Y. M. C. A. Charged With Being Gambling Institution.

An incident not on the program occurred at the Christian Conference yesterday, during the discussion of the report of the committee on moral reform. It appears that Rev. S. B. Klapp, of this city, made a statement to the effect that the Young Men's Christian Association of Greensboro had become a gambling institution. Prof. W. P. Lawrence, secretary of the conference, was on his feet at once and demanded the proof of the preacher's grave accusation. Mr. Klapp explained that his statement was based on a rumor to the effect that pool and billiard games in the Y. M. C. A. permitted betting on the part of participants. He then withdrew his charge of gambling against the Greensboro Y. M. C. A., which was tantamount to admitting that he had made a public statement which he could not sustain.

One of the inexplicable things of life is that so many good men are willing to make derogatory statements against men or institutions which they are unable to substantiate when called upon for the proof.

Four arrests were made after the finding of the charred body of a man identified as John King, a farmer, in the ashes of the burned out-houses at his home near Jonesboro, Ga. The theory advanced by the police is that King was killed in an altercation over a poker game and his body burned to conceal the crime. When last seen by friends Saturday night King is said to have borrowed money with which to take part in a poker game.

THE CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE.

Annual Session is Now in Session in This City.

The eighty-seventh annual meeting of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference assembled in the First Christian church of this city Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and will continue in session until tonight. The attendance of ministers and laymen is fine, every ordained minister save one answering the first roll call. Lay delegates were present from all but two or three of the 31 churches of the conference.

The opening session was called to order by Rev. J. W. Holt, of Burlington, president of the last conference, after which a devotional service was conducted by Rev. J. W. Wellons, of Elon College. Following the enrollment of ministers and lay delegates, Rev. J. W. Holt, the president, and Prof. W. P. Lawrence, of Elon College, secretary of the conference, were re-elected to their respective offices.

Rev. H. E. Roundtree, the new pastor of the local church, made a happy address of welcome, which was responded to in an appropriate manner by President Harper, of Elon College.

At the evening session President Holt delivered his annual address, which was heard with great interest by the large congregation present.

The president's address was followed by the first of a series of three lectures on "The Principles and Government of the Christian Church," by Prof. W. P. Lawrence. The second lecture of the series was given last night and the third will be delivered tonight.

The report of the auxiliary religious organization committee, which was confined largely to the work of the Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies, was presented at the morning session yesterday by Dr. W. A. Harper. The report recommended the co-operation of both these organizations in the local churches with the conference of the Young People's Convention and with the interdenominational organizations of the state and nation for these lines of religious work. The organized adult Sunday school class was commended, but worldly-mindedness in such classes was discouraged, and all such classes were advised to place the interest of the entire school foremost in their work. Teacher-training was highly commended as holding the key to the ultimate success in Sunday school work, and the denomination's teacher-training course was recommended for the use of such classes. Special stress was laid on training in Christian giving.

The report of the committee on moral reform, which was presented by Rev. C. C. Peele, rejoiced in the moral progress of the Christian world, but felt that the necessity for aggressive opposition on the part of the church was necessary to rid the world of many evils. Hazing in colleges was condemned, the divorce evil was deplored, immodesty in dress was censured, cigarettes, slot machines, social gambling and kindred moral delinquencies were placed under the ban. The report also recommended that only Christian teachers be permitted to teach in the public schools. Blind tigers in the state and the shipment of liquor into prohibition territory were severely scored. The disappearance of the family altar was regretted and its reinstatement strongly urged.

Mr. W. H. Swift, of this city, field agent of the North Carolina child labor committee, was extended the courtesy of the floor and presented the plan of his organization against allowing children to work contrary to the law, and the conference gave its endorsement to the work of the organization. The report was ably discussed by several ministers and was endorsed by the conference.

Three sessions of the conference will be held today—morning, afternoon and evening.

Friends of Mrs. George G. Thompson here have learned with sorrow of her serious illness at the home of her parents, in Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Thompson went to her parents' home there a few days ago and since then has become very ill. Her friends hope for her a speedy recovery. Mrs. Thompson is the widow of George G. Thompson, division freight agent of the Southern Railway, who was shot and killed by his chief clerk, W. F. Blair, recently.

TOBACCO MARKET BOOSTING.

The Reidsville Review Submits a Few Pertinent Remarks.

The Reidsville Review has the following timely and sensible article on a subject of interest to all newspapers in the tobacco belt, and we might add to all people interested in the success of their local market:

"The Reidsville warehousemen have not lived up to their opportunities this fall in advertising and exploiting the local tobacco market. All grades of tobacco have been and are selling at the highest averages probably ever known in the trade, and warehousemen have had many good arguments to use in an extensive advertising campaign, yet they have used less printers' ink this season than ever before. The result is that the Reidsville market is not selling its share of the tobacco that has been marketed so far. When solicited for advertising the warehousemen say that the high prices prevailing on the market is the best advertisement they have and that newspaper advertising is not needed. But neighboring markets are advertising more extensively than ever before and are leaving Reidsville behind in amount of receipts this year. The Union warehouse is the only Reidsville warehouse that has carried any newspaper advertising this fall to amount to anything. If our warehousemen want Reidsville to extend its territory from which trade is drawing they will have to shake off their Rip Van Winkle drowsiness and enlist the help of the newspapers to exploit this tobacco market. The newspapers ought not to be expected to puff and blow the market in season and out of season without some encouragement."

What the Review says of the Reidsville market applies with double force to the Greensboro market, which is making a fight to get on its feet and retain lost prestige. Due to the active interest of Greensboro business men and business institutions in boosting the local market, more tobacco is being sold in Greensboro than has been sold here in many years. The business men of this city not only went down into their pockets to build one of the best warehouses in the state, but they are offering valuable prizes to induce the farmers of the surrounding territory to sell their tobacco in Greensboro. The merchants of this town are talking and working for the market day in and day out, and results show that they are doing it in an effective manner.

When it was determined to rehabilitate the Greensboro tobacco market the local newspapers cheerfully joined in the work and printed many columns of matter in an effort to boost the enterprise. The warehousemen appeared to appreciate this free boosting, and in the case of The Patriot advertising space was to be contracted for as soon as the season opened. Well, the season opened and the warehouses did a meager amount of advertising in The Patriot, spending with this publication the munificent sum of $31.30 in advertising the Greensboro tobacco market! And this in face of the fact that the merchants of this city are giving away hundreds of dollars worth of premiums as an inducement for the tobacco growers of this section to patronize the local market! Just how long the business men will be content to bear the heavy end of the burden in an effort to help the warehousemen help themselves remains to be seen.

Were it not for the business men of Greensboro, there would be no Greensboro tobacco market.

Death of Emsley M. Stratford.

Mr. Emsley M. Stratford, who had been suffering from a serious form of heart trouble for two years or more, died yesterday morning about 10.30 o'clock at his home on the Battle Ground road, northwest of the city. Mr. Stratford was one of Guilford's best citizens and is survived by his widow and the following five children: Messrs. C. L. Stratford, of Spencer; T. B. Stratford and F. W. Stratford, of Greensboro, and Misses Mary and Annie Stratford, who remain at the family home. The deceased was a brother of Mr. W. O. Stratford, of Greensboro, and the late Mr. Robert Stratford, of Montana.

The Patriot was pleased to receive a call yesterday from Mr. C. R. Beville, of Brown Summit, R. F. D. 2.

BIG PYTHIAN MEETING.

Founders' Bible Class Initiated in Greensboro Tuesday Night.

A big district meeting of the Knights of Pythias was held in Greensboro Tuesday night, the roll call showing an attendance of 350 members of the order. The occasion was made memorable by the presence of a number of officers of the Supreme lodge and the North Carolina Grand Lodge. Thirty-six men were initiated into the order in what is known as the "founders' Bible class," the Bible used being the one upon which the members of the original lodge of the order took the obligation of Pythianism.

Mayor Murphy warmly welcomed the Pythians and talked about the extraordinary occasion which brought them together, the founders' Bible class, in which was used the same Bible used by Justice H. Rathbone in the founding of the great order. The response by Grand Chancellor Taylor was a fine effort. He connected Pythianism with the great progress going on in North Carolina. He saw the great good in the fraternity and desired to impart it to others.

Officers of the Supreme lodge and the North Carolina Grand lodge present were: Grand Chancellor Walker Taylor, of Wilmington; Supreme Keeper of Records and Seal Fred L. Wheaton, Supreme Representative J. L. Scott, Jr., of Graham; Grand Vice Chancellor Joe Prigden, of Durham; Grand Outer Guard G. W. Brittain, of Reidsville; Past Grand Chancellor George L. Hackney, of Lexington; Past Grand Chancellor W. C. Crisp, of Winston; State Deputy Grand Chancellor J. D. Nutt, of Wilmington; Chairman of Judiciary Committee A. A. Whitener, of Hickory; Credential Committee men McBride Holt, of Graham, and others.

EIGHT TRAINMEN KILLED.

Bad Wreck on Seaboard Air Line, Near Norlina.

Norlina, Nov. 19.—Eight trainmen were killed and three severely injured at 4 o'clock this morning, when two Seaboard passenger trains, running at high speed, crashed head-on seven miles north of here. No passengers were injured. The dead are Will A. Faison, engineer, Raleigh; Charles A. Beckham, engineer, Raleigh; Dirk Gray, negro, fireman, Raleigh; Jim Ruffin, negro, fireman, Raleigh; Tom Fozan, negro, porter, Richmond, Va.; J. R. Roundtree, express messenger, Jacksonville, Fla.; O. V. Priddy, express messenger, deadheading, Eoykin, Va.; Henry King, deadheading.

The injured are Baggage-master Bryant, badly lamed about body and face; Express Messenger Brown, bruised and shocked; Express Messenger Coates, leg and arm broken; William Pope, negro, porter, scalded about the head and neck.

The trains met as the southbound No. 81 was coming out of a long curve in a deep fill, and both were running full speed. The crash was terrific, both locomotives being totally demolished. The fact that only three coaches were demolished and there were no passengers in these is considered remarkable.

Engineer Beckham, of the northbound train, is thought to have misread orders to meet No. 81 at Granite, less than a mile from the scene of the wreck. It was impossible for either engineer to have seen the light from the other train for more than a minute before the crash. The collision was on the main line of the Seaboard from north to south, and both were through trains.

To Improve Macadam Roads.

Mr. J. A. Davidson, county auditor and superintendent of county roads, is contemplating a general campaign of repair work for the macadam roads of the county. In many places the macadam is in bad shape and practically everywhere that it has been down five years or longer it is in need of repair. Superintendent Davidson now proposes to put the entire convict force on repair work, going over all the macadam.

He has found that a coat of fine gravel, spiked up with the macadam roadbed and rolled makes a splendid road and one which in the few instances tried has stood up well. The more recent road work in the county has been sand-clay and the results have been highly gratifying. The county now has about 35 miles of sand-clay road, 15 of which lies between here and Winston-Salem.

SUES HUSBAND AND BROTHER.

Mrs. T. J. McAdoo Asks Court to Allow Her Alimony.

Considerable local interest has been aroused by two civil suits of a more or less sensational character that have been instituted in the Superior court of Guilford county by Mrs. Louise Killian McAdoo, the wife of Mr. Thomas J. McAdoo. One of the suits seeks alimony from her husband without divorce and asks that the court require her husband to set aside so much of his estate as may be reasonable for the support of the plaintiff and her child.

The other suit is brought jointly against Mr. Thomas J. McAdoo and his brother, Mr. Victor C. McAdoo. The complaint alleges that Mr. Thomas J. McAdoo has sold and conveyed the bulk, if not all, of his real estate holdings to Mr. Victor C. McAdoo, and it is presumed that this suit is for the purpose of setting aside these alleged conveyances.

The papers filed in the cases give an intimation of sensational disclosures yet to come. Mrs. McAdoo alleges that about three years ago, after having been at the home of her father in South Carolina, she returned to Greensboro, and going to her home here, was refused admittance. Victor McAdoo, it is alleged, ejected her from the premises and placed her upon a train which carried her back to the South Carolina home of her father. Since that time she has been in Greensboro several times, but it is said she has at not one of these times been admitted to the McAdoo home.

The Country Club is making ready for a series of entertainments during the winter season and the first of these was held Saturday afternoon and evening. All Saturdays during the winter period are to be known as assembly days for the members of the club and their friends. An interesting program was enjoyed by the large number who went out Saturday, including music, numerous games, dancing, golfing and tennis.

That interest in music may be developed and fostered, a number of prominent male singers of the city have organized the McDowell chorus, named in honor of Edward McDowell, the noted American composer. THE TEACHERS' ASSEMBLY.

Annual Meeting Will be Held Here
Next Week.

A big event in store for Greensboro next week is the annual meeting of the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly and its allied organizations, which will convene Wednesday night and remain in session through Thursday and Friday. This is one of the most important conventions held in the state, and the people of Greensboro and Guilford county feel that they are fortunate in being permitted to play host to this great assemblage of educators this year.

The Greensboro Woman's Club, always foremost in any work of civic improvement and city pride, has joined with the Chamber of Commerce in finding homes for the teachers who may be unable to secure accommodations at the hotels and boarding houses.

A letter has been mailed to all the teachers of the state cordially inviting them to attend the assembly. The letter was signed by the following: Mrs. Lucy H. Robertson, president of Greensboro Female College; Dr. J. I. Foust, president of the State Normal and Industrial College; Prof. Thomas R. Foust, county superintendent of schools; Dr. J. L. Mann, superintendent of the city schools; R. D. Douglas, president of the Chamber of Commerce; J. Norman Willis, president of the Greensboro Merchants' Association, and T. J. Murphy, mayor of the city.

The program prepared for the assembly includes a large number of interesting topics for discussion. The opening day, Thursday, will be devoted to reports of distinctive educational progress of the year by districts, the reports to be made by the secretaries of the district associations. At the afternoon session attention will be given to the care, protection and sanitation of school buildings and grounds during the school term and vacations. Medical inspection and sanitary instruction will be topics also. A part of the afternoon program will be given to "The Patrons," bringing out ways in which the teacher can interest them. Under this topic will also come betterment association and school improvement clubs, entertainments and social activities, educational exhibits for county commencement, local county and state fairs, county newspapers, circular letters, public addresses, school committees and annual reports. Attention will also be given to the pupil, how to get him in school and keep him there, viz., by attraction, by compulsion, by the use of his time more effectively. The superintendent will discuss course of study, schedule of recitations, outside preparation and reading, use of school libraries, transportation of pupils and consolidation of schools.

In the evening the superintendents will discuss "The Teacher," professional improvement and supervision, teachers' association and reading circle, monthly reports and letters, visitation, oral and written suggestions, examination and certificates and a discussion on the course of study for the rural elementary schools. All of the above important questions to the teachers are on the opening day program, and the following days are to be marked by equally interesting discussions. In large manner the last days will be devoted to the subjects of the first day, the idea being to outline the great points in school work on the opening day and follow these discussions up from day to day. The foundation for the many discussions will in reality be laid on the opening day, and from it many helpful suggestions are expected to be made to the teachers.

Hospital For City Prisoners.
Owing to the amount of sickness that has recently prevailed among the city convicts, it has been found advisable to build a prison hospital for the detention of prisoners unable to work. Of a squad of 20 negroes examined a short time ago, it was found that half of them were unfit for work on account of the ravages of disease. The commissioners then decided it would be the part of wisdom and economy to build a hospital, and accordingly a frame structure has been erected near the convict camp, just beyond Greene Hill cemetery. Police officers, however, have been told to let it get out among the negroes that the city was not running a sanitarium, and that all time spent in the hospital would be made up in labor on the streets.

A. H. Price to Take Evidence in Williams Liquor Case.

The Glenn Williams "liquor case," as it is now frequently referred to, had another inning before Judge Boyd in United States District court last Friday, when argument was laid on a supplementary bill of complaint filed by counsel for Mr. Williams several days ago, seeking a mandatory injunction forcing the collector of internal revenue for this district to accept payment of government tax on certain parcels or packages of whiskey belonging to the complainant. The whiskey in question is a pur of 28,000 gallons, on which government tax amounting to $24,000 is due. It is alleged, the whiskey having remained in storage since the state voted prohibition and over which, rather over the tax, there has been and still is litigation.

It was charged in the complaint that Collector Brown had refused to accept the tax money on the whiskey, which Mr. Williams desired to dispose of outside of the state and that in this action the collector was following instructions from Internal Revenue Commissioner Cabell. The supplementary bill charged that the commissioner of internal revenue was actuated by malice and personal ill will toward Mr. Williams.

When the case was called District Attorney Holton entered a demurrer to the proceedings, which was overruled by Judge Boyd. Mr. Holton then made denial in toto of the supplementary bill of complaint and asked for time in which to prepare and file an answer to the second supplementary bill of complaint. This request was granted and Judge Boyd signed an order referring the matter to the standing master in equity, Mr. Augustus H. Price at Salisbury, with instructions that the master give the matter immediate attention; that he take proof or evidence and report at an early date to the court his findings of fact and conclusions of law.

Before leaving Greensboro for his home Mr. Williams stated that he had decided to institute a suit for damages against Collector Brown on account of that official's refusal to sell him revenue stamps. The suit will be brought in the Superior court of Yadkin county, but may be removed by Collector Brown to the Federal court.

"IF I HAD THE MONEY."

How Many Times in a Lifetime Does a Man Give Use to the Above Expression?

"If I only had the money I would attend the sale today and buy a horse" or it may be a cultivator or some kind of farm implements which are going to be offered at public sale. This expression has been used by a thousand farmers who never stopped to think that they could have avoided it and gotten what they wanted.

Let a farmer today open up a little bank account—in the savings department of the Greensboro Loan and Trust Company. Let him start with ten dollars or twenty dollars—no matter, just so he starts and sees for himself what he has missed and what in the future he can enjoy.

Then when a sale is on; then when sickness comes; then when he concludes he wants to educate his son or daughter, he has something, and he knows it is safe and he knows he is independent. Money earns money. Four per cent., with that compounded, means a large sum in a few years. And to open a savings account gets a man in the habit of saving. As a general rule, farmers get their money in smaller sums than the man of business in the city, and they let it slip through their hands and go on from year to year with nothing in the bank to their credit. Commence the next time you are in town. Go to the Greensboro Loan and Trust Company and talk it over with the manager of the savings department. He will show you how it is done. He will tell you how much interest you can earn in a year—give you all the details. Then start to save. Have something on hand in ready cash for the sale, for the sickness, for the trip you want to take. Surprise yourself—and you will be surprised how quickly you will have a neat sum to your credit. You are never too old and no one is too young.

The Greensboro Loan and Trust Company is a recognized institution of many successful years' business behind it. It is absolutely safe, absolutely conservative—and the farmer who waits a day longer than is necessary to open an account, no matter how small, is not only standing in his own light, but he is not doing all he could do for himself and family. Think it over and open an account. Money on the person or hidden about the house is liable to be lost or stolen.

Dread Disease Playing Havoc With the Sultan's Soldiers.

Cholera has broken out in the Turkish army and may prove more effective in ending the war between Turkey and the Balkan states than the forces of the enemy. The story of existing conditions is told in the following dispatch from Constantinople:

There are now more than 1,000 cases of cholera daily in and around Constantinople, and the death rate has reached 50 per cent. The authorities are powerless to cope with the situation. On Thursday last 3,000 cholera patients arrived by train at San Stefano. They would have been brought here, but for the protests of the railway company and the Austrian ambassador, who asked that they be sent to the lazaretto at Pecos and Ismidt. For twenty-four hours the patients remained in the train on a siding at San Stefano, without water, food or medical attention. Then they were shipped to the quarantine stations. If they had been of the lower order of animals they could not have been more neglected.

Yesterday a foreign doctor assisting in the military hospital discovered by accident that five soldiers dying of cholera, had been placed among the wounded. He ordered their removal. Bearers took up the dying men on their shoulders, but their condition was such that he ordered the bearers to drop them. This they literally did and the unfortunate were left lying in the mud for an hour, groaning and in convulsions, before they were removed on stretchers.

An extraordinary feature of conditions behind the Turkish lines at Tchatalja is the indifference of the army to the presence of authorized visitors. Any foreigner wearing either fez or a European hat may hire a vehicle and drive to the Turkish entrenchments and inspect the troops. There appears to be no cordon to prevent fugitives from returning to Constantinople.

Innumerable sick lie groaning in the fields to the rear, some of them in their last agonies. Countless cholera infected fugitives are straggling back on the fan-shaped road converging on Hademkeal from the outer forts. Thousands of patients and hundreds of dead lie on the ground around Hademkeal.

The three physicians at Derkos have been unable to more than bury the dead. Turkish officers regard further resistance at Tchatalja as impossible, but think it is equally impossible for the Bulgarians to occupy the Turkish positions without endangering the whole Bulgarian army through cholera.

Turks Lose Control of Macedonia.

A cablegram from London says an idea that the Turkish government may have had of benefiting by continued resistance must be shattered by news of the fall of Monastir Monday. In the capture of that important town the Serbians took three pashas, including the commander-in-chief, Zekki Pasha, 50,000 men and 47 guns, thus achieving the greatest individual success of the war.

Monastir was the second city of importance in European Turkey. It was Turkey's stronghold in Macedonia and by its downfall Macedonia passes completely out of Turkish hands.

Will Call Extra Session of Congress.

President-elect Wilson has decided to call Congress together in extraordinary session soon after his inauguration for the purpose of revising the tariff. In announcing his decision he made the following statement:

"I shall call Congress together in extraordinary session not later than April 15. I shall do this not only because I think that the pledges of the party ought to be redeemed as promptly as possible, but also because I know it to be in the interest of business that all uncertainty as to what the particular items of tariff revision are to be should be removed as soon as possible.

"The list of members of Congress and prominent Democrats throughout the country who had expressed themselves on the subject, showed that the sentiment in favor of the calling of an extra session was widespread—I might say almost unanimous. The extra session will have the advantage of giving us an early start toward effecting the reforms to which the Democratic party is pledged."

Senator Hoke Smith Pushing Measure For Its Extension.

Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, has announced his purpose of devoting much time during the approaching short session of Congress to promoting action on the house bill pending in the senate for an extension of the experiment work of the various state agricultural colleges of the country.

The purpose of the bill is to permit the colleges to establish an agency in each county of all the states, which would carry to the homes of the farmers the knowledge collected in the state institutions. Senator Smith would have the experiments made upon the private farms themselves, and he says the bill would authorize such practice. The measure provides an annual appropriation of $3,000,000. It passed the house last session, but failed in the senate.

Speaking of the bill, Senator Smith said:

"The best of farming requires art as well as science, and when the colleges of agriculture, through their skilled representatives, demonstrate upon a piece of land in the presence of the farmers of the neighborhood just what research has developed in aid of agriculture, then the farmers will more readily be able to apply the knowledge gathered from it.

"I do not believe there is a measure pending in Congress which will bring anything like the benefits for the expenditure intended that may be confidently expected to come from this measure. It will carry a vast amount of valuable information which will be immediately practiced among the farmers of the country, and all the people will receive a benefit from it.

"I earnestly hope that this measure may be passed at the next session so that the legislatures of the states which meet in January may take it up at once and arrange the local appropriations which are required to make it possible immediately to inaugurate demonstration work in all parts of every state of the union."

Rockingham Commissioners Indicted.

Reidsville Review.

In Superior court at Wentworth on Tuesday Judge O. H. Allen sprung a mild sensation by getting after the board of county commissioners for failure to carry out certain recommendations made by the grand jury of the preceding term of Superior court in regard to the county home. Judge Allen had the former grand jury's report read in open court wherein certain recommendations were made for improving and bettering the condition of the county home. His honor also called attention to certain criticisms made by a charitable organization of Reidsville, representatives of which had visited the county home and had made an unfavorable report as to condition of affairs there.

Judge Allen directed the solicitor to draw a bill of indictment against the board of county commissioners for failure to perform their duties in this particular instance. The solicitor did so and the grand jury promptly made the indictment.

Immigrants and Money.

Wall Street Journal.

Taking the average number of immigrants to this country for 20 years as about 250,000, and averaging their savings taken out of the country at $500, the annual total is $125,000,000, or in 20 years the economic difference is close to $2,500,000,000. Adding to this the larger sum sent through the postoffice, or through bankers, and the real total could probably be conservatively estimated at $6,000,000,000. Of course this estimate would be excessive if it meant merely savings from wages alone. But it means also the savings of trading, which are much larger, and easily bring up the average. The astonishing withdrawals of French and English gold coin by returning Greeks, Servians and Bulgarians in the recent past tell the tale.

STILL BIGGER HARVESTS.

The Farmers of the United States Not Yet Doing Their Best.

Wall Street Journal.

James J. Hill is one of those who believe that, notwithstanding the magnitude of the harvests of this year, nevertheless they fall short of the amount of agricultural products which should be garnered each year in the United States. That is a view which, it is understood, William C. Brown, president of the New York Central Railroad system, has held for some years. Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific, believes that the soil could be made to produce each year much more than it has yielded in this year or in any year of the past. B. F. Yaskin, who is thoroughly familiar with conditions in the Southwest, is in full agreement with these railroad authorities. They find in the ungarnered harvests of this year promise for the greater agricultural achievements which they believe to be possible when the science of farming on a greater scale is completely mastered.

The record harvest of corn which is now acknowledged in the latest of the monthly reports of the department of agriculture is considerably in excess of 3,000,000,000 bushels. It will probably be found, when the final record is made, to amount to approximately 3,200,000,000 bushels.

The enormous crop of corn should tend greatly to stimulate our foreign commerce next year. It will certainly bring gratifying returns to the railway companies of the United States. For, in addition to the hauling of the corn, a service which will yield an enormous sum to the railroads, there will follow the indirect effect of this harvest represented by unobstructed traffic of all kinds. This transportation has been already, since last summer, greater than at any time in recent years. It will be continued after the farmers receive the returns for their year's industry, for a considerable portion of those profits will be used to buy articles which must be transported from the markets to the farmers' homes.

At the time the crops were being garnered, estimates were frequently made that the actual money value of the crops of the year, including both food and cotton, would be somewhat between $9,000,000,000 and $10,000,000,000. The larger estimate is now accepted as the correct one.

This is only two-thirds as large an amount as the estimate made by James J. Hill two or three years ago of the value which the crops of the United States would produce. Mr. Hill was confident that, with enlightened and thoroughly economical and scientific methods, the farmers of the United States should receive each year at least as $15,000,000,000 for their harvests.

READY FOR CONGRESS.

Wall Street Journal.

Mr. Charles M. Steadman will leave in a few days for Washington to be in readiness for the short session of Congress to convene December 2. In speaking of the work of the session, Mr. Steadman said that while there would probably be some legislation with reference to matters requiring immediate consideration, undoubtedly most of the time of the session would be taken up in ordinary routine work and with the appropriation bill.

Being asked what he thought of the statement made in several newspapers that an effort would be made to pass the Aldrich currency bill, he replied that, in his opinion, there was not the slightest possibility of that bill being passed. He could not speak for others, he said, but as to himself, he was unalterably opposed to it.

His attention being called to President-elect Wilson's statement that an extra session of Congress would be called no later than April 15, Mr. Steadman said that Wilson's decision to call an extra session at an early date was in accordance with the general judgment displayed by him in all matters pertaining to public affairs. The American people have been promised a revision of the tariff downward, and that promise will be kept by the Democratic party. He said that the tariff schedules had been so carefully considered during the last two sessions that it did not look much time would be required to prepare to report to the house and have passed such tariff schedules as would meet the requirements of the country.

FLAN RAP'D WORK.

Congress to Lose No Time in Revising Tariff.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Leading Democrats agree with Senator John Sharp Williams that the work of the extra session should be confined to tariff and trust legislation. Bills reducing the tariff on metals, wool, cotton and sugar will be passed by the house early in the session and later the chemical and minor schedules will be taken up.

The ways and means committee has collected tariff information, gathered together by tariff experts. It was said by Chief Clerk Roper, of the committee, today that there will be no necessity for a long-drawn-out fight over any of the tariff bills. The ways and means committee as it is now composed will not be changed much by the new Congress.

Unless there should be an outlook for revolution in the house, Oscar W. Underwood will be the dominant factor in framing tariff measures, as he was last session. He has the best organized committee in Congress, and his sub-committees will be put to work on the various schedules the day the extra session convenes, and one schedule after another will be brought out as they were in the last extra session. The committee, as far as the Democrats go, is a harmonious organization.

Senator Simmons, who is in line of promotion to the chairmanship of the senate finance committee, is on friendly terms with Representative Underwood. He has said that he will redeem the pledges of the Democratic platform as accepted at Baltimore.

President-elect Wilson and the leaders of Congress worked in harmony during the campaign. They will work together in Washington, it is believed, and the president will be the buffer between the leaders of the senate and house and William J. Bryan, should one be needed.

While the president-elect is resting at Bermuda during the next few weeks, the Democrats of the two houses will endeavor to settle the general program to be followed at the extra session. It has not been determined as yet whether one general bill will be introduced, embracing wool, cotton, iron and steel revisions, which the Democratic house has previously passed, or whether each of these tariff schedules will again be brought in in the form of a separate bill.

Fugitive From Justice Worked as Detective.

Guthrie, Okla., Nov. 15.—Will R. McBride, former assistant state auditor of Oklahoma, who absconded thirteen months ago with $17,000 of the state's money, travelled abroad nearly all the time while absent and usually worked, while himself a fugitive from justice, for Scotland Yard and detective agencies in London and throughout the British Isles and later in New York for other detective firms. Now a confessed defaulter of $10,000 or more of the state's money, he is back in Guthrie, a guest at the home of Sheriff Murphy, where he is being concealed from members of the Bureau detective agency.

McBride has made a clean breast of everything, it is said, to Attorney General West, of Oklahoma, who is making ready to grab the "high roller" in the case.

While away McBride travelled in France, Austria and Germany. Though of his wife and two-year-old boy at home brought him back to New York last spring, and a long spell of sickness forced him finally to telegraph Attorney General West that he was at the Cadillac hotel, New York, sick and without money to pay his bill.

West telegraphed McBride the money and met him in Joplin, Mo., last Saturday. There, it is said, McBride told West all about his defaulting, which consisted of the issuance of many bogus state warrants.

Paying to Keep Well.

The Chinese afford us amusement by doing so many things backward; that is, reversing the order to which we are accustomed. Put it Dr. Dresser, of the United States bureau of education, is correct, they have the laugh on us in one thing. He considers absurd the American idea of waiting until we are ill and then running to the doctor. The object of medicine should be not to patch us up, but to keep us in good health. The Chineseman pays his doctor as long as he stays well. When he falls ill, the doctor's pay stops. The physician naturally does his best to ward off sickness. Preventive medicine probably in time will be the prime function of the physician, instead of dealing with pills and powders.

Aaron Burr, the Man Who Would Be King

THE good people of Jersey in 1773 were horrified by a "fall from grace" on the part of one of their best loved, most promising youths. The lad was seventeen year-old Aaron Burr, son of the AARON BURR president of Princeton college, son and grandson of famous clergymen. He himself had been prepared for college at eleven and had been a Princeton graduate at sixteen. Then, after studying theology for a year, he calmly announced that he did not believe in religion of any sort. His private life had already proved him to be as lacking in morals as in Godliness.

Burr was only nineteen when the revolution began. He dropped the study of law and enlisted as a private soldier in the patriot army. But he tired of regular military life and went as a volunteer with Benedict Arnold on the Arnold-Montgomery expedition against Quebec. He quarreled with Arnold and joined Montgomery. Then he quarreled with Montgomery and went back to Arnold. He could "get on" with no commander. Yet so bravely did he fight in that unfortunate expedition that on his return he was made a major.

He joined George Washington's staff. He and the chief were about as well suited to each other as a rattlesnake and a war horse. Burr openly sneered at Washington's stiff discipline and lofty honor. Washington found Burr's evil morals disgusting and was enraged at the youth's impudence. Then and there began a mutual and lifelong hatred. After six weeks, Burr left Washington's staff and joined Gen. Israel Putnam's. Though he and "Old Put" did not agree especially well with each other, Burr's courage and military talent raised him, in 1777, to the rank of lieutenant colonel. And he fought gallantly until 1779. Then, sick of war and angry because he was not promoted faster, he left the army.

He had long been one of Washington's opponents and had taken lively part in the Lee and Gates conspiracies against the chief. This and his quarrelsome nature may have been what barred him from promotion. For as long as Washington was in power Burr was made to feel the weight of his enmity. In later years Burr was mentioned for minister to France and for other high government posts. But President Washington always refused him such honors.

Leaving the army, Burr became a lawyer and soon afterward moved to New York. He rose to the height of his profession, married a rich widow and speedily became a mighty power in New York politics. In 1788 he was attorney general, and in 1791 went to the United States senate. In 1800 he "fired" with Thomas Jefferson in the election for president. In order to win the presidency he deserted his political friends and curried favor with his party's foes. But in spite of these and other sharp tactics Jefferson was at length elected. Burr, by the custom of those days, became vice-president.

It was the summit of his career. Then came the gradual fall. Burr had a political quarrel with Alexander Hamilton, which ended, July 7, 1804, in a pistol duel at Weehawken, N. J. Burr killed Hamilton. It was a fair fight, and one man was probably no more to blame, in the quarrel, than the other. Yet Hamilton had been so popular that Burr after the duel was politically crushed.

Smarting with anger at the public's disapproval, Burr went to the southwest and there plunged with feverish energy into a mysterious scheme whose exact nature is still doubtful. The general testimony is that he planned to conquer Mexico and to merge it with Texas, Louisiana, etc., into a great southwestern kingdom, empire or republic, with New Orleans for its capital and himself as its ruler. The scheme flourished for a time, but collapsed when the United States government denounced it and arrested Burr for treason. Burr was acquitted, but found it wise to leave America. He went to England, where he was maturing new plans when the British expelled him as "an embarrassing person." He was forbidden to return to his own country and for a time drifted about Europe, almost penniless.

But in 1812 he sailed for New York, disguised, and opened a law office on Nassau street. His genius quickly enabled him to win a new fortune. He added to his wealth by marrying a second widow, Mme. Jumel, who left him after he had squandered much of her fortune.

In the course of the next few years hard luck came again. Old, infirm, poor, shunned by his former friends, his family gone, Aaron Burr finally became an object of charity and died at Port Richmond, S. I., September 14, 1836.

TO PREVENT SOIL WASHING.

Deep Plowing and Suitable Crop Rotation Necessary.

Tall Butler in the Progressive Farmer.

We have generally, throughout the South, dealt with the question of soil erosion or washing for immediate results and with direct methods. These efforts have failed, as they must always fail. The manner of laying-off the rows and terracing are direct means of preventing present damage from washing; but if these alone are used—and they have generally been our sole dependence for preventing washing—failure is usually the result. Washing is not to be prevented by terraces alone, no matter how the rows are run or how the terraces are built.

We must take a larger view of the question of land erosion or washing and study the causes which lead to it. When we do this, more intelligent efforts will be made for its prevention.

We shall never solve this problem until we appreciate more fully the effects which deep plowing and humus, or vegetable matter, in the soil, have on the holding of the soil and the prevention of washing.

In the first place, there are many acres from which the top soil is now washing away that should never be cultivated, or if cultivated at all, not until put in better condition to withstand washing, and in no case should lands subject to excessive washing be cultivated in row or clean cultured crops more than one year in three. Those lands which will not carry a suitable rotation of crops without washing excessively, when farmed in the best practicable way, should be put in sod or permanent pasture. But most of our cultivated, rolling lands, wash excessively under present methods and all cannot be put in pasture. It, of course, follows that all except the land that washes most must be handled so as to prevent excessive washing and continue to grow our crops.

To repeat, no method can be adopted which will at once prevent this trouble. The means which will alone solve the trouble takes years to bring into full operation and effect. The first step, although we do not retard it the most important, must be deep plowing. This alone will not solve the trouble, for if other means of preventing washing are not used along with it, the result may be simply that, more soil being broken, more will be washed away. Still, no method for preventing cultivated lands from washing will be complete which leaves out deep plowing. A soil eight inches deep will hold nearly twice as much water before beginning to slide off the side-hill as will a soil four inches deep, and one twelve inches deep will withstand a heavier rain before washing than will one eight inches deep.

The second step, and the most important one, is a suitable crop rotation that will keep the soil filled with fibrous roots as much as practicable, and put into the soil sufficient humus-forming vegetable matter. Forest or sod lands wash but little, because the surface is covered with leaves of grass and trees and the soil is filled with roots of growing plants. When we learn the true lesson which these facts teach with reference to the prevention of the washing away of our cultivated soils, terraces will fail less frequently and in many cases they can be dispensed with entirely.

Lands which wash at all should not have clean cultured crops more than two years out of three and those that wash more, should not grow row crops more than one year in three; while those which wash most should never grow clean cultured crops.

But the best means of preventing undue washing will always be to fill the soil with humus. A soil full of humus will not only hold much more water before it begins to run, but the soil will also hold together better and will wash much less from a similar excess of water. When the land is plowed deep, and vegetable matter is plowed into the soil, and when a proper rotation of crops is kept on the land so as to keep it covered and full of fibrous roots as much as possible, then terracing and the proper laying-off of the rows will complete the means of preventing washing and will be successful on any land suitable for cultivation.

GOVERNMENT JOBS.

Some Good Advice on Seeking Federal Positions.

Charlotte Observer.

Since poor old William Henry Harrison was all but literally run over and trampled to death by the mob of office-seekers we have improved matters a good deal. More dependence is placed upon members of Congress in selecting appointees, and the civil service has been an invaluable aid. Nevertheless, a most harassing experience still confronts every president who enters upon his first term. Especially must this be so where his party has long been out in the cold. Such is the case with Wilson, as it was with William Henry Harrison, and speculations are already rife touching the methods which he is likely to pursue.

President Wilson, say some who should guess near the truth, purposes to take less part in filling offices than most of his predecessors have done. He will therefore not only receive but invite recommendations from Democratic congressmen, following the customary plan. He will also encourage Democratic congressmen to have Democratic voters signify their preference for postmasterships and other places of this kind. Thereby the congressmen, as well as himself, will escape a great deal of worry, enemy-making and wasted time. Likewise the idea of consulting the people in regard to their own local officers will be put into effect. It may have its drawbacks along with its merits, but it has been tried before and has worked well, on the whole. During Cleveland's second administration numerous primaries for North Carolina postmasterships were held. We shall not be surprised if the much-sought Charlotte postmastership is settled, with lively accompaniments, in just this way.

President Wilson will doubtless handle the troublesome problem as well as anybody could. One timely reminder, drawn from the Lexington Dispatch, we want to make just here. "Our people," admonishes the Dispatch, "are naturally hungry for the jobs, and if they are not careful they will get into a scramble and if they don't mind they will begin to imitate our Republican friends and begin to 'fly-blow' each other and divide the party into factions and play the devil in general. Don't let too many of us go wild about the offices that are to be handed out. There are not half enough to go around, and the truth about the matter is that the man who fails to get an office, if he is worthy of it, is better off than the man who succeeds, because if a man is worthy of an office he is worth a great deal more to his country as a farmer or in the professions as a business man than he can possibly get from a government position." And this is wholesome truth.

Speaker Clark to be Unopposed.

Representative Henry, of Texas, chairman of the rules committee of the house of representatives, who was a candidate for speaker two years ago, has announced that he would not oppose Speaker Clark when the new Democratic house is organized after March 4.

"It is not my intention to be a candidate for speaker of the house just elected," he said. "Requests from many parts of the country urging me to run have come to me, however, and it seems appropriate that I should make a public statement and acknowledgment of my appreciation. Unity of action whenever possible should be the first ambition of all good Democrats. Governor Wilson and those acting with him cannot afford to begin his administration with a factional contest against the present speaker. Whatever our personal ambitions, they should now be subordinated to the good of the Democratic party and the people's cause."

North Carolina Preacher in London.

Charlotte Observer.

The London correspondent of the Advance writes that Rev. A. G. Dixon is scoring a fine success at Spurgeon's Tabernacle. "Last Sunday night," he says, "I was in the Tabernacle and saw it crowded from floor to ceiling. There wouldn't have been room for an organ if one was wanted. But Doctor Dixon had broken the old Spurgeon tradition, for there was musical accompaniment—a grand piano, and an American organ. And didn't the hymns just go!" We are glad to read that this North Carolina boy is repeating in London his uniform record of success as a popular preacher. He did right to insist upon musical accompaniment. It helps mightily—inasmuch that in face of its helplessness even the conservatism of our seceders has broken down.

SIMMONS' MAJORITY 21,261.

Vote in Senatorial Primary Carried by Executive Committee.

With 47 members present in person and by proxy the state Democratic executive committee, in session in Raleigh last Thursday night, canvassed the vote in the recent senatorial primary and formally declared Senator F. M. Simmons the nominee of the party to succeed himself. The Avery county vote is still out and the Stokes county vote is unofficial. With Avery figures omitted Stokes used, the vote declared by the committee is Clark 16,418; Kitchin 17,017, and Simmons 14,687.

The majority of Simmons over both his competitors was 21,261. His majority over Judge Water Clark is 68,269 and over Governor Kitchin it is 37,670.

By congressional districts the senatorial primary vote was as follows: First, Clark 2,092; Kitchin 4,442; Simmons 5,889; second, Clark 1,154; Kitchin 6,629; Simmons 5,589; third, Clark 706; Kitchin 2,612; Simmons 8,594; fourth, Clark 2,018; Kitchin 4,946; Simmons 7,019; fifth, (with Stokes unofficial), Clark 2,135; Kitchin 11,524; Simmons, 6,792; sixth, Clark 1,253; Kitchin 3,955; Simmons 8,399; seventh, Clark 2,614; Kitchin 4,946; Simmons 10,865; eighth, Clark 894; Kitchin 3,546; Simmons 9,883; ninth, (with Avery omitted), Clark 1,554; Kitchin 3,435; Simmons 10,434; tenth, Clark 2,009; Kitchin 2,224; Simmons 11,239.

The committee adopted unanimously a resolution offered by J. R. Blair, of Montgomery county, urging upon President-elect Woodrow Wilson the selection of National Committeeman Josephus Daniels as a member of his cabinet. On motion of Mr. Watts it was ordered that copies of this resolution be furnished to the North Carolina delegation in Congress to be presented through the proper channels at the opportune time.

Votes of thanks were tendered State Chairman Webb and Secretary Brock for their effective service during the campaign and high tribute paid for great victory won with the shortest means and fewest available campaigners in the history of the party in the state, including the biggest vote for president, for congressmen and for governor in the history of the party in the state and the largest majority in the legislature on record, 104 in the house and 47 in the senate.

Another Tar Heel Governor.

Raleigh News and Observer.

Go where they will North Carolinians make their way to the head of the table. In the recent election, Elias M. Ammons, born and reared in Jackson county, was elected governor of Colorado on the Democratic ticket, while his cousin, H. Cardon, from the same western North Carolina county, was elected as a Wilson elector from Colorado. The Jackson County Journal says Governor-elect Ammons was born in the town of Sylvia and is a grandson of Rev. Elias Brendle, who lived there for many years, that he is a nephew of Mrs. A. B. Dills, of Sylvia, and has a number of relatives in Jackson county and other parts of western North Carolina. It delights the hearts of patriotic Tar Heels at home to hear that these "dispersed abroad" are succeeding to places of honor and large service.

Ant Hills Forty Feet High.

West African ant hills are veritable giants, frequently standing 40 feet high. These ant hills are shaped something like a sugar loaf and are divided inside into hundreds of tiny rooms. They have, needless to say, myriads of inhabitants, and these are all busily occupied in various ways forming tunnels, making roads, gathering food and watching over the eggs and young ones.

The natives are afraid to touch these hills, except from a distance with firearms. The ants often make their strongholds around trees and they are built very solidly, with sides sometimes 20 inches thick.

The inside is hollow and at the top there is a sort of attic. The royal cell, where the queen ant lives, is always found on the ground floor. This good lady is a prisoner but is carefully fed by her busy subjects. The eggs she lays being immediately carried away and deposited in rooms set apart for the purpose.

TAFT TOASTS WILSON.

President Sang His "Swan Song" in New York Speech.

New York, Nov. 16.—President Taft sang his "swan song" as chief executive of the nation tonight. As a guest of the Lotus Club, the president responded to the toast, "The President," in a speech which was one of his hearers considered the best remarkable he has ever made. He shifted from grave to gay and on the philosophy which he said on years in the White House had taught him to a discussion of problems which face the nation. He laughed at the outcome of the election, smiled when he spoke of some of the plans President-elect Wilson, and touched with gentle sarcasm on William Bryan.

In his serious moments the president earnestly advocated the admission to the halls of Congress of the members of a president's cabinet, declaring that a six-year term in the presidency was enough for any man, advocated strongly the placing in civil service of practically every officer in the government service and hinted broadly that Congress should provide for ex-presidents so that they need not lower the dignity of the position they have held when they enter into private life.

His chief regret, the president said, was that he had been unable to influence the United States senate to ratify the arbitration treaties with France and Great Britain. In the course of his speech he told his audience that he would leave office with a deepest gratitude to the American people for the honor they had given him and with the belief that enough progress had been accomplished in his administration to warrant him in feeling that he had done good for his country. His humorous references to the burdens of the White House, to his successor and to Mr. Bryan brought forth and after rounds of applause. He gave a toast to his successor:

Health and success to the able, distinguished and patriotic gentleman who is to be — and he raised his glass while his hearers rose to their feet, "the next president of the United States."

Preparing For Legislature.

It is understood that there are already in process of preparation a number of bills to be introduced in approaching legislature and campaigns being planned for their introduction into law that will give the 1913 session a distinctly progressive atmosphere, at least, as to measures proposed, if not bills actually passed. A distinct advance in anti-trust legislation is being hinted at, a complete revision of the election law, a general primary for all parties, a blanket commission form of government and initiative and referendum laws for cities optionally adopted, the application of the Torrens system of land titles and a variety of other departures.

This is Hard to Believe.

An Associated Press dispatch from Washington says: Women are becoming the heaviest drinkers of intoxicants in Washington, according to Albert E. Shaffer, attorney of the Anti-Saloon league, in an address before the man's Christian Temperance union. Furthermore, according to attorney, the fair sex is more attracted to the stronger alcoholic beverages, while the men are being satisfied with a place on the water wagon.

Infants Drowned Unwelcome Baby.

Cincinnati, Nov. 15.—Disappointed because their 10-days-old baby was boy when they wanted a girl, and Mrs. Fred Kipp, each 22 years of age, wrapped the child in a towel and tossed him into the river. They were arrested last night and the husband confessed, saying his wife for wanting to discontinue the child. When arraigned their cases were continued for November 27. The baby's body not recovered.

BONFIRE OF BONNETS.

Militant Kansas Suffragettes Consign
Headgear to the Flames.

Pittsburg, Kan., Nov. 14.—"The lid that held us down for years is off," With this exclamation from Mrs. Elizabeth Callean, chairman of the Crawford County Suffragist Association, 200 women tonight hurled bonnets into a bonfire that had been built at the public square here, and amid cheers and songs marched around the blaze in celebration of the Kansas decision to grant its women the right to vote.

The demonstration opened with a meeting in the court house. After an address by Mrs. Callean the women marched from the building and the bonfire was lighted. Every one carried an old bonnet. With a cue from the chairman, bonnets of every hue sailed through the air. Then, joining hands, the women marched around the blazing bonnets and proclaimed their victory.

More than a thousand persons witnessed the demonstration. In the excitement two men threw their hats into the fire and joined the parade around it.

"That's patriotism!" shouted an enthusiastic suffragist. "Their hats are in the ring, too."

"If this form of celebration is to be followed extensively by the women suffragists they will never carry another state," said a husband, as he watched the flames eat up a "creation" for which, when new, he had paid an exorbitant price.

"Oh! we don't care for the bonnets we wore when we couldn't vote," was the wife's rejoinder.

Among the bonnet burners was Mrs. W. H. Irwin, seventy-one years old, who knew Abraham Lincoln and campaigned for him in 1861. She was a member of a sextet of girl singers who traveled over the country participating in campaign meetings.

Baltimore, Nov. 6, 1912.

A MASTER STROKE IN MERCHANDISING

Places us in possession of some extra nice goods in ladies' suits, ladies' misses' and children's coats, and today we cleaned out entirely every hat, trimmed and untrimmed, that one of the largest jobbers in Baltimore had on hand, and are enabled to offer savings that under ordinary conditions would be out of the question. For the past three days I have not lost one minute's time going from jobber to manufacturer and vice versa on the hunt of something which I figured I must have when I left home, that is, something to sell at a sacrifice right in the heart of the season when other merchants are asking full prices.

To maintain the reputation that "A. V. Sapp Sells it Cheaper" I have necessarily got to buy it cheaper. This you can only do when you clean up entire lots where stocks are broken, and you know the good things are the first to be broken. Upon my arrival home you will find in my store the greatest lot of values that you have ever seen placed under one roof in Greensboro. This is no fairy tale. I have bought and will have displayed more than $10,000 worth (Christmas goods included) real up-to-date merchandise at around 60 cents on the dollar. If you don't come in for your share it's your fault. It's all bought for you, so why not take advantage of it, and save money. We carry everything but groceries, and I pay as much attention to buying one item as another, and not a dollar's worth of goods goes in my store bought regular if I can get something similar twice as good at the same price. There is one thing you can always count on, that is, whatever you buy from A. V. Sapp the quality is better or the price is lower, simply because A. V. Sapp "Sells it Cheaper." Your money back on every dollar not entirely satisfactory. 318 South Elm street. adv.

Huffines-Northam.

At the residence of Rev. and Mrs. Thomas G. Faulkner Wednesday, November 6, Crawford W. Huffines, of Reidsville, and Miss Vera A. Northam, of Greensboro, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by Mr. Faulkner in the presence of a small company of relatives and intimate friends of the young couple. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Northam and is a beautiful and attractive young woman, possessing many graces and charms of character. Mr. Huffines is a young man of fine business qualifications and holds a responsible position with the Virginia Life Insurance Company.

Dan J. Joyce, Sanville, Henry county, Va., says: "I took a cold with a cough which hung on for two years. Then I commenced using Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and the cough finally left me and now I am perfectly strong and well." Is best and safest for children and contains no opiates. Howard Gardner.

An implement for sharpening tools has been patented by a Pennsylvania man. A handle has a frame in which a wheel with a facing of sharpening material is pivoted. This facing consists of a series of ridges and interposed grooves spirally arranged. The upper part of the frame has a sheath to hold a tool or the blade of a tool against the sharpening surface. On the other side of the wheel is a driving mechanism consisting of a smaller

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

People of Northern Guilford Pleased With Good Road Work.

To the Editor of The Patriot:

Now that the strain of the election is over, the people of our community are getting back into their normal state and can look around. They are amazed and pleased beyond words at the rapid progress being made by the road force under Superintendent Stanley. From Hardie's mill, on Reedy Fork, via Brown Summit and out to the main Danville road near Monticello high school, the road has been beautifully graded and sand-clayed and is as fine a piece of work as will be found in the county.

The force is now grading the main road from Mrs. Walker's via Squibb Moore's and on to Monticello, thence to the Rockingham and Alamance county lines; and right here we want to say a good word where we know it has been well merited. Under Superintendent Stanley the work has gone forward to completion very rapidly, and better work could not be done by any force under any superintendent. He has the knack of getting splendid work from the convicts, and they all respect and obey him absolutely. Again he is very courteous to all whose lands he has to touch and gets his roads straightened and widened through property without the least friction. The county is fortunate in being able to keep such a valuable man in charge of its road-building, and he should be well rewarded. The convicts seem happy and contented and are always seen in clean work clothes, faithfully performing their duties under polite and gentlemanly guards.

Northern Guilford farmers from this time on will show their due appreciation of these good roads by bringing thousands of dollars worth of produce to Greensboro markets that have gone heretofore to Reidsville, Burlington and Danville, and they hold in very high esteem the board of county commissioners who are giving them such fine work with its attendant opportunities.

The health of the community is splendid, and with wheat all sowed, corn very generally garnered, winter wood stored away for bad weather, we can stand a pretty hard siege of winter weather.

"ON THE CORNER"

[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

The wheat yield of the country has been so bountiful the present season that it is now estimated that there will be 100,000,000 bushels available for export purposes.

According to figures prepared by the bureau of statistics at Washington, the cotton goods trade ranks seventh among the industries of the country, the value of its yearly product being over $628,000,000.

Any readers who may be interested in growing grapes either in the home garden or on a commercial scale should have farmers' bulletin No. 471 on grape growing issued by the department of agriculture at Washington.

After making a series of experiments in the mixing of sheep branding paints the Wyoming station recommends as both durable and satisfactory a paint made by mixing venetian red, linseed oil and turpentine, enough of the latter ingredient being used to give the right consistency.

A Hereford cow belonging to a Johnson county (Ia.) farmer seems to have been the best as a prolific breeder. The other day she gave birth to four calves, all of which are alive and kicking at the present time. Two of the calves are black and two red, and one of each color has a white face like its mother.

When the cow coughs it may be due to one of two causes. There may be some local irritation tending to cause it or she may have contracted tuberculosis. In any case, unless she recovers from the cough soon, it would be a good idea to have her examined and tested by a competent veterinarian. If it should be tuberculosis the sooner the owner finds it out the better.

While peaty soils are usually rich in nitrogenous elements they are not well balanced—need fixing. To begin with, they are usually sour owing to the fact that because of the location of such soils they do not get proper drainage. They should be first drained, then limed, and potash and phosphate acid added in the form of farmyard manure or commercial fertilizers.

The American laboring man has a problem on his hands in the new year. He is under of providing his family with beef at 20 cents a pound, but the German workman is in a still worse fix, for in Berlin during August beef was quoted at 45 cents and until then at 47 cents a pound, and this notwithstanding the fact that the wage paid the German is considerably less than that received by the toiler on this side of the water.

It is well for those who put in some of their spare time trapping to remember that a mink skin that is only fair the middle of November is likely to be prime and fetch several dollars more if it is not taken until three or four weeks later. Of course the average trapper argues that it is better that he himself should catch the mink early and get a pelt of only fair quality than to delay and let some other fellow get it when it is prime.

Nothing indicates more clearly the confidence of business interests in the business stability of the present era and that good times are ahead than the fact that the big insurance companies of the country are offering to loan money at this rate is a very definite acknowledgment of the value of the farms of the country.

A friend who lives in southern Mississippi writes that thousands of mature apple trees in the section in which he lives are practically done for and dead this fall as a result of the unusually dry summers of last year and the year before. He further reports that this situation has been aggravated owing to the fact that these sick trees have tried to ripen an overload of fruit this season. The fruit as a consequence is small in size and of inferior quality and is worth practically nothing to market.

The tendency that cattle, and particularly young stock, show in the matter of gnawing old boards, eating manure and chewing old bones is simply an indication that they are not getting in their rations the bone forming elements that they should. The so called depraved appetite is the result of a natural craving for these elements. Bran, clover hay, alfalfa and oilmeal are foods that will furnish these lacking elements. Small quantities of bonemeal given in the grain ration will answer the same purpose.

As a preliminary to clearing a piece of brush land there is nothing that will do more in a shorter time than a flock of Angora goats. They will rip up the bark from everything except large trees and generally annihilate vegetation.

Lord Rosebery, the English statesman and explorer, has a farm on which he has produced 2,000 bushels of potatoes per acre, and another noteworthy fact of this year is that it was on land that had been cropped continuously for a thousand years.

An interesting fact that probably is not generally known is that banana fiber has been in use in Brazil for a good many years in the manufacture of lace and dress goods, while flour made of the fruit has been a market commodity for the past twenty years.

The spread of the horse plague would seem to create a new and additional demand for the gas tractor as a means of doing farm work. One advantage of these iron horses is that, while they sometimes have balky spells, they never kick in fly time, get their tails over the lines or die of plague, distemper or glanders.

The night fires that tourists crossing Kansas and Nebraska see these days are not straw stacks set afire merely to get rid of the straw. They are rather the funeral pyres of hundreds of the horses of the two states that have died of the horse plague and whose bodies are being consumed to prevent a further spread of the epidemic.

A lady reader of this department living near Pawpaw, Mich., reports both strawberries and raspberries gathered from her vines and canes within the past three weeks and in quantity sufficient to supply the table. Besides these freaks, she reports apple trees in bloom at just about the time when they are getting ready to shed their leaves.

The fund of a church located at Carrington, N. D., has been increased by $400 lately as a result of the sale of the potatoes raised on a patch of ground donated to the church. This plan would seem to be a good one to follow in the case of a good many small churches that have a hard time to make both ends meet at the end of the year.

Experiments show that sorghum cannot be safely and profitably grown north of latitude 45 degrees F.; that peanuts do not thrive well, as a rule, north of 40 degrees F., and the northern limit in the growing of sweet potatoes is about the same. The soy or field bean will do well as far north as 45 degrees F., while the cowpea does best south of 41 degrees F.

The bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture at Washington estimates the total output of the cereal crops of the country at the enormous volume of 133,016,000 tons, which will be 20.3 per cent greater in weight than last year and 6.1 per cent greater than the bumper yield of 1910. The potato crop is put at 35 per cent greater than that of 1911, 10 per cent larger than the crop of 1910, and 2 per cent larger than the record crop of 1909.

It is well for the parents and other friends of young people who incline toward matrimony to remember that, while friendly counsel and advice to them are sometimes in order, it is after all a procedure the consequence of which, happy or otherwise, they themselves will have to bear. It is well to remember that young people do not marry each other's parents, aunts or uncles; hence these relatives are not the ones who are most directly concerned.

In selecting potatoes for seed purposes it is not only best to get those of desired type and size, but equally important that the seed chosen shall come of prolific stock—that is, from seed that produced as many good sized tubers as possible in the hill. The only way such seed can be selected is by hand digging, which gives time for the inspection of each hill as it is opened. The selection of seed potatoes from the bin promiscuously has just about as much to commend it as selecting seed corn from the bin after the crop is husked.

On a milk company's dairy farm in New Jersey it is said that ten men are today milking regularly thirty-five cows each twice daily. They begin work at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and continue milking five hours. They then rest seven hours, until 2 a. m., and milk again for a like period, having the period from 7 a. m. to 2 p. m. to use as they like. The fastest milker of the ten milks a cow on the average in every seven and a half minutes, while the average rate is one cow in each eight minutes and a half. The men receive 17½ cents an hour for their services, besides room and board.

There are a good many fellows who would rate as a whole lot better citizens and serve their communities and their families better if they would put into life insurance the hard earned money they are now handing over the bar in some nearby saloon or sending away in money orders to some foreign booze house. Were they to do this their wives and children would at least have a bit of peace and no little comfort after they were dead, whereas if the earnings continue to be put into booze, as now, there will be no rest or peace for them now or later, as the poor wife will likely have to take in washing to defray a drunkard's funeral expenses.

A PEANUT INQUIRY.

The writer has an inquiry in regard to the raising of peanuts from a reader who lives near Springfield, Ill. While we have never grown peanuts, there are two or three suggestions which may be helpful to our friend. The peanut is a member of the legume family and needs a genial and rather long growing season in which to mature properly. Situated as his land is, south of latitude 40 degrees, the conditions in this respect should be favorable. The conditions favorable for the successful growing of beans apply equally to peanuts, and this means that the best soil is one that is warm and mellow and will not bake. The seed should not be planted until danger of frost is over and should be drilled in rows about twenty inches apart and the seed from eight to ten inches apart in the row. Peanuts are a soil renewer, and there is this further point in their favor that the tops make excellent hay after the goobers have been harvested. Inasmuch as our friend has not had experience in agriculture before, we would suggest that he try from half an acre to an acre at first, for the reason that if his trial with them should not prove all that he could wish the experience will not be too costly.

KEEP THE FRUIT COOL.

The keeping quality of apples is greatly increased if they are picked only on those days or portions of days when it is cool. In the Hood river valley, which is famed the world over for its fine apples, this rule is quite generally followed. Some years ago the same fact was nicely demonstrated in a storage experiment, some of the apples for which were furnished by the writer's orchard. Several boxes of fruit were picked in the cool of the day and put in cold storage at once, while several other boxes were left in the orchard purposely during several warm days and then stored. As the fruit was inspected at intervals it was readily observed that the apples which were picked when it was cool and kept cool were in far better condition than the fruit that had been allowed to stand in the orchard. The point above referred to is one that every packer of fruit should keep in mind.

SHOULD BE WATCHED.

All bulls, no matter how tame they are supposed to be, should be handled at all times with the possibility in mind that they may become mad and hurt some one. An instance tending to show this was related in the hearing of the writer a short time since. A supposedly gentle bull, on whose docility the owner prided himself greatly, was being exhibited to some admiring friends. Wishing the animal to move his position a bit that he might appear to better advantage, the owner struck him lightly with a whip. In an instant the devil in the animal, until that time latent, burst forth, and, turning on his owner, he killed him before the eyes of his friends. It is well to regard these brutes as just what they are—treacherous and unreliable. Then if they prove anything better a fellow is ahead that much. If they do not he is not taken off his guard and does not have his life insurance matured in a hurry.

LEGHORNS STILL LEAD.

At the close of the forty-sixth week of the international egg laying contest which is being conducted at Storrs Agricultural college, Connecticut, F. G. Yost's pen of White Leghorns were in the lead with a score of 985 eggs, while Beulah Farm White Wyandottes ranked second with 945 eggs. The Marwood Farm White Leghorns are third with a score of 941 eggs, while the T. S. Poultry Farm pen of White Leghorns is fourth with a production of 934 eggs. The English pen of White Leghorns belonging to Thomas Barron rank fifth with 908 eggs. It is interesting to note that of the eight pens that have made a score of 900 eggs or better seven belong to the White Leghorn class, the one exception being the pen of White Wyandottes mentioned above.

A PRACTICAL SERVICE.

The state experiment station of Florida is performing a service for the farmers and truck gardeners of the state that other commonwealths might well follow the example of. The service referred to consists in the analyzing of samples of fertilizers for the farmers of the state free of charge. There is no law compelling the state chemists to perform this service, but they seem to have taken the ground that it was perfectly proper to do it so long as no laws of the state prohibited it. In connection with this work the station chemists are endeavoring to give those who sent samples of fertilizers to them some practical instruction in the chemistry of soil and fertilizers and their efforts seem to be bearing good fruit.

THE RARE DAYS OF FALL.

Those miss much of life who have not during these fine fall days taken time enough from their pressing work to enjoy some of the beauties of the splendid outdoor world. There have been pictures set with glowing elms, poplar and cottonwoods, gorgeous maples and flaming sumac and Virginia creeper that no human artist ever approached. Then there were the freshness, crispness and invigoration of the pure fall air and the glow of health in the cheek following the vigorous walk and the appetizing picnic lunch. Rare are these fall days, and he who prizes life in the best sense should make the most of them.

Ottoman Statistics.

The condition of the country districts of North Carolina reminds one of the story told of the chief magistrate of the city of Damascus. The French government asked the Ottoman government to exchange with them all information bearing on vital statistics, to which proposition the latter government agreed. One report was received from the authorities of Damascus, which read as follows:

"Question. What is the death rate of the city? Answer. In Damascus everybody dies on the command of Allah. Some die young, some die old, but everyone must die."

"What is the rate of births? A. I can not answer this question. Allah alone knows that."

"What is the supply of drinking water? A. Since time immemorial nobody died of want of water in the city of Damascus."

"How much goods are imported? How much are exported? A. I never care of my neighbor's business, and I can not say how many camel loads are brought to and carried from Damascus."

"General remarks pertaining to the health and welfare of the people. A. Since Allah has sent his prophet, Mohammed, into the world, who has cleansed the world with fire and sword, things are a little better, but there is much to be done yet, and much room for improvement."

"And now, my sweet lamb, do not ask any more questions, which are neither good for you or for anybody else. This is the first and last blank I fill out for you."

There is a state law requiring the recording of all deaths occurring in towns in North Carolina, but Allah alone knows the health conditions of the country districts. We hope the next general assembly will pass a law which will require the registration of all deaths in the state. Then the state board of health would be in a position to intelligently advise the county health authorities regarding the best health policies to follow in their respective counties, as they are now doing in the towns. It certainly isn't fair to the rural districts of North Carolina to pay so little attention to their health conditions. The lives and health of these people are as important as the lives and health of the people in the cities and towns, and hence, the state should study the amount and cause of sickness and death in the country as it is now doing in towns. Length of life is being increased in our cities as a result of definite knowledge of the cause of death. Why not in the country? When we have state-wide registration of vital statistics the rural districts will have an equal chance.

Diphtheria and Antitoxin.

The fatality from diphtheria used to be from 25 to 75 per cent. Now, when anti-toxin is administered the first day of the disease its fatality is only one and one-half per cent., and the fifth day it is 19 per cent. From this it will be seen that diphtheria should be recognized early and antitoxin applied at once.

Vital Statistics and Crime.

It has been found that where the cause of death is certified to by a physician, health officer or coroner a number of prosecutions result, because undesired children frequently meet foul play very early in life. The number of such crimes rapidly decreases after the passage of a vital statistics law. Let's protect the innocents in North Carolina.

Misjudged the Uniform.

During the war in the Philippines General Charles King, one day while resplendent in his uniform, which was made especially brilliant by several rows of new brass buttons, came upon a raw recruit. The latter was on post duty and failed to salute the general.

"Are you on duty here?" asked General King, with a show of anger.

"I guess so," said the recruit. "They sent me out here, anyway."

"Do you remember your general orders?" asked the general.

"I guess I do—some of them," said the raw recruit.

"Well," said the general, "don't you know that you are supposed to salute your officers. Don't you know I am the general of this brigade?"

"You the general," said the new recruit. "Gosh, no; I didn't know it. I thought you was the chief of the fire department."

NEGLECT OF INFANTS.

Mothers Who Murder Their Progeny in This Way.

Columbia Record.
A jury in Mineola, N. Y., yesterday convicted a young mother of criminally neglecting her young baby. The verdict was manslaughter in the second degree and sentence will be passed upon her in accordance with the verdict. The woman, just 21 years old, is Mrs. Henrietta Tyson, and through her neglect of her baby, the little one died of starvation. The chief witness against the woman was her grandfather, who testified that she neglected the baby in order to attend moving-picture shows. The little one, because of this neglect, was not properly nourished and starved to death. The mother was charged with the neglect of her infant, who died of starvation. The chief witness against the woman was her grandfather, who testified that she neglected the baby in order to attend moving-picture shows. The little one, because of this neglect, was not properly nourished and starved to death.

Perhaps the greatest crimes are those of this character. Does this not furnish a case where the woman is more guilty of murder than if she had wilfully done to death the little infant? Brought into the world unasked, the little ones for years are absolutely dependent upon their parents, and the law should be iron-handed in dealing out punishment to those who neglect their obligations to society, the child and the Creator. The fashionable woman who gives her tender infant into the care of a nurse, never superintending the preparation of its food and accepting the death of that infant philosophically when it occurs, is just as guilty as if she had wilfully murdered the child. Thousands of children die annually because of neglect, and the sentencing of one or two more mothers who neglect their infants will have a salutary effect. There is no living being who better understands the care and attention required to raise a child than the mother who devotes her efforts to it, and these mothers have never, and will never, understand the other class of mothers who entrust the dearest possession in the world to the care of one who has no interest in its welfare. Some mothers will turn their children over entirely to others to raise and yet would not trust their jewels to the keeping of the same party to whom they entrust their babies.

Schools to Close For Assembly—Meeting of Committeemen.

To the School Committeemen of Guilford County:

As you know, the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly meets in Greensboro on Wednesday night, November 27, and continues until Saturday morning, November 30. At the October meeting of the board of education an order was passed authorizing all the schools in the county to close for two days in order to give the teachers an opportunity to attend the meetings of the assembly. The board also authorized no deduction from the salary of those teachers who attend the assembly. In accordance with this order, all the schools of the county will close, but only those teachers who attend the meetings of the assembly will be entitled to receive pay for the one day which is missed and is not a legal holiday.

After a consultation with the authorities of the teachers' assembly, we have arranged a meeting of school committeemen in the court house here on Friday, November 29, at 11 o'clock. State Superintendent Joyner is now preparing a program for the school committeemen, and I hope that every one of you will meet with us on that day. It is a great opportunity for the teachers and committeemen of the county to come in contact not only with the leading educators of North Carolina but some of the most prominent ones in this country. You are, therefore, cordially invited to meet at the court house at the time I have named, and also attend any other meetings of the assembly which are held on that day.

With best wishes, and hoping to see you here on Friday, November 29, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
THOS. R. FOUST,
County Superintendent.

In fact, it suits my case better than any cough syrup I have ever used and I have used a good many, for I am now over seventy years old." Howard Gardner.

The Wood Pigeon Nearly Extinct.

Toronto Globe.
The wonderful flocks that darkened the sky, bent and broke the branches of trees and nested in colonies covering miles of forest, that were knocked down by swinging poles and gathered in nets, that were shipped in barrels and wastefully handled as food are virtually extinct. Stories of abundance are remembered with stories of wanton destruction of schooner loads wasted and of the filling of barrels with the breasts pinched from the squabs, the bodies being thrown away. The wood pigeon could not now exist in oldtime abundance, for such flocks would clear away the crops which have supplanted the forest, but it is deeply to be regretted that protective measures were not adopted.

The Angel Child.

Albert was a solemn-eyed, spiritual-looking child.

"Nurse," he said one day, leaving his blocks and laying his hand gently on her knee, "nurse, is this God's day?"

"No, dear," said the nurse, "this is not Sunday; it is Thursday."

"I'm so sorry," he said, sadly, and went back to his blocks.

The next day and the next, in his serious manner he asked the same question and the nurse tearfully said to cook:

"That child is too good for this world."

On Sunday the question was repeated, and the nurse, with a sob in her voice, said: "Yes, Lambie, this is God's day."

"Then where is the funny paper?" he demanded.

Helping Solve the Mystery.

A man who is steadily employed finally had a day off and decided to go fishing, taking his luncheon with him. When he reached the creek he discovered that he had dropped the lunch packet somewhere on the road and hastened back to look for it. Presently he met a husky negro, who was looking happy and picking his teeth.

"Did you find anything on the road as you came along?" asked the gentleman.

"No, sah," answered the negro, "I didn't find nothing. Couldn't a dog have found it and eat it up?"

Two Widows and Another

By Bryant C. Rogers

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Moses Davenport owned the sawmill in the village of Dord. He was also half-owner of a grocery store. He also owned the vacant lots opposite the Methodist church. It can thus be seen at a glance that Moses was a man of importance. Added to the facts above given, he was forty years old and a widower, and it had been repeatedly announced that he would never marry again, having promised his wife on her dying bed that he would not do so.

One spring day the village of Dord buzzed with excitement. Nobody had buzzed downstairs, and the doctors had not discovered a case of measles. The place had not been turned into a summer resort, and none of the hogs roaming the streets had come down with the cholera. All the excitement had been created by the report that Moses Davenport had quarreled with his sister, who kept house for him, and that she was going away and he had been heard to say:

"You can go and be hanged to you, and you need never come back! In six months I shall have a wife to run the house for me!"

Those were the exact words of Moses, as overheard by neighbors, and as they were repeated from mouth to mouth the excitement was intensified. There were widows in and around Dord, and everybody decided offhand that in case of marriage it would be a widow. There were Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Stringer, Mrs. White, Mrs. Elkins, Mrs. Bacon and others, and who would draw the lucky number? They were each and severally notified of what had happened, and what might happen, and though more or less flattered each one tried to assume an air of indifference as she replied with beating heart:

"Is that all? Well, Moses Davenport will waste his time if he comes spooning around here. I wouldn't look at him twice."

These words were faithfully reported to the widower, and in one way and another the excitement was maintained for a week. Then an agent for a new liver had come along, and people rushed to buy, and other things were forgotten. Then Moses Davenport went courting. His first call was on Mrs. Davis. No girl would have called it by that name. He talked about the weather, predicted a thunder storm and said it was his opinion that potatoes would be high in the fall. The widow agreed with him. She smiled and laughed as she agreed. She congratulated him on the way he looked, and when he advised her to set out her tomato plants early she said she would take the advice of a wise man and do so. No talk of admiration, love or matrimony, but a very pleasant call—so pleasant, in fact, that after Moses had departed the widow said to her old maid sister:

"I can't afford to marry no such man."

"Sarah, that man will ask me with in three months to be his wife."

"How can you tell?" was asked.

"A woman's intuition."

"But he didn't say anything in particular."

"No, he just came spooning around. I hadn't seen him for six months, and he wanted to see if I had lost any of my good looks. I haven't, and he'll be back again."

"And if he asks you to marry him?"

"I shall say yes, of course, but not in too big a hurry to do so. Didn't you notice his looks of admiration?"

The old-maid sister hadn't noticed any such looks, but she had no other home to go to and therefore answered that she had.

On leaving the house of Mrs. Davis Moses called at that of Mrs. Elkins. His call was friendly. There was more talk about the weather and thunderstorms, and on rising to depart he said:

"Widow, string beans are going to be scarce and high this summer, and if I were you I'd get them planted a bit early."

That was the nearest to love he got, but upon his departure the widow said to her daughter:

"Well, Hetty, you will soon be having a new pa."

"Why, is Mr. Davenport going to ask you to marry him?"

"He certainly is."

"But he talked about string beans."

"Yes, when you can get a widower to talking about string beans something else is bound to follow. It's but a step from that to matrimony."

"But I never heard of that before."

"There's a good many things you never heard of before. Now then, don't you go to telling around that I'm trying to catch Mr. Davenport, for I'm not. The poor man is lonely, and I may take pity on him, but you know I don't care to get married to anyone. Did you watch where he went to when he left here, as I told you to?"

"He went to Mrs. Stringer. Maybe he was going to talk string beans to her!"

Miss Hetty received a box on the ear for her impudence, and for the next three days the mother flattered herself that her market was made. Then the widow Davis called, and after paying several compliments she remarked:

"Did you know it was all over the village that I was to marry Mr. Davenport?"

"No, I hadn't heard a word about it. He called here first the other day. But of course when he began to talk love I packed him off about his business. I can't afford to marry no such man."

"Nor I either. They say he shortened his wife's life by years with his fault-finding."

"The poor thing! He was just on the point of asking for my hand when I remembered what I had heard and changed the subject and shut him off. Neither one of us can afford to sacrifice ourselves for a man of his stamp."

"If he comes here again he'll get a cool reception."

"The same at my house. Well, I must be going."

The two widows were hardly a hundred feet apart when each one said to herself:

"The old cat! Does she think she has fooled me the least little bit? Mr. Davenport shall learn just what she thinks of him."

Next day the widower received two anonymous letters conveying the information, and a great deal more. He was advised in a paternal way not to trust his future to a woman who couldn't properly shorten a piece crust to save her neck; who made a bed with the foot the highest; who was certain to have lock-jaw some day from running a rusty nail in her foot because she would go around in her bare feet; who steeped over old coffee grounds; who had bad teeth. The above wasn't all. No names were mentioned, but he had no trouble in guessing who the writers were.

Mr. Davenport's response was immediate. On the very next day he called on the widow Davis to say:

"Widow, it occurred to me that you might be lonely."

"Dear me, but I can't tell you how lonely!" was sighed in reply.

"But matrimony is a dangerous thing."

"I've heard say it was, but—"

"The other day I called to advise you to set out your tomato plants early. I now advise you to do the same about your cabbages, and to forget matrimony."

Moses then made his way to the house of Mrs. Elkins and said:

"Widow, when I was here the other day, I advised you to plant string beans and plenty of them. If you are asked to marry refuse the offer, stick to string beans. They never disappoint you."

"But, Mr. Davenport—"

"Sentiment—love—matrimony—string beans!"

And to the widow Stringer he said:

"I called here the other day to ask if you had a catnip bed in your yard. I have now called to ask you to be my wife."

"But I thought—thought—I!"

"Suppose we set the day for a month ahead?"

And after a blush and a wriggle and a stammer the day was set.

Yuan Knows His China.

President Yuan Shih-kai of the Chinese Republic is still the shrewd, careful, and diplomatic Oriental. A special cable dispatch from Peking describes Yuan's first presidential address and gives quite a pleasant thrill as it describes how the president of China has decided that the new republic must set aside the traditions of the empire and hire foreigners to place the new fiscal policy on a Western foundation.

So far, so good. But the farsightedness of Yuan in taking this apparently bold stand is seen to be largely "policy" for, after all, his new republic cannot get on without the terms of the bankers making the loan are carried out.

These terms provide for foreign "assistance," to say it diplomatically, in using the money when China receives it. So Yuan, after all, knows what he is about when he hails foreign advice in placing the fiscal scheme of China on a Western foundation.

Inventions of Esquimaux.

A collection of Esquimaux inventions, now on exhibition at the Affiliated Colleges, San Francisco, substantiates the claim that the Esquimaux is the most able inventor and skilled engineer among uncivilized people. In support of this the collection includes the first form of the oil heater and cook stove, water-tight boat, arch used for building purposes, and waterproof overcoats, as well as the most perfect types ever developed of the fish spear, spear thrower and harpoon. The smoking pipes form a link with Asia and their carvings with prehistoric Europe.

MAKING PENS OF TANTALUM

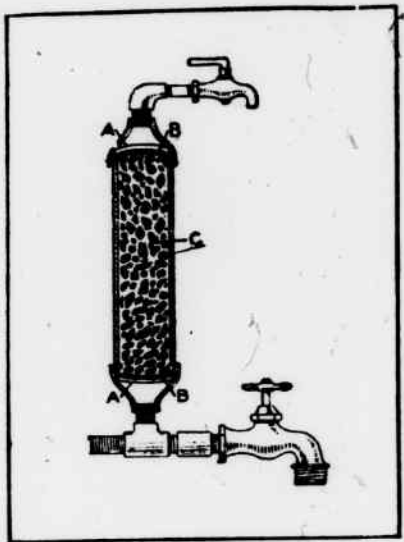

Excellent Properties of Metal Have Suggested Idea of Using It for Writing Nibs.

The excellent properties of tantalum have suggested the idea of using this metal for writing pens. Most of the pens now used are of steel, whose elasticity gives the desired pliability to the pens. But the steel pen rusts easily and is attacked by ink. Gold is rust-proof and not so attacked. But gold alone is too soft, and the extreme points must have some hard metal like iridium soldered to them to make them durable, which is complicated and expensive. Some very interesting tests have been made by German scientists. The tantalum metal was cut, formed and split like an ordinary steel pen. Then the points were bent, ground shaped, and hardened by a special hardening process, which was found to greatly prolong the life of the pens. Comparative tests were made between steel, gold, and tantalum pen points on six miles of paper, and the results showed the hardened tantalum pen to be far superior to the others. The chemical tests showed these pens to be proof against the attacks of ink.

EFFICIENT AS WATER FILTER

Cheap and Simple Device Easily May Be Arranged by Using Ordinary Pipe and Fittings.

A cheap, simple and efficient water filter may be made of ordinary pipe and fittings. Owing to the bad condition of the water supply in our city, I constructed such a filter, and it gave good results. The filter is attached to the water main just back of the faucet, says a writer in the Popular Mechanics. The large pipe or body of the filter is filled with charcoal, C.

CATARRH IS IN THE BLOOD

A polluted and impure condition of the blood causes irritation and inflammation of the different mucous membranes of the body, and we call it Catarrh. The early stages of the disease are characterized by such symptoms as a tight, stuffy feeling in the nose, watery eyes, ringing noises in the ears, irritation of the throat, and often hoarseness and difficult breathing. If the trouble is not checked it invades the stomach and other portions of the body and becomes a dangerous disorder. Antiseptic washes, sprays, etc., are beneficial in removing accumulated mucus from the nose or throat, but such treatment can never cure Catarrh. S. S. S. is the one real dependable remedy for Catarrh. This great medicine cures the disease because it purifies the blood and thus destroys its cause. S. S. S. goes into the circulation and removes the last trace of catarrhal matter, and then the blood performs its work of nourishing the membranes and tissues instead of depositing impure matter into them to irritate and inflame. S. S. S. is the greatest of all blood purifiers, a remedy endorsed by thousands during its forty years of successful service in the cure of Catarrh. S. S. S. being made entirely of healing, cleansing roots and herbs, perfectly harmless in their nature, makes it absolutely safe for young or old. If you have Catarrh in any form take S. S. S. and get permanently cured. This great remedy effects cures where all others fail. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice free. S. S. S. is sold at drug stores.

The TRAGEDY of FAURE and the PEARL NECKLACE

AS REVEALED IN THE MEMOIRS OF MME. STEINHEIL

PARIS.—Events pass rapidly in these days, and are quickly forgotten. The French Panama canal scandal is already ancient history. One must make an effort to recall the Wilson affair under the presidency of his father-in-law, Jules Grevy. But is settling even on the records of the "affair" that set all France by the ears and enlisted the partisanship of all civilization—the Dreyfus case. We were reminded of it only the other day by the fact that Captain Dreyfus' son had just entered the army. The Fashoda incident, contemporary with this great army scandal, has left no ripple of its wild excitement, and Mme. Humbert lies entirely forgotten in her grave. Events do pass rapidly, especially in the French republic.

Some of these events, the Dreyfus case and the Fashoda imbroglio especially, are recalled to mind by Mme. Steinheil's "My Memoirs."

Murders in the Impasse Ronsin. It may be well, in view of the ease and rapidity with which the world forgets nowadays, to recapitulate the main points of this "cause celebre," a common double murder for the sake of robbery on the surface, but below it fraught with all the dangers of still another exposure of rank corruption in the highest circles of the French government.

On the morning of May 31, 1908, Remy Couillard, the man-servant in the household of M. and Mme. Steinheil, in the Impasse Ronsin, Paris, found his mistress tied hand and foot to her bed, and with a rope around her neck that might easily have caused strangulation. He called for help, further investigation showing that Steinheil herself, a fairly well-known painter, had been strangled in an adjoining room, while, finally, Mme. Japy, Mme. Steinheil's mother, was found in a third room, done to death in the same manner.

Mme. Steinheil, the only survivor of what had evidently been a triple attempted assassination, told a circumstantial story of having been awakened in the night by three men and a woman, who tied her and ordered her to reveal the hiding place of her money and jewels. The men, she said, were dressed in long, black garments of a peculiar shape, and wore no less peculiar felt hats, with broad brims and peaked crowns. The woman was red-haired and wore a dark cloak. The quartet used two dark lanterns, so that their victim had but an indistinct view of them. Mme. Steinheil told the burglars where her valuables were hidden, was gagged, and fainted. Of the fate of her husband and mother she was unaware until told later in the day.

It was proved, had been stolen in the evening before the murders from a Jewish theater in Paris, which had rented them from a costumer. They were garbines, the coats prescribed by law in the middle ages for Jews. The hats completing these costumes had also been taken from the theater, together with the woman's cloak. The clue led nowhere, however.

Sought to Throw Off Suspicion. At first no official suspicion was entertained of Mme. Steinheil's possible guilt of the murder of her husband and mother, but Paris, remembering the circumstances of Faure's death, was of a different opinion. Mme. Steinheil herself, well aware of the trend of public opinion, was indefatigable in her visits to the heads of the police department, constantly ready with new suggestions, and insistent in her demands that the criminals be brought to justice. She appealed to the Paris press for assistance in the matter, then, in November, 1908, brought an accusation against the servant, Couillard, and against the son of her cook, Alexandre Wolff, implicating Mme. Wolff, an old and trusted servant, as an accessory before the fact. The evidence against Couillard consisted of a pearl from one of Mme. Steinheil's stolen rings, which was found in his pocketbook. She admitted later that she had placed it there herself, in order to frighten him into a confession.

The accused persons were promptly discharged from custody, but by this time Mme. Steinheil had involved herself in such a network of falsehoods and contradictions, especially in connection with the stolen jewelry, which yet was found to be still in her possession, that suspicion was fully directed against her. On the night of November 25, 1908, she confessed her complicity in the murder, and was arrested, subsequently retracting the confession. Her trial was not begun until November of the following year, and ended in her acquittal.

Famous "Steinheil" Case. This is, in brief, the story of the "Steinheil case," which was conducted with brutal frankness so far as a general exposure of the woman's immoral life was concerned, but with extreme circumspection whenever it threatened to touch upon her relations with several magistrates, and, most of all, with the deceased president of the republic. Marguerite Steinheil was shown to be the latest of a long line of historic French courtesans, whose opportunities would have been infinitely greater had she lived under an emperor or a king. One of her minor troubles was a study of her as a typical case of degeneration published by the late Professor Lombroso. He compared her with Phryne.

Mme. Steinheil's autobiography, for this is what her book is, is an able piece of work. Written with great apparent frankness, so far as her own mode of life is concerned, it has, at the same time, certain reticences, notably in her suppression of the names of all but the greatest of her lovers in the government and the magistrature. It explains many things that mystified the prosecution and the world at large, but, on the other hand, adds some new mysteries to the case, which certainly give the book all the qualities of a first-rate detective story—minus the solution. These new mysteries will be touched upon later on. It may be well here to review briefly Mme. Steinheil's own account of her childhood and marriage.

Marguerite Japy was born on April 16, 1869, at Beaucourt, a village near Belfort and the German and Swiss frontiers. Her father was a rich man, the son of a manufacturer, her mother the daughter of an innkeeper at Montbellard. Mme. Steinheil pictures the home life of her parents and her own childhood as an idyl of love, happiness and innocence. Lombroso, on the other hand, who, no doubt, drew his data from the investigations of the French department of justice, had it that both parents were gross sensualists and addicted to alcoholic excesses, holding them responsible for the precocious depravity of which Mme. Steinheil was accused. There was also mention of an illegitimate child born to her in her teens.

In July, 1890, Marguerite Japy married Alexandre Steinheil, a man nearly twenty years her senior, a painter of some merit, but of a retiring disposition, which prevented him from shouldering his way upward in the world. He was a nephew of Meissonier, and poor. The young couple settled in Paris, the wife, according to her own account, beginning at once to advance her husband's material interests in every possible way. Eleven months later their daughter and only child was born, Mme. Steinheil leaving the conjugal roof shortly afterward on account of some offense on her husband's part, which she does not specify, but leaves to the reader's imagination. She consented, however, to a formal reconciliation for the sake of their child, at the request of M. B., "a famous barrister and attorney general," who appears to have been the first of a bewilderingly long succession of her elderly, rich and influential friends.

All Sought Her Influence. "My salon was more crowded than ever before. Invitations were showered upon me both from quarters friendly with the government and from quarters in league with the opposition. My 'friends' were legion, and my enemies—you cannot possess influence or power without making enemies—were greater flatterers than the others.

"Then there were men who tried to persuade me of this, that or the other, so that I should in my turn persuade the president, and those who laid traps for me, men whose entreaties were disguised threats, who tried to know what I knew and who did not seem to realize that their very attitude revealed quite plainly their shameless scheme.

"And I hasten to add that I eluded more with one party than with another.

Faure she describes as an ardent patriot and an optimist who passed through attacks of deep depression over conditions in France. The country, he told her, did not hold its proper rank among the great powers because its public men did not come from the "elite" of the nation, as they did in England. He had unbounded admiration for the statesmanship of Clemenceau, but disliked him, and called him the most dangerous man in France, adding, "and what is worse, he knows it." According to Mme. Steinheil's pages, he expressed himself to her with amazing frankness on the men and the events of the hour. And often, according to her, he formed impossible plans to end a crisis. One can well believe the report that the French government of today has tried to suppress this book, and looks forward with anxiety to the effect of its publication.

Faure's Secrets Were Hers. Knowing himself to be surrounded by spies, Faure, fearing that the manuscript of his memoirs might be stolen if kept in his strong box in the Elysee palace, requested Mme. Steinheil to keep it in her own house, substituting dummies for the originals. All Paris knew that she entered the palace on certain days by a side door. No doubt, she says, she was shadowed, and the papers thus traced to her.

With the sudden and mysterious death of the president of the republic on February 16, 1899, began the turn of Mme. Steinheil's fortunes. As she tells the story of the event, she visited him in the afternoon, remarked that he was looking unwell, and received in answer the assurance that thereafter he would be more careful in the use of the drug which he was in the habit of taking to stimulate the weakened action of his heart. She then, so she continues, left him, and was not informed of his death until late that night.

Paris, however, had another version of the case, to which it clings to this day. According to this account, Mme. Steinheil was with President Faure when he died, and had to be hurried out of the palace in a semi-hysterical condition, leaving behind her evidence of her presence that was not discovered until later. All of which, according to the story, did not prevent her from being the guest of the gay at a large dinner party that very night. The confusion created by the circumstances of Faure's death made it necessary to conceal the fact from his wife and daughter until seven o'clock the evening.

Are the Fly and Mosquito Dangerous?

The fly, with spongy feet, collects the invisible germs of diseases, spreads them over our food and poisons us with typhoid and cholera. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria and yellow fever. The bacteria of consumption, or grip, are everywhere present for us to breathe into our lungs. The blood which flows through our veins and arteries is our protection. It should contain healthy red and white blood corpuscles—capable of warding off these disease germs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and alternative made entirely without alcohol, a pure glyceric extract of bloodroot, golden seal, Oregon grape root, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, which has enjoyed a good reputation for over forty years. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

M. MAGUIRE, Esq.

"About forty years ago while in Newark, New Jersey, I had chills and fever," writes Mr. MICHAEL MAGUIRE, of National Military Home, Kansas. "I went to Kansas City and in the spring of 1877 the chills and fever returned. Doctors and everything I tried failed to do me good. Finally I saw Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery advertised. I bought one bottle of it and the chills vanished. In about a year afterward I felt them coming back so I got another bottle and have never had any symptoms of fever or ague since. That is all of twenty years ago, for I had the chills about twelve years before I started to take 'Golden Medical Discovery.'"

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are for liver ills.

Mr. R. M. Middleton, of the Greensboro Loan and Trust Company, and his sister, Miss Haywood Middleton, were called to Garner, this state, Tuesday by a message announcing the unexpected death of their father, which occurred at his home the previous night.

R. L. Hooper, who has been with E. R. Noah, at Guilford Battle Ground for the last three or four years and more recently with John E. Seckwell, in this city, is now at Thacker & Brockmann's where he will be glad to see all his friends and customers early and often.

The new dormitory at the State Normal and Industrial College, known as Senior hall, has been completed and formally turned over to the college authorities. It is occupied by the members of the senior class. The completion of the new building relieves the congested condition that had existed in the other college dormitories for some time.

Rev. T. J. Ogburn, the popular pastor of Grace M. P. church, greatly surprised his congregation by announcing at the Sunday morning service that he had decided to seek a new pastoral relation at the session of the Annual Conference which convenes in Burlington today. He suggested that the conference delegates, Mr. J. M. Millikan, be instructed as to securing a pastor for next year. Mr. Ogburn has done a fine work at Grace church, and should he adhere to his intention of giving up the pastorate there will be genuine regret on the part of members of the congregation and the people of the city generally.

The football team of Washington and Lee University played too much for the University of North Carolina in a game played in this city Saturday afternoon, the Tar Heels going down to the prospective South Atlantic states champions by a score of 31 to 0. Carolina never seriously threatened the enemy's goal, though the Chapel Hill rooters frequently were made frantic by spectacular runs of Captain Tillet, on whom the plucky Carolina captain would dive into the Virginia run-backs, throwing them in many instances after a clear field had been gained. For Carolina Tillet was the one bright star.

Webster's Weekly, of Reidsville, had the following local item in its issue of Tuesday: "Mr. Maurice Pleasant, of the Townsend Buggy Company, was painfully hurt yesterday morning in a fall, an ugly gash being cut on the back of his head. He and his sister, Mrs. Bumpass, of Greensboro, were at the Webster's cottage, on Lindsay street, waiting in order for their parents, who are to move here from Granville county in a few days, when he tripped and fell, his head striking heavily against some brick or concrete work, with the result stated. Dr. McGehee found it necessary to make several stitches in the wound and Mr. Pleasant had to keep in bed yesterday, but is able to be out today."

Mrs. W. H. C. Shaw Dead.

Mrs. W. H. C. Shaw, a well known and beloved woman of southeastern Guilford, died last night at the family home in Clay township. Pneumonia was the cause of death. Mrs. Shaw was a good woman and highly respected by all knew her, and the announcement of her death will bring sorrow to many hearts.

METHODIST CONFERENCE.

Big Religious Body Holding Annual Session in High Point.

The Western North Carolina Conference of the M. E. Church, South, convened in High Point yesterday and will remain in session probably through Monday. Rev. Collins Denny, D.D. LL. D., of Richmond, Va., is the presiding bishop. Owing to the accessibility of High Point, many Greensboro and Guilford county Methodists will attend the sessions of the conference.

There is genuine regret among people of all denominations in Greensboro over the fact that Rev. E. K. McLary, pastor of West Market Street church for the past four years, will be assigned to a new field under the time limit law of the church. Mr. McLary is esteemed most highly both as a preacher and a citizen and is regarded as one of the strongest ministers of his denomination in the state.

There is also much regret over the necessary removal of Rev. W. R. Ware, who has completed his fourth year as presiding elder of the Greensboro district. The work of the district has prospered greatly under Mr. Ware's administration and is now in splendid shape.

There are now 9,875 members of the church in the district, a net gain of about 1,800. The district contains 38 churches and during the past four years five churches have been completed, two new ones built, three projected and are now in process of construction. Two churches have been cleared of debt this past year to the amount of about $11,000, and the debt on another has been provided for by a fund of approximately $4,500.

Ten churches have been enlarged, overhauled and improved during Mr. Ware's administration. Five new parsonages have been built or acquired and four parsonages have been improved during the four years. The amount paid for the support of the ministry has increased $6,000. In all, between $55,000 and $60,000 have been expended on churches and parsonages, for improvements and buildings.

Announcements reading as follows were received in the city this morning:

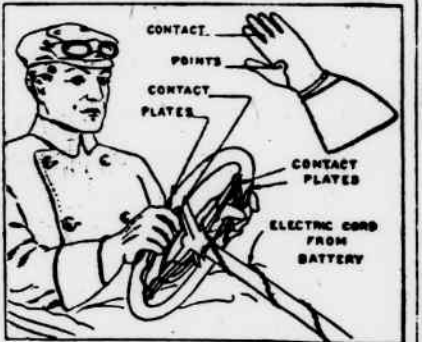

"Mr. and Mrs. William Nance Trimble announce the marriage of their daughter, Irene Hutcherson, to Mr. Marshall Caldwell Stewart, on Monday, the eighteenth of November, one thousand nine hundred and twelve, Meridian, Mississippi."

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart arrived in the city last night and are at home at their residence on Asheboro street. Mr. Stewart kept his approaching marriage a profound secret and when he left Greensboro for Meridian Saturday night no one except his business associates knew the object of his trip. The Patriot, along with many other friends, extends heartiest congratulations.

Unique Idea for Comfort of Driver in Automobile—Cord Is Attached to Batteries.

A unique idea for the electric heating of the gloves worn by the driver of an automobile is shown in the illustration, says the Popular Mechanic. The heating units consist of insulated wire woven into the inner body of each glove, and on the inside of the thumb and one finger, as shown in the drawing, are contact points which, when closed over contact plates on the steering wheel,

The Journal says Ed. Penn, a colored citizen of Winston who owns property worth several thousand dollars and is the proprietor of a livery stable, has been sentenced to the chain gang for four months by the Winston police judge for the alleged theft of a chain from a wagon, the chain being worth about 15 cents. The case was appealed, Penn giving $150 bond.

Enroute home from Raleigh Saturday J. Williams, of Harnett county, was thrown from an automobile and killed. J. A. Hockaday was running the machine when he lost control and it went over the dam of a pond they were passing. The car turned over and caught both men under it. Hockaday came out with only a cut on his face. Williams was 33 years old and married.

Indications are that there will be a most determined effort in the next legislature to procure legislation that will give to the corporation commission the fixing of rates for gas, electric current and other public service necessities supplied by corporations to towns and cities in this state. Water rates, gas rates and charges for electric service are claimed to be excessive in many quarters.
