Freight Wreck Near Colfax.

Two sections of a Southern Railway freight train were piled in a promiscuous heap near Colfax early Sunday morning by the failure of Flagman Cotten, of the first section, to properly warn the second section, a double header, of the whereabouts of his train. At Colfax freights are frequently divided in order to be pulled over a steep grade without difficulty, and it was in this condition a portion of the first train was left there Sunday morning. Flagman Cotten, who was entrusted with the care of the cars left standing temporarily, is said to have gone back and placed torpedoes on the track and then curled up in his caboose for a nap, having been on duty for forty-eight hours. The torpedoes were not far enough away to protect him, however, and the second section could not be brought under control in the distance allotted, consequently there was a smash that resulted disastrously for the two engines, the caboose and several freight cars. Flagman Cotten was thrown clear of the wreckage and escaped without serious injury. In the car just ahead of his caboose were Mr. J. F. May, a car inspector of Greensboro, and two assistants who had been working in Winston for a short time. They were caught in the debris and badly bruised up, but suffered no permanent injury. Mr. May was the only one requiring hospital treatment. The enginemen on the second section, with one exception, jumped to safety, Engineer Lawson sticking to his post. The engines were stripped almost clean by the wreckage into which they were plunged. A wrecking crew from here worked until dark in clearing up the track, the disabled engines being hauled to Friendship and tacked away on a siding to await a visit to the Spencer shops. Cotten took the plowed ground route to his home at Guilford College soon after being so rudely awakened from his slumbers, forsaking railroad work for all time. Only a few months ago he was hurt on the Burlington yards, and he naturally concluded that twice was enough for him. Mr. May, the car inspector referred to, recently moved here from Burlington.

Overdose of Laudanum Proves Fatal.

An overdose of laudanum taken to allay pain caused the death of Mr. Charles R. Abbott, a well known and popular young man of this city, last Saturday morning. On Wednesday Mr. Abbott had a tooth extracted which had been giving him trouble, and as that did not bring relief he finally resorted to the use of laudanum, but unfortunately took an overdose on Friday. Three physicians worked with him all that night, but without avail. The deceased was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Abbott and was 28 years old. He had served in the U. S. Hospital Corps in Cuba and the Philippines. For the past few years he had held a position in a Greensboro furniture factory. His funeral took place Sunday afternoon from the family residence on Lindsay street, conducted by Rev. E. W. Smith, D. D. The pall-bearers were Messrs. J. D. White, S. A. Kerr, W. C. McLean, J. W. Scott, G. S. Sergeant and J. E. Jones. Interment was made at Greene Hill cemetery.

The Williams Cases on Trial.

In the Federal court the famous Williams cases, from Yadkin, are on trial after many delays a jury being secured yesterday afternoon. Witnesses from seven states will appear in the trial. Monday Judge Boyd heard argument of counsel on a branch of the matter of the Simmons Hardware Company vs. R. H. Hardin & Co., involuntary bankrupts, of Wilkesboro, relating to an order restraining Hasty Brothers & Co. from selling certain buggies, etc., belonging to the American Buggy Company. Judge Boyd decided to continue the restraining order.

McAdoo, who were the judges in a baking contest last week, awarded the prize, a handsome $50 steel Favorite range, to Miss Mary E. White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. White, for baking the best bread or cake on a Favorite range. The prize was given by the Odell Hardware Company and the contest was spirited and interesting.

Mr. Wm. E. Snow, the newly appointed postmaster at High Point, has made up his bond and his commission is expected daily. Friends of Mr. Ragan, the leading opponent of Mr. Snow, take their defeat philosophically, saying that their only regret is the appointment was not given to a Republican. They claim Mr. Snow has never been accused of voting the Republican ticket or aiding the party in its hour of need.

GREENSBORO TOBACCO MARKET.

MARKET REPORT.

The receipts on our market for the past week have been the heaviest for several weeks owing to the warm foggy mornings we had, which gave farmers an opportunity to handle a little of their tobacco. The farmers in this section have already realized that prices are good on this market and they are taking advantage of them. We think prices have been better during the past week than they have for any previous week, however, there has not been very much change, but the change that has taken place has been for the better. Our buyers are anxious for the weed and are bidding lively for it, and are always willing to pay outside market prices for all tobacco offered on this market.

The quality of the tobacco for the past week has been about in keeping with previous weeks with the exception that we are getting a few more wrappers. We consider common and medium tobacco very high compared with the quality, and we see no reason why farmers should not take advantage of present prices and sell out these grades.

Jerry Graham, of Alamance, was here the past week and made a good sale.

W. T. Scoggin was here the past week with tobacco and seemed well pleased with prices.

W. J. Simpson, T. T. & J. P. Carter were among the good Rockingham farmers who sold with us the past week.

A. W. Scoggin and T. P. Barham have been here twice the past week, which shows what they think of our market and the prices.

C. V. Coble, Cicero Jones, W. E. Daniel and M. J. Nance were among the good farmers from Rockingham who sold with us the past week.

J. C. Williams, of Rockingham, was here with a load of medium tobacco last week, for which he received $121.47. Mr. Williams was highly pleased.

S. P. Knight, of Rockingham, sold a medium load of tobacco here. His prices ranged from $7.75 to $18 per hundred. He was very highly pleased.

C. R. Doggett, P. E. Barham and J. H. Simpson were among the Summerfield visitors to this market the past week. They made highly satisfactory sales.

J. F. Gray, R. W. Wilson, G. W. Ward, S. A. Apple and Rufus Wyrick were among the good Guilford county people who sold with us last week and were highly pleased.

S. M. Winchester, H. R. Gerringer, J. A. Terry and Jas. Parish were among the prominent farmers of this county who sold with us last week and went home highly pleased.

J. W. Wharton, J. L. Watlington, S. W. Cobb, P. O'Ferrell, W. C. Blair and Hamilton Young were among the good farmers of this county who sold with us the past week and were highly pleased with sales.

Henry Whitesell, W. C. Mills and C. D. Story were among the prominent Alamance county farmers who sold with us the past week and will be back again as soon as they can get some more tobacco ready for market.

A. D. Chandler, of Brown Summit, sold a load of tobacco here last Saturday and got the following prices: 100 pounds at $8.25, 132 at $12.50, 102 at $20.14 at $9.76 at $9.25, 108 at $7.25. Mr. Chandler was highly pleased with his sale and will be back again as soon as he can get some more ready for market.

A colored servant named Nora Hester is in jail at Graham for attempting the life of Miss Esther Boswell, housekeeper for many years at the home of Mr. C. Sellars, one of the oldest residents of the Haw River section of Alamance county. Enough poison was recently found in Miss Boswell's coffee to have killed twenty people, and the colored woman, who was known to be vicious, undoubtedly put it there. Her only grievance was the discharge of a colored boy no longer needed on the place. The Mr. Sellars referred to is the father of Mrs. R. G. Lee and Mrs. Jos. A. Tate, of Greensboro.

Mr. C. L. Ward, of Friendship township, who was here Saturday delivering goods from his cannery, found when he went to deposit his money in bank that he was short $21 in currency. He recalled handling the money last in making change and after a short search gave it up as lost for all time. Sunday morning he shoved his hand in his overcoat pocket and touched the missing bills, much to his gratification. He must have put them there in a moment of abstraction, as he never carried money that way in his life, knowingly.

Judge Ward presides over the term of Superior court which opened Monday. The most important case yet considered is that of Hardin vs. Schloss, wherein the plaintiff, Annie Glenn Hardin, sues for $2,000 for injuries sustained by falling down an elevator shaft at the opera house in 1902. Yesterday the jury gave W. N. Stewart $400 damages for injuries sustained in an elevator accident at the Van Deventer Carpet Mills. The cases against G. A. Sumpster were continued.

Mr. D. F. Busick has been appointed jailer to succeed Mr. J. G. May, resigned, and will take charge of the jail the first of the month. Mr. Busick has had experience in the work before him and will undoubtedly give satisfaction. Since his retirement from the police force a few months ago he has been an attendant at the Keeley Institute. Mr. May, the retiring jailer, will return to Gibsonville carrying with him the respect and good will of every good citizen of Greensboro.

The Greensboro Water and Light Commission has closed a contract for the laying of the pipe line from Reedy Fork to this city, a distance of 5.55 miles, in the enlargement of Greensboro's water supply. The contract price amounts to $85,000, or a saving of about $4,000 as compared to the bids first submitted and rejected by the commission. No contract has yet been made for the construction of the reservoir, which will hold 20,000,000 gallons. It is estimated that not over three months will be required in the laying of the mains, and if the reservoir is not completed by next summer, water can be pumped direct, thus removing the probability of another water famine.

IS IT RIGHT?

Is it right that a property-owner should lose $4.20 to let a dealer make 50 cents? A dealer makes 50 cents more on fourteen gallons of ready-for-use paint, at $1.50 per gallon, than our agent does on eight gallons of L. & M. paint and six gallons of linseed oil, which make fourteen gallons of the best paint in the world, at $1.20 per gallon; the property-owner loses just $4.20. Is it right?

It only requires 4 gallons of L. & M. and 3 gallons linseed oil to paint a moderate sized house.

BEAUTIFUL CHURCH WEDDING.

Miss Lucy Neal Jones Becomes the Bride of Mr. Frank A. Brooks.

A beautiful church wedding was solemnized at Centenary Methodist church last Wednesday evening at 6.30 o'clock when Mr. Francis Arthur Brooks led to the hymeneal altar Miss Lucy Neal Jones.

The church auditorium was crowded to the doors, in fact there was not room enough by a good deal to accommodate the large congregation which had gathered to be present for the ever interesting ceremony.

The church had been beautifully decorated for the occasion, the credit for this important part of the auspicious event being due Mrs. E. E. Bain and Mrs. E. L. Stamey. With exquisite taste and skill they arranged the bank of palms, ferns and flowering plants which formed the main feature of the decorations.

While the congregation was gathering, Mrs. J. E. Faulkner sang with charming effect, "Where Thou Art."

Promptly at the hour set for the ceremony and as the notes of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin rendered by Prof. Brockmann, violin, and Miss Lillie Jackson, piano, rang through the church, the bridal party entered.

The ushers were Messrs. R. J. Mebane, L. J. Duffy, H. G. Burton, Roy H. Jones, E. W. McNairy and H. S. Donnell. These entered and proceeded down the middle aisle two abreast. They were followed by the groom, accompanied by his best man, Mr. T. Gregory Frazier. Next came the bride and the maid of honor, Miss Bertha Jones, sister of the bride.

The bride joined the groom in front of the waiting ministers and the ceremony making the two one was performed by Rev. Ira Erwin, the bride's pastor, assisted by Rev. R. M. Andrews, pastor of Grace Methodist Protestant church and a close personal friend of the groom, the beautiful and impressive ring ceremony being used, and the orchestra rendering in subdued notes the Cavaleria Rusticana. The wedding party then retired to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march.

The bride's costume was a very becoming traveling suit of blue taffeta with hat to match. She carried a large bouquet of bride's roses. The maid of honor wore white organdie and a black picture hat, her flowers being pink carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks left Wednesday night for Jackson Springs. Very soon after their return they expect to begin housekeeping on Pearson street. They are very popular and attractive young people, a host of friends uniting in wishing them the greatest possible happiness. The bride, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Jones, was for several years private secretary to Mr. T. A. Hunte, secretary and treasurer of the Hunter Manufacturing and Company and by her winning traits of character greatly endeared herself to her associates in the office. Mr. Brooks is a well known young business man, being a member of the firm of Brooks Manufacturing Company and a son of Mr. T. T. Brooks.

The couple received an especially elaborate array of wedding presents.

Vickrey-Paschal Wedding.

A beautiful and interesting home wedding was witnessed by a large circle of relatives and friends at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Paschal six miles south of Greensboro last Wednesday evening at five thirty o'clock when their eldest daughter, Miss Maud Elma, joined hands in matrimony with Mr. Herbert William Vickrey, an energetic and successful young farmer of near Greensboro. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. Stover. The attendants were as follows: Mr. E. D. Paschal with Miss Aileen Hodgkin, Mr. Thomas Paschal with Miss Jessie Hodgkin, Mr. Joseph Vickrey with Miss Edna Paschal. After the attendants had taken their positions, the bride came in leaning on the groom's arm. She was attired in a becoming silk costume of a changeable color. After the ceremony was performed the pastor led the way into the dining room where an elaborate wedding supper was served. The home was decorated with cut flowers and potted plants for the happy occasion. Some of those present for the wedding were Mr. E. D. Paschal and wife, of Rockingham; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Paschal, of Elon College, and Mr. Ed Paschal, of Reidsville.

Letter to J. M. Walker,
Greensboro, N. C.

Dear Sir: The Fair Ground buildings, Cobleskill, N. Y., were painted Devco last year.

Two other paint agents said the job would take 150 gallons (their price was 15 cents less in the gallon).

Our agent said not over 125.

It took 115. We saved 'em at least 140 on paint and labor.

The American House, Tannersville, N. Y., was painted two coats last year; not Devco.

Mr. Charles Haner, across the street, put on one coat Devco.

Mr. Wiltse (American House) is sorry he didn't paint Devco. Haner's one coat was better than Wiltse's two. Depends on the paint.

Yours truly,
F. W. DEVCO & Co.

LOCAL NEWS.

The Alamance county fair is "in session" this week.

Mrs. Sallie Hall, wife of ex-mayor W. A. Hall, died in Burlington last week. She was 53 years old.

A marriage license was issued Monday to Mr. Troy Peeden and Miss Laura Hubbard, who live near Sumnerfield.

Try the coffee that we are selling at 20 cents, or two pounds for 35 cents, if you want something that always gives satisfaction. R. G. HIATT.

County Surveyor Gilchrist lost a good brood mare Saturday for which he had recently refused $150. The animal was so badly injured in jumping a picket fence that it had to be shot.

Mrs. J. Will Alexander returned Friday from Richmond, Va., where she had taken her two-year-old son for hospital treatment. The little fellow returns as sound as a new dollar.

Anything in the music line can be found at E. M. Andrews' music house. If not in stock it will be ordered—anything from a Jew's harp to a pipe organ. Get prices and be convinced. 43-2t.

Mr. John L. Sharp, the capable corner of Rockingham county, and who is also known as "the corner of North Carolina," was here Friday on his return from the state fair at Raleigh, where he saw all the sights worth seeing.

E. M. Andrews, of Greensboro, N. C., has something new in the piano and organ trade. It pays to the purchaser 6 per cent. on their own account. Send for catalogue stating the price you want to pay, etc. (Mention this paper.) 43-2t.

A special meeting of the board of county commissioners will be held Friday to settle some matters relating to the taxation of local insurance companies that have been left open for some time pending a satisfactory adjustment.

The new North dormitory at the A. & M. College here is now under roof and the interior can be finished without any serious delay. The building even in its present state makes a good appearance and will be a most creditable structure when completed.

In Alamance county last week marriage licenses were issued to Mr. Robert F. Boone, of Guilford, and Miss Elsie Geringer; Mr. Wyatt A. Clapp, of Guilford, and Miss Bessie A. Baldwin; Mr. Alexander R. Bradsher and Miss Sarah Caviness, both of Guilford.

Rev. R. L. Wharton, a missionary of the Southern Presbyterian church in Cuba, who had been home on a vacation of two or three months, sailed last week from New York for Cardenas. With his wife and child he spent a day here with Mr. W. D. Wharton's family before leaving for New York.

Mr. D. C. Matthews, of Stokesdale, recently sent the PATRIOT a curiosity in the shape of a tobacco leaf. The leaf is not unusual in appearance but one side it has grown in such a way as to form a perfect pocket. Very few people who make a business of handling leaf have ever seen anything like it.

A four-foot gallery is being built above the shelving in Wharton's book store in order to increase the floor space of the store, which has been crowded to the overflowing point for a long time. The ceiling of the room is very high and readily permits such an arrangement without interfering with existing interior arrangements.

Mrs. H. W. Wharton sustained an exceedingly painful injury to one of her eyes Friday afternoon. In stooping to pick up something in her yard a branch of the shrubbery penetrated the corner of her left eye and came dangerously near destroying the sight. While the injury is not apt to prove permanent it is none the less painful for the time being.

Williamson Menefee, the seventeen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Menefee, of this city, underwent a successful operation in Baltimore last week for an injury to his skull sustained fifteen years ago, a piece of terra cotta pipe falling on his head as he was being hauled about the streets of Graham by a nurse. The wound recently began to cause him trouble and it finally necessitated a trephining operation. He will be entirely well in a short time.

Raleigh Post, 21st: A painful accident happened to Mr. W. P. Matthews, of Greensboro, at the fair grounds last afternoon. He was here exhibiting Case engines. In taking down some of the machinery near the rear of floral hall a large iron beam fell and caught Mr. Matthews, tearing the flesh from the calf of his right leg. Dr. W. C. Horton attended him and had him removed to the city. His leg was badly lacerated but the injury is not serious.

Cheated Death.

Kidney trouble often ends fatally, but by choosing the right medicine, E. H. Wolfe, of Bear Grove, Ia., cheated death. He says: "Two years ago I had Kidney Trouble, which caused me great pain, suffering and anxiety, but took Electric Bitters, which effected a complete cure. I have also found them of great benefit in general debility and nerve trouble, and keep them constantly on hand, since, as I find they have no equal." At all druggists, guaranteed, 50c.

General Glenn's Funeral.

The funeral of the late General James D. Glenn, who died early Wednesday morning in Raleigh, was held from St. Andrew's Episcopal church Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, the service being conducted by the Rev. Sanders R. Guignard, rector, assisted by the Rev. Dr. H. Baldwin Dean, rector of St. Barnabas church. The church was crowded with people and many found it impossible to get inside the edifice. The service was very impressive and the expressions of the loved ones and friends present was a fitting tribute to this man whom Greensboro people had known and delighted to honor.

The interment was at Greene Hill cemetery and the burial service was in charge of the Knights Templar of Ivanhoe Commandery No. 8, of Greensboro; Piedmont No. 6, of Winston-Salem, and Salisbury No. 10, of Salisbury; Greensboro Lodge No. 76 and Corinthian Lodge A. F. and A. M., and the Greensboro Lodge No. 602, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. Members of various fraternities of which he was a member also attended the funeral. General Glenn was buried with all the honors of a Knight Templar and Master Mason.

The pallbearers were: Neil Ellington, W. A. Lash, J. S. Michaux, P. C. Pope, C. R. Brown, O. Williams, J. A. Odell, W. H. Wetmore and A. R. Horry. The honorary pallbearers were: R. R. King, W. E. Coffin, W. P. Beall, J. M. Morehead, W. P. Bynum, Jr., E. H. Coanman, C. P. Vanstoy, George S. Sergeant and R. M. Douglas.

Among those that came here from Raleigh to attend the funeral were Governor and Mrs. Robert B. Glenn and daughter, Miss Rebecca, Mrs. Jas. D. Glenn and daughter, Miss Annie Glenn, Attorney General R. D. Gilmer and Mr. John W. Thompson. Mr. Chalmers C. Glenn and Mrs. Glenn, of High Point, were also here to attend the services. There was a large attendance of people from out of the city, including a number from a distance.

The remains of General Glenn reached here Wednesday night from Raleigh and were carried at once to St. Andrew's church, where they laid in state until the hour of the funeral.

Mrs. Chalmers Glenn, mother of General Glenn, who now resides in Georgia, failed to get the news of the death of her son in time to reach here for the funeral. She and another son, Edward Glenn, arrived Thursday afternoon and returned to Raleigh with the other members of the Glenn family. John Glenn the only son of the deceased, is now in southern Texas and it was impossible for him to get here in time for the funeral.

James Dodge Glenn was born in Rockingham county, N. C., in the year 1852. His boyhood days and much of his early life was spent at the old Broadnax homestead in that county.

The deceased attended school at the Virginia Military Institute and as a result of that training was for some time Adjutant General of the North Carolina State Guard. Several years ago he moved from Rockingham to Guilford county and became actively identified with the business and social interests of the city. He was for some time previous to his purchase by the city, president and general manager of the Greensboro Water Supply Company. Later he became law agent for the Southern Railway, giving up this position about ten months ago to become private secretary to his brother. Before coming to Greensboro General Glenn had represented Rockingham county in the state legislature, and while here served two terms as state senator. He was first elected senator from this district in 1900 and served during the term of 1901. He was re-elected in 1903 and last year declined to be a candidate. As a senator General Glenn was considered one of the ablest members of that body, serving on several of the most important committees.

In April, 1904, General Glenn suffered a severe attack of acute indigestion, which caused partial paralysis of the body, and for several weeks his life was despaired of, but he recovered and resumed his work as law agent for the Southern Railway. On account of the feeble condition of his brother, Governor Glenn offered him the position of private secretary when elected last year. This office General Glenn accepted and held until his death. Twice since becoming secretary to the Governor, General Glenn had suffered two attacks of indigestion, one in Raleigh some time ago and one more recently at Buffalo Lithia Springs, Va. On the Sunday preceding his death he was stricken with the fourth attack.

General Glenn was twice married. His first wife was Miss Mary Brodnax, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Brodnax, of this city. She lived a few years after marriage. His second wife was before marriage Miss Sarah Hairston, of Chatmos, Va. The latter and three children survive. His mother and two brothers, Governor R. B. and Mr. Ed. Glenn, also survive him.

The mother of General Glenn was the daughter of James R. Dodge, for many years Supreme court reporter, and a kinsman of Washington Irving, and possessed much of his geniality, humor and wit. The General could therefore scarcely help being the honorable and useful citizen and thorough able public official that he was.

General Glenn was a member of the Greensboro Lodge of Elks, and was also a prominent Mason, having attained the thirty-second, or Shriners' degree, in that fraternity. He was the first exalted ruler of the Greensboro Lodge of Elks and was also actively interested in the work of the organization. He was also active in the Masonic order, having held almost every important office in the Masonic lodge and Knight Templar Commandery.

General Glenn was universally popular wherever he was known and in Greensboro he had numerous friends. His family and other relatives have the heartfelt sympathy of the people of Greensboro in their hour of grief.

IMPORTANT OCCASION.

Meeting of North Carolina Primary Teachers' Association.

No organization has been effected for sometime that has greater possibilities for good to the state than the North Carolina Primary Teachers' Association.

More than one-half of the children in our cities and towns are found in the primary grades (first to third,) and the same condition also exists in the rural districts. This fact alone shows the large importance of this work and the great responsibility that rests upon primary teachers. Many of these teachers realize this responsibility and a number of them have banded themselves together for study and for mutual strengthening and upbuilding. They are anxious for every primary teacher in the state to join their organization because they believe every teacher needs help and that every teacher can get help and can give help by so doing.

The association will hold its annual business meeting during the Teachers' Assembly, and get from that meeting all the inspiration possible, but it proposes also to hold a yearly meeting during the school term when its members will discuss freely and frankly conditions as they are, and give and get hints for the betterment of these and where they can see each other working out her various problems.

This year's meeting is to be held in Greensboro on the 26th and 27th of October.

The following subjects will be discussed:

First Steps in Reading.
Number Work in the First Three Grades.
Language Work in the First Three Grades.

Nature Work.
Music.
Manual Training.
Motor Work.
Home Study.
Discipline.

A rate of one straight fare going and one-third fare plus 25 cents returning, has been secured, provided it is asked for by fifty persons who wish to attend the meeting. More than half this number have already signified their intention of attending the meeting, and only a few schools have yet been heard from. Everyone should ask the agent at the starting point for a certificate stating that she has paid one straight fare.

Entertainment will be provided all those attending if they will notify Miss Anna Mead Michaux of their intention of coming.

If all will wear a bit of light blue ribbon at the time of arrival they will be more easily identified by the committee that meets the trains. The committee will wear white ribbon.

It is important that this first meeting be well attended, as plans will be formulated for the future development of the organization in the state.

I hope that every public school teacher in Guilford county, who possibly can do so, will attend these meetings. They will be very helpful especially to those who are doing primary work.

The sessions will be held in the Curry building at the State Normal and Industrial College. THOS. R. FORST.

Tobacco Farmers and Cotton Planters Hold Meetings at Raleigh.

(Raleigh Post, 22nd.)

There were two important farmers' meetings in this city yesterday afternoon and last night. The one in the afternoon was the North Carolina Protective Association and the one last night the North Carolina Cotton Growers' Association, but working to the same end, the betterment of the condition of the farmers of the state. The protective association has especially the fostering of the interests of the tobacco growers, although they make it a point to co-operate in every way possible with the cotton planters, and in fact, all farmers generally.

The necessity of thorough organization and co-operation and the gradual marketing of crops so as to sustain the prices were the keynote of both meetings and the reports and speeches indicated that progress is being made in this direction. Both meetings were presided over by Col. John S. Cunningham, he being president of both.

N. C. PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

The North Carolina Farmers' Protective Association was in session yesterday afternoon from 2 to 5:30 o'clock. The report showed sixteen counties represented. Resolutions were adopted to erect independent manufacturing plants, with steam prize attached that the farmer might put his tobacco in commercial form, thereby enabling him to hold it.

It was ordered that the books be opened for stock subscriptions at places designated by the board of advisers. The price of stock is to be $10 per share, allowing no party to hold more than 1,000 shares, and in case of sale it is to be offered for sale to the directors of the plant.

There was another resolution that the association encourage the farmers to subscribe stock to erect fertilizer manufacturing plants in which to manufacture their own fertilizers.

The association has purchased a newspaper plant and will issue a paper known as the Farmer and Co-operator, to be issued at Intelligence, N. C.

There was also a resolution adopted that they assist the Southern Cotton Growers' Association in any way possible to hold their stock for 11 cents, and that it request the fertilizer manufacturers to put their fertilizers in cotton sacks.

The meeting was presided over by Col. John S. Cunningham, the president of the association. Important speeches were made by Col. J. Bryan Grimes, Hon. S. L. Patterson, J. M. Sharp and J. O. W. Gravelly, the two last named being grand lecturers of the association. Mr. Sharp, as lecturer, reported that he had made speeches in several counties to more than a thousand people, and that he finds the people more anxious than ever for organization, and that it only remains for the way to be pointed out. He spoke as lecturer from the western district. Mr. Gravelly, for the eastern section, reported similar conditions.

THE COTTON GROWERS.

At the meeting of the cotton growers' association last night there were interesting discussions of the general situation and reports from the various counties represented as to the situation in their sections. A resolution was adopted endorsing the movement of farmers the country over to hold their cotton for 11 cents.

The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock by Colonel Cunningham, and in doing so he expressed gratification at the manner in which the farmers are already standing together in the holding of cotton for higher prices.

He said the records on the cotton market the past few weeks show that the farmers have the situation in hand and are determined to hold for reasonable prices. He declared the object of the meeting was the discussion of the benefit, purpose and profit to be derived from co-operation. He regretted that Mr. Harvey Jordan, president of the Southern association, was not present. He urged that the 11 cents fixed as the minimum price to sell be observed, and besought the farmers that they stand together. He begged that, in the language of President Roosevelt, they "stand pat" and demand a "square deal," using the "big stick" to enforce their demands, if necessary.

Here is the resolution which was adopted by the association:

"Resolved, That the minimum price of 11 cents per pound for cotton, fixed by the executive committee of the Southern Cotton Growers' Association at Asheville, is reasonable and just, and that we will abide by it and use our influence with the cotton growers of the respective counties to do this."

The adjournment was until the first Wednesday in December, when a state convention is to be held here.

Friar Lands Transferred.

Washington, Oct. 20.—The final transaction for the transfer to the United States government of the Dominican friar lands in the Philippines which have been under dispute so long was made today, when the government paid through the International Banking Corporation of New York the sum of $3,521,657 to the Philippines Sugar Estates Development Company in final settlement of the lands. The price is $150,000 less than was asked before Secretary Taft made his recent visit to the Philippines, and the payment concludes the friar lands purchase which involves a total of 410,000 acres and an outlay of $7,250,000. Over the Dominican lands, which include about 150,000 acres, a dispute arose as to the title to part of the tract, and the government served notice on the development company, which claimed ownership, that no money would be paid over until an absolutely clear title was furnished. The money was raised by the sale of the Philippine bonds, and has been on deposit with the International Banking Corporation and the Guarantee Trust Company in New York city for about two years drawing interest.

Forfeited $500 Bond.

Statesville, Oct. 18.—Yesterday J. L. Armstrong, former postmaster at Spencer, who was under bond in the sum of $500 to appear at this term of court to answer to the charge of embezzling money order funds, failed to appear and the bond was forfeited. There are several cases of importance on the docket, but only a few minor cases of distilling and retailing were tried.

Doped and Robbed by Greensboro Negro.

Salisbury, Oct. 19.—Officers George Eagle and G. F. Wise captured Henry Hill, a Greensboro negro, this morning between 2 and 3 o'clock and landed him in jail.

Mr. Wise was on his rounds as policeman when he found Will Wilkerson, a white man from Gold Hill, lying upon a track at the Southern station. He aroused the sleeping fellow, who told him that he had been with a friend and up so late that he became suddenly very sleepy and dozed off. As Wilkerson related this he felt for his watch and it was gone as was his purse and $10. He had no idea who had relieved him of his property and work was immediately begun on the case.

It was known earlier in the day that a raid upon Tatum's livery stable had been planned. Hill was likewise known to be the man who would attempt it. The policemen had an idea where Hill would be and deferring Wilkerson's complaint went after the negro. They hid themselves in the shadow of a house occupied by negroes and in a few moments Hill approached and started to open the door. The officers nailed him right there and took him to jail. On examining his clothes Wilkerson's watch was found but the money was missing. They could wring no confession from him as to the cash.

Hill is a bad negro. He circulates under innumerable aliases and has probably committed a crime under the name of every one. He stole a cow in this county and did time for it several years ago. His return to the roads will be heard with some joy.

A Man of Mystery Dies at High Point Among Strangers.

High Point, Oct. 21.—There died here this afternoon a man whose life's history is wrapped in mystery. Five months ago Wm. Berkley, as he called himself, came to High Point from Mebane, where he worked in the White furniture factory, and engaged work at the Tate Furniture Co. Four weeks ago he was taken sick and carried to the Junior Order hospital, where kind friends administered to his wants. He will be buried here tomorrow afternoon if nothing is heard from his people. The man is apparently about 35 years of age, five feet ten inches in height, red hair and moustache, weight normally about 155 pounds.

During his stay here and through his illness he repeatedly said, "I would rather be dead than alive," and while delirious, "Don't let them get me; they have found me at last." He always eluded any questions as to his past, his people or anything that would give a clue as to himself, and seemed to be brooding over something that was destroying his vitality.

To an acquaintance he remarked that West Virginia was his home, and that at one time he was engaged to be married when his betrothed died. It is purely conjecture as what terrible thing caused the man to live such a reclusive life.

In the hope that perhaps an old mother or father or brother or sister, wife or child of the dead man may see or learn of this, the account is furnished at the earnest request of the humane people of High Point, who will give the man a decent burial and pay the expenses his sickness occasioned.

Veterans Re-Elect Officers.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 18.—The North Carolina division, United Confederate Veterans in annual session in the state capitol tonight, re-elected all officers as follows: Julian S. Carr, major general; P. C. Carlton, William L. London, James I. Metts and James M. Ray, brigadier generals. The formal address was delivered by William H. S. Burgwyn. A committee was created to draft resolutions of thanks to Chief Justice Walter Clark, for his publication, "North Carolina Equitable Histories." Speeches were made by Generals W. R. Cox and W. P. Roberts, and also by W. P. Wood, James G. Graham, F. H. Busbee, Orren R. Smith and Rev. Frank Siler.

A committee was appointed to raise funds for the purchase of the land about to be sold on which Confederates who died on Johnson's Island are buried. It was urged that Congress provide for care of graves of Confederates buried in the North.

Mexican Wheat Crop Short.

Mexico City, Oct. 22.—The shortness of the wheat crop is greater than was estimated a few weeks ago and millers are looking for the entire removal of the duty on American and Canadian wheat by the first of next year. The city bakers have reduced the size of their loaves, asserting that it is impossible to give the same weight as formerly. There are some stocks of wheat in the hands of large farmers here, but not sufficient to bring down the price, which is steadily rising.

The price of corn is also rising, the advance being over 50 per cent, as compared with the prices of August. This causes hardship among the poor. There is a possibility of the duty on corn being abated.

Arrested for Mistreatment of Paupers.

Winston-Salem, Oct. 20.—Before Yadkin county Superior court adjourned today, M. H. Bryant, superintendent of the county home, was arrested and placed under a $500 bond for his appearance at the next term of court, to answer the charge of cruel treatment to inmates. Solicitor Hammer says his attention was first called to the charges against Superintendent Bryant by the State Board of Charities. It is alleged that the superintendent not only whipped an old woman, but had her placed in a mad house. Another allegation against Bryant is that illegitimate children have been born at the home during his administration.

Will Be Settled Without Bloodshed.

Washington, Oct. 18.—At the State department today the belief was expressed that the difficulties between France and Venezuela would be settled amicably and satisfactorily. The departure of the French cruiser Desaix from Cherbourg for Fort de France, Martinique, yesterday, while probably having some bearing on the Venezuelan situation, is not regarded as highly significant here, nor as meaning that France has actually prepared to make an attack on Venezuela.

IN MEMORY OF GEN. GLENN.

Council of State Extends Resolutions of Sympathy to the Governor and His Family.

Raleigh, Oct. 21.—The following was today placed in the governor's hands as a tribute of respect from the other state officers, composing the Council of State:

"It is exceedingly difficult to properly express in words the worth of one so favorably known as General James D. Glenn, private secretary to the governor of North Carolina, who died at his home in Raleigh, October 18. The Council of State honors his memory for his gentleness, his integrity and his uprightness in life, which endeared him to our people and cast a halo around his name which will grow brighter and brighter in the years to come. We thank God for General Glenn and for his valuable service to our state in all the high positions he was called to occupy. We thank God for the heroic fight he made for his life and that he was manly and unafraid until the burden and heat of the day had passed and he had walked down through the valley of the shadow and into the darkness which comes to purple the dawn of a better morning.

"We tender to his family, to his aged mother and to the governor our tenderest sympathy in their sad bereavement and pray that the consolations of grace may abound in them and that our Heavenly Father may take them into his inner chamber and comfort them as one who is comforted by his mother. It is decided that a blank page of the minutes of our council be devoted to the memory of General Glenn and that a copy of this tribute be sent to his family.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S CALL.

The Gate City Gets a Glimpse of the Executive and Gives a Greeting.

The long-expected visit of President Roosevelt materialized last Thursday afternoon and the Gate City made the most of the brief period allotted in which it might see and hear the chief executive of the greatest nation on the face of the earth. The usual formalities were scrupulously observed, the mayor and board of aldermen, the business organizations and many other prominent citizens uniting to extend a greeting befitting the occasion, but somehow the city failed to let itself out as it might, and no other cause can be assigned than it felt that it could not do justice to so important a guest in the brief space of five minutes. If a day or even half a day of the President's time can be secured some time in the future the old town will show him what it is made of in a manner that will make an impression. Thousands turned out Thursday, lusty cheers rent the air, Mayor Murphy offered a word of welcome on behalf of the city and the crowd heard words fall from the lips of the President that were well worth hearing, but there was nothing to distinguish the picture from scores of others that the Presidential party will encounter on its tour. Greensboro can and will do better whenever an opportunity presents.

When the President's train pulled into the yards here Thursday afternoon, with Conductor C. M. Oakley and Engineer Miles Glenn in charge, all the vacant space near the depot was packed with eager people. All adjacent windows, sheds and car tops were crowded with those who strove for a point of vantage. There was no lack of cordiality in the greeting that fell on the President's ears as he emerged from the rear door of his car and scanned the sea of faces upturned about him. After Mayor Murphy's word of welcome had been spoken, Lieutenant Governor Winston, who was standing at Mr. Roosevelt's right, said with a quieting gesture, "Fellow North Carolinians, your President." Another ovation followed, but it was quickly hushed in order that every word uttered might be heard. The President said:

"My Fellow Citizens: 'It is indeed a great pleasure to be greeted by you today and in saying how glad I am to see the men and women of North Carolina, I don't want to forget the children too—I am glad to say that going through your state the children seem to be all right in quality and in quantity, and I congratulate you on them."

"No man could fail to be made a better American by traveling through this great historic state of yours, and throughout his journey he sees place after place associated with the historic past, such as this city of yours here, right near the Guilford Battle Ground, commemorating by its name one of Washington's great generals. North Carolina's history has ever been high and honorable."

"I see so many small friends here," said the President, smiling. "That I have to interrupt for a moment." Then he continued:

"North Carolina's history has ever been high and honorable, and surely, my friends it is right that we should remember that the mighty deeds of our forefathers are not to be served to us as excuses for inaction on our part, but as spur to drive us forward to doing our duty in our turn."

"We respect the son of a worthy father if he feels that the fact that his father did well makes it incumbent on him to serve to do better. We despise the boy who treats the fact that his father counted for something as being a warrant for his counting for nothing. And so I am glad to note the care that you in this state are giving to education. The greatness of the country in the time immediately to come will depend upon the way in which the young generation of today is trained to citizenship in the future, and I am sorry to state that there is probably no one here who isn't acquainted with some kindly, well meaning and most foolish father or mother, who, because life has been hard with him or her in the past takes the view that the children aren't to have to face any difficulties. The worst thing you can do for a child is to bring him up or bring her up so as to dodge difficulties, and the children that will rise up to call their parents blessed are those to whom the parents have given the inestimable privilege of training them to meet difficulties, not to shirk them, to overcome obstacles, not to get out of the way of them."

"In your own experience you know the woman who says, 'I have had to work hard, my daughter shall be a lady; she shan't work.' You have all seen her. She is raising those daughters up to be curses to themselves and to every one else. And so with the father, who, having worked hard himself, lets his son be brought up with the theory only of spending what the father has accumulated. He is laying up misery for that son, and is teaching him to be worse than worthless in the community as a whole. Neither an individual nor a community is worth anything if it seeks only after that which is easy. The thing to do is to find out what is worth doing and do it—show the manly quality that allows of its being done. In every audience here in the South I see men who fought in the Confederate army in the civil war, and usually men who fought in the Union army also. These men, as they look back, feel that the part of their career of which they are most proud, the memory of which they wish to hand down to their children, is not any part that was easy, but the part in which they did the hardest work, and the work allotted to them to do."

Crowded about the President as he spoke were Senators Simmons and Overman, state officials, newspaper representatives and secret service men. A bouquet of huge chrysanthemums for Mrs. Roosevelt were handed up to the President, who acknowledged the courtesy with a word of thanks. Judge Boyd boarded the train here by invitation of the President and accompanied the party as far as Charlotte. He also carried a bouquet of the choicest flowers to Mrs. Roosevelt. Cheers went up as the train pulled out on schedule time.

At High Point, Salisbury and Charlotte there were similar ovations, likewise all too brief. At Charlotte the President spoke from a stand in Vance park. At Atlanta, Birmingham and other Southern cities where longer stops were made, the crowds were simply immense, that at Atlanta being numbered at 200,000, the state fair being in progress at the time. Further South the quarantines were lifted for the Presidential party, timely frosts having removed all danger from fever. The return trip to Washington will be made by boat.

The special in which President Roosevelt and his party are traveling is as fine as any that ever left Washington. The four cars are vestibules and comprise all of the necessities and luxuries of travel of which the most modern railway equipment is capable. The President's car "Signet" brought up the rear of the flyer. It is a private car which he has occupied on several former occasions. An observation room trimmed in mahogany looks out over a broad platform, railed in brass, from which the President will make many of his speeches. Three suites of two rooms each, one room of each suite being furnished with brass beds, comprise the sleeping quarters. In the forward end is a kitchen and dining room. Ahead of this is the compartment car, "Penaleno," with two drawing rooms and seven state rooms. This car is also rich in mahogany trimmings. Next in line toward the engine is the dining car, "Victoria," and then a combination coach, comprising a smoking room and baggage compartment.

Col. L. S. Brown, the Southern's popular general agent in Washington, was in charge of the special. The colonel is an experienced pilot of Presidential specials. He accompanied President Cleveland South, made several trips with the late President McKinley, and had charge of the train that carried President Roosevelt South on a previous occasion.

Important Suits Compromised.

A spirit of conciliation seems to have overtaken the parties to various pending suits within the past week, two and possibly three of the most important having been settled by mutual agreement out of court. It was stated Monday that a compromise had been effected in the cases of W. H. Osborn vs. Leach and the Raleigh News and Observer, which are set for argument in the Supreme court this week. Nothing definite is known as to the terms of the compromise. In the Superior court Monday the suit of John Barker vs. E. P. Wharton was withdrawn, the plaintiff paying the costs. The case grew out of a petition circulated some years ago by Mr. Wharton in opposition to Mr. Barker's application to sell liquor in his building just west of the court house. Another suit settled out of court was that of Fisher vs. The Southern Loan and Trust Company, et als., involving a number of real estate deals made by the late Capt. B. J. Fisher through and with the defendant company. Attorneys in the case reached an agreement Saturday evening and a decree embracing the terms of settlement was signed by Judge Ward on Monday. Claims for nearly $45,000 were waived by the plaintiff before the matter could be adjusted. The decree as signed by Judge Ward is as follows:

Mrs. Isabella Fisher, et al., vs. The Southern Loan and Trust Company, The Home Insurance Company of Greensboro, The Southern Stock Mutual Insurance Company, The Underwriters of Greensboro, E. P. Wharton, A. W. McAlister, R. G. Vaughn, David White and A. M. Scales, Trustee—FINAL DECREE.

This cause coming on to be heard, and all parties consenting thereto, it is ordered, decreed and adjudged by the court that all matters in difference between the parties thereto, be settled and adjusted on the following terms, to-wit:

First, That the defendants Southern Stock Mutual Insurance Company and Underwriters of Greensboro shall execute to plaintiffs a deed to the Lampman and Lindsay corner, property described in the pleadings, upon payment to the said defendants of the sum of thirty thousand dollars. The said deed shall be drawn up so as to vest in the plaintiffs title to said property, same as they have in other lands devised to them in the will of the late B. J. Fisher.

Second, That the plaintiffs and the receiver, A. L. Brooks, Esq., execute to Southern Life and Trust Company, a deed to the lot on East Market street, in Greensboro, North Carolina, and known as the Southern Life and Trust Company building, upon the payment to the said receiver of the sum of sixty-three thousand and six hundred dollars.

Third, That the contract between B. J. Fisher and Southern Loan and Trust Company whereby the said company guaranteed to said Fisher the annual sum of twenty-seven hundred dollars income on said building be cancelled and surrendered.

Fourth, That said A. L. Brooks, receiver, shall pay to Southern Life and Trust Company the sum of fifteen hundred dollars, advanced, to pay interest to L. S. Holt on a mortgage; the sum of twenty-two hundred and forty-one and 83-100 dollars advanced for improvements on "the Fisher woods" property; and one thousand dollars for services rendered in preparing said property for the market.

Fifth, That upon the payment to it of the sum of thirty-one thousand eight hundred and forty-one and 35-100 dollars, the defendant Home Insurance Company of Greensboro shall cancel and surrender a note and mortgage executed to it by B. J. Fisher and wife securing a debt of thirty thousand dollars upon which certain payments have been made.

Sixth, The Southern Life and Trust Company shall pay over to A. L. Brooks, receiver, such sums of money as it has on hand at this date to the credit of B. J. Fisher, deceased, and his estate, such sum being six thousand two hundred dollars.

Seventh, That this decree shall have the force and effect of a conveyance respectively to the parties, of the properties agreed to be conveyed; and of a payment for the sums of money agreed to be paid.

Eighth, That each party pay its own cost to be taxed by the clerk.

Ninth, That the Southern Life and Trust Company be made a party defendant; and that A. L. Brooks, receiver, be made a party plaintiff.

Consent—Brooks & Thomson, E. J. Justice, attorneys for plaintiff.

Scales, Taylor & Scales, Pon & Fuller, attorneys for defendants.

There is also another judgment in the case in which the pleadings were withdrawn, thereby withdrawing allegations of fraud.

Lester-Truitt Marriage.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. P. S. Dixon in Rockingham county last Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock, when Miss Josephine Lester and Mr. Egbert Truitt, of Elon College, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock. A few intimate friends and relatives were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. L. I. Cox, of Elon College.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Lester, and is one of Rockingham's most popular young women. The groom is a very promising young man of Elon College, an active member of Shallowford Christian church. Mr. and Mrs. Truitt left Monday morning for Elon College, where they will reside in the future. We extend to them our congratulations and best wishes, and wish for them a long, happy life.

Brutality as a Science.

Washington Post.

President Roosevelt, that sturdy lover of peace, has started a series of conferences designed to prevent mutilation, bloodshed, and murder on the football gridiron. His activity in this direction, remarks the Philadelphia Ledger, "is perfectly consistent with his attitude on race suicide." As usual, the President is far and away ahead of other public men in perceiving new dangers and courageously attacking them. But is he not attempting an impossibility when he seeks to abolish brutality in football?

It is the glory of football, according to its champions, that it cultivates grit, self-control, stubborn courage, and gallantry. Physical strength is a requisite, of course. The ideal football player is a young human bulldog. Young fellows of ordinary physical and moral makeup, if they do not devote too much attention to their studies and escape deformity and death, are sometimes made into fine football players. But there is in every college and university a lack of really first class material, which is supplied by hiring fine specimens of brutes and paying their way through college. These splendid young ruffians are matriculated by the enthusiastic faculty, anxious to please the "men" of the school, and secretly anxious to capture the football championship at all hazards of life and limb. Intercollegiate games are thus becoming more and more a fight between professional toughs, who are merely technically attached to the colors they glorify.

Two games opening the season among Eastern colleges were so full of new football methods as to reveal clearly the rapid progress of the game. In the Columbia-Western game in New York on Saturday the tactics differed radically from those practiced at the Pennsylvania-Swarthmore game at Franklin Field on the same day. In the Columbia-Western game the plan was adopted of uniting one entire side and assaulting a single prominent member of the opposing team. At an opportune time, and at the proper signal, the biggest and heaviest man of the attacking team jumped with spiked shoes upon the prostrate victim, and the rest of the team followed, stamping upon their man and doing their best to "put him out of business." The skillful new play would have succeeded admirably if the coach had not run up and punched the first assailant upon the nose. This, of course, led to a free fight, in which the police took a hand. The lack of self-control in the coach was universally condemned. The victim had not said a word, and was demonstrating beautifully his ability to withstand grueling punishment. The fact that he will recover proves how foolishly the coach acted.

In the Pennsylvania-Swarthmore game the plan of a free fight among all players was tried. There was not such a pleasing exhibition of team work as the other method offered, but the free-fight plan proved its merits in giving the players full opportunity for displaying the highest virtues acquired on the gridiron, such as ability to withstand punishment, bulldog tenacity, agility in fighting with the eyes blinded with blood and dust, an unflinching instinct in reaching the vital points of the enemy, an instant readiness to co-operate with a partisan in doubling forces upon a single antagonist. The brutal and uncalled-for interferences of the police spoiled the development of several pretty individual plays. The points involved in gouging out an antagonist's eyes were not thoroughly practiced for this reason.

The logical development of football requires a hands-off policy on the part of the police. If brutality is ever to be made a science, it must have a free field. There can be no half-way business. If the President wishes to prevent brutality he must abolish football.

IN MEMORIAM.

Jamestown, Ohio, Journal.

Julia A. Thomson was born October 22, 1852, and died at her home in Jamestown, Ohio, September 19, 1905, aged 52 years 10 months and 27 days.

Her girlhood was spent at the home of her parents in Guilford county, North Carolina. When a young lady she came to Ohio, where she was united in marriage to Nathan Hussey.

Twenty-two months afterward this happy union was broken by the death of her husband. Broken in health she came to Jamestown to the professional care of Dr. M. F. Moorman. Shortly after her recovery, in the year 1885, she was united in marriage to Dr. Moorman.

This marriage proved to be an exceptionally happy one. For twenty-three years they lived a peaceful, happy, quiet life and then death invaded the home. The good doctor died and she was left a lonely widow.

Mrs. Moorman was converted when a young girl and the experience was so glorious that it was her delight as long as she lived. She was an active worker in the Master's vineyard, being always willing to engage in any service that was calculated to honor Christ and strengthen the church. Her special field of service was the teaching of little children in the Sabbath school. She was peculiarly fitted for this work, for she never failed to win the love and confidence of the little ones and there are many who will yet rise up and call her blessed.

Mrs. Moorman was always frail and much of her labor was performed while she was enduring pain. And yet she was naturally cheerful, always looking on the bright side of life and retaining to the last her confidence and faith in the goodness and wisdom of God.

During the last fourteen months her health steadily declined. She was taken seriously ill about fifteen days prior to her death and expressed the belief that she would never recover. Her relations and friends did all that could be done to overcome the disease, but all that medical knowledge could devise and gentle, careful nursing accomplish did not avail. It soon became apparent that death was near. She longed to go and at last rest.

On the evening of September 15th her spirit left the poor broken body and returned to God.

It makes no difference how long you have been sick, if you are troubled with indigestion, constipation, liver and kidney troubles, Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will make you well. 35 cents. Holton's drug store.

RHEUMATISM BODY RACKED WITH PAIN

No other bodily suffering is equal to that produced by the pain of Rheumatism. When the poisons and acids, which cause this disease, become entrenched in the blood there is hardly any part of the body that is not affected. The muscles become sore and drawn, the nerves twitch and sting, the joints inflame and swell, the bones ache, every movement is one of agony, and the entire body is racked with pain. Rheumatism is brought on by indigestion, stomach troubles, torpid Liver, weak Kidneys and a general inactive state of the system. The refuse matter instead of passing off through nature's avenues is left to sour and form uric acid, and other acid poisons which are absorbed into the blood. Rheumatism does not affect all alike. In some cases it takes a wandering form; it may be in the arms or legs one day and in the shoulders, feet, hands, back or other parts of the body the next. Others suffer more seriously, and are never free from pain. The uric acid and other irritating substances find lodgment in the muscles and joints and as these deposits increase the muscles become stiff and the joints locked and immovable. It matters not in what form the disease may be the cause is always the same—a sour, acid condition of the blood. This vital stream has lost its purity and freshness and instead of nourishing and feeding the different parts with health-giving properties, it fills them with the acids and salts of this painful and far-reaching disease. The cold and dampness of Winter always intensify the pains of Rheumatism, and the sufferer to get relief from the agony, rubs the affected parts with liniments, oils, lotions, etc., or uses plasters and other home remedies. These are desirable because they give temporary ease and comfort but have no effect on the real trouble which is in the blood and beyond the reach of such treatment. S. S. S. is the best remedy for Rheumatism. It goes into the blood and attacks the disease at its head, and by neutralizing and driving out the acids and building up the thin, sour blood it cures the disease permanently. While cleansing the blood S. S. S. tones up the stomach, digestion and every other part of the system, soothes the excited nerves, reduces the inflammation, dissolves the deposits in the joints, relieves all pain and completely cures this distressing disease. S. S. S. is a certain cure for Rheumatism in any form; Muscular, Inflammatory, Articular or Sciatic. Special book on the disease and any medical advice, without charge, to all who write. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

About fifteen years ago I had a severe attack of Rheumatism and could not work with any satisfaction. My legs were badly swollen and drawn so I could scarcely walk. I tried many remedies but could get no relief. I was finally recommended to try S. S. S. and it soon cured me sound and well. I am now 74 years old and have never had any return of the trouble.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Correspondence of the PATRIOT.

Washington, Oct. 21.—The United States government differs from the governments of other great powers in that its civil service far exceeds in personnel its military or naval services. This cannot be said of Germany, of France, of Russia or any other great power. With them there are far more soldiers bearing arms than clerks wielding pens, and the United States government is further peculiar in its extensive employment of women in clerical work. Perhaps in no other country except Russia is the civil service establishment so much in need of reorganization and reform. A great reform was doubtless effected when admission to the service was made dependent on a competitive examination requiring certain educational attainments. The service under Roosevelt is decidedly better than it was under Grant. But the fact that a man or woman has proved by an examination that he can spell, write and know something of arithmetic does not prove that he is willing to work or will not take advantage of the many opportunities to neglect and shirk his work. The departments are encumbered with employees who have been placed there on account of their political services or on account of their relationship to senators or senators' wives or mothers-in-law. They have held fast through many administrations, successive cabinet officers as heads of departments hesitating to displace clerks so respectable, so venerable and of such formidable antecedents. These clerks, so well entrenched, have a most demoralizing influence. They have long drawn out pay, doing little or no work, and are adepts in all the arts of shirking work and making the most of their sinecure. The President and the cabinet officers have long been cognizant of this state of affairs, and at a cabinet meeting just previous to the President's departure for the South it was decided that the President and cabinet officers should be entitled to the right to dismiss promptly any civil service employee known to be inefficient or obstructive to the government service. In such a case the dismissal should be final and the discharged employee without recourse or right of appeal. The howl that has arisen in the departments in Washington demonstrates better than anything else could the number of heads that should fall. The efficient, honest and industrious clerk has nothing to fear from the order and it is conservative to estimate that thirty per cent. of the government clerks are shaking in their shoes at the present moment. It is not to be supposed that thirty per cent. of the civil employees will be dismissed nor that a third of every man and woman will go, but every man and woman with a guilty conscience is conscious that he or she is in range of the lightning that may strike at any moment. The government clerk does not have a hard time. He is asked to work seven and a half hours six days in the week. He has thirty days annual sick leave and thirty days annual vacation. He has as many holidays as a patriotic people can devise reasons for or find dead heroes to honor, including Labor Day. During three months of the summer he is dismissed every Saturday at noon. And for all this he gets a salary higher than would be paid by any private corporation and paid with a regularity that nothing can interrupt. And does he in exchange always give efficient and honest service? Not by any means. The majority actually steal from the government in time, service and supplies more than they are worth to it, and the manner and diversity of their evasions and speculations would take a book to describe. In the small incident of receiving visitors during office hours it is impossible to compute how much of their time the government loses. Some clerks are permitted to receive visitors until two o'clock of each day, and it is no uncommon sight to find the toilet room for the women clerks filled with the clerks and their guests until that hour. Every bureau has a messenger who is there for the better communication of the different bureaus. It is no uncommon thing for him to act on occasions as the janitor, butler or coachman of the bureau chief whom he is afraid to offend for fear of losing his place. Hundreds of clerks are engaged in literary work which they do in office hours with the aid of government paid amanuenses, employing data collected by the government, using department stationery and typewriters. The number who take department stationery, ink and penknives as private property to their homes is so great as to be the rule rather than the exception. In the matter of vacations their subterfuges for obtaining more than they are entitled to would give lessons to diplomats. If a clerk gives his thirty days and takes one day at a time he may, by careful management, get sixty in the year; that is, by loyally a half day from the day he leaves and a half day from the day he returns he gets an extra day with full pay. For sick leave he can always obtain a physician's certificate that he has been ill enough to need a picnic. These are the smallest of the offenses of the clerks and so common as to be considered outside altogether the question of a clerk's honesty or efficiency. The greater ones that may possibly come up for rectification under the new law are too numerous and of too widely a varying character to make description possible. Suffice an example or two. A chief of a bureau is an habitual drunkard. He has a trusted clerk who feels his own position more secure or his chances for promotion better if he humors the chief. The chief leaves with him his signature attached to blank document papers of all variety when he goes for a spree. The clerk fills them in and they go to the secretary and occasionally even the President is honored with one which the chief has never seen except when he attached his name to the blank. His clerk keeps him informed in a general way of the office, if he can be found, and if his absence causes too much comment he generally has sufficient control to sober up and come back until quiet is restored. Another: The correspondent of a powerful newspaper wants his "lady friend" kept in office. It is both more respectable and more economical for him. She hasn't had the advantages of an extensive education, but she dusts books, so she gets a place at seventy-five per month. She isn't always clean or always polite or always sober, but it is a dangerous thing to antagonize a powerful newspaper, and the correspondent probably knows about other irregularities in the department that the chief who signs each month for her efficiency and good conduct would not have made public for a good deal more than seventy-five dollars a month paid by the government. But space forbids enumeration. The cabinet officers have the right in their own hands now. If they allow the government to be so persistently and systematically fleeced the public will know where to place the responsibility.

A Dip Into the Future.

Uncle Sam will soon act as sponsor out in southern Idaho for great events. The birth of two promising towns is expected; not twins, however, for they are 7 miles apart and the first will be born and christened a week before the second. Names have already been chosen for them: Heyburn for the one whose natal day will be November 14, Rupert for the one that will look back to November 21 as the day of its official beginning. On these important days a sale of town lots will be made under the benign auspices of Uncle Sam.

Already the town sites are being surveyed and laid off into precise lots with the proper streets, diagonal avenues, public squares, and reservations for municipal purposes that belong to the City Beautiful. Tidings of these preliminary and rumors of the coming auction have spread throughout the West, and hundreds of interesting settlers are anxiously awaiting the announcement of the dates of sale. Some who fear to lose a bargain have already encamped on the ground, where they have erected temporary houses and stores. The lots will be appraised and sold for cash to the highest bidders.

These two towns will be situated on the newly constructed branch of the Oregon Short Line extending to Twin Falls. This country is now a desert, but when the irrigating canals which the government is now building at a cost of more than $3,000,000 are completed, it will be a land of milk and honey, of waving fields and verdant pastures. Men of imagination who need only the background on which to paint their mental pictures have filled in all the pleasant lines and lights, and will come from Utah, Colorado, Nebraska, even from Iowa and Missouri, probably from Oregon, Washington, and Wyoming to claim their own. It is expected that the railroads will make special rates for homeseekers from points east of the Mississippi river.

The proceeds of the sale of the town lots will go to swell the Reclamation fund, and an attempt will probably be made to spend them on the construction of systems of municipal water supply and sewage for each town. The proceeds of town lot sales in Oklahoma were expended by the Secretary of the Interior in the construction of school houses, bridges, court houses, water works, and sewage systems. If a similar policy prevails in this case, the value of lots in Heyburn and Rupert will be greatly increased.

It is expected that the return on the sale of lots in these Idaho towns will be even greater than the returns on the sale of town lots in Oklahoma. In the case of Lawton alone over $100,000 was realized, while the returns on sales in other parts of the territory brought the sum up to more than $700,000. The conditions in southern Idaho are superior to those which exist in Oklahoma, because of the fact that the surrounding country is subdivided into a large number of farms, each of which will be provided with water by the canal now under construction. The climate of this region is unrivalled by any that has been more praised in song and story. An increase in land values would seem to be as assured as are the funds with which Uncle Sam will pay the expenses of developing this hopeful region.

Judge Speer Reversed.

In the case of E. L. Wimish vs. Henry Jamison, the Supreme court of the United States has reversed the decision of the District court for the southern district of Georgia. This is the cause in which United States Judge Speer interfered with the sentence of a prisoner, Jamison, by a recorder's court of Macon, Ga., to work on the streets. The reversal of the cases has the effect of sustaining the local court.

The opinion of the court, rendered within one week from the day of argument, was the occasion of some surprise. It was contained in a few words only, contrary to the usual custom, and was not even reduced to writing.

Rev. Tom Dixon admits he is making $500 a week with his theatrical attraction, "The Clansman." He will be content to refrain from preaching for a long time if there is no turn in the golden tide.

PRESIDENT IN THE SOUTH.

A Genuine Southern Welcome Extended the Chief Executive—Sixty Thousand See and Hear Him at the State Fair.

President Roosevelt is honoring the South with a visit and in turn the South, regardless of political affiliations, is honoring its guest with a reception that lacks none of the cordiality for which this favored section is noted. Beginning with his first stop in Virginia and continuing from day to day ever since there has been no diminution in the cordiality with which he was greeted everywhere. In this state the most notable gathering in his honor was usually rather there for the state fair were augmented by many other thousands who wanted to see and hear the President, and the throng there reached almost unlooked-for proportions. Estimates place the number there as high as 65,000, and it is safe to say that there were approximately that number at the capital on Thursday. The features of the day were the wonderful weather, the intense interest, good order and patriotism of the crowds, the President's personality, his attention to Confederate veterans, and the boldness of his speech, in which he declared for complete government control of railroads. His character and his talk were such as to appeal to North Carolinians as much as to any people on earth, for they deeply love a man who does things and they were swift and sure to recognize in the President one of their own kind of men. While there was great regret that Governor Glenn was prevented by his brother's death from following out the program for the President's reception as originally planned, the situation adjusted itself admirably. Lieutenant Governor Winston and other state officers doing the honors in a most creditable manner. The President not only had the pleasure of meeting typical North Carolinians, but also of doing something which particularly appealed to his literary taste, namely, of presenting the massive gold loving cup, studied with North Carolina gems, and which had been awarded to Mr. John Charles McNeill for the best literary work produced during the year. Lieutenant Governor Winston presented ex-Governor Aycock, who said the splendid gift from a splendid woman, a memorial of her noble father, had an added value when presented to the talented winner by the President of this great Nation, who is a promoter of literature, a writer of it, and a patron of it. In few but incisive words the President made the presentation, saying that it is good to do as North Carolina is doing, not only to develop industrial and material things, but promote literature as well. North Carolina, one of the 13 original states, estimates properly the value of both these things. He congratulated Mr. McNeill on his winning so fine a prize and gave him the cup. At the fair grounds the President spoke as follows:

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

"I am glad here at the capital of North Carolina to have a chance to greet so many of the sons and daughters of your great state. North Carolina's part in our history has ever been high and honorable. It was in North Carolina that the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence foreshadowed the course taken in a few short months by the representatives of the thirteen colonies assembled in Philadelphia. North Carolina can rightfully say that she pointed the way which led to the formation of the new nation. In the Revolution she did many memorable deeds; and the battle of King's Mountain marked the turning point of the Revolutionary war in the South. But I congratulate you not only upon your past, but upon the great industrial activity shown in your commonwealth, an industrial activity which, to mention but one thing, has placed this state second only to one other in the number of its textile factories. You are showing in practical fashion your realization of the truth that there must be a foundation of material well-being in order that any community may make real and rapid progress. And I am happy to say that you are in addition showing in practical fashion your understanding of the great truth that this material well-being, though necessary as a foundation, can only be the foundation, and that upon it must be raised the superstructure of a higher life, if the commonwealth is to stand as it should stand. More and more you are giving care and attention to education; and education means the promotion not only of industry, but of that good citizenship which rests upon individual rights and upon the recognition of each individual that he has duties as well as rights—in other words, of that good citizenship which rests upon moral integrity and intellectual freedom. The man must be decent in his home life, his private life, of course; but this is not by itself enough. The man who fails to be honest and brave both in his political franchise and in his private business contributes to political and social anarchy. Self-government is not an easy thing. Only those communities are fit for it in which the average individual practices the virtue of self-command, of self-restraint, of wise disinterestedness combined with wise self-interest; where the individual possesses common sense, honesty and courage.

FOREST PRESERVATION.

"And now I want to say a word to you on a special subject in which all the country is concerned, but in which North Carolina has a special concern. The preservation of the forest is vital to the welfare of every country. China and the Mediterranean countries offer examples of the terrible effect of deforestation upon the physical geography, and therefore ultimately upon the national well-being of the nations. One of the most obvious duties which our generation owes to the generations that are to come after us is to preserve the existing forests. The prime difference between civilized and uncivilized peoples is that in civilized peoples each generation works not only for its own well-being, but for the well-being of the generations yet unborn, and if we permit the natural resources of this land to be destroyed so that we hand over to our children a heritage diminished in value we thereby prove our unfitness to stand in the forefront of civilized people. One of the greatest of these heritages is our forest wealth. It is the upper altitudes of the forested mountains that are most valuable to the nation as a whole, especially because of their effects upon the water supply. Neither state nor nation can afford to turn these mountains over to the unrestrained greed of those who would exploit them at the expense of the future. We cannot afford to wait longer before assuming control, in the interest of the public, of these forests; for if we do wait, the vested interests of private parties in them may become so strongly entrenched that it may be a most serious as well as a most expensive task to oust them. If the Eastern states are wise, then from the Bay of Fundy to the Gulf we will see, within the next few years, a policy set on foot similar to that so fortunately carried out in the high Sierras of the West by the national government. All the higher Appalachians should be reserved, either by the states or by the nation. I much prefer that they should be put under national control, but it is a mere truism to say that they will not be reserved either by the states or by the nation unless you people of the South show a strong interest therein.

"Such reserves would be a paying investment, not only in protection to many interests, but in dollars and cents to the government. The importance to the Southern people of protecting the Southern mountain forests is obvious. These forests are the best defense against the floods which in the recent past, have, during a single twelve month, destroyed property officially valued at nearly twice what it would cost to buy the Southern Appalachian reserve. The maintenance of your Southern water powers is not less important than the prevention of floods, because if they are injured your manufacturing interests will suffer with them. The perpetuation of your forests, which have done so much for the South, should be one of the first objects of your public men. The two senators from North Carolina have taken an honorable part in this movement. But I do not think that the people of North Carolina, or of any other Southern state, have quite grasped the importance of this movement to the commercial development and prosperity of the South.

TRIBUTE TO CONFEDERATE VETERANS.
"The position of honor in your parade today is held by the Confederate veterans. They by their deeds reflect credit upon their descendants and upon all Americans, both because they did their duty in war and because they did their duty in peace. Now if the young men, their sons, will not only prove that they possess the same power of loyalty to an ideal, but will also show the efficiency in the ranks of industrial life that their fathers, the Confederate veterans, showed that they possessed in the ranks of war, the industrial future of this great and typically American commonwealth is assured.

AS TO TRANSPORTATION.

"The extraordinary development of industrialism during the last half century has been due to several causes, but above all to the revolution in the methods of transportation and communication; that is, to steam and to electricity, to the railroad and the telegraph.

"When the government was founded commerce was carried on by essentially the same instruments that had been in use not only among the civilized, but among barbarian nations, ever since history dawned; that is, by wheeled vehicles drawn by animals, by pack trains, and by sailing ships and rowboats. On land this meant that commerce went in slow, cumbersome, and expensive fashion over highways open to all. Normally these highways could not compete with water transportation, if such was feasible between the connecting points.

"All this has been changed by the development of the railroads. Save on the ocean or on lakes so large as to be practically inland seas, transport by water has wholly lost its old position of superiority over transport by land, while instead of the old highways open to every one on the same terms, but of a very limited usefulness, we have new highways—railroads—which are owned by private corporations, and which are practically of unlimited instead of limited usefulness. The old laws and old customs which were adequate and proper to meet the old conditions need radical readjustment in order to meet these new conditions. The cardinal features in these changed conditions are, first, the fact that the new highway, the railway, is, from the commercial standpoint, of infinitely greater importance in our industrial life than was the old highway, the wagon road; and, second, that this new highway, the railway, is in the hands of private owners, whereas the old highway, the wagon road, was in the hands of the state.

THE MANAGEMENT OF RAILROADS.

"The management of the new highway, the railroad, or rather of the intricate web of railroad lines which cover the country, is a task infinitely more difficult, more delicate, and more important than the primitively easy task of acquiring or keeping in order the old highway; so that there is properly no analogy whatever between the two cases. I do not believe in government ownership of anything which can with propriety be left in private hands, and in particular I should most strenuously object to government ownership of railroads. But I believe with equal firmness that it is out of the question for the government not to exercise a supervisory and regulatory right over the railroads; for it is vital to the well-being of the public that they should be managed in a spirit of fairness and justice toward all the public. Actual experience has shown that it is not possible to leave the railroads uncontrolled. Such a system, or rather such a lack of system, is fertile in abuses of every kind, and puts a premium upon unscrupulous and ruthless cunning in railroad management; for there are some big shippers and some railroad managers who are always willing to take unfair advantage of their weak competitors, and they thereby force other big shippers and big railroad men who would like to go decently into similar acts of wrong and injustice, under penalty of being left behind in the race for success. Government supervision is needed quite as much in the interest of the big shipper and of the railroad man who wants to do right as in the interest of the small shipper and the consumer.

DEFECTS OF PRESENT LAWS.

"Experience has shown that the present laws are defective and need amendment. The effort to prohibit all restraint of competition, whether reasonable or unreasonable, is unwise. What we need is to have some administrative body with ample power to forbid combination that is hurtful to the public, and to prevent favoritism to one individual at the expense of another. In other words, we want an administrative body with the power to secure fair and just treatment as among all shippers who use the railroads—and all shippers have a right to use them. We must not leave the enforcement of such a law merely to the Department of Justice; it is out of the question for the law department of the government to do what should be purely administrative work. The Department of Justice is to stand behind and co-operate with the administrative body, but the administrative body itself must be given the power to do the work and then held to a strict accountability for the exercise of that power. The delays of the law are proverbial, and what we need in this matter is reasonable quickness of action.

THE REBATE EVIL.

"The abuse of which we have a genuine right to complain takes many shapes. Rebates are not now often given openly. But they can be given as effectively in covert form; and private cars, terminal tracks and the like must be brought under the control of the commission or administrative body, which is to exercise supervision by the government. But in my judgment the most important thing to do is to give to this administrative body power to make its findings effective, and this can be done only by giving it power, when complaint is made of a given rate being unjust or unreasonable, if it finds the complaint proper, then itself to fix a maximum rate which it regards as just and reasonable, this rate to go into effect practically at once, that is within a reasonable time, and to stay in effect, unless reversed by the courts.

POWER FOR THE COMMISSION.

"I earnestly hope that we shall see a law giving this power passed by Congress. Moreover, I hope that by law power will be conferred upon representatives of the government capable of performing the duty of public accountants of railroads, when so ordered by the Inter-State Commerce Commission, which should itself have power to prescribe what books, and what books only, should be kept by railroads. If there is in the minds of any commission any suspicion that a certain railroad is in any shape or way giving rebates or behaving improperly, I wish the commission to have power as a matter of right, not as a matter of favor, to make a full and exhaustive investigation of the receipts and expenditures of the railroad, so that any violation or evasion of the law may be detected. This is not a revolutionary proposal on my part, for I only wish the same power given to railroads that is now exercising as a matter of course by the national bank examiners as regards national banks. My object in giving these additional powers to the government—the Inter-State Commerce Commission, or whatever it may be—is primarily to secure a real and not a sham control to the government representatives. The American people abhor a sham, and with this abhorrence I cordially sympathize. Nothing is more injurious from every standpoint than a law which is merely pretense, and not capable of working out tangible results. I hope to see all the power that I think it ought have granted to the government; but I would far rather see only some of it granted, but really granted than see a pretense of granting all, in some shape that really amounts to nothing.

MUST EXERCISE WISDOM AND CAUTION.

"It must be understood, as a matter of course, that if this is granted it is to be exercised with wisdom and caution and self-restraint. The Inter-State Commerce Commission or other government officials who failed to protect a railroad that was in the right against any clamor, no matter how violent on the part of the public, would be guilty of as gross a wrong as if he corruptly rendered an improper service to the railroad at the expense of the public. When I say a square deal I mean a square deal; exactly as much a square deal for the rich man as the poor man; but no more. Let each stand on his merits, receive what is due him and be judged according to his deserts. To more he is not entitled, and less he shall not have."

Platinum Found in Cherokee.

Mr. A. L. Evans, of California, a mining expert, who has been spending two or three weeks in Cherokee county, and who has incidentally been looking over the field for minerals, has discovered platinum in paying quantities in the western part of the county on the lands of Capt. W. P. Love.

Cures and Prevents Disease

The cause of ninety per cent of all disease is a faulty digestive and drainage system—the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Let one of these organs become clogged or inoperative, there remains in the system many poisons that will, in time, breed disease, difficult to correct. One should never allow even a temporary stoppage of any one of these organs—they should be kept constantly in perfect working order.

SEVEN BARKS

Is positively the ideal corrective of all internal ailments. It is not a patent medicine, but an honest, vegetable preparation, extracted from the bark of a species of the Hydrangea plant. Its curative properties are numerous. It is a mild cathartic—an alterative—drives, soothes, healing and tonic. An occasional dose will keep the whole system in perfect condition and will act as a safeguard against disease.

Seven Barks has been on the American market for over thirty-five years. Its distribution has been of high-praising letters from people in every walk of life. Thousands of families are never without a bottle. The oldest friends are our best.

Test it for Yourself

Calmage Sermon

By Rev.
Frank De Witt Talmage, D.D.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 22.—In this sermon the preacher presses home the question of the ages and marks the distinction between real and nominal Christians. The text is Matthew 22, "What shall I do then with Jesus who is called Christ?"

The small, unpretentious house in which Abraham Lincoln died is for the most one of the most interesting places in all Washington. The same question which draws the sightseer to the tomb of Mount Vernon hovers in the little room in which the first president of the United States died his last. There are many of the same memories gathered within the walls of this house just across the street from Ford's theater. One of the most interesting is a pile of papers which contain the "Lincoln sermons" which were preached by some 3,000 different preachers in the United States on the day after Lincoln was shot. But if you take you today into a room and hear you all the sermons preached upon the death of Abraham Lincoln I can say with truth they are as nothing in number compared to the sermons which have been preached upon the trial and death of Jesus Christ. That event has inspired not only preachers, but artists. Time and again these pathetic events have been depicted on the canvas. Probably no artist has succeeded in catching the spirit of the scenes so completely as the Hungarian painter Munkacsy. His two pictures, "Christ Before Pilate" and "Christ on Calvary," have made the whole civilized world bow in awe before the sufferings and the death of our Master and King.

Most of our older people have seen the original painting called "Christ Before Pilate." It was carried from city to city in the United States and placed on exhibition. You recollect how the people entered the room with hushed steps. You remember how for hours some of us studied those wonderful typical faces. There were the long beards and the prominent Hebrew features; there were the Pharisees, with their supercilious and condemnatory glances; there were the strange looks of others in a quandary, as much as to say, "What manner of man is this?" There is Christ, oh, so silent and still. You can hear the snoring voices of the multitudes all about him, yet the defendant himself is saying nothing. And above all others is the great central figure of that picture, Pilate himself. It is not here a picture of Pilate before the "Judgment seat of Christ," but of Christ before Pilate. What is he to do with this Christ? Here are Christ's enemies demanding his execution. Here are justice and right pleading for Christ's vindication. When the people commenced to cry, "Barabbas, Barabbas," give us Barabbas," Pilate turned to them and said, "What shall I do then with Jesus who is called the Christ?" He had to do something with him. He had to either let him go or to crucify him. What Pilate had to do you and I must do. What shall we do then with Jesus who is called Christ?

What Shall We Do With Christ?
What are you going to do with Jesus, in the first place, as an intellectual fact? Are you going to shut your eyes to his very existence? Are you going to act as if there never was such a person as Jesus—that there never was a being who came into this world working his miracles and by these miracles proving that he was the Son of God? Are you going to declare there never was a miraculous conception, that there never was any Easter resurrection and that there never was any ascension from Mount Olivet? All these questions are continually facing us and demanding an answer, the same as the guilt or the innocence of a defendant is before the jury trying a case or as the guilt or innocence of a condemned murderer is before the governor or a pardoning board.

In spite of ourselves the facts of Christ's life are before us, and we must accept or reject the evidence. We start with his birth. Intelligent men and women as we are, we cannot shut our eyes to the historical facts surrounding the nativity of Bethlehem if we would. The facts may not have been known to Pilate, but in all their impressive significance they confront us. When a young officer at an Indian mess table was ridiculing the idea of the divine birth of Christ, Sir Arthur Wellesley, who afterward became Napoleon's conqueror, turned to him and said: "Young man, have you ever read Dr. Paley's 'Evidences of Christianity'?" No? Then you had better read it before you parade such evidence of ignorance in reference to Christ's birth as you are doing now." These facts of Christ's birth were accessible to Pilate. There were living in Pilate's time the people who had talked to the wise men from the east. There were sages at that time alive who had told Herod that Christ was to be born in Bethlehem of Judaea. And there were men who were ready to confess that this birth of Christ had fulfilled all the predictions of the prophets. Evidences of Christ's birth are within reach of all. We must, like Pilate, accept Christ's birth as the fulfillment of prophecy, or, like Pilate, we must shut our eyes to the historical facts.

Then the miracles. Pilate may have seen some of the blind men whose eyes Christ had opened, and the deaf men whose ears Christ had unstopped, and the lame men whose crooked limbs Christ had straightened, and those like Lazarus and the boy who was "the only son of his mother and she a widow" whose dead bodies Christ had resurrected. These living witnesses were in Palestine at the time of Pilate, the same as those who have been miraculously healed of their disease of sin are in the world today. The Christ who performed his wonders 1900 years ago is the same Christ who is performing his wonders now.

How Christ Changes Men.
Christ has been able to change the lives of men before our own eyes. We have often seen the transformation. The painter Rigo some years ago went to the northern part of Africa to paint pictures of the natives. He had for his first model a Nubian warrior just arrived in Cairo. No sooner did the nude native see his head and chest being reproduced upon the canvas than he turned and in wild terror fled. He declared the white man had stolen away his head and half of his body and stuck them upon a fence to dry. Great was the wonderment of the dusky African at the power of the European artist's brush. But our wonder in reference to Christ is even greater than that of the Nubian at the powers of a Rigo. We have seen Christ absolutely change men. Before our very eyes he has changed their natures, changed their countenances and changed the whole trend of their lives. He has been working his miracles before us as he worked his miracles in Pilate's time.

We have the authenticated historical facts of Christ's birth. Like Pilate, we have seen with our eyes the miracles which Christ has wrought, and, like Pilate, we have had our own evidence of Jesus substantiated and re-affirmed by the testimony of those that we love. Our Christian mothers' testimony, our Christian fathers and wives and daughters and sons and friends have been pleading with us on behalf of Christ as Pilate's wife sent her messenger to her husband, pleading with him to do him justice.

Shall I describe for you this oriental scene? We are standing in the open judgment hall of Jerusalem. The judge's face is set and troubled. The suppressed sigh, the muttered oath, the growlings and the murmurings of the people are threatening him. What is Pilate to do? Suddenly a messenger bearing a letter forces his way through the crowd. The governor opens the note and reads. It is written by his wife. At once the troubled face of the Roman governor becomes more troubled. There is the well known handwriting of his loyal and loving wife. The words turn into his soul. "Have nothing to do with that just man, for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him." That letter practically meant this: "Dear Husband—Do not yield to those crafty Jews. The man before you must be more than mortal. In my dreams I hear a message from the heavens about him. I beg of you to protect him, lest the vengeance of God come upon you. Condemn him not! Condemn him not!" Thus with us. By the testimony of our fathers, mothers, wives, husbands, children and friends pleadings are continually going on today with us. In great chorus our loved ones' voices seem to be calling: "Condemn him not! Condemn him not! We have had revelations of the power and the divinity of Jesus Christ! Condemn him not!"

We cannot shut our eyes to what we have seen. We cannot stop our ears to what we have heard. Neither, like Pilate, can we turn away from the Christian testimonies which are being given by our loved ones concerning Jesus Christ. I ask you now the question which wavering and cowardly Pilate asked the Hebrew multitude, "What shall I do then with Jesus who is called Christ?" Do you acknowledge him as the Son of God? "Yes, yes," you must all answer. "I do! I do! I do!"

Yielding to His Will.
Having intellectually acknowledged Christ as the Son of God, the second question is more important. What will you do then with Jesus who is called Christ in reference to the will? Are you going to let him rule your mind, your thought and your actions? When Jesus comes to you and says, "I am Jesus—will thou obey me?" are you going to answer: "Yes, Christ, I know that thou art the Son of God, but I cannot and will not do as thou wouldst have me. I cannot yield my will to thine."

Christ demanded of Pilate the same kind of submission to his will that the Franciscan monks are compelled to give to the head of their order. The story is told that many centuries ago a monk refused to obey the great founder of their order. By the command of the leader a grave was dug. The refractory monk was placed in a standing position inside the grave. Then by the order of St. Francis the monks began to shovel in the dirt. The dirt came to the ankle, to the knee, to the hip. "Are you dead yet?" called St. Francis. "Is your self will broken? Do you yield to my will?" The monk, with set jaw and sullen look, refused to yield. Higher and higher came the soil, now to the stomach, now to the chest, now to the shoulder. But still the refractory monk refused to yield. At last the dirt came to the hip and to the nostril. "Do you yield?" cried St. Francis. "Is your self will dead?" One shovel more and death was to be his. Aye, and then the stubborn will broke, and the monk lifted up his beseeching eyes and, with trembling lip, called: "Father, I am dead. My self will is dead. I yield! I yield!" So Christ demands not only for us to acknowledge him king of our intelligences, but king of our wills. We must submit our will to his will. We must obey him even as the Franciscan monks obey their leaders. We must not yield Christ one-third or one-half or nine-tenths of our wills, but we must surrender unto him complete and absolute obedience.

We must acknowledge Christ as king of the entire will. We have more reason to do so than had Pilate, though he conceded more than some of us are doing. In the first place, he yielded his will to Christ enough for a little while to defy the Hebrew mob. Then, in the next place, he tried to save Christ by a subterfuge. He placed alongside of Jesus one of the worst criminals of the east, and then he said: "According to the law, I must pardon one of these criminals. Which shall it be?" He did this with the hope that the people would let him pardon Christ. Then when all means failed he took a basin of water and washed his hands before the people as he said: "I am innocent of the blood of this just person. See ye to it." Ah, yes, Pilate did much to save Christ, but he did not do enough. With one word he could have said, "Free, free!" and Christ would have been free. He yielded his will to the divine will one-eighth, one-fourth, one-half, one-third, but he did not yield all. "What will you do then with Jesus who is called Christ?" In every department of life will you give to him complete obedience?

Obedience His Father.
Would that Pilate could have realized that in full submission to Christ he would have found his own safety! I recall the story of the little child of a switchman on one of the German railroads. The first mail was rushing down the track. The switchman at his post moved the switch to give it a clear track. Suddenly, to the father's horror, the man saw his little boy run upon the rails. The father dared not throw the lever back. It would have meant the death of hundreds of persons. His own boy must be killed rather than that others should perish. So the father cried out to the child: "Lie down! Lie flat down!" The boy dropped. The great engine and its coaches swept past. Then it was found that, because the boy absolutely yielded his will to his father's and lay down flat upon the ground, his life was saved. Oh, that Pilate had obeyed his divine Father's commands as that little child obeyed his earthly parent! Would that we could surrender all our wills to God's will! Pilate's halfway attempts to reason Jesus did no good. Pilate should have been man enough to have gone all the way, no matter what the temporary cost might have been. He should have firmly said: "Jesus, thou Son of God, thou art free. I, the governor, decree it."

But to yield our wills to Christ's is not enough. There is another question which I would put. "What are you going to do with Jesus who is called Christ in reference to your affections or your heart's loving power?" To be obedient to Christ is not necessarily to be a loving disciple of Christ. There is many a clerk in a store who tries to be obedient and faithful to his employer's interest who personally has no more use for his employer than a woman has for a rat or a mongoose for a hissing cobra. There is many a woman today trying to be a true and dutiful wife who years ago lost all love for her husband. That husband has again and again broken every one of his vows. She is true to him for her children's sake alone. Thus I believe there are many men trying to obey Christ, and yet they are disciples who have not learned to love Christ.

Pilate, in one sense, was trying to serve Christ, but Pilate did not love Jesus any more than some of us love him who have been trying to follow him for years. Why are you a Christian? Why do you go to church and always contribute to the church and have your name enrolled upon the church books? "For two reasons," you may answer. "When I was a little chap, mother started me to church and to Sunday school. For years and years she took me. Churchgoing is an old habit, and old habits are hard to break. Then, in the next place, though I do not profess to love Christ very much, yet I fear the results if I do not follow him. Adoniram Judson was started in the Christian ministry by the death of one of his worldly college mates. As soon as he heard he was dead this sentence sprang to his lips: 'Dead and lost! Dead and lost!' So, because I fear death without Christ, that is the reason I am following him." Now, my friends, your answer is the answer many are ready to give. They worship and follow him because they are afraid not to do it. Their God is a God of fear and not a God of love. Now comes the practical question. What are you to do with Christ in reference to your heart's affections?

We Must Love.
You must love somebody or something. You cannot help it. The tendrils of the heart will climb up and reach out for an object to love. Just as the roots of a tree will reach out to clutch hold of the rocks or will sink themselves into the earth. As we must love, cannot you and I learn to love Christ? Cannot we begin to study and to learn what he has done for us? In the record of that beautiful life cannot we learn to love him as we learned first to love our mothers on account of the sacrifices they have made for us? Then, having realized what the divine love means, cannot we learn to do something for his love's sake? God's love can change our actions toward him if we will only let it. What are you going to do with Christ in reference to the heart's loving capabilities?

But I cannot close this subject without asking you one more question. What are you going to have your loved ones do with Jesus? You have almost as much influence over some of your loved ones' actions as you have over your own. If Pilate had turned to Christ and said: "Lord Jesus, thou art my Master; I will yield my heart and life to thee," do you not believe his own wife would have also accepted Christ? Why, she was already almost persuaded. Furthermore, do you not believe that if you should give your heart to Christ today your actions would be the means of making some of your loved ones surrender their hearts to Jesus?

Often have we read how men and women have rescued their dear ones from physical dangers. Shall we not by the help of Christ save our dear ones from spiritual peril? There is a beautiful story told that during chivalric times a knight was captured and imprisoned in a castle. The wife, who had been left behind during the crusade, knew not where her husband was incarcerated. So she took a stringed instrument, and, dressed as a page, she wandered from court to court and from country to country, singing under the great fortresses the old love songs with which she had been wooed in her father's castle. One day, as the familiar notes of the minstrel lifted themselves to a frowning fortress, there came back an answering song. Then the wife knew where her husband-lover was imprisoned. By means of her father's friends she was able to rescue her dear one. So shall it be with us. If we lift our voices in redemption songs, we shall hear our songs echoed back in the redemption songs of our loved ones. As Pilate, in all probability, decided the eternal destiny of his wife as well as his own when he condemned Christ, so our actions may decide the eternal destinies of our friends as well as our own.

May we weigh carefully the importance of the question which I am about to put. May we weigh it carefully in reference to our homes, our business associates and our friends at large. "What shall ye do then with Jesus who is called Christ?" I am not asking this question, but Jesus himself is asking it. "What will ye then do with me?" Answer must be given. Then Christ shall give to us an answer which shall affect the eternities. Then, instead of having "Christ before Pilate," we shall have "Pilate before Christ." Oh, what shall Jesus then say unto us? Will he say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father; inherit the kingdom prepared for you," or shall he say, "Depart from me; depart from me?" God forbid! God forbid!

Where Children Are Sold.
On the same steamer by which I reached Benguela there were five little native boys, conspicuous in striped jerseys and running about the ship like rats. I suppose they were about ten to twelve years old, perhaps less. I do not know where they came from, but it must have been from some fairly distant part of the interior, for, like all natives who see stairs for the first time, they went up and down them on their hands and knees. They were traveling with a Portuguese, and within a week of landing at Benguela he had sold them all to other white owners. Their price was 50 milreis apiece, nearly $10. Their owner did rather well, for the boys were small and thin—hardly bigger than another native slave boy who was at the same time given away by one Portuguese friend to another as a New Year's present. But all through this part of the country I have found the price of human beings ranging rather higher than I expected, and the man who told me the price of the boys had himself been offered one of them at that figure and was simply passing on the offer to myself. Henry W. Nevins in Harper's Magazine.

A Cheering Explanation.
Sleeper, the Santa Fe stage driver, answers questions freely and gives the passengers a good deal of information that is not called for by their tickets. A nervous old lady was riding down a dangerous looking trail with him once when she noticed a hatchet lying in the bottom of the stage and inquired why he carried it.

"I use that hatchet to knock injured passengers in the head," replied Mr. Sleeper.

The old lady gasped with astonishment and drew away from him to the other end of the seat.

Sleeper leaned over toward her and in a confidential whisper explained: "We have a good many accidents on this here line. The stage's allus tippin' over and rollin' down precipices, and every time a passenger gets hurt he sues the company for damages. These here damage suits uses up all the profit of stagin', and we've had to stop 'em, so every driver carries a hatchet. When a passenger gets hurt we simply knock 'em on the head and throw the body over a precipice, and then there ain't no lawsuit. See?"—Merced (Cal.) Letter in Chicago Record-Herald.

A Little Jiu Jitsu.
Frederick, the youngest son of the family, although just in his twenties, had entered the sophomore class in college. He was regular and faithful in writing to his parents, and when, near the middle of the first six months, a period of more than two weeks elapsed without their having heard from him they became uneasy. They were on the point of sending a telegram of inquiry when they received the following note, written in a cramped and almost illegible hand:

Dear Mother—I have been pretty busy of late and have not had time to write. Harry Jenkins and I had some fun the other evening having a new student. Harry has been in the hospital nearly a week, but is about well now. I got off to a great deal easier. All that happened to me was a broken finger and a sprained ankle. I am writing this with my left hand. The doctor says I will be as good as ever in a few weeks. With much love, P. S.—The student we hazed is a Japanese.
