It is believed that the tramps, who were white men, had "hobbed" their way on a southbound freight train as far as Rudd.

The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion and the ceremony was beautiful throughout. Rev. E. K. McLart was the officiating minister. The ceremony was followed by an elaborate reception at the home of the bride's parents. Upon their return from their bridal trip next week, Mr. and Mrs. Bentow will be at home at the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Long, on Church street.

The flying machine exhibition at the Central Carolina fair grounds Friday afternoon was a success and was witnessed by 1,200 or 1,500 people. The aviator, Lincoln Peachy, made two successful flights and was prevented from making his third flight by reason of the fact that he feared his motor would not work. The aviator made two flights and was in perfect control of his machine. The spectators would have been better pleased had the aviator carried out his contract and made three flights instead of two and remained in the air two hours instead of half an hour, as the advertising matter stated he would do. There is a growing impression in this part of the moral vineyard that the flying machine business is a graft, pure and simple. The flying machine may be all right, but it seems to be promoted by grafters.

WAS A GREAT SUCCESS.

High School Contest in Declamation and Recitation Friday Night.

On Friday night, April 7, there was held in the opera house in Greensboro a contest in declamation and recitation between representatives of the rural public high schools of the east. This division is composed of twenty-one counties. The preliminary contest was held Friday morning for the purpose of eliminating some, in order that the program of Friday night might not be too long.

When the final contest was entered on Saturday night, the following program was carried out: Myrtle Bruton, Biscoe high school, Montgomery county, "The Soul of the Violin." R. K. Redwine, Churchland high school, Davidson county, "The Mother of Men."

Ona Hodgkin, Pleasant Garden high school, Guilford county, "Diddle, Dumps and Tot." H. C. Benton, Cary high school, Wake county, "The Conqueror."

Ethel Ross, East Durham high school, Durham county, "In a Dream." J. E. Kelis, Biscoe high school, Montgomery county, "Americanism." Mabel Pickeet, Liberty high school, Randolph county, "As the Moon Rose."

Clatie Hedrick, Churchland high school, Davidson county, "Alameda." E. Ray Olive, Holly Springs high school, Wake county, "The New South."

Mary Reddish, Cary high school, Wake county, "In the Sign of the Cross." Clarence Ross, East Durham high school, Durham county, "Regulus to the Roman and Carthaginian Senators."

Viola Covington, Hawfields high school, Alamance county, "Aunt Elvora's Hero." Stacie Willard, Jamestown high school, Guilford county, "The Family."

Troy Harper, Wakelon high school, Wake county, "Maid of Orleans." Stella Davis, Pinnacle high school, Stokes county, "Mona's Waters."

Prof. N. W. Walker, state inspector of public high schools of North Carolina, presided, and the following acted as judges in the contest, Messrs. Frances Womble and Hunter in, Hon. S. M. Gatts, Dr. J. I. Foust, and Dr. J. L. Mann. Hon. S. M. Gatts was selected by the judges to announce their decision and award the two gold medals, one to the boy acquitting himself best in declamation and one to the girl who delivered the best recitation. The declaimer's medal was won by Clarence Ross, of the East Durham high school, and the medal for the best recitation was won by Miss Myrtle Bruton, of the Biscoe high school, Montgomery county.

There has never been a contest held in this state in which all participants acquitted themselves better and it was the unanimous verdict of all who heard the speakers that there has never been held in this section a meeting which indicates better the progress that is being made in rural school development in the state. Ten years ago, or even five years ago, such an occasion as this would have been impossible, for there were then in the state practically no rural public high schools. During the past year throughout the state there has been a series of contests among the rural public high schools in debates, declamation, and recitation. We hope these contests during the past year are but the beginning of rural school development along this line of work.

THE OAK HILL DISTRICT.

People Meet and Discuss School Matters For Coming Year.

On last Friday night the people of the Oak Hill school district, in High Point township, met for the purpose of deciding upon what tax rate they should recommend to the county commissioners to be levied for next year; to determine whether they should try to enlarge the old building or erect an entirely new one, and to discuss any other matters pertaining to the school interests for another year.

It was unanimously decided that a new building should be erected and that the old one shall be sold, provided a reasonable price can be procured for it.

The people of this district met annually for the purpose of deciding all questions pertaining to the school interests for the coming year. As they voted a tax not to exceed thirty cents, and, therefore, are not compelled to levy the maximum rate, they decide each year what rate they shall recommend to the county commissioners.

We wish to commend this annual meeting of the people of the Oak Hill district to the consideration of every special tax district in the county. Whenever the people meet annually for consideration and taking such steps as will properly develop the community during the coming year, each man then feels that he has a voice in deciding upon that development, and is, therefore, a little closer connected with it than when it is done through a committee alone.

THE FIGHT IS NOW ON.

Southern Democrats Saved Party From Populist "Progressives."

Mr. H. E. C. Bryant, a well known Washington newspaper correspondent, has contributed an interesting article to the Greensboro Daily News on the contest between the so-called progressive and conservative wings of the Democratic representatives in Congress, from which the following extracts are taken:

I predicted several days ago that Senator Thomas S. Martin, of Virginia, would be elected minority leader of the senate. The election was held yesterday afternoon. Last Monday the Democrats of the senate were united on Mr. Martin. No fight was made on him until after William Jennings Bryan appeared on the scene and had several talks with Representative Jones, who is opposing Mr. Martin for re-election in Virginia, and the acrimonious contest that closed yesterday was launched. The "progressive Democrats" of the West were lined up against the "reactionary Democrats" of the South. Colonel Bryan and his friends opened fire and the Martin supporters, which included the Bailey camp, answered. Had Mr. Bryan not taken a hand, the senate would have had the same Democratic leader and the elements of the party been on friendly terms. The bitter fight, accompanied by groundless accusations and sectional feeling, would have been gained by the interference of the erstwhile leader. This is the way the North Carolina senators put it. Senators Simmons and Overman fought under the same flag in this battle. They resented the attacks made on the South.

Senator Martin is very popular in Virginia. He is a quiet, hard-working party man, and a faithful representative of his people. One of the things said about him was to the effect that he was too much like the rest of the Virginians and other Southerners. He won by a large majority, considering the number of votes cast, but would have had no serious opposition had not Mr. Bryan taken a hand. The house as well as the senate was worked up over the situation.

Colonel Bryan's argument against Senator Martin, or any other Southerner, was to this effect: He is not in full accord or sympathy with the great movement, the progressive movement, which had its origin in the West, and is now sweeping that grand region, and putting new life in both old parties.

The South is called "too conservative." It does not sympathize sufficiently with the "great Western movement" to take charge of it. Virginia, the home of Senator Martin, is described as old-fashioned, settled and ultra-conservative. The people cannot be aroused to the importance of Colonel Bryan's "latest movement." Senator Martin is said to be a natural product of the sleepy Southern state. He travels like the tortoise and irritates the fleet-footed hare from the West. Mr. Bryan is afraid that the insurgents of Iowa, Wisconsin and other Western commonwealths will get out of sight before Senator Martin, the slow-moving, quiet, peaceful Virginian realizes where he is.

The same argument would have been used against any Southerner, especially if, during the recent tariff Congress, he has felt constrained to stand by his section and fight for a square deal in schedules.

Senator Martin's votes on the tariff are criticized. Fully half of the Southerners voted with him, the records show, and his friends argue that he was right. The duties on lumber, for which he voted, they say, are lowered by two-thirds then those provided in the model bill—the Walker tariff measure.

This controversy, started and fanned to white heat by the Nebraska, as the towncrier, it is believed by some of the leading Democrats of the senate, of a more significant movement. Mr. Bryan has urged the "progressive Democrats of Congress" to stand with the "progressive Republicans." This is the real movement in the West, especially in that portion of it where insurgents abound, party lines have been virtually wiped out. Some time ago a "progressive caucus" was organized. For weeks talk of a new party has been rife. A half dozen or more "insurgent senators" were about to decline to enter the caucus of senate Republicans. There was method in this, the wise ones say. A few "progressive Democratic senators" threatened to remain out of the caucus that named Senator Martin. There was method in this, Southern Democrats say.

In North Carolina there is talk of "progressive Democrats." Not long ago a brave, daring Tar Heel, bespoke a "progressive movement." Others took up the cry, until now, in conservative North Carolina, there are many kinds of Democrats—"progressives," "Simmons Democrats," "Overman Democrats," "Kitchen Democrats," "Aycock Democrats," and so on. But, after all is said, the real Democrat—the good oldtime fellow who saved the party from the carpet-baggers, populists, greenbackers and others—is the "plain, everyday Democrat."

Southerners, as a rule, are not taking much stock in the movement to unite the "progressive Democrats" and "the insurgent Republicans" in one grand party. Some North Carolinians fear that there is some connection between the fight on Senator Martin, who from point of service and ability, is entitled to the place his associates gave him, and the progressive movement. They look for a third party, an outgrowth of the great Western movement that is traveling too fast for average everyday Southerners.

The Southerners, a majority of them, to say the least, resent the argument and the interference of Mr. Bryan. They say that, instead of stirring up strife, he should join with Champ Clark, Oscar Underwood, Claude Kitchen and other house leaders and help to harmonize the various elements of the party. He claims that he has played hands off. But, as a matter of fact, he created quite a scene in a room in the senate office building the other day over Senator Martin. Eight or ten "progressive senators" had assembled to confer on several matters. Mr. Bryan was there—he being the only outsider. A Western senator, who had promised to vote for the Virginian, rose and in the presence of all declared that he was up in the air on the question of a leader. In reply, a Southerner, a heretofore Bryan man, said he was not up in the air, but favored Martin. (This man was not from North Carolina.) He gave his reasons. In the midst of his remarks, Mr. Bryan, in a pet, jumped up and said that he did not go there to attend any Martin meeting.

"Why," said he, "he has more things against him than Bailey. I had better retire."

"That is your privilege," said the Southerner. Whereupon, Mr. Bryan left the room, forgetting his hat, which he sent back for about an hour later. He went in the next room and there conferred with the Democrats as they dropped in.

Up to this time the fight on Senator Martin had not attracted any attention. After this incident the "progressives" became active. All sorts of promises were broken. The man, Senator Shively, put up to oppose him at the last moment, was pledged to him.

FACE A STORMY SESSION.

Congressional Leaders Lose Hope of Restoring Perfect Harmony.

Washington, April 9.—It is daily becoming more manifest that Congress is facing a stormy session and that there can be made no forecast of the legislative results. Leaders appear to have little hope of restoring anything more than surface harmony.

There are virtually four parties, each with a large representation, working at odds in the present session. The Republican minority of the house is divided between regulars and insurgents as was evidenced by the vote in the speakership contest. The breach between these two factions is even wider in the Republican majority of the senate.

A sharp line has been drawn between the conservative Democrats of the senate who are opposed to any attempt at dictation on the part of William Jennings Bryan and the progressive Democrats, including practically all of the new members and several veterans like Senator Stone, of Missouri, who are Bryan adherents. The house Democratic majority seems, thus far, to have escaped a break but the leaders fear that the party contest in the senate may at any time spread to the other branch. The situation has interfered with the selection of committees and the beginning of legislative work.

The real cause of the remarkable uneasiness in Congress is believed to be due to the proximity of the party conventions which will select the standard-bearers for 1912 and the knowledge that a slip by either during the extraordinary session or the regular session to follow may very easily determine the result of the next national campaign.

There is no doubt that measures on direct election of senators, publicity before elections of campaign contributions, Canadian reciprocity, revision of the woolen and cotton schedules and any further tariff changes the majority desires will be sent to the senate in whatever order is decreed by the ways and means committee. The Republicans will be powerless to prevent. The real legislative problem, therefore, will be at the senate. Of the fifty Republicans in the senate, twelve have practically formed a separate organization. The committee on committees probably will accede to their request for the fourth of the majority places. Of the forty-one Democrats—forty-two when Colorado elects—seventeen are on record as opposed to the election of Senator Martin, of Virginia, as minority leader. Their opposition was based upon the ground that Mr. Martin was too conservative.

The division in the Democratic ranks probably would not have been so pronounced if it had not been for the interview given by Mr. Bryan deploring the election of Mr. Martin. It throws the issue in bold relief, and it is freely predicted that it will crop out frequently in debate.

NORTH CAROLINA ROADS.

Progress Made by the State During the Past Year.

We are indebted to Dr. Joseph Hyde Pratt, the state geologist, for a compilation of interesting facts relative to the public road work in North Carolina during the year 1910. The state has a pretty good record. According to Dr. Pratt's figures there are about 46,850 miles of road in the different counties, with 750 miles of macadam, 456 miles of sand clay and 406 miles of gravel road. The number of miles of macadam built in 1910 is figured at 145½. In 1908 there was reported to be 468 miles of sand-clay road in the state and in 1910 1,444½ miles, of which 438½ miles were built from December, 1909, to November, 1910. The figures for 1908 show 466 miles of gravel road, while those of 1910 show 1,523 miles of gravel, of which 268 miles were built from December 1909, to November, 1910. During 1910, thirty-eight counties graded and crowned approximately 814 miles of dirt road, and Guilford county specially surfaced 15 miles of road with tar macadam. These figures show a total of 4,768½ miles of improved road in North Carolina to date, this including macadam, sand-clay, gravel, special graded and surfaced roads, with 1,682 miles built during the year December 1, 1909, to November 30, 1910.

This leaves 42,081½ miles of roads that have not been specially surfaced. During the past several years twenty-four counties have been active work in road building, either by the issuance of county or township bonds. The bonds issued to January 1, 1911, amount to $2,850,000. Sixty-eight counties have issued a special tax, either as a county or township tax for roads, the total amount of this during 1910 being $229,308.28. Of this tax, $619,433.01 was expended by the county and $299,955.57 was expended by the township.

A REFORM NEEDED.

Disreputable Practices in Charlotte
Municipal Politics.

Charlotte Chronicle.

Some time ago—ten or twelve years ago, we should say—there was a warmer municipal election in Charlotte than was that of Tuesday. One of the candidates for mayor bought a saloon for a week. The opposing candidate for health marshal had the move. The two saloons did a thriving business. Drinks were free. The barkeepers kept account of the number consumed and at the end of the week, handed in the bill. Then there was whistling in the office of two mayoralty candidates—but the bills were paid. This is preliminary to saying that while Charlotte was a wet town at that time, there was less drunkenness at the polls than was in evidence in prohibition Charlotte, Tuesday last. It is not to the credit of either side to say that both whiskey and money were used. Hawks had a good many prohibitory supporters. So did Blaine. Yet these men raised no hand against the acknowledged traffic in liquor. It was a case of matching fire with fire. What was fair for one was fair for the other. The fact remains, however, that it was a disreputable campaign, and good men condoned it. The legislature will meet again before another morally equivalent takes place in Charlotte, and the Chronicle asks for support in a movement to have a bill passed that will bring about a reform in Charlotte campaign methods.

Rich, He Takes $9 Job.

New York Tribune.

Harold Clarke Durrell, of Cambridge, Mass., the wealthy son of the late Oliver H. Durrell, began work Saturday as a grocery clerk at $9 a week. The young man is a Harvard graduate. His father left more than a million dollars. Durrell believes that the best method to attain business success is to follow in the footsteps of his father and begin at the bottom. He will work an average of 11 hours a day. He preferred to enter the grocery business instead of the firm of Brown, Durrell & Co., with which he has business interests, because he believed in the latter firm he would be treated with too much consideration.

IN MEMORIAM.

Nathaniel Clark.

Nathaniel Clark was born near Stokesdale about the year 1841. As there is no family record, this date is as correct as memory can give at the present.

His father, the late Edmond Clark was a very illiterate man, and did not encourage his children to books or school although the writer of this sketch endeavored to show to the boys the necessity and importance of an education, and offered them inducements so they might obtain some book learning. But their father was present and opposed the proposition, telling them that education was no good, and they could not be persuaded to go against the erroneous desire of their father. Hence, the great importance of compulsory education.

The family was industrious and considered itself honest. About 4 years ago the family left the neighborhood of Stokesdale and settled just north of Friendship. At this place all have died, except John Clark and his sister, Nancy Clark.

Nathaniel Clark died March 3, 1911, from heart failure, aged about 70 years, and was buried at Stokesdale M. E. church April 1. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. L. T. Hendren.

About 35 years ago Nathaniel Clark professed faith in Christ at M. E. church. The writer talked with him and he said he was a changed man and would try to lead a Christian life. I know but little of him since that time, as he was a man that loved his home and people and remained near by them.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, our Heavenly Father has seen fit to remove from our midst our faithful and much beloved friend and superintendent, Rev. A. G. Kirkman;

And, whereas, in his death we have sustained the loss of a noble friend and leader of our church and Sunday school at Friendship; one who was always ready to help and sympathize with those who were in distress or trouble. His life was one of great responsibility and usefulness. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to Him who doth all things well.

2. That we will ever cherish his memory and seek to emulate his example in all good work and strong faith.

3. That we extend sympathy to his relatives in their sore bereavement.

4. That these resolutions be recorded in our secretary's book, and that a copy be sent to the Christian Advocate, one to The Greensboro Patriot and one to the relatives.

GOOD SEED.

As the springtime with its sowing and planting is again with us it is well as in the years gone to take stock of the kind of small grain and corn which is to be used in the production of the new crop. If one does not have plump, well filled small grain seed of his own raising it can be got at a reasonable price from neighbor or seedsmen. Care should be taken that such seed is well cleaned and free from noxious weed seeds. The extra quality which a few cents a bushel will secure is more than made up in the better stand and more vigorous growth which will be obtained. The earth bed in which this seed is put should not be given scrub preparation, but should be made fine and mellow and the seed drilled in to an even depth. In the case of the seed corn a careful individual ear test should be made. A farmer of good sense and eyesight who has had experience in the matter can without doubt tell whether a given kernel of corn will germinate in a majority of cases by cutting through the chit, or germ, with a jackknife; but, since the kernels on one side of an ear may be good and on the other bad, the testing box method is a good deal safer. There are a number of inexpensive ready made testers on the market which are very conveniently equipped, but a homemade tester consisting of a shallow box about 2 by 3 feet and four or five inches deep and three pieces of muslin extending the dimensions of the box by about eight inches will answer the purpose nicely. About three inches of sand or earth should be put in the box, leveled off and firmed down. Over this should be spread one of the pieces of muslin, previously marked off in two and a half inch squares and numbered consecutively, beginning at one corner. The edges of this should be tacked to the inside of the box so as to keep it in place. Six kernels of No. 1 should then be placed in square No. 1; the same number from ear No. 2 in square No. 2, and so on until six kernels each have been taken from as many ears as there are squares on the cloth. When this has been completed the second cloth should then be placed over the one bearing the seed and on this the third, the edges of which should extend well over the sides of the box. This should be carefully spread about two inches more of sawdust or earth.

The testing box should be kept in a room having a temperature of from 65 to 75 degrees, and if the filler was not moist when put in the box it should be watered. Seven or eight days will tell the story, when the good kernels will show vigorous sprouts. The upper cloth, bearing the earth or sawdust, should be carefully removed so as not to disturb the second cloth covering the seed. This should then be removed. By comparing the ears with the corresponding kernels on the large numbered squares the worth of a given ear for seed will be determined. Any ears the kernels from which do not show five strong germinations out of six should be discarded entirely, while those showing one bad kernel out of six should be kept by themselves and not used at all unless there is a decided shortage of seed. Seed showing weak germination is worthless, and ears from which it is taken should not be used. The test may be repeated as many times as may be necessary, when all the approved ears should be put by themselves, shelled and the kernels sorted as to size and shape so as to give a uniform drop with the planter. Notwithstanding the fact that the past season seemed to be especially favorable for the raising of seed corn, complaints are coming from many quarters that the seed is very uneven in germinating quality; hence it would seem wise to use the testing box and take no chances.

KIDS AND PIE.

The utter lack of care or knowledge displayed by some mothers in the feeding of their infant children is little short of amazing. We came across a case the other day of a mother who was in the habit of taking her baby off two years to call at a home in which there were several children. The poor little baby with pie—"she liked it so." The mother calmly witnessed the performance, offering no objection and evidently seeing no connection between the sallow complexion and general puny appearance of her baby and the things it was allowed to eat. A child's taste is not a sure guide, especially when care in its formation has not been exercised. If never allowed to have things which it should not eat the child will not form a taste for them. And this is the easiest and safest method to follow.

If there is anything madder than a bawky horse we don't know what it is.

The drinking of large quantities of cold water and deep breathing of fresh air is an excellent cold cure.

Efficiency, which is being made the watchword of many large industrial enterprises, might be adopted by the tiller of the soil with equal profit.

Great care should be exercised in looking after the health of all dairy cows, but especially those that supply milk for the babies and little folk, who, if in frail health, are especially susceptible to tuberculosis.

It is a commentary on our present day civilization that the most sacred rite and institution we have—that of marriage—often furnishes the occasion for a type of vandalism and horseplay that would shame a Fiji islander or a Patagonian.

A wise mother we know has prevented her little child from forming the candy habit by never allowing it to eat candy and so to acquire a taste for it. The necessary sweets are provided in other ways, and the child is encouraged to eat fruit, which is equally appetizing and much more wholesome.

Hair balls, sometimes reaching a diameter of two or three inches, are now and then found in the stomachs of cattle. They are usually covered with a shell-like crust or coat and are without doubt the gradual accumulation of hair licked from their bodies by animals at the time of the spring shedding.

A good idea of the size of the country is often obtained from reports covering the operation of a big railroad system for a year. The annual report of the Pennsylvania railway, recently published, shows that on the 4,004 miles of road belonging to the system there were hauled in 1910 441,619,033 tons of freight, while during the same interval there were carried 168,604,348 passengers.

There seems to be a disposition on the part of the railroads in the central western states, where the two cent fare laws were adopted, to let the rate stand, for since the new rate became operative it has been found that passenger traffic has been enough larger to more than offset the loss resulting from the reduction. If practicable in the sparsely settled western states it would seem as if conditions were such as to justify the rate in many an eastern state.

The world would probably be just as well off if a half or more of the dogs were put out of the way by some hurry up method, but now and then a valuable canine that one would really like to save gets a dose of poison. In such cases it is worth remembering that hot lard and milk will, if given at once, often induce vomiting, which will free the system of the drug. They also tend to act as an antidote for poisons having a corrosive effect. In the line of drug antidotes potassium bromide is excellent. It can be got at any drug store and may be given in a small quantity of water.

Brazil has a rival to our Niagara falls, called Iguaçu, which is very similar in appearance to Niagara, having a horseshoe bend on one side. The falls cover a distance of about two miles, with a final leap of 213 feet. The depth at the foot of the falls is more than a hundred fathoms and is believed by the natives to be bottomless. During the rainy season the volume of water taking these wild leaps is much greater than that of Niagara, while Iguaçu surpasses Niagara further in the fact that it stands in a primal wilderness, undisturbed and unmarred by commercialism.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont of New York is lending aid to a back to the land movement that is, to say the least, unique and interesting. She selected twenty young women from many applicants and has placed them on her farm, Brookholt, on Long Island. They dress in bloomers, broad brimmed hats and boys' shoes and are to do all the work on the place, including wood-chopping and caring for the horses. They are to be given thorough training in household duties, and when the time comes will take up plowing, planting and the raising of poultry. At the end of two months, if they like "farming," they will have an opportunity to purchase small tracts from their benefactress. This plan may work all right awhile, but the chances are that most of these girls will have a man around the premises before many moons.

The 1910 crop records have been compiled, and they are interesting. California takes the honors from Minnesota in the production of barley. New York from Iowa in the production of hay, Iowa from Illinois in the raising of oats. The two leading states and the percentage of the total crop which they produced are as follows: Corn—Illinois, 13.3; Iowa, 11. Winter wheat—Kansas, 13.12; Indiana, 8 Spring wheat—Minnesota, 40.7; South Dakota, 20.2; Oats—Iowa, 16.1; Illinois, 15.1; Barley—California, 26.8; Minnesota, 16.6; Rye—Pennsylvania, 19.6; Michigan, 16.2; Buckwheat—New York, 41.8; Pennsylvania, 32.8; Flaxseed—North Dakota, 41.8; Minnesota, 25.1; Rice—Louisiana, 52.1; Texas, 35.7; Potatoes—New York, 13.4; Michigan, 10.4; Hay—New York, 10.4; Pennsylvania, 7.3; Tobacco—Kentucky, 10.4; North Carolina, 10.2; Cotton—Texas, 27.5; Georgia, 15.3.

A mild winter certainly does make a difference in the size of a fellow's coal bill.

There are only about 100.00 pounds of whalebone in the world, and all of this amount is owned by one man, who has control of the market in this product.

The present is a good time to start the campaign against flies by removing from the premises all filth and garbage piles, which are the breeding places of these disgusting and dangerous pests.

In the interest of public health a more active campaign should be waged against the custom of grocers of displaying foodstuffs without protection from dust and flies. An even greater menace to health are the fruit and candy stands to be found on the streets of all large towns and cities.

A faucet often leaks not because the metal parts are played out, but because the patent valve packing, which is often made of poor stuff, is done for. We fixed just such a leak the other day by cutting a piece of cowhide as a substitute. It was cheap, and the dingus hasn't leaked a drop since.

There are all too many girls who try to get a beautiful complexion by means of powders, washes and lotions when if they would take more exercise at the small end of a broom, sleep eight hours out of every twenty-four, breathe deeply and frequently pure, fresh air their color as well as complexion would take care of itself.

One of the most striking instances of the tremendous power exerted by growing roots is to be seen at El Portal, the entrance to Yosemite valley, where a great sandstone boulder has been cleft from top to bottom by a live oak tree, which has reached a good size and seems to get along very well on its seemingly thin bill of fare.

Daisy Cornucopia Pauline, a Holstein cow owned by a New York breeder, lately established a world's record for a week when she produced 33½ pounds of butter in the seven day period. This exceeds the former record by two pounds. The new record holder is four years old and gives promise of winning other laurels before she is through.

The observance of Arbor day by the children should be encouraged at school and at home as well. It will be most interesting to them to watch their trees grow, and they will come to have a regard and affection for them which will extend to trees in general. This is one of the best methods of spreading the gospel of forest conservation and will have its effect when the children have become men and women.

Some otherwise honest people seem to think it perfectly legitimate to beat the railroad or any other large business corporation out of all they can and consider doing so a good joke. There are others who will profit by what they know to be the misdeeds of a merchant in quoting a price on goods who wouldn't for one minute think of taking that amount of cash out of his pocket. Still another class of people, employed by others, who would never be guilty of tapping the cash drawer, will loaf and steal time for which their employer is paying his good money. Queer codes of ethics these people have.

After several years of seemingly futile effort to pass the White mountain Appalachian forest reservation bill, the chief objection against which has been that it was unconstitutional for the federal government to buy and hold as a private owner for forest reserve purposes land belonging to the several states, the bill was enacted into a law by the congress just closed. While it will accomplish the desired results, the law is so framed that it authorizes the government to purchase lands at the headwaters of navigable streams in the White mountains and Appalachian mountains "to prevent the erosion of soil and to preserve the hardwood forests" in the latter territory. The bill carries with it an appropriation of $12,000,000, which may be devoted to the objects named. The enactment of the measure into law is a most commendable step in the direction of needed conservation.

If the prognostications of the bug men are correct there are considerable sections of the country which will in the course of two or three months be visited by the seventeen year locusts. While the locust is in the mind of many synonymous with the grasshopper, there is really very little resemblance between the two insects, the former being a transparent winged insect with broad head and stocky body of a greenish tinge closely resembling a large fly. On hatching the female locusts will be active during a period of five or six weeks. The chief damage done by them will be to young fruit trees, the young and tender twigs of which they will split in depositing their eggs. After these are deposited the mature insects will disappear into the ground for another seventeen years' sleep. It is predicted that the damage which will be done by the brood due in 1913 will be much more extensive than that of the present season's batch.

CUTTING DOWN EXPENSES.

Democrats Carrying Out Pledges Made in the Campaign.

By Clyde H. Tavenner.

Correspondence of the Patriot.

Washington, April 10.—That the doorkeeper of the house of representatives has his thirteen-year-old daughter on the payroll as "clerk to the doorkeeper" at a salary of $1,200 a year, with an extra month's pay, was one of many unique discoveries made by Congressman A. Mitchell Palmer, of the ways and means committee, while investigating useless positions on the house payroll. Palmer's retrenchment program was unanimously adopted by the Democratic membership, reflecting the greatest of credit upon the young Pennsylvania member, who has come to be recognized as one of the strong leaders of the house. The position of "clerk to doorkeeper" will be abolished.

Although the clerk's document room and all the offices therein was abolished by statute in 1895, the salaries aggregating $6,260 went right on. The Republican machine needed the patronage, and why be discouraged by a little thing like a statute.

Six useless but expensive house committees will be abolished, saving $12,000 a year.

A saving of $3,000 a year will be effected through dispensing with the services of two attendants to the old library space. These positions were created when the library was in the capitol. The library was removed many years ago. Since then the two attendants have had nothing to attend to but blank space. It was an easy job.

Two night watchmen charged to the folding room will be dropped. Seventy-four policemen are on duty at the capitol, and unless the two stalwart Republican night watchmen watched the police, it is difficult to understand how they put in their time.

Here is another illustration of wastefulness in running the government: Before the telephone was invented a telegraph wire was constructed between the capitol and war department for quick communication. Since the telephone has come into existence it has been used exclusively. But the jobs of the two telegraphers remained. At last they are to be abolished. Saving, $2,800 annually.

"During the Spanish war," says Mr. Palmer, "somebody's friend told somebody's cousin that somebody's aunt had heard someone say that a plot was on foot to dynamite the capitol. Thirty-eight extra policemen were added. They have remained ever since."

The Palmer committee believes the danger is now over, and will have thirty-four private policemen and one lieutenant given a permanent leave of absence. Saving, $39,000 annually.

Retrenchment in the house alone sums up as follows:

Saving under speaker, $2,320; saving under clerk, $39,970; saving under sergeant at arms, $47,050; saving under doorkeeper, $31,340; saving through abolishing extra month's pay, $50,000; saving through abolishing six useless committees, $12,000; saving through abolishing speaker's automobile, $8,000; total annual saving, $188,680.

ing, $188,680.

"Economy in public expense, that labor may be lightly burdened," has but just begun in Washington. One department after another will be taken up by the Democrats, and wherever they have the power, they will abolish useless offices and substitute a business administration for wastefulness and extravagance.

An Unreported Speech.

Speaker Champ Clark made an important speech recently that has not as yet been printed in any newspaper. It was made in caucus, at which no newspaper men were present. It was a private, heart-to-heart talk between Clark and his Democratic party fellows. Here is what Mr. Clark said, not for the public, but for the ears of the Democratic members of Congress:

"I congratulate Mr. Palmer and his associates upon their retrenchment program. I congratulate them with all my heart and strength. There is only one way to economize, and that is for each man of us to begin economizing at home. To start the ball rolling, I propose to do a little economizing on my own hook. I am going to cut down my office staff. Then I shall go further. I am going to save the people $6,000 by doing away with the speaker's automobile. If I can not legally get rid of it, I will run it in the Pottomac. The Republicans will say it is chess-playing and peanut politics but the people have some sense, and they will know that if we begin by giving up our own little grafts that we will then be morally fortified to go after the bigger ones. And I don't care what the Republicans say. I will co-operate with any man in this house who can find a place for sensible economy. I don't care whether it is a little economy or a big economy that is proposed. I will work with any member to bring it about if it is a sensible one."

The Maine legislature, Democratic in both branches, has just adjourned, after a session lasting thirteen weeks, during which every pledge that had been made by the Democrats in last fall's campaign was substantially kept.

The extra session of Congress offers the progressive Republicans of the senate an opportunity to make the mistake of their political lives. If they oppose Canadian reciprocity it will surely revise their popularity downward. This is particularly true as a nation-wide proposition. The progressives can not now oppose reciprocity on the ground that it does not revise the tariff downward on things the farmer must buy, because bills will accompany the reciprocity measure which will revise the tariff downward on manufactured articles.

THE LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM.

Democratic Majority Decides Upon an Outline of Work.

Washington, April 8.—Legislative plans of the Democratic majority of the house, made known today from a reliable source, indicate that the Republican senate will be given speedily important measures for action.

The definite outline, subject to further caucus ratification, lists as follows, the order of legislation to be pushed forward by the ways and means committee as soon as the house organization is completed:

Popular election of United States senators.

Publicity before elections of campaign contributions.

Statehood for Arizona and New Mexico.

Canadian reciprocity.

Revision of schedule K, the wool schedule of the Payne-Aldrich bill.

Revision of the cotton schedule.

Beyond this the present program does not extend, other tariff matters and general subjects being left for further consideration, dependent a great deal upon time.

It also practically has been decided that the Canadian reciprocity bill to be brought forward by Chairman Underwood will be almost an exact duplicate of the McCall bill. It will carry no tariff rider.

FEARFUL CRIMES.

How Many Times Do We Read of Fearful Crimes Being Committed in the Country?

It was only the other day that North Carolina was shocked because of the frightful murder committed in a nearby county. A negro man who had worked around a farm a long time knew that there was quite a sum of money in the house and he killed three people in order to get it. He was captured and ordered electrocuted—but to electrocute the colored man didn't bring to life his victims.

Suppose farmers opened accounts with savings banks, institutions like the Greensboro Loan and Trust Company, and people generally understood that there was no ready money on the place; that when the crop was sold in town, instead of bringing the money home, it was placed in the bank, don't you know that the temptation to steal would be largely removed? Robbers only try to steal where they think there is money. If they knew that the savings of the farmer were in town in the strong vaults of a savings bank, they wouldn't call to molest the children or women folks while the men were away.

Besides the safety, your money earns money, and that is what you are toiling for; that is what you are trying to do—earn money. Then why not let the money you have earned help you to earn some more? The Greensboro Loan and Trust Company maintains and has maintained for many years a successful savings department, and it invites you to investigate its manner of doing business. You can open an account any time and start with a sum as small as three dollars.

Big Blockade Distillery Seizures.

What is said to have been the biggest blockade distillery seizures in the history of the state were made near Kinston and Fremont Saturday by Revenue Officers Merritt and Cameron. The Fremont plant was of 750 gallons capacity and had formerly been a government distillery, was seized and sold two years ago, was then stolen from the government and never heard of again until Saturday, when taken by the officers on a 300-acre plantation in a house built to imitate a tobacco barn with underground steam pipes from a cotton gin some distance away. The plant was on an estate, the executor of which denies all knowledge of the presence of the outfit on his lands.

The distillery near Kinston was of 225 gallons capacity and was in full operation when discovered, two negroes, one of whom escaped, being in charge. Some whiskey and still equipment was taken in each instance, but no arrests were made.

Senator Tillman's Ambition.

Charlotte Chronicle.

Referring to the absence of Senator Tillman from the extra session, the Washington Herald says: "More than one senator expressed a passing regret over the fact that Senator Tillman, of South Carolina, was not able to be on hand. He has acknowledged that it has been the ambition of his life to see a New England Democrat sworn in as United States senator. He would have realized that ambition yesterday when Charles F. Johnson, of Maine, took the oath of office. The senator's physicians, however, warned him that he could not return from South Carolina to witness this event, and it is doubtful now if he will ever be able to sit in the senate again." It is to be hoped that these fears will not be realized, but in any event, it ought to be a matter of much gratification to Senator Tillman that in recent years public opinion in regard to him has undergone a complete change, and that he is now regarded by many as a man of valuable public service.

Bogus Cloth.

What is Paint? Some people think anything labelled "paint" is paint, but there's a difference, just as much as between one kind of cloth and another. Cloth nine-tenths cotton and one-tenth wool, is bogus cloth. Cloth all wool wears to the limit. Paint at a price between 75 cents and $1.50 is like bogus cloth. The L. & M. Paint is all wool and wears to the limit. There's a reason.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM—it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

TWO MINE DISASTERS.

A Total of 188 Lives Lost in Alabama and Pennsylvania.

One hundred and eighty-eight lives within 48 hours is the toll claimed by the deadly forces of explosion, fire-damp and other perils that constantly menace the workers in coal mines.

Near Littleton, Ala., Saturday morning an explosion in a coal mine trapped 170 miners, all but five of whom were convicts, and a large majority of them negroes. Of these only 15 are known to have escaped, and all hope for 115 remaining in the wrecked workings, underground was given up within a few hours after the explosion. Of these convicts some had been sentenced for minor misdemeanors to terms as short as 10 days and in few cases as long as two years, yet all were forced (quality to undergo the perils so forcibly exemplified by this overwhelming disaster.

The death list by the explosion in the Parcoast colliery at Throop, near Scranton, Pa., Thursday, has been raised by the latest official report to 73. It is believed that this is the final total, as all parts of the wrecked mine have been thoroughly explored and none remain unaccounted for on the roll of missing.

To the People of North Carolina:
Monday, May 1, has been made the day for you to write a personal invitation to one or more of your friends, now living in the North, West or Northwest, to come back to the South, "back home." You are earnestly requested to do this, and to send their names and addresses to me on a postcard, and if convenient, a copy of your letter. We desire to reinforce your appeal by literature and proofs that the South is now different and better for them than the South they formerly knew —better, in fact, than any other part of the United States.

The time has come to resist the constant drain upon the South for people to go to Western lands to make business for the Western railroads. The "back home" movement is encouraging a return movement of our own people, and a discouragement to further inroads upon our already scanty population.

There are five million of our Southern people in the West. Will you not help us to reach them all on May 1?

This is something definite you can do towards advertising your state, and at the expense of only two or three cents and a few minutes' time.
The publisher of this paper is giving his space (which is his stock in trade) to aid this movement, because it is for the common good. Will you not do what is here asked of you?

Yours for the South,
F. H. LABAUME,

$60,000 to be derived from bond inwith the least possible delay with the ernor and council of state. They will also encourage in every way possible gifts and bequests to the institution.

Do Ghosts Haunt Swamps?

No, never. It's foolish to fear a fancied evil, when there are real and deadly perils to guard against in swamps and marshes, bayous, and lowlands. These are the malaria germs that cause ague, chills and fever, weakness, aches in the bones and muscles and may induce deadly typhoid. But Electric Bitters destroy and cast out these vicious germs from the blood. "Three bottles drove all the malaria from my system," wrote Wm. Fretwell, of Lucama, N. C., "and I've had fine health ever since." Use this safe, sure remedy only. 50c at Fariss-

CHAPTER XII.
"GEE," went on Red enthusiastically, not appreciating the reason for Valentine's silence, "gee, but that Kitty is a great kid! Ain't it funny how a kid like that will get hold of a tough old tramp like me?"

"Nice child," commented Valentine. He picked up the telegram and handed it to Red.

"Red, read that," he said dully, as though discouraged.

"Doyle! Good heaven!" he exclaimed.

"Doyle," said Valentine. "It took him quite a while to uncover us, didn't it?"

"But he's finally done it—got your name and everything."

"Did you notice it wasn't signed?"

"Yes. Who do you suppose tipped you?"

"Doyle," was Valentine's amazing response.

"Doyle!" cried Red, starting back. The assistant cashier bent toward the watchman.

"Doyle sent that, Red. Don't you see he's not sure of me? But if I run away from the bank when that telegram came—out of town for the afternoon—he'd know he had me."

"Never thought I'd have ducked," commented Red. "And now he'll turn me up too. I'm going." He fingered his hat nervously.

"You're not. He don't want you, and if you stay where you belong he won't see you."

Red nodded his head decisively.

"I'll stay closer to the bank than an emigrant to his tag. And you, Jimmy?"

Valentine smiled at the other lapsed out in his excitement into using his old name.

"Jimmy?" How natural that sounds, Red? he said reminiscently.

"Excuse me. I meant 'Mr. Randall,'" protestingly.

"No; it's all right, only don't by any chance use it before Doyle, because I'm going to alibi Doyle until he'll think he's lost his eyesight."

"Alibi?" repeated Red curiously. "I've heard of that before."

"Alibi, that's it, Red," replied Valentine. And he continued rapidly: "You haven't forgotten the one great refuge of the crook, have you—our old friend the alibi? Something which proves you were not where you were when something happened. I was never Jimmy Valentine, Red. I was never in Sing Sing. I've been straight all my life and can prove it. I've been waiting for Mr. Doyle nearly three years, and I've got him beat. I never did that job in Springfield, Massachusetts. I was never there in my life. And if I've got to use the crook's tools to beat it I'm justified. I'm living straight and I'm going to, and all the gods are with me, Red!"

He took a scrapbook from a drawer and opened it. "Look at that. For five years you will find clippings of Lee Randall when he lived in St. Paul. That man was my cousin. He went to Alaska and never came back. My name is also Lee Randall, and I defy Doyle to prove he ever saw me."

Valentine, out of breath owing to the long speech he had delivered at top speed, leaned back and gazed triumphantly at Flanagan. The latter stared amazedly at the assistant cashier, trying to guess as to whether or not he was telling the truth. Well, there was a scrapbook. That would afford ready means of proving Valentine's words. Red picked up the book and swiftly skimmed the pages. His attention was held by one of the clippings. He read aloud:

"St. Paul News, March 12, 1906.—The speaker of the evening was Mr. Lee Randall. His subject was—"

"Look at that other one," interrupted Valentine, pointing. "See how they join up with the day I came here. And Avery has sent me something that will make Mr. Doyle's eyes blink like an owl."

Red laughed grimly. The telephone bell rang.

"Avery! Did you say Avery?" asked Red.

"Yes," picking up the receiver. Then to the operator: "Yes, send Mr. Cronin right in. There's a friend of his here who wants to see him." He looked significantly across at Red.

Flanagan glanced around the room.

Valentine and Avery laughed in their superior knowledge.

"No, no," protested Valentine, "this photograph proves I was at a banquet in St. Paul. I'll beat Doyle and I'll make him like it."

"You can't," was Avery's pessimistic comment.

"You said we couldn't go square, any of us, and we all have," was Valentine's rejoinder. "And if we can beat the thing inside of us that calls we can beat one man that hunts."

A clerk knocked at the door and entered to ascertain if he should now bring in a tray of cash which Valentine was to count. He was ordered to do so at once, and Avery's face became a study as the young man soon re-entered with a tray on which new banknotes of large denominations were piled among glistening rows of gold coin.

"Great snakes, what a chance!" exclaimed the one-time thief, looking from Valentine to the watchman. "This is no place for me. Oh, just for one grab and the sick getaway!" He mopped his forehead. "I'm sweating like a polar bear on the Fourth of July."

"Haven't got it out of your blood yet, eh?" asked Valentine.

"Not the craving for real money. I learned to let the wheat in the grain elevator alone after a month or two, but coarse money like that—wow!" The old man stared fascinated at the enticing tray.

"Well, we watched each other for awhile," commented Red, pointing to his chief.

"And ain't neither of you ever snatched even one bundle?" asked Avery incredulously.

"No."

"Well, you better get me out of here. I'm going to have lockjaw in both hands in a minute." He reached for his hat and stick.

"No, you're not," put in Valentine.

"Come on, Red," he said, walking to the vault room door. "I'm going to prove to Bill that he's honest. He's going to watch that money till we come back."

Avery cried out in protest, but Red followed his superior, and the time worn thief, who had confessed to his friends the weakness that he well knew yet lurked within him, was left alone in the banking office before a tray containing $55,000 in cash. With in reach was the door leading into the open hallway through which it was but a few seconds' dash to the busy street, where a man would immediately be lost to view in the passing throng.

"It's a dirty trick," muttered the old man, starting after the others. A shaft of yellow light reflected from one of the golden coins caught his eye, drove into his very brain, into the thin red blood that coursed through his hardening veins. He stopped. He turned full around and slowly, with hands eagerly outstretched, tiptoed back to the table bearing the precious burden. His brows narrowed down over his pale gray eyes, his fingers, long talons in their curved fixedness, began to nervously twitch. Then Avery jerked himself away of a sudden. He straightened himself up and started toward the vault room door to summon Valentine. But even as he did so his glance roved back to the alluring tray. He was drawn to it as the nerveless rabbit that succumbs to the insidious charm of the oscillating head of the hungry python.

He stepped to the tray. He seized two packages of hundred dollar bills, thrust them into his pockets, then clutched two more. The fever had him. His eyes shone with the fire of gone days and gone nights. His poisoned blood sang through his veins. Then he stopped once more. He raised his head.

"And have the coppers after me again," he murmured thoughtfully. He laid down a package. "And 'double cross' a pal that put me straight. Not me, not me." He replaced the remainder of the money. "And coin that comes crooked never was any good."

Avery stood before the tray of money. Now he looked at the tempting fortune with the sure knowledge that he had conquered—that he had faced his greatest test and had not been found wanting.

The thought of how narrowly he had escaped committing the meanest crime of his career came over him, and he realized that he had been on the verge of plunging himself into the death dealing life from which Valentine had rescued him. Ungovernable rage possessed him at his insane lapse into the self that he had cast from him. He swung his fist at the neatly stacked piles of gold pieces.

"Curse you, curse you!" he cried in frenzy. The tray and its contents crashed to the floor and the money scattered in all directions.

Valentine and Red, hearing the noise, came rushing in from the vault room. They saw the floor littered with banknotes and coins. And crouching forlornly in a chair was the figure of old Bill Avery. His hands were pressed over his eyes, and he sobbed in the agony that gripped the soul which had been restored to him.

CHAPTER XIII.

"I TOOK some of that money," Avery finally managed to say as he saw his two friends before him.

"And you put it back," smiled Valentine. "The minute you touched it you found you couldn't."

"That's it," put in Avery eagerly as he arose and proceeded to aid Red in restoring the scattered money to its place. "I couldn't take it then. Now I can go out of here and know that I'll never steal again."

"You mustn't go until Doyle comes in, for he might see you on the street."

Then at Valentine. "Say," he began. "I'm the only one here in the room except you, and I don't want to see any 'Mr. Cronin.' Don't know him. Who is he?"

"Mr. Cronin," responded Valentine. "Is the man who is going to save you and me from going back to state prison."

Valentine went on to recount to Red how Bill Avery, after he had said goodbye to his "pals" in Albany, had gone to the middle west and eventually married a sedate widow, of middle age, whose son was an expert photographer, one who operated a large studio in St. Louis and employed men who specialized in covering important events for the newspapers and magazines.

"Avery!" ejaculated Red. "Avery working—absolutely on the square?"

"Yes, that's the truth, the awful truth," laughed Valentine whimsically. "But you say Bill—Bill Avery is married?" asked Red, completely overcome at the suggestion.

"Yes, it's all true, and Bill has proved a true friend to me—to us," answered Valentine.

"And he's really happy?" went on Red doubtfully. "Him as always had a stable of filies spendin' his coin. He's happy with one wife?"

The assistant cashier gave vent to a burst of gaiety at the astonishment of the watchman, who probably would have understood the process of reformation in any one but Bill Avery.

But a few minutes elapsed after Valentine answered the telephone call before the door opened, and in came a man whose iron gray hair curled beneath the rim of his high silk hat. Glaringly bright yellow kid gloves adorned his hands. His frock coat, of the latest make, was a bit worn on the edges, and it was for that reason that the secondhand dealer had made a reduction in price to Mr. Cronin.

The newcomer laid a handsome gold headed Indian bamboo walking stick across a chair, took off his gloves and faced Valentine and Red.

"Mr. Randall?" he said.

"Yes, Mr. Cronin."

"Cronin be blowed," cried Red, starting forward. "It's Bill Avery. How about you, old pal?"

Avery, pleased at the enthusiastic welcome and at the sight of both of his old friends, shook hands with each. Then he drew back and looked from one to the other. "Think of us

"MR. CRONIN" FACED VALENTINE AND RED three been left alone together like this in a real bank," he said significantly, and his two hearers could not restrain laughter at the thought of what the circumstances would have meant to them in days now put behind them.

"Did you get the picture?" asked Avery of Valentine. "You told me to send it, but I wanted to see you. That double negative is a wonder."

Valentine looked understandingly at him. He rose from his chair, picked up the telegram from his desk and extended it to Avery.

"Yes; it's all right," he said. "And it came just in time. Today is the day I'll need it," pointing to the telegram. "Read that!"

Avery read the message. The pallor of unnerving fear came upon him. His head dropped forward and he glanced apprehensively about him. His hand trembled as he laid the paper on the desk. He sank hopelessly into a chair. "Doyle," the old man choked—"Doyle! He said he'd slough me, and now he'll do it—or else he'll make me pay blackmail. You never can tell how much a copper wants for keepin' quiet."

"Oh, don't get blue," encouraged Valentine. "He doesn't want you fellows. It's me that he is after." He examined a large photograph which Avery had sent him. It showed the tables and guests at a large banquet in a luxuriously appointed restaurant.

"Yes, I think this saves me," he remarked. He held it before Red, asking, "What's this?"

"Flashlight of a banquet."

"Who is this on the right of the toastmaster?" pointing at a face in the picture.

"You."

"Pipe the date," went on the assistant cashier. "Feb. 9, 1906. Do you remember where I was on that date?" He gazed curiously at Red. Avery watched the proceeding with rare interest.

The watchman became thoughtful. At last a puzzled wrinkle marked his forehead. "Why—why—you—were—in—Sing Sing—prison—on—that—date," he replied confusedly.

S.S.S. REMOVES THE CAUSE AND CURES CATARRH

Catarrh usually begins with irritated, inflamed membranes of the head, nose and throat, from which there is a constant and copious discharge of watery matter. This comes from inflammation of these mucous surfaces and is caused by catarrhal matters and impurities in the circulation. Nature intends that these membranes shall be nourished by the blood, but waste matters and impurities deposited into these delicate parts, sets up inflammation and the discharge is a natural result. When this secretion begins to dry it becomes thick and sticky, adhering to the back portion of the mouth and throat, causing the "hawking" and straining so troublesome to Catarrh sufferers.

Other ordinary symptoms are caused from congestion of the circulation by the catarrhal impurities.

There is only one way to cure Catarrh, and that is to remove the cause by purifying the blood. Washes, sprays, inhalations, etc., do not reach the circulation, and therefore can only afford temporary relief. S.S.S. cures Catarrh by cleansing the blood of all impure catarrhal matter, and at the same time building up the system by its unequalled tonic effects. In other words S.S.S. cures Catarrh by purifying the blood so that the mucous surfaces and linings of the body are supplied with healthy nourishment instead of being continually irritated from the catarrhal impurities. Then the inflamed membranes heal, the discharge is checked, head noises cease, the stomach is toned up, and the throat is no longer clogged with mucus. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice free. S.S.S. is for sale at drug stores.

THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

I suffered for a long time with a bad case of Catarrh. I had a continual headache, my cheeks grew purple, my nose was always stopped up, my breath had a sickening and disgusting odor and I coughed incessantly. I heard of your S.S.S. and commenced to use it, and after taking several bottles I was cured and have never since had the slightest symptom of the disease.

MARY L. WESSERMAN.

I had all the symptoms that accompany Catarrh, such as mucus dropping in the throat, a constant desire to hawk and spit, feeling of dryness in the throat, cough and spitting up on arising in the morning, etc. I had thus suffered for five years. I commenced to take S.S.S. and after I had taken three large bottles, I noticed a change for the better, thus encouraged, I continued to take it, and in a short while was entirely cured.

Death was caused by cirrhosis of the liver. He was 57 years old.

Growth of the Farmers' Union.

Charlotte Observer.

The growth of the Farmers' Union for the past two months, in North Carolina, has been marvelous and it seems to indicate that Southern farmers have at last realized that sort of commercial conditions they are up against and are determined to meet organization with organization. The busiest place in Charlotte now is the official headquarters of the Farmers' Union of North Carolina. Secretary E. C. Fair is working an extra force to keep up with the growing volume of business and it will be several weeks before he can get well up with the work. More than thirty charters have been issued for new organizations during the past week and reports from organizers in the field are coming in every delivery of mail at the office. In many of the older organized counties new local unions are being organized and delinquents are being renewed to membership. And the most gratifying part of it is that of farmers who have been standing out with a critical eye, are connecting themselves with the organization. The outlook for the Farmers' Union was never more encouraging, and its members have reason to rejoice in its healthy growth, development and progress. The commercial world realizes that it is a factor to be reckoned with and it is making history that no similar organization has ever made.

Get-Rich-Quick Game.

World's Work.

The officer of the United States government who managed the recent raids on get-rich-quick concerns has estimated that $100,000,000 a year is stolen from the people by their methods. Most people seem to be surprised by the size of the figure. They think that it is too big. It is not; it is far too small. If one could add together the illegal promotions and criminally careless or ignorant campaigns in worthless bonds and stocks, insurance companies, real estate certificates, etc., during the last year I am certain that it would treble the government's figure.

First, one may ask, why has the United States government allowed these swindles to go on, year after year, and only moved at last, after $500,000,000 has been stolen?
