THE NORTH CAROLINA SYNOD

TENNIAL CELEBRATION AT ALAMANCE CHURCH.

Presbyterians Assemble on Historic Spot Where Governing Body Was Formed One Hundred Years Ago—Notable Addresses by Distinguished Men of Denomination.

The one hundredth annual session of the Presbyterian Synod of North Carolina convened in the First Presbyterian church of this city Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The devotional service was conducted by Rev. C. L. Bragaw, of Broadway, and the opening sermon was preached by the retiring moderator, Rev. W. McC. White, D. D., of Raleigh.

Dr. White spoke on the immortality of the soul and chose his text from the thirteenth verse of the twenty-second chapter of Luke, "Neither shall they die any more." The text was an utterance of Christ in response to a question of the Sadducees, who had questioned the Master's teaching as to immortality. The preacher delivered a profound discourse on the subject that has concerned the human race since the troubled patriarch of many centuries ago propounded the question, "If a man die, shall he live again?"

Following the sermon, the Synod was constituted with prayer, Dr. White leading, and the delegates were enrolled by the stated clerk, Rev. D. I. Craig, D. D., of Reidsville.

Officers were elected as follows: Rev. McG. Shields, Greensboro, moderator; Rev. E. L. Siler, Montreat, recording clerk; Rev. J. E. Summers, Concord, reading clerk; Rev. D. I. Craig, Reidsville, stated clerk.

Centennial Celebration at Alamance.

Tuesday was given over to the centennial celebration at Alamance church, where the North Carolina Synod was organized October 7, 1813. The exercises were held through the day and were attended by a great concourse of people. The program included addresses on subjects of historical interest by leading men of the denomination. In the forenoon two addresses were made simultaneously on the same subject, one being delivered in the church and the other in the school building near by. The speakers and their subjects were:

"The Beginning and Development of Presbyterianism in North Carolina Up to 1863," by Rev. W. W. Moore, LL. D., president of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., and Rev. Walter L. Lingle, D. D., of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va.

"The Personnel of the Presbyterian Church in North Carolina Up to 1863," by Rev. H. G. Hill, D. D., of Maxton, and Rev. D. I. Craig, D. D., of Reidsville.

Then came dinner, following which were other addresses as follows:

"The Last Fifty Years—The Presbyterian Church an Evangelistic Agency," Rev. R. F. Campbell, D. D., of Asheville, and Rev. J. M. Rose, D. D., of Laurinburg.

"Presbyterians in Educational

Work in North Carolina During the Century," by Prof. C. Alphonso Smith, of the University of Virginia, a son of the famous Dr. J. Henry Smith, so long pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Greensboro.

All these addresses were of a high order. No synopsis of them could give any comprehensive idea of their value and interest. They will be published in pamphlet form, together with the other exercises of the day. The address of welcome was by Rev. A. W. Crawford, pastor of Alamance church, whose talk was also historical in its nature and very appropriate.

The dinner served on the grounds was a magnificent one. It was served in picnic fashion and the long table fairly groaned beneath the choicest vegetables and meats that the magnificent farms of this prosperous section of Guilford could provide. It is said that dinner had been provided for 1,000, but really twice that number could have eaten and there would still have been an abundance left.

An interesting feature of the day's celebration was a brief session of the Synod on the very spot, as well as it could be ascertained, where the body was organized 100 years ago. This spot lies south of the cemetery. Within a few yards is the grave of Andrew Finley, the man who, in 1782, when the early settlers had gathered there with their axes to erect the first log church, suggested that they engage in prayer for the blessing of God on their efforts and on the future of the church.

With the members of the Synod and others assembled around the sacred place, Rev. McG. Shields, the moderator, took his stand at the head of the grave and offered a fervent prayer for the future prosperity of the church and of the Synod. He prayed that the ministers there assembled might go down again to the world with their faces lighted by a new hope and new zeal.

A movement was started by members of the Synod to raise a fund for the erection of a memorial to Andrew Finley and the other pioneers who built the first Alamance church. A collection was taken and in the course of the next few months a committee will work out the plans for the memorial. This memorial will stand near the spot where the first two churches stood.

Home Missions Considered.

The subject of home missions was the order of business before the Synod Tuesday night, the report of the committee being submitted by Rev. Dr. A. A. McGeachy, of Charlotte. The report showed that the past year was the greatest year in the history of the work in point of the aggregate amount of money collected, the widespread interest of the church and the number of souls saved in the territory covered by the work. Two recommendations were made, the first being that the Synod follow the plan outlined by the General Assembly to raise its proportionate part of the $287,282 asked of the Southern church for this work, that being 27 per cent of the total amount given for benevolence; the second was that home mission week be celebrated by every church in the Synod in November.

The report was discussed at length by Rev. S. L. Morris, D. D., of Atlanta, executive secretary of the board of home missions. He declared that there are two great enterprises before the people of God today—the evangelization of the world and the Christianization of America. But whereas the work in the foreign field may very well be completed some day, and the gospel preached to every creature, the work in the home field is perpetual. To this endless work the speaker would call the attention of the Synod.

Yesterday morning at 11 o'clock a memorial service was held in honor of the ministers of the Synod who have died during the past year—Rev. David Fairley, Rev. L. B. Beall and Rev. L. M. Kershner. A communion service followed.

No session of the Synod was held yesterday afternoon, the time being given over to the work of the various committees.

The session last night was devoted to the cause of foreign missions. Addresses were made by Rev. Dr. W. M. Morrison, a missionary to Africa, and Rev. Dr. S. R. Gannon, a missionary to Brazil.

The Synod will complete the work of the session and adjourn tomorrow.

THE COUNTY'S BUSINESS.

Petitions For New Roads—Juries Drawn For November Civil Court.

The usual amount of routine business occupied the attention of the county commissioners in the October meeting, which was held Monday and Tuesday.

Bids were opened for the issue of $10,000 of school bonds recently voted by Morehead township, but no sale was made. There were three bids, but none of them was satisfactory to the commissioners. The school authorities will attempt to make a satisfactory sale of the bonds.

A contract was awarded to Austin Brothers for a steel bridge across Alamance creek, on the Tabernacle road, the complete job to cost $1,548.

A petition was received for a new public road in Sumner township, beginning at a point on the Greensboro and Randolph road north of Hannah Layton's and running west across the lands of the W. B. Layton heirs to Charlie Layton's corner and thence along the lines of Charlie Layton, John Lethcoe and others to the Greensboro and New Garden road, a distance of about two and one-half miles.

Citizens of Jefferson township petitioned for the opening of a new road beginning at R. A. Sockwell's and running south across South Buffalo creek and across the lands of R. A. Sockwell, G. K. Shaw, Sam Denny and others and connecting with the public road near Charles Scoggins' place.

The chairman of the board was instructed to have the necessary grading done on the road at Hinshaw's hill, near Pomona, citizens of the community having agreed to do the remainder of the work free of cost to the county.

Juries for the two-weeks civil term of Superior court to be held in November were drawn as follows:

For the week beginning November 5—H. A. Kernodle, D. C. Green, M. N. Shofner, Antonio Farrington, C. P. Clark, A. M. Heaphill, G. W. Brewer, S. E. Kirkman, Jr., J. C. Kennell, C. A. McNairy, C. E. Leak, John W. Lawley, J. R. Caffey, Jesse B. Hassell, A. F. Johnson, C. H. Powell, J. A. Idol, E. L. Franklin.

For the week beginning November 10—G. A. Summers, W. C. Trullinger, Jack Low, George W. Small, W. L. Wharton, E. F. Gamble, M. F. Martin, J. W. Whiteley, H. M. Brown, R. W. Winchester, C. H. Bain, J. O. Vickory, L. Wadford, C. T. Robertson, O. B. Hill, R. W. Jones, M. L. Willard, W. M. Weiborn.

WEDDING BELLS.

Mr. Ernest C. Elzemeyer and Miss Mary Vansory were married Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Vansory, on North Elm street. Rev. Dr. Melton Clark, of the First Presbyterian church, officiated. Only members of the families witnessed the ceremony, but from 8 to 11, Mr. and Mrs. Vansory held a reception in honor of the bride and groom which was attended by hundreds of people. After a wedding trip to New York and other cities, Mr. and Mrs. Elzemeyer will be at home in Greensboro.

The marriage of Miss Mary Drew Land, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Land, and Mr. Carter Dalton, of High Point, took place in West Market Street Methodist church last night at 8:30 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. C. W. Byrd and was attended by a large number of the friends of the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Dalton will be at home in High Point upon their return from their wedding trip.

Invitations reading as follows have been issued: "Mrs. Mary J. Freeman will give in marriage her daughter, Mamie Wilson, to Mr. John Marvin Myrick, on Wednesday, October 22, 1913, at high noon, 1311 Spring Garden street, Greensboro, N. C. You are invited to be present."

Deputy Sheriff Weatherly went to Biltmore yesterday afternoon for George Allison and Pink Perkins, young white men, who are wanted for burglarizing the store of the Pomona Mercantile Company a few weeks ago. They were arrested and held under a description furnished by the Guilford county officers.

FOUNDER'S DAY.

Observed at State Normal and Industrial College Saturday.

Founder's day at the State Normal and Industrial College—a day set apart in celebration of the opening of the institution 21 years ago and in honor of Charles D. Melver, the founder and first president of the institution—was fittingly observed Saturday by the faculty, students and friends of the institution, a large crowd attending the exercises. Besides the student's, faculty and Greensboro people, many out-of-town visitors, including former Normal students, attended. During the exercises President Foust read a large number of telegrams from alumni of the college, congratulating the institution on the occasion of its twenty-first birthday and expressing regret that they were unable to attend the celebration.

Prior to the exercises there was a meeting of alumnae in one of the society halls. They paid a signal tribute to Miss Kirkland, who has been the lady principal of the school since it was opened, by presenting her a beautiful pearl necklace and pendant as a token of their love.

Earlier in the day a committee from the faculty and student body visited Greene Hill cemetery and placed floral offerings on the grave of Dr. Melver as a tribute to the memory of the dead educator, and later beautiful wreaths were placed about the Melver memorial statue on the college campus.

The address of the occasion was delivered by Hon. John H. Small, representative in Congress from the First North Carolina district, who made a speech on what might be called the democracy of education. It was along practical lines and dealt with present day problems. Mr. Small said he thought the most significant accomplishment in the state was when, 30 years ago, the idea came into the public mind that the state was neglectful of its women and children, and he contrasted the period prior to this with that of the present, saying he had rather have one year of 1913 than many years before that period. He declared there has never been a wider opportunity in North Carolina than at present, because there are more men and women now committed to the belief that all shall have their rights. Conspicuous in the beginning of the improvement were Melver, Alderman, Joyner and Page, all of whom joined their efforts.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT.

Good Progress Being Made in Disposing of the Docket.

The October term of Guilford Superior court for the trial of civil cases was opened Monday morning, with Judge Thomas J. Shaw on the bench. Considerable progress has been made on the docket, a number of cases having been disposed of by non-suit or otherwise.

Judgments of non-suit were entered in the following cases: W. A. Davis vs. W. A. Bass, Roberta L. Blackburn vs. Byron D. Blackburn, Maggie Vail vs. Reuben Vail, David Ray vs. Sallie Ray, James House vs. Bessie House, American Motor Company vs. W. D. McAdoo and others, W. H. Gurley vs. Harriet Gurley, Charlie Cummings vs. Mary Cummings, Carrie Vestal vs. Daniel Vestal. The majority of the above cases were divorce suits that had been on the docket for several years.

In the case of Lillian Gabriel and John Gabriel vs. W. S. Clary and A. D. Chandler, a suit for the possession of real estate, judgment was given for the plaintiffs.

A verdict for $1,100 was given against Silas M. Thompson in a suit brought by A. W. Tedcastle & Co. vs. Samuel Thompson & Co.

The suit of W. R. Moore vs. Charlie Robertson was settled out of court.

The case of most interest set for trial during the term is the suit brought by J. W. Busick against R. O. Brann for $5,000 damages for alleged slander and defamation of character. The principals in the suit are well known citizens of the northeastern part of the county and a large number of people from that section are attending court as witnesses in the case. The plaintiff is represented by T. C. Hoyle and King & Kimball. John A. Barringer and J. I. Scales appear for the defendant. The trial will probably come to an end today.

READY FOR THE FAIR.

Promises to be the Biggest and Best Ever Held Here.

Everything is in readiness for the big Central Carolina fair next week, and all indications point to the most successful fair ever held here. The exhibits in all departments will be complete and the other attractions will be more numerous than ever before. Secretary Daniel reports that all the space in the exhibit hall has been taken and that many exhibitors are making displays for the first time. The display of agricultural products promises to be especially noticeable, due largely to the fine crop yields this year and the liberal prizes offered by the fair.

Care has been taken in granting concessions on the midway, the management desiring that this feature of the fair be kept free of immoral shows or other degrading attractions.

The free attractions, for which the Central Carolina fair has always been noted, will be better than ever. A family of European acrobats has been engaged to give performances every day during the fair, and there will be other free attractions for the entertainment of the crowds.

The racing program will include running, trotting and pacing races, and the entries show that some fine horses will go on the track. About 25 of the horses that are to enter the races have arrived and are at the track awaiting next week's sport. J. S. Berger, the flying machine man, has arrived and has his machine and other paraphernalia on the fair grounds. He is under contract to make two flights each day of the fair, one in the forenoon and one in the afternoon.

The action of the management in inviting all the school and college pupils of Guilford county to attend the fair free has aroused much interest, and the school children are expected to be out in full force. The colored children will be admitted to the fair free Tuesday and the white children are invited to attend Friday. Tickets of free admission, good only on these days, have been prepared by the management and will be distributed through the teachers. A ticket has been provided for every teacher and pupil in the county.

Mr. D. F. Busick left Monday night for New York and will take a boat from that city to Miami, Fla., where he expects to spend the winter.

The Harvest Moon

Some of the crops have been harvested, others are just being brought in and some will soon be from the fields. As the money comes in from the crops, the good farmer, who is also a good business man, deposits it in his bank and makes all of his payments by check so that he has an accurate record of his receipts and expenditures without the laboriousness of much bookkeeping.

Those farmers in this community who are not now depositors in this bank are invited to do business with us and, in return, we offer them a most painstaking and careful handling of their money and of any other matters entrusted to us.

Has Guilford a Perfect Baby?

The score cards of the hundreds of babies entered for the better babies contest are being carefully examined by Dr. J. T. J. Battle and Dr. W. M. NEW CHURCH DEDICATED.

Impressive Services at Westminster—Sermon by Dr. W. W. Moore.

The new Westminster Presbyterian church, one of the prettiest houses of worship in North Carolina, was formally dedicated at 11 o'clock Sunday morning with impressive and appropriate services, which were attended by a large congregation. The congregations of the First Presbyterian church, the Church of the Covenant, and many persons from other congregations joined with the people of Westminster in the exercises.

A special musical program was rendered by the choir, and Mrs. B. C. Sharpe sang a beautiful vocal solo, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus." Rev. W. W. Moore, of Richmond, Va., president of Union Theological Seminary, the preacher of the dedicatory sermon, read a portion of Scripture, which was followed by a prayer by Rev. Dr. Melton Clark, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Rev. C. E. Hodgkin, pastor of Westminster church, then extended to all those present a cordial greeting and welcome. Of the three former pastors of the church only one, Rev. R. A. Brown, of Waycross, Ga., was able to be present at the dedication.

Rev. Dr. Clark extended greetings from the First Presbyterian church, while greetings were conveyed from the Church of the Covenant by Rev. R. Murphy Williams. Dr. Moore, the preacher of the occasion, then spoke, selecting his text from the 17th chapter of Acts, part of verse 7, "Another King, One Jesus."

Dr. Moore preached a sermon of beauty and force on the general theme of the supremacy of the religion of Christ. He declared that every new church marks a progressive step in the work of God, and the dedication of this church he pronounced as not only of local interest, but wider as well because it marks a bigger unfolding of God's plan. To him this thought naturally presents the question as to why does the Christian religion hold its place, and why do churches continue to be erected all over the world. The true answer he found to be the life and character of the founder of that religion, Jesus Christ, and with surprisingly few words he painted a picture of the scenes surrounding that life of 1900 years ago, making the conception easy.

Christ's supremacy in intellect is one thing that has kept him ever before the minds of men. A still further supremacy is in the realm of morals, Christ being the sum of all virtues, in whom as in none other there was no flaw in character or conduct. This spiritual, ethical, moral supremacy has dominated men and has taken a powerful hold on the human race.

So much has this supremacy been yielded that it has been the decisive factor in what we call civilization. The benevolence taught by Christ has taken form in churches and hospitals, in care for women and children, all over the world, in humane treatment for the sick and the poor and the stranger. It has mitigated wars it could not prevent and has led to the arbitration of difficulties among nations.

Christ's teaching has been the life breath of philanthropy, and we are living now in an age when many things are being done for improving the general conditions among men. No institutions have shown civility and stability save those in which Christ's spirit has been infused.

Following the sermon, Mr. E. P. Wharton, chairman of the building committee, made a report and formally handed over the keys of the church to Dr. W. F. Beall, chairman of the board of trustees. Dr. Beall, in behalf of the board and congregation, gave thanks to the committee for its perseverance and intelligent efforts.

Rev. Dr. F. H. Wood Dead.

Rev. Frank H. Wood, D. D., one of the oldest and best known Methodist ministers in North Carolina, died last Thursday morning at his home at Trinity, Randolph county. He had been in feeble health for several years and was seriously ill for a week or two prior to his death. Dr. Wood was 77 years old and had been a minister for over half a century. Increasing age and failing health caused him to retire from the active work of the ministry some years ago. One of the last appointments he held in the Western North Carolina Conference was presiding elder of the Greensboro district, and during that period he made his home in this city.

Dr. Wood is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters, the children being: Mr. W. F. Wood, of Marion; Mr. George T. Wood, of Trinity; Mrs. W. F. Ellis, of Durham, and Mrs. J. J. Farriss, of High Point. He was a son of the late Pennell Wood, of Randolph county, and a brother of State Auditor Wood, Mr. Thomas Wood, of Trinity, and Mrs. J. R. Pearce, of Greensboro.

Library Receives Pendleton King Donation.

The large library and collection of art of the late Pendleton King have arrived from Aix-la-Chapelle, Germany, where Mr. King died as United States consul, and will be placed at once in the Greensboro public library. This is the largest single collection of books that the library has yet received and its value is probably worth more than all the books the library had before the gift was made. It is a magnificent collection, many of the volumes being rare and some out of print. The works of art are very handsome and costly. The entire collection was bequeathed to the library by the last will and testament of Mr. King, who was a native of Guilford county, and a brother of Messrs. R. R. and John L. King, of this city. From 50 to 60 large boxes were used in shipping the books from the United States consulate at Aix-la-Chapelle to Greensboro.

Returns From Michigan.

Mr. Lambert Doctor, who sold his farm north of the city over two years ago and moved to Clifford, Mich., has returned to Greensboro and will again take up his residence in Guilford county. He says it is much harder to make a living out of the soil in Michigan than it is in North Carolina. The growing season there is not longer than four months in the year, it being practically impossible to do any outdoor work the remainder of the year. Mr. Doctor is sufficiently amused with the long and severe winters of Michigan and is glad to be back in North Carolina.

Taking Toll of Babies.

Each season of the year takes its toll of the babies, and to watch and safeguard them from common colds and coughs is a matter of importance to their parents. To keep Foley's Honey and Tar Compound in the house and use it promptly is to save the little ones from the serious effects of these colds, to ward off croup, bronchial coughs, hoarseness, stuffy wheezy breathing and violent coughing spells. It is absolutely free of opiates and may be given to the little ones with no fear of harmful results. Refuse substitutes. Conyers & Sykes.

All the temperance forces of the United States have been called to meet at Columbus, Ohio, November 14, for an amalgamation of all temperance forces into one organization for an educational campaign nationwide in its scope and a campaign for constitutional prohibition. Why Use L. & M. Semi-Mixed Real Paint

Because it's economical. Because it is pure white lead, zinc and linseed oil. Because it's the highest grade quality paint that can be made. Because when the user adds three quarts of oil to each one gallon of the L. & M. Semi-Mixed Real Paint, it makes 1 3/4 gallons of pure paint at a cost of about $1.40 per gallon. This saves the user about 60 cents a gallon on all the paint used. The L. & M. is and has always been the highest grade and most perfect paint produced.

The Republican national committee will meet in Washington Tuesday, December 16, to confer on party matters and to take any action advisable. The decision to call the meeting resulted from repeated requests of Republican leaders that an opportunity be given to revise the rules of the Republican party. Political changes demanded are in the basis of representation from Southern states at national conventions and in the method of electing delegates from states which have primary laws covering the subject.

In recognition of the long fight in Congress by the late Senator Morgan, of Alabama, for the construction of an isthmian canal, a movement is on foot to have one of the principal forts at the Panama Canal named "Fort John T. Morgan." Senator Bankhead, who is taking an active part in the movement, declared that it not only was fitting that Senator Morgan's memory should be honored because of his brilliant efforts in advancing the isthmian canal idea, but on account of his many other achievements while in Congress.

Speaker Champ Clark, of the national house of representatives, declared for international disarmament as the surest means of guaranteeing world peace in an address delivered in Louisville, Ky., Sunday at the Perry centennial celebration. He praised the valor of American soldiers in the war of 1812 and declared the crowning glory of their heroism was the 100 years of peace that have followed between Great Britain and the United States. The speaker said that both President Wilson and former President Taft deserved praise for the spirit of forbearance displayed in dealing with the delicate questions presented by the revolutionary troubles in Mexico.

Town Copyrights Name.

Tulsa, Okla., Dispatch. In order that the name "Tulsa" cannot be used as a trademark outside the city and cannot be taken as a name by another town in or outside of this country, the city commission will copyright the name, taking out both a national and international patent.

There is now but one Tulsa in all the world. The only other place in the world which comes anywhere near resembling Tulsa in name is Tula, a village in Russia. Friends of Tulsa believe the name should be preserved intact. The city attorneys will draft an ordinance providing for a copyright of the name, whereupon application will be made to the patent office at Washington.

Tulsa is a Creek Indian word, meaning frontier. It was carried first by the Tulsa clan of Creeks, whose headquarters were in this locality. To commemorate this clan of Indians, which has been prominent in tribal affairs since the Creeks were first given a constitutional form of government in 1838, the name was applied to Tulsa by its founder, J. M. Hall, when he staked out the town site in 1881. Chief Tulsa of the Tulsa band of Indians is buried a few miles outside the city, and there is now a movement to erect a shaft to his memory, either in one of the city parks or on a downtown corner.

Alive But Legally Dead.

After an absence of 25 years in the West, Walter Ludwig returned to Belleville, Ill., last week to find that he had been dead legally for years and that his inheritance had been divided among other heirs.

Ludwig, whose real name was Walter James, was sent to Belleville as an orphan when his parents died in New York. He was adopted by Amandus Ludwig, with whom he lived for 18 years. He ran away and never was heard from until he returned to Belleville.

When the elder Ludwig died 15 years ago he left property valued at $4,000 to his foster son. After seven years had passed with no word from the foster son, other heirs asked a court to declare him legally dead.

Sow Crimson Clover.

"The farmer who keeps his soil constantly occupied in the production of something valuable for food and fertilizer does better than to allow it to lie fallow or waste."

I wonder if we as Guilford county farmers realize the full meaning or value of the above statement. Crimson clover makes a good winter cover crop which can be turned in spring and the soil planted to corn with an assurance of good results. Let's get busy and put in some more crimson clover. It is not too late if we hurry up. If your local dealer does not have the seed, advise me and I will tell you where you can get it. E. H. ANDERSON, County Agricultural Agent.

Secretary to the president Tumulty strenuously denies, as had been charged, that he was unduly interfering in the politics of New Jersey, stating that his policy had been that of the president with respect to New Jersey affairs.

Thomasville Man Killed in Automobile Race.

The celebration of "Everybody's Day" at Thomasville Saturday was marred by the death of A. W. Hughes, who was killed in an automobile race. The big parade had just ended and the first event of the day was in progress. This was an automobile race, participated in by several of the citizens of the town, who owned machines. Mr. Hughes entered a car in the race and it was in this that he was killed.

He was the only occupant and the accident occurred just as he reached the end of the distance. The car ran into a pile of sand in the street and seems to have skidded on hard ground and completely overturned, crushing Mr. Hughes underneath it, killing him instantly. His neck and both arms were broken and his skull was crushed. The car turned completely over several times. Mr. Hughes was one of the most prominent and progressive citizens of Thomasville. He was part owner of the Hughes & Peace Lumber Company and secretary and treasurer of it. He leaves a widow and several children.

Miner Crawls Through Tunnel From Prison.

Centralia, Pa., Oct. 4.—Thomas Toshesky, prisoner since Friday of last week in an abandoned chamber of the Continental mine of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company, walked into the open air a free and comparatively well man at 22 minutes before 8 o'clock this morning. He was taken to his home in Centralia, three miles from his underground prison and immediately put to bed, apparently none the worse for his remarkable experience. It was 7.15 o'clock when the last barrier of coal was driven away and Toshesky crawled through the opening from his prison chamber into the tunnel which had been driven steadily toward him by eager, willing rescuers.

Toshesky was glad to get out of his prison, but he acted as if it were an old story to him and nothing over which to make a great fuss. Once before in his career as a miner he had been entombed for nearly 48 hours.

"Hello," he greeted everybody who spoke to him. His one reply to questions as to how he felt was "bully."

CONFESSES TO DYNAMITING.

Arrested Iron Worker Tells Details of Many Outrages.

New York, Oct. 2.—Dynamite outrages that rivaled the exploits of the McNamara brothers and Orde Mangual were confessed today by George E. Davis, a union iron worker. Davis, who was arrested here today, was the George O'Donnell who figured in the trial at Indianapolis that resulted in the conviction of Frank M. Ryan, president of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers and 37 of his associates.

His arrest and its consequences was the round up work which the federal government started more than two years ago, when the dynamiting of bridges and steel frame buildings all over the country became a national disgrace.

All the explosions that Davis says he caused were referred to at the dynamiters' trial in Indianapolis, but the fact that Davis caused them remained unrevealed until he himself told of it.

Davis' confession resulted today in the arrest in Indianapolis of Harry Jones, secretary-treasurer of the Iron Workers' Union. The confession supplements the evidence presented at the Indianapolis trial and makes fresh charges against some of the men there convicted and now in prison.

In careful detail the confession describes how Davis blew up or tried to blow up buildings and bridges in various cities and towns of the East. It was during his preparation of plans to destroy a new building at Fall River, April 26, 1908, that Davis first came into communication with Harry Jones. Davis asserts that Jones was familiar with the work he was doing.

Under the name of O'Donnell, Davis was arrested for the Fall River job and served two years in prison. After he left prison, officers of the union gave him money and he went to his home in Coffeyville, Kansas. When J. McNamara wanted him to take up his old trade in Oklahoma, he refused because it was too near home.

The arrest of the McNamaras followed soon and on advice of President Ryan, says Davis, he returned to the East. One of his latest exploits was dynamiting a bridge at Mount Vernon under the direction of Frank J. Webb, a New York member of the executive committee of the union, who is now serving six years in prison.

Roosevelt Greeting For 1916 Campaign.

New York, Oct. 3.—Addressing an assembly of Progressives gathered tonight to honor him on the eve of leaving on his South American trip, Chief of Roosevelt declared that when he returns, his best wishes would be extended toward the upbuilding of the party. The party is still, he declared, and he added that the firm determination of the rank and file as well as of the leaders was to preserve its political entity, its solidarity and integrity.

Speaking of the work he had accomplished for himself on his recent tour, Roosevelt said: "We shall enter undaunted as a national party on another national campaign. The colon I said that he would never be content until every single principle enunciated by the Progressive party is put into practical operation in the nation."

"It is emphatically a fight for our country," he declared. "I would continue to fight, even if I stood completely alone."

Served Voluntary Prison Term.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Thomas M. Osborne, chairman of the New York state commission on prison reform, after spending a week in Auburn prison is an inmate for the purpose of studying the prison system and his self imposed term of confinement.

Mr. Osborne was pale and tired and showed the marks of his ordeal when he left the prison. His experiment included a taste of every experience possible for an inmate to undergo from electrocution. He even admitted misdeeds yesterday and was incarcerated in the "dungeon" cell; and he lay on his back in the prison jail from 3 o'clock yesterday until 6 o'clock this morning, his rations consisting of three gills of water and three slices of bread. He declared this part of his experience took him into the "innermost circle of inferno."

He is positive the fruits of his week's stay in prison will be valuable to the commission.

The Asheville Postoffice Row.

The Washington correspondent of the Charlotte Observer says the people of Asheville are one step nearer getting a Democratic postmaster following the action of the senate committee in sending the nomination of E. L. Auman back to the postoffice department with the recommendation that an inspector be sent to investigate the charges against him. Asheville has not had a Democratic postmaster in 46 years and letters received in Washington recently indicate that the people there are getting restive.

Auman's appointment was recommended by Representative Page about three months ago and immediately grave charges were filed against him concerning his morality. These were denied by Auman and his friends, who made affidavits refuting them. They satisfied the department and his nomination was sent to the senate. Similar charges were then filed with the senate committee, by William C. Hammer, of Asheville, candidate for district attorney, and his friends. The committee has suggested several solutions to those most interested, all of which were rejected.

The Safest Place.

What is the safest place? Bishop Hatto, who thought his tower on the Rhine "the safest place in all Germany," was seized by undeciphered, and so might we be in the choice of home—even if it is not a tower on the Rhine—as the safest place. Mr. Fred A. Bishop, the president of a company that has carried 69,000,000 passengers without the loss of a life on a line of steamers plying between New York and Coney Island during the past 30 years, says the safest place in America is the deck of a steamer. He quotes statistics to show that in the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, 307,692,494 passengers were carried on steam vessels that are required by law to report the number of passengers carried. Taking the total number of lives lost, as 264, it is seen that 1,165,501 passengers were carried for each life lost, whether of passengers or crew, and from all causes.

As the average of deaths by violence per annum in the United States is said to be 90 per 100,000 of the population, six of whom are murdered, Mr. Bishop seems to have very good ground for his statement that the safest place is the deck of a steamer. Even his record of 69,000,000 passengers carried without a fatality must give place to that of the British railroads. Figures for 1912 show that there was but one fatality on British railways last year for each 68,000,000 passengers carried. A seat in a British passenger train is probably, therefore, still the safest place in the world.

A Good Investment For the Family.

In these days of wide vision and broad interests, when what happens at a distance is often of as much concern to intelligent folk as what happens in their own communities, every family ought to subscribe for at least one well-edited city newspaper. For people who measure value by quality rather than by bulk, there is none better for the purpose of keeping in touch with the progress of events at home and abroad than "The Philadelphia Record."

"The Philadelphia Record" is clean, alert and reliable. It prints the news without color or distortion, as concisely as possible, but always readably. Its daily department caters to a wide range of interests and tastes. It is a recognized authority on sports, household affairs and fashions. Its market quotations are the standard by which transactions in farm products are governed throughout the territory it serves. Thorough coverage of the news fields of its own and neighboring states has always been a valuable "Record" feature, and one which its army of readers in the smaller cities and towns of Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland appreciate.

There is information and entertainment in "The Philadelphia Record" for every member of the family, and a subscription to that newspaper is a profitable investment in the interest of the home.

The Family Cough Medicine.

In every home there should be a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery ready for immediate use when any member of the family contracts a cold or a cough. Prompt use will stop the spread of sickness. S. A. Stid, of Mason, Mich., writes: "My whole family depends upon Dr. King's New Discovery as the best cough and cold medicine in the world. Two 50-cent bottles cured me of pneumonia." Thousands of other families have been equally benefitted and depend entirely upon Dr. King's New Discovery to cure their coughs, colds, throat and lung troubles. Every dose helps. Price 50 cents and $1. All druggists, H. E. Bucklen & Co., Philadelphia and St. Louis.

Southern Railway's Live Stock Bulletin.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 5.—As a part of its work for the upbuilding of the live stock industry in the Southeast, its work for the upbuilding of the Southern Railway periodically issues a bulletin telling of stock for sale or exchange and of stock desired to be purchased. The bulletin is compiled from information furnished by stock owners and copies are mailed to over 15,000 farmers and dealers.

Through this bulletin a large number of sales have been made and many farmers have been enabled to get stock of just the type they desired. Instead of sending good sires to the slaughter house after serving their allotted time with one herd, many owners have through this bulletin been enabled to effect an exchange whereby each added years of usefulness to the life of a good animal.

The entire expense of issuing the Bulletin is borne by the Southern Railway Company. F. L. Word, live stock agent, Atlanta, Ga., will be glad to send copies to any farmer or to include in the bulletin information in regard to stock for sale or exchange.

Overman's Resolution Adopted.

The senate has adopted Senator Overman's resolution giving United States marshals and collectors of internal revenue the power to name deputies without reference to the provisions of the civil service law. Senator Burton, of Ohio; Penrose, of Pennsylvania, and a number of other reactionary Republicans raised an awful howl, claiming that the Democratic party was returning to the "spoils system." Senator Overman reminded his Republican friends that under Republican administration thousands of employees had been put under the civil service by Republican presidents, including the now famous order of former President Taft, when with a single stroke of the pen, he placed nearly 40,000 fourth class postmasters under the civil service without taking the examination.

It is not believed that the house will fail to pass the Overman resolution when the bill goes back from conference.

NEW TARIFF BILL IN EFFECT.

Democratic Administration Fulfills Its Pledge to the People.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Surrounded by leaders of a united Democracy, President Wilson at 9.09 o'clock tonight signed the Underwood-Simmons tariff bill at the White House. Simultaneously telegrams were sent to customs collectors throughout the country by the treasury department, putting into actual operation the first Democratic tariff revision since 1894.

A happy group of legislators, members of the cabinet and friends accompanied the president as he smilingly signed down and slowly affixed his signature with two gold pens.

He presented the pen that had written the word "Woodrow" to Representative Underwood and the one that completed his name to Senator Simmons, both of whom bowed their heads in prayer.

In impressive silence the president signed and delivered in easy, natural tones an extemporaneous speech that brought prolonged applause. He declared the journey of legislative accomplishment had not been completed until a great service had been done for the rank and file of the country, but that the second step in the emancipation of business was the tariff reform. He earnestly called upon his colleagues to go "the way of the journey" with fresh impetus.

A brief summary of the new tariff law as prepared for the senate follows:

Average percentage of tariff rates compared to the value of all imported merchandise; old law 37 per cent, new law 27 per cent.

Value of annual imports added to the free list $147,000,000.

Estimated revenue from all import duties old law $305,000,000; new law $24,000,000.

Estimated revenue from corporate and income taxes; old law $37,000,000; new law $122,000,000.

Together, consumers in the United States probably will receive from goods free of all tariff, more than $1,000,000,000 worth of merchandise during the next year.

During 1912 the amount of "free goods" was more than $880,000,000, and when the tariff is entirely removed from wool, sugar, iron ore and coal, iron, and other important items, the total is expected to increase. Under the old law more than 50 per cent of all goods brought to the United States from all parts of the world paid no tariff, and that proportion will be increased by the new law.

The free wool provision of the new law takes effect December 1, 1913; the free sugar provision May 1, 1916. Nine Months of Work.

The new tariff law, passed four years after President Taft signed the existing Aldrich-Payne law, is the result of more than nine months of work in Congress. Hearings were started January 6 by the house ways and means committee. Chairman Underwood introduced the tariff bill April 7, immediately after President Wilson had convened the new Congress. It passed the house May 8 and the senate September 9.

In the opinion of its makers, the Democratic leaders of Congress, the most important features of the new tariff are:

A reduction of nearly one-half in the average tariff on foodstuffs and farm products.

The placing of raw wool on the free list, and a reduction of nearly two-thirds in the tariff on woolen clothing especially of the cheaper grades.

A reduction of one-third (average) on cotton clothing.

Reduction of the sugar tariff and its ultimate abolishment in 1916.

A reduction of one-third (average) in the tariff on earthenware and glassware.

Abolishment of all tariff on meats, fish, dairy products, flour, potatoes, coal, iron ore, lumber and many classes of farm and office machinery.

General tariff reduction on all important articles in general use.

Senator Simmons Praised For Masterful Leadership.

Washington Correspondence Greensboro Daily News.

During the last stages of the tariff bill President Wilson had ample opportunity to know who Senator Simmons was in sympathy with—the Democratic principles or the alleged progressives—Reed, of Missouri, Luke Lea, of Tennessee, and Owen, of Oklahoma. These gentlemen lent what little support they had—it was not much—in an effort to defeat Senator Simmons for chairman of the finance committee when plans were being laid to reorganize the senate under Democratic rule. They did not lose an opportunity to tell the president that Simmons would not "stand hithered" and would not revise the tariff in accordance with the Democratic platform.

When the final test came, however, Mr. Wilson found his alleged progressive senators asleep at the switch and Simmons the one man upon whom he could depend for support.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, in apologizing for ever having thought Simmons was not a good Democrat, makes the following statement:

"I walked into the informal conference in the cloak conference room of the senate when the last stages of the passage of the tariff bill were under discussion among a dozen senators. I said: 'When Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, was designated to handle the tariff bill in the senate I was disappointed. I, as a Western man, felt fears that he did not have sense of the modern conditions sufficient to carry this bill through to success. Now, after observing the fight, and participating as one of the lieutenants in the conflict, I assert that his management and generalship convinced me that no other man possessed qualities that could have carried the bill through under the difficult surroundings and conflict but this man Simmons. I owe this concession and want to pay this tribute to him and to North Carolina.' Then Senator John Sharp Williams spoke up and said: 'I want to agree with Senator Lewis. I, too, began with great prejudice against Simmons. I was so strongly prejudiced as to be disappointed at the selection of him. Now, after months of service with him, I affirm that he showed a leadership remarkable and commanding. He began to equip himself and at the debates showed more information on the subject than many of us who had specialized on it. He has done the work—and we under him must acknowledge his great part in it, and that by his uniform courtesy he made every man his friend amidst most trying conflicts in very oppressive days.'

"This was the character and estimate of Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, as held by the United States senate by the West and the South, and by two of her leading and representative men."

There is something in the air at this time of the year that has a very drying, irritating effect on the nostrils and air passages of the head and throat. A cough and cold frequently follows these symptoms, and Foley's Honey and Tar Compound is a strong demulcent remedy that gives prompt relief. Use it for coughs, colds, tickling throat, hoarseness and bronchial coughs; best for children and grown persons. Keep it at home, and quick relief will follow its use. Contains no opiates. From Guilford's Agricultural Agent.

I respectfully ask that the farmers of Guilford county take notice of my presence in their midst as county agricultural agent. I am here to act as a medium through which information and advice from the United States department of agriculture may be given directly to the farmer, as well as to offer help and suggestions in matters pertaining to farming along practical lines, as the result of my own scientific training and practical experience.

I hope sooner or later to make a personal visit to the home of every farmer in Guilford county, and in the course of a year or so to have worthy object lessons on many of the farms, as a result of co-operative demonstrations in various agricultural lines, such as the cultivation of different crops, improvement of livestock, beautifying the home grounds, etc.

In general I am here to serve the farmer. Do not hesitate to call on me for any information you may need in connection with the farm. Perhaps we can help you. When in town on Saturdays call and see me at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce.

Her Important Order.

The day was hot, the hour rapidly approaching closing time, and the salesman thoroughly worn out, and tired.

Still, he was a good salesman, and the customer before him—a woman faultlessly attired in next year's fashions—had all the appearance of being a really good patron.

Cheerfully, therefore, he unrolled and rerolled piece after piece of linoleum for her inspection. But all to no purpose. Nothing, it seemed, could satisfy her hypercritical taste.

"I'm extremely sorry, madam," said the salesman, "but I'm afraid I've shown you all the linoleum I have in stock. Of course, I can get some more up from our factory; and if you care to call again tomorrow—"

"Yes," broke in the customer, "perhaps I'd better leave it at that. You see, I want quite a small design—something suitable for the floor of a canary's cage."

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1913.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

We take pleasure in announcing to our subscribers and the public generally that, beginning with the first issue in January, 1914, when the paper will enter upon its ninety-third year of existence, The Patriot will be published twice a week. The decision to convert the paper from a weekly to a semi-weekly publication has been made after mature deliberation and with a realization of the additional labor and expense that will be involved. Under the new arrangement we shall be able to give our readers better service, and we believe they will appreciate the semi-weekly visits of The Patriot. We shall strive to make the paper more interesting and valuable as a semi-weekly than it has ever been as a weekly, and in this endeavor we hope to receive the co-operation of all our friends.

Changing The Patriot from a weekly to a semi-weekly will materially increase the cost of publishing the paper, and in order to provide for this additional expense it will be necessary to raise the subscription price. Therefore, on and after January 1, 1914, the subscription price of The Patriot will be $1.50 a year, payable strictly in advance. By adopting the cash-in-advance system we believe we can publish the paper semi-weekly at $1.50 a year as safely as we now publish it weekly at $1 a year on a credit basis.

We are making this announcement this early in order that subscribers who are in arrears may have ample time in which to settle their accounts with us before the $1.50 rate and the cash-in-advance system become effective. There is quite a good deal of money due The Patriot on subscription accounts, and we earnestly request all subscribers in arrears to settle with us at their earliest convenience. All payments on subscription made prior to January 1, 1914, will be accepted at the present rate of $1 a year, and on and after that date the price will be $1.50 a year, cash in advance. The date on your label shows to what time your subscription has been paid. If you are in arrears, please let us have the amount you are due, and add a dollar for another year's subscription. For instance, if the date on your label should be July 1, 1913, $1.50 paid to us now would extend your subscription to January 1, 1915—18 months; but if you should delay the matter until the first of next January, you would owe us 50 cents for the last six months of the present year and would then pay us $1.50 in advance if you should want the paper another year.

We expect to gain many new subscribers by adopting the semi-weekly plan of publication and hope to retain all we now have on our list. The Patriot as a weekly is cheap (too cheap) at $1 a year, but we will be giving even more for the money when we issue two papers a week and advance the price to $1.50 a year. The subscriber will pay about half a cent less for each copy of the semi-weekly than he is now paying for the weekly.

The Creedmoor News is the name of a new weekly paper that has been established at Creedmoor, Granville county. Mr. John E. Hart, formerly connected with the Burlington News, is the editor. He is getting out a good local paper and we trust he may receive the liberal support of the people of Creedmoor and surrounding country.

TENNESSEE LAWLESSNESS.

Tennessee has been under statutory prohibition for a number of years, but a stranger in one of the larger cities of the state would never suspect it. In Memphis, the largest city in the state, the saloon is as wide open as in the days of license, no pretense being made of observing the law, and in Nashville, Chattanooga and other places the prohibition law is a mockery. For several years the question of enforcing the law has been a burning issue in the state; candidates for office have been defeated and elected because they favored or opposed upholding and enforcing the law; every other issue has been subordinated to that of prohibition, or, more correctly speaking, to the enforcement or non-enforcement of the statute which says liquor shall not be sold in Tennessee. So far the lawless element has managed to remain in the ascendancy, and it has been impossible to have the legislature provide the machinery necessary for the enforcement of prohibition. The recent special session of the legislature, called for the specific purpose of passing a law enforcement bill, refused to give the relief demanded and adjourned after riotous proceedings. Governor Hooper has called another special session to convene next Monday to deal with the question, and he appeals to the people of the state for their co-operation and support. In his proclamation calling the legislature together the governor says:

"The question which now confronts the people is, shall the laws of the state be enforced in the city as well as in the country, or shall the outlawed saloons corruptly dominate not only the cities but the legislature and the entire state?"

Everybody understands that the nullification of the prohibition law in the cities of Tennessee is due simply and solely to the fact that public sentiment in those cities does not demand the enforcement of the law. Little doubt is entertained in the rural districts and the small towns, where the prohibitionists are in the majority, but it does seem that the great state of Tennessee ought to be able to force a semblance of law observance even in those communities dominated by the lawless.

We would appreciate it if our friends who contribute news items or other articles for publication in The Patriot would arrange to have the matter reach us as promptly as possible. The time to write a report of a wedding, a death, a meeting or anything else is as early after the occurrence of the event as possible. The work of publishing a newspaper goes on all the time, and just before an issue of The Patriot goes to press the rush is so great that frequently we are forced to condense or omit matter that reaches us at the eleventh hour. We appreciate and are always glad to receive news items and other contributions of interest from our friends, but we cannot promise to handle them when they do not reach us promptly.

It would surprise some of our subscribers who are in arrears and consider their indebtedness to The Patriot a matter of little or no concern to learn how many other people sustain the same relation to the paper. It is true that the indebtedness of each individual subscriber is a small matter, but the aggregate indebtedness assumes large proportions and becomes a real burden to the paper. During the weeks that intervene between now and January 1, when The Patriot will become a semi-weekly and adopt the cash-in-advance system of dealing with all subscribers, we shall expect to receive what is due us from every subscriber who is in arrears.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The special session of the legislature is expected to adjourn next Monday, when the 20 days specified in the call as the time for which members may receive pay will expire. Good progress is being made in disposing of the important matters before the body.

A caucus of the members of the two houses Monday night voted unanimously to accept the proposition submitted by the railroads for a settlement of the freight rate question. The caucus at the same time voted against creating two new members of the corporation commission and also against the creation of a public service commission to do most of the work now performed by the corporation commission. It was decided, however, to provide the corporation commission with a rate expert and additional clerical help. There has been a good deal of criticism of the corporation commission, especially by those who are not pleased with the manner of the settlement of the freight rate question, and bills to create a public service commission had been introduced in both branches of the legislature.

The house has passed the Justice intrastate freight rate bill, but it is not expected to pass the senate. It is said the reductions provided for in the Justice bill would reduce the earnings of the railroads in North Carolina about 26 per cent. Sentiment seems to favor leaving the settlement of this question in the hands of the corporation commission.

The proposition to include the initiative and referendum among the amendments to the constitution to be submitted to the people has been rejected by both the senate and the house by decisive majorities.

A bill to authorize the agricultural department to erect a $200,000 building to house the different divisions of the department has been defeated. The legislature taking the position that the condition of the state's finances does not warrant the expenditure of such a sum of money at this time.

Machine-Built Houses.

The project of building houses in a day or two by pouring concrete into forms so set up as to make a mold for the entire building is now being realized to a large extent in this country and in Europe.

"These poured concrete houses can be built quickly, the average time for the construction of each dwelling in one group of 40 having been five days. In any locality where the materials for concrete are readily available, they cost less than houses built by any other substantial method of construction. They are fireproof, have no cracks or crevices to harbor germs, are easily cleaned by removing the furniture and washing down with a hose, and, therefore, more sanitary than buildings constructed with plaster walls and wooden floors and trim."

Jones-Campbell Wedding.

The historic old church of Tabernacle was the scene of a beautiful wedding Thursday, September 25, at 8 o'clock P. M. The church was simply but artistically decorated for the occasion in autumn leaves, gold-rod and ferns. The contracting parties were Miss Lena Foy Campbell and Mr. Robert L. Jones.

The ceremony began by Mrs. T. M. Johnson sweetly singing, "Oh, Promise Me." Following this a violin solo was rendered by little Mary and Teddy Causey. Then the beautiful strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, which was played by Miss Dandine Kirkman, of Charlotte, sounded on the balmy evening air and sent a thrill of pleasure and happiness to every heart.

The first of the party to enter were the six groomsmen: Messrs. Robert C. Rankin, John Lineberry, Max Coble, Flavius Causey, Thomas Starr and Wyatt Fiddle. These formed a half circle around the rostrum. Following the groomsmen came Master Tilton Johnson, bearing the ring hidden among the petals of a rose.

Next to enter was the maid of honor, Miss Frances B. Lineberry, who wore pink chiffon draped over pink satin and cream shaded lace with hand-made roses. She also wore white kid gloves and slippers, and carried pink roses and maiden-hair fern.

The bride entered leaning on the arm of her cousin, Mr. J. Milton Causey, who gave her away. She was sweetly attired in white chiffon over white satin and Irish lace. Her veil was draped and fastened with orange blossoms, and she wore white satin slippers and white kid gloves.

At the altar they were met by the groom leaning on the arm of his best man, Mr. John E. Deviney. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. M. Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones left immediately after the ceremony for a tour of the mountains of western North Carolina. The bride is one of Guilford's best and most accomplished young women. She is a graduate nurse of St. Peter's hospital, in Charlotte, and is a great favorite there. She has made her home in Charlotte for the past six years. The groom is one of Guilford's best farmers and a young man of high moral character and a determination for good that never falters when it comes in contact with the evils of this world that daily confront us.

The many and useful presents, which consisted of silverware, cut glass, house and kitchen furniture, bestowed upon the young couple by their many friends and relatives shows the high esteem in which they are held.

A FRIEND.

One Use For the Mosquito.

Toronto Globe.

In the North the mosquito reigns supreme. The swarms that rise from streams, lake, and marshes, as each comes to the surface and emerges, dry, from the skin he wore when a wiggler in the water, cannot be checked or resisted. Though weakly blown aside by the wind or driven off by smoke, they triumph by the force of numbers.

There is compensation for their virulent annoyance, and even for their transmission of the germs of malaria, compensations more important than the feeding of trout and bass fry. They protect our feathered game during the nesting season and insure immunity to the flocks of migrants that rear their broods in the Northern woods. The egg collector, the skin collector and all the inquisitive, curious and sensitive who would otherwise invade the woods and marshes during the nesting season, are warned off by that ominous and persistent hum.

It is more effective than all the game-preserving and bird-protecting statutes. It insures safety during that helpless time when the mother bird can only flutter along the ground in paralyzed terror, drawing the invader away from her threatened but helpless offspring. While the mosquito reigns supreme the bird life that ranges the continent will never be molested in its varied Northern retreats.

Women Who Get Dizzy.

Every woman who is troubled with fainting and dizzy spells, backache, headache, weakness, debility or constipation or kidney troubles should use Electric Bitters. They give relief when nothing else will, improve the health, add strength and vigor from the first dose. Mrs. Laura Gaines, of Avoca, La., says: "Four doctors had given me up, and my children and all my friends were looking for me to die. When my son insisted that I use Electric Bitters, I did so, and they have done me a world of good." Just try them, 50 cents and $1 at all druggists or by mail, H. E. Bucklen & Co., Philadelphia or St. Louis.

Most Painful Method of Suicide.

Few known methods of suicide are more painful than taking bichloride of mercury, says the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Some weeks ago considerable publicity was given a case of accidental poisoning from bichloride of mercury tablets. The case was so "featured" as to lead the public to infer that corrosive sublimate poisoning was not only a sure but also a painless route to the other world. Since this accident, the papers have chronicled, almost daily, cases of suicide in which bichloride of mercury was the drug used.

There is no doubt that many unstable persons who, in fits of depression contemplate suicide, are restrained from taking the fatal step by the dread of the unknown agony they may suffer in committing it. To such, the knowledge of a sure and painless method of death removes the only restraining influence left. It is fitting, then, that the public should know that there are few methods of suicide more painful and in which the agony is longer drawn out than that due to the taking of bichloride of mercury.

If this fact were given the same publicity that was accorded the case of accidental poisoning there is little doubt that the corrosive sublimate method of self-destruction would cease to be the fatal fad it has recently become.

Rev. H. K. Boyer and Rev. W. O. Goode have resigned as superintendent and assistant superintendent, respectively, of the Methodist children's home at Winston-Salem, the resignations to become effective at the approaching session of the Western North Carolina Conference. Walter Thompson, superintendent of the Stonewall Jackson Training School, at Concord, has been elected to succeed Mr. Boyer as superintendent of the home. The trustees deferred the election of an assistant superintendent.

LITTLE CINDERELLA

She Was Used as a Foil for a More Fortunate Cousin.

By H. N. EGBERT.

Cinderella was a foil for Beatrice. That, perhaps, was the real reason why Mrs. Lanham, who had never been known to do an unselfish act, surprised her intimates by asking her little orphaned niece to make her home with her after her brother's death.

Esther and Oliver Benton had grown up together in the same home in Ohio, and Oliver had supported his widowed mother and sister until Esther's brilliant marriage to a wealthy lawyer. The Lanhams had gone up in the world and when Mr. Lanham died he was one of the richest corporation lawyers in the country. Esther mourned her husband deeply for a year; then she moved to New York and soon became a member of the rich and not very intellectual society that finds its doings recorded daily in the newspapers.

Why Mrs. Lanham should have taken little Cinderella—whose real name was Elizabeth—into her home was a mystery until Mrs. Bentham-Jenkins solved it.

"Why, my dear, the reason is perfectly obvious," she said to a friend. "It is only necessary to look at the children's faces. Did you ever see a more glaring contrast between beauty and homeliness? Beauty and the Beast I should call it; and that charming child won't improve with years, either."

Elizabeth heard it and ran away to cry. But she had always known instinctively that the difference between herself and Beatrice was as that between darkness and daylight. Beatrice had an abundance of flaxen hair, merry blue eyes, a contagious laugh, and a figure which gave promise of that quality which is called "svelte." Elizabeth was thin and sallow and lanky, and nobody ever stopped to admire her as they did her cousin.

Perhaps this was partly due to the fact that Elizabeth wore Beatrice's cast-off dresses, after the trimmings had been removed and a certain dowdiness imparted by Mrs. Lanham's deft fingers. That excellent woman knew the value of a foil for her daughter, particularly now that Beatrice was of a marriageable age. Beatrice was kinder. Once she gave Elizabeth one of her cast-off ball gowns.

Would Dress Herself in the Gown.

Some day you may be invited to a ball, she said, with innocent scorn, and then you will be glad to have something to wear. But don't tell mamma or she will be angry.

She did not know that little Cinderella treasured in her room a pair of Beatrice's old slippers which she had rescued from the lumber room just as its contents were about to be thrown away. In the seclusion of her little attic chamber she would dress herself in the gown and in imagination she would be the belle of some ball, the admiration of all eyes. But nobody ever invited Cinderella to a ball; first, because she was only a sort of companion and never met anybody; secondly, because it was understood that after Beatrice's marriage she was to go out into the world and work for her living.

And that date, toward which Cinderella looked forward with rapturous anticipation, was likely to be long delayed, if one could believe in signs. Lester Martin had been a frequent caller at Mrs. Lanham's house of recent weeks. Martin was the son of old Roger Martin, the banker, but he was more than that, although it counted for less with Mrs. Lanham—counted for nothing at all, in fact. He was the most famous architect in America and was the man who had designed the new frieze for the state capitol. He was always very kind to Elizabeth, and because he was the only person who ever noticed her she longed for a sight of him. And one day something very surprising happened.

Lester was calling at the Lanham home, and Beatrice, having heard the news from her maid, was hurrying in to her reception gown. Cinderella was all alone. She was just going upstairs—for Mrs. Lanham did not like her to receive her guests—when she met Lester at the door.

"Why don't I ever see anything of you, Miss Benton?" he asked, detaching her.

Elizabeth did not know what to say, so she said nothing.

"You dear little Cinderella," said Lester Martin, and bent down and kissed her.

How she got out of the room Elizabeth did not know, but she was in her room at last, and sobbing as though her heart would break. She cried wildly for hours, until Beatrice came in and found her there.

Beatrice was too much excited to notice Elizabeth's red eyes. She began chattering about Lester.

"Mamma thinks that he is in love with me," she said. "She says he wouldn't come here so much if he wasn't. And it will be such a fine match for me, for his father is worth a cool ten millions, and I shall have carriages and autos and go to Paris each year and—"

"Do you love him, Beatrice?" inquired Elizabeth.

"I don't know. I guess I could," said Beatrice, whirling about. "Mamma says you needn't come down tonight because we are having guests."

She came back presently. "Do you know old Roger Lester is giving a fancy dress ball next month?" she asked. "Yes, the invitations have just come. And, oh, I forgot to say that there is one for you, Mamma has written accepting for me and declining for you."

When she was gone the girl gave way to an access of unrestrained grief. For the first time rebellious thoughts came into her mind. Lester loved her. Else why had he kissed her? No man ever kissed her before. To kiss meant, in her simple view, to plight one's troth for ever. Or had he been playing with her? It was obvious that he meant to marry Beatrice; but then he must have had a passing affection for her. Suddenly an amazing plan took root within her. She would go to the ball. She had never been to a ball, but why should she not go once? It was to be a fancy dress and nobody would recognize her, masked and disguised. There was Beatrice's dress, but that had been altered and Beatrice had had so many dresses that she would never remember that one. And there were Beatrice's slippers.

She trod on air during the next four weeks. She went so happily about her duties that more than once she caught sight of Mrs. Lanham surveying her with amazed disapproval. At last the night of the ball arrived.

"You need not sit up for us," said Mrs. Lanham condescendingly. "We shall probably not be back until late, and you must be up early in the morning to accompany the parlor maid to the station to put her on the train. Poor Mary could never find her way about the streets alone."

Mary, the parlor maid, was going home to pay a visit to her sick mother.

But Elizabeth did not care, for her heart was beating wildly from sheer ecstasy. When the auto rolled away she hurried upstairs and slipped into the ball dress and slippers. Then, with her head and shoulders shrouded in her wrap she went into the street and entered a street car.

Nobody stopped her at the door. Masked, among a hundred other masked women, her presence excited no comment. She recognized Beatrice, in her creation of filmy white, and her aunt, seated among the chaperons and watching her daughter with an expression of admiration in her eyes. But nobody dreamed that Cinderella was there. It was ten o'clock. Two hours—and then she must go home as silently as she had left.

The music intoxicated her. Elizabeth could dance divinely. The little drudge was in heaven as one partner after another took her upon his arm and swung her out among the dancing couples. But when she saw Lester approach and gravely ask her, her head swam and her eyes filled with sudden tears.

"Shall we go into the conservatory?" he asked, when the music stopped. He offered her his arm. At the door of the ballroom they passed Beatrice and her mother. Their eyes rested on her, and with a sudden terror Elizabeth perceived that she was recognized.

Mrs. Lanham rose to her feet with an exclamation of anger, and, overcoming herself with an effort, scowled at her. Elizabeth trembled with fear. She had not calculated upon the aftermath.

"What is the matter?" Lester asked, as they sat down. "You are not feeling well? May I get you a glass of water?"

She shook her head. Lester placed his hand upon hers.

"Do you think I do not know who you are, Cinderella?" he asked, "for all that mask? See if I can guess. You are Miss Benton and you ran away to the dance because Gorgon would not let you go."

"And I can never go home," said Elizabeth in panic. "She recognized me. I had never been to a ball before and I could not bear not to just once. I don't know what I shall do."

"I'll tell you," said Lester. "You need never go home again if you will marry me."

He mistook the look in her eyes.

"O, Cinderella," he cried, stretching out his arms longingly, "I love you with all my soul. It was you I went to see, not Miss Lanham. I know all about your circumstances and your unhappy life. But, Cinderella, I want you for my own, and I know a clergyman over in Jersey who doesn't go to bed till twelve, and if we take a taxi cab we can just make it. Will you come with me, Cinderella, dear?"

"Yes," sighed Cinderella happily, and that was the second time he kissed her.

WANTED TO GET IT BACK

Contributor to Conscience Fund Writes That He Made Mistake—Wants Money Returned.

All sorts of queer things happen with regard to what is known as the "conscience fund" of the United States treasury. This fund is comprised of contributions raised everywhere from two cent postage stamps up to many thousands of dollars, which people at some time or another feel that they have filched from the United States government in the way of stealing property, evading duties or by some other devious and illegal proceeding. The money nearly always comes in in such a way that it is impossible to trace it, even to the town from which it was sent, and the letter of transmittal is naturally signed from a "Conscience Stricken American," or some such character. But probably never before in the history of the country did any one want to get his money back. The other day one of the newspapers of the city received the following letter, which tells its own story:

"Some years ago I sent $39.20 to the 'conscience fund' in the belief that I had undervalued to that extent a ring which I brought into this country from Paris. I thought the ring was very valuable, but placed the purchase price lower than the amount I paid for it. A few weeks ago I took it to a reliable jeweler and he told me that the pearl in it was an imitation. The ring itself is worth less than $39.20, and the duty on it should have been less than the amount I paid. As a matter of fact, the government cheated me in accepting my valuation, instead of me cheating the government. How can I get my money back from the 'conscience fund'? Can you suggest anything?"

"CONSCIENCE FUND."

BIG DOME IS A GYMNASIUM

One Use Which Washington People Make of National Capitol—Great Flesh Reducer.

It would not be suspected that the great dome of the capitol could be made a gymnasium, but it is used by not a few persons in Washington and especially by some of the employees of the capitol for purposes of exercise and the like, writes the Washington correspondent of the New York Sun.

Its chief apparatus in that line is the many winding steps to the top of the lantern, 237 feet in the air. You go round and round and round and climb and climb. That sort of thing makes for firm muscles and is said to be best anti-fat cure to be had anywhere and especially in Washington. You can lose ten pounds in one trip.

The thing is done at record speed, however. It is not a slow going up and a slow going down, although with other persons this seems most ample labor, but doing the thing in five minutes and less. It is a rush up and a rush down.

Persons who climb the stairs for sight-seeing purposes are astonished to see Mercuries rush in the ascent or the descent, but, of course, they don't know what it is all done for.

MONORAIL SYSTEM NOT LIKED

Senate Senators Refuse to Ride on Anything That Runs on a Single Track.

There is a much heralded monorail system in operation in the capitol at times—that seems doomed.

The transportation for the senate senators for years has been by automobile in the tunnel from the capitol to the marble senate building. Some one came along and induced Superintendent Woods of the capitol to get permission to install a single rail electric car. This was granted, and at an expense of $9,000 the innovation was installed.

Before the eventful day for the first trial run arrived, several of the senators who had looked askance at the fast-going subterranean autos, declared they would never ride in anything that ran on a single track. Their prophecies have been fulfilled. The first test ride developed that the contraption shrieked, rattled and generally made so much noise that the senators could not hear themselves speak. As one senator said, he couldn't even hear himself think.

The monorail system was attacked recently by Senator Stone in a resolution.

NICK NAME STICKS TO HIM

Congressman Known as "Siphon" Sisson, or "The Sizzling Solon From Mississippi."

Thomas Upton Sisson, member of congress from the Fourth district of Mississippi, is destined to go down in history as the siphon bottle statesman. Which is an unfortunate fate.

When the California-Japanese imbroglio was at its height, Mr. Sisson delivered an impassioned anti-Japanese speech on the floor of the house.

"If we must have war," he declared, "or submit to this indignity, I am for war."

Later, in the tariff debate, Representative Johnson of Washington, reproving him for this speech, called attention to the fact that Mr. Sisson had voted last year against a battleship program, and then he referred to the southerner as "the sizzling solon from Mississippi, Mr. Sisson."

If that doesn't sound like a siphon bottle, what does? The resemblance caught the fancy of the clockwork congressional kidders, and they are ringing the changes on it whenever Mr. Sisson happens along.

SETS STYLE FOR MEN

PRESIDENT WILSON CONSIDERED
THE CAPITAL'S BEAU BRUMMEL

Adopts All White as the Proper Thing;
Cabinet Officers and a Third of
Washington Don Washable Clothes
Like Chief Executive.

President Wilson is the Beau Brummel of Washington. He is the mode of masculine fashions.

White goods, a few years ago worn by women and young men, today is the material of the summer clothes of Washington male population. Yes, 33 1-3 per cent. of all the males in Washington wear white clothes or near-white, and all because President Wilson wears it.

It was the first hot week in July that the president of the United States first appeared in white. One Tuesday morning when the thermometer was up about the nineties President Wilson walked from the White House to his office. He was dressed in a pair of white canvas shoes with flat rubber soles, white duck trousers, a white crash coat, white shirt, white tie and a white straw hat. The next day three of the cabinet officers—Secretary Bryan, Secretary Daniels and Secretary Garrison—all appeared in white or light brown, almost white. And the material was either duck, Palm beach cloth or crash.

A few days later one or two other cabinet officers appeared in tropical climate attire. Postmaster General Burleson got himself three or four suits of blue and white striped seersuckers. Secretary Wilson called at the White House in a crash suit.

Now all the men in Washington wear either white suits or white trousers and darker coats, but it all is light weight material.

President Wilson is the most consistent wearer of white. He wears it to office, to play golf and the other day he wore white to the ball game.

He went motoring and wore a white suit and Panama hat. Secretary Bryan the only other cabinet officer in town, has been wearing white during the week and on Sunday a white pair of trousers and a black alpaca coat.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who is in mourning, and Attorney General McKeenleys, are the only cabinet officers who have not donned white or some other washable material.

POLITICS AT FIRST HAND

Truxton Beale to Erect Elaborate
Building to House Federation of University Men.

Announcement is made that Truxton Beale, formerly United States minister to Persia, and until recently chairman of the board of regents of the University of California, will erect in Washington an elaborate building for the housing of a federation designed for the political education of college and university men, and for the expression of academic views upon current political matters; "to have a sort of confederation of American colleges and universities for the study of politics at first hand, and to serve also as a clearing house for advanced collegiate ideas."

"The purpose of the institution," Mr. Beale says, "is, first, to discuss, side by side with congress, the most important questions of the day under debate at the capital. There would be no regular academic instruction, but my idea is to have a two weeks' session each spring, to be participated in by ten men from the senior class of each university or such members of the faculty as are interested in political science."

"I should expect to have members of congress and of the administration address the delegates on pending economic and political questions. Then the university men would spend the remainder of the annual session in debating the matters thus presented to them. At present we have no means of focusing university opinion upon federal politics."

AFFLICTED WITH THE MANGE

Big Slices of Gold Dome of Congressional Library Is Peeling Off.

The gilded dome of the congressional library is afflicted with the mange. Consequently Uncle Sam soon will have to expend about $50,000 to buy new gold leaf.

Big slices of the gold leaf on the double dome of Washington's most beautiful building are chipping and peeling. Other spots are showing the discoloration of the elements, so that now instead of a highly burnished landmark, the dome has the appearance of rusted brass.

Seventeen years ago the last coating of gold was placed on the dome. Now members of congress have noticed the rather shabby condition of the decoration and they expect that soon a request for an appropriation will come from the office of the librarian.

The small dome at the top, the vertical section on which it rests, and the lower and larger dome have an area of many hundred square feet which must be entirely recovered with gold sheets such as are used in sign lettering.

DEATHS OF THE WEEK.

W. Columbus Preston, who was employed as an engineer at the White Oak cotton mill, died Monday night from the effects of an electric shock he received early in the day while at work in the engine room of the mill. In some way he came in contact with a heavily charged wire and received a severe shock. He was carried immediately to the hospital, but all efforts to save him were in vain. He was conscious until the end. His body was badly burned and his face was a blister, while his eyelids were singed. Mr. Preston was a single man, 29 years of age and a native of Belew's Creek, Forsyth county. He had resided in Greensboro about six years. He is survived by his father, six brothers and three sisters. The body was carried to Belew's Creek for the funeral and interment.

Mr. J. O. Irvine died of typhoid fever at his home on Arlington street last Thursday. He was a native of Canada and came to Greensboro soon after the establishment of the Armour Packing Company's fertilizer factory at this place to take a position with that concern. He was 42 years old and is survived by his widow, Rev. R. P. Walker, pastor of Asheboro Street Baptist church, conducted the funeral from the home Friday afternoon and interment was made in Greene Hill cemetery.

Mrs. E. C. Hamilton died last Thursday afternoon at St. Leo's hospital, where she had been a patient for several weeks. She was a victim of pellagra and suffered much. The body was carried to Gray's chapel, where the funeral and interment took place Saturday forenoon. Mrs. Hamilton was a daughter of Manly Ruth, of the Gray's chapel community. She was 41 years old and is survived by her husband and a daughter.

Mr. John A. Young, a young man who had been employed by the Harrison Printing Company for some time, died Saturday night at the home of his sister, Mrs. B. C. Roy, on West Lee street. Rev. J. Room for Courage.

There is no duty so small, no trial so slight, that it does not afford room for courage. It has a meaning and value for every phase of existence; for the workshop and for the battlefield, for the thronged city and for the lonely desert, for the sick room and for the market place, for the study and for the counting house, for the church and for the drawing room. For courage is just strength of heart, and the strong heart makes itself felt everywhere, and lifts up the whole of life, and ennobles it, and makes it move directly to its chosen aim.—Henry van Dyke.

Open Letter No. 2

To Our Customers:

After you have been intimately acquainted with people for several years you begin to know what sort of folks they are, and what to expect from them. With shoes it's a good deal the same way it is with folks—you have to know them a good while before you can tell for sure whether they are good or bad. And that's why it is you find us selling shoes that we have thoroughly tested and found to be all right; lines that we have tried and found to be reliable. We don't buy from every new drummer who comes along, because we prefer to sell only those that we know are good, so that when we tell you they are good we know exactly what we are talking about. We have handled the leading lines of shoes that we sell and recommend for five or six years right straight along, some of them for ten years. Trade has been very lively with us ever since the Fall season commenced, in fact we have been obliged to let some mighty good friends and customers go out of the store without being waited on. Be a little patient with us and we will try to see that this does not happen again.
