Highest cash market prices for hides. FORSYTH & WATKINS.

Every Democrat in Guilford county should see that his name is on the registration books.

Mr. S. S. Brown advertises a big auction sale of city lots. Read what he has to say about them.

Mrs. Paul C. Lindley, of Pomona, who has been critically ill for a week or more, is thought to be improving.

A two-weeks' term of Superior court, Judge Moore presiding, will convene here Monday for the trial of civil cases.

Seventy-eight choice building lots in northwestern Greensboro are advertised to be sold at auction Saturday, Oct. 20, by S. S. Brown, the real estate dealer.

New fall goods in abundance. Plenty of dress goods, Elkin and James-town shoes and other good makes for men, women and children.

R. P. GORRELL.

Reliable reports from the country indicate that wild game, especially quail, is being killed out of season by people who have no regard for the law. The Audubon Society should get busy at once and make examples of some of these people.

After a recount of the beans that were to determine who should be awarded the horse offered as a premium by J. D. Oldham & Co. at the fair last week it was decided that Mr. J. L. Diggins, of Stokesdale, was entitled to the animal.

From all reports excepting that in the Industrial News, the honors in the Albemarle debate between Mr. E. J. Justice and Judge S. B. Adams were easily carried off by Mr. Justice. The crafty Republican simply failed to make good and he knows it and his party know it.

Mr. C. H. Durham has been appointed as manager of the mill supply department of the Odell Hardware Company to succeed Mr. W. T. Powe, deceased. Mr. Durham has been making Greensboro headquarters for some time as the representative of an Indianapolis concern.

The ministerial association of this city held a most enjoyable social meeting at the McAdoo last night, incidentally partaking of a fine supper that was accorded due consideration. Speeches were made by several ministers, Rev. S. R. Guignard acting in the capacity of toastmaster.

Mr. P. J. Watkins, assistant to Mr. G. H. Royster, general organizer of the Endowment Rank of the Knights of Pythias the past four years, has been appointed general organizer for the state of West Virginia and left with his family on the noon train yesterday for Huntington, where they will reside.

U. S. Deputy Marshal J. T. Millikan took two Federal prisoners to Atlanta Saturday to serve terms of one year and one day each for illicit distilling. The men were convicted at the recent term of Federal court here. From Atlanta Mr. Millikan went to Statesville, where Judge Boyd is holding court this week.

After a delay of nearly three weeks caused by the failure of the railroads to deliver the last car of pressed brick, work was resumed on the towers of the new First Baptist church Monday morning and the big building will soon be all under roof, as all the necessary material is now in hand. The rear portion has been plastered and is nearly ready for painting.

Mr. J. D. Sessoms, formerly a prominent citizen of Stedman, Cumberland county, but lately interested in the turpentine business in Florida, has become a resident of Greensboro, moving his family here recently and placing his daughters in college. He is residing in the handsome residence which he erected in South Mendenhall street two or three years ago.

Mr. James M. Delapp has purchased a half interest in the B. & P. Bottling Works from Mr. Walter Buhmann and becomes general manager of the business. Mr. W. O. Johnson, who has been with the firm ever since its organization several years ago, will go to New York to take a special course in bottling. He will be absent about a month and on his return will take charge of the bottling department.

For men who want a less expensive farm shoe than the Elkin home made we have a first quality tap sole split leather brogan at $1.50. This is a shoe that most all stores are selling at $1.75, but we decided to have the best heavy $1.50 shoe in town whether we made any money on it or not. If a heavy shoe is wanted on the neat order we can give you some very special values at $2, $2.55 and up to $3.50.

A FEAST OF ORATORY AND SOUND LOGIC

Hon. John Sharpe Williams Expounds Democratic Doctrine Here in a Masterly and Most Convincing Way.

Before an audience that filled the main floor of the Grand opera house, the boxes and much of the stage, with a fair sprinkling of faces in the gallery, Hon. John Sharpe Williams, of Mississippi, Democratic leader in the lower house of Congress, expounded old fashioned bedrock Democratic doctrine Saturday in a masterly speech of over two hours and punctuated the gaudy bubbles emanating from the administration speakers, Secretaries Taft and Shaw, that have been doing missionary work in North Carolina of late. A clearer, calmer, more convincing discussion of public affairs was never heard here, and the eager audience gave the brilliant orator-statesman the closest attention while the truth-laden messages fell from his lips.

Mr. Williams reached the city Sunday evening, coming from Statesville, where he spoke Saturday, and was the recipient of many honors at his apartments at the McAdoo. Monday morning in company with Major Joe Morehead, Mr. R. M. Phillips and Mr. Julius M. Cone, Mr. Williams visited the Battle Ground in the latter's big automobile, and like all other men familiar with the country's history was amazed at the sights to be seen there. He said it was hard to realize that so much could be accomplished in a modest way by a local organization such as the Battle Ground Association.

At the Grand Monday afternoon Mr. Williams was introduced by Mr. A. M. Scales in a most appropriate speech that breathed the regard of the city and state for the distinguished visitor. He spoke of the real issues that confront the people and his belief that eventually these great questions would be settled right. He said the South had furnished some of the wisest statesmen known to the world, among them one it especially delights to honor—a man who stands as a rock wall against the evils and corruption of the times, a man well equipped for the career he has so splendidly adorned, and possessing not only marked ability but the good sense, tact and good humor necessary to leadership. "I have the honor," he concluded, "to introduce to you this scholar, philosopher, statesman and Democrat of North Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi and the United States, Hon. John Sharpe Williams."

Mr. Williams was given an ovation when he arose. He said he feared he should begin and end under a great disadvantage, as it would be difficult to live up to the praise of his friend. He said he could claim to be a North Carolinian, even if several generations removed, as his ancestors were North Carolinians, though Tennessee was the state of his birth. "I left here three hundred years ago," he exclaimed, "but I am a North Carolinian in blood and in spirit. I have always felt pride in a hereditary connection with the state." Referring to his visit of the morning to the Battle Ground he said he had brought away three abiding impressions of the historic place.

Quoting Bancroft inscribed there: "If there be any who doubt the capacity of the people for self-government let him study the history of North Carolina," he paid a splendid tribute to the state.

He then took up the recent speech of Secretary Shaw at Salisbury and devoted most of his time to exposing its fallacies, suggesting at the outset that the Secretary should be honest with the people whom he would instruct. Incidentally Mr. Taft came in for a share of the speaker's consideration, yet he later did Taft the honor to say that he was the ablest man in the cabinet. "It is a big undertaking to answer these two eminent Republicans," he said, "but I have learned that God is always on the side of the right," and then he proceeded to hurl pebbles of truth at these cabinet giants and vanquished them. Concerning the important omissions from their speeches he said not a word of sympathy came from them or their party platforms to the South as it battled with the great race question. "The Republican party is responsible for the race question, and yet neither of these Republicans apologized for the days of reconstruction, yet you are told that there is no danger of a return of such conditions. Is that true? Do you recall that queer alliance or fusion between Pritchard and Butler? How far were you from the conditions that came with reconstruction?"

Telling the story about Senator Ingalls and the Kansas boy he applied it to the present campaign, when the issues are being dressed up in new clothes. Speaking of Shaw's attack on the supposed Democratic issues he said no Democratic platform ever has or ever will declare for government ownership of railroads. "The old Democracy of the South—Jeffersonian Democracy—will never give the government anything to do that the people as individuals can do. The Republican President has come to the Democratic position in this matter. He saw the light in the matter of railroad rate legislation, but it was not in his own platform. It was in three Democratic platforms, and the Democratic leader introduced a bill to give the relief contained in this bill fourteen months before Mr. Roosevelt saw the light. Democrats said to me, don't follow the Republican President. Now is a chance to rebuke him. I said: 'Rebuke him for what; for doing right?' He does right so seldom we can afford to forego the opportunity to rebuke him once in a quarter of a century. I would not desert the Ten Commandments should the devil emblazon them on his banners.

Don't Fail to Register!

"The railroads don't own this country, and they never will. They will control the government as soon as they get control of you. I do not believe there was ever a truly corrupt man in the president's chair or ever will be. I don't believe there ever will be an Interstate Commerce Commission that is rotten and corrupt. There may be a man on it now and then of that stripe, but he can be put off and a good man put on in his place. You have a chance to elect congressmen every two years, and you can reform it whenever you want to. We have honest judges on the Supreme bench to construe our laws. Put only honest men in positions of trust."

Mr. Williams discussed at length the attitude of the Republican party toward the tariff and the trusts and showed conclusively that the evils of each would never be corrected by that party, as evidenced by its treatment of San Francisco in its hour of need, and in the handling of the Panama canal question. He threw much light on the sale of trust goods cheaper abroad than to the home consumer and dealt the system some terrific blows. The ship subsidy, the "drawback system," and all came in for their share of his consideration. The tariff as it applies to labor was discussed and shown up in a new light as compared with the rantings of Republican orators. The panics that have visited the country were shown to have developed under a high protective tariff save in one instance—1857—which was purely a bankers' panic and did not affect industry seriously. He showed that the acute panic of 1893 was due to the McKinley bill and not because of Democratic low tariff. "What has become of the memories of men," asked Mr. Williams, "when men like Shaw stand before an intelligent audience and say the panic of 1893 was because of Democratic rule when it was not until 1894 that the Wilson-Gorman bill was passed?"

The speaker then proceeded to discuss the causes of a panic, pointing out that it was due to over-speculation caused by prosperity. He said that the truth was that the world was in better shape industrially now than ever, saying that the boom had lasted longer than any other. His greatest fear was that there would be another panic just about a year after the Democrats "beat the miserable Republicans, who would then blame the Democrats for it."

Socialism was treated along with other kindred subjects that developed in the discussion of public questions incident to a perfect understanding of public policies. A calm, clear, forceful and eloquent presentation of logical and unassailable arguments, the speech ranks as one of the best ever heard in North Carolina.

Democratic County Candidates.

In addition to the appointments already made for the Democratic county candidates they will fill appointments at Gibsonville on the night of October 26th and Proximity on the night of November 1st. These appointments are made at the earnest request of a large number of the leading Democrats in these two precincts.

E. A. BROWN, Chairman.

Gov. Glenn Speaks Tonight.

Gov. Robert B. Glenn will address the people in the court house in this city tonight at 7 o'clock. Everybody is invited to attend, and special seats have been reserved for the ladies. It is expected that there will be a large crowd in attendance. Mayor Thomas J. Murphy will introduce the speaker.

Every Democrat in Guilford county should see that his name is on the registration books.

DEATH COMES TO A GOOD WOMAN.

Mrs. G. C. Smith Passes Away After a Brief Illness.

The strong earthly ties that bound Mrs. G. Cameron Smith to her family and friends were ruthlessly severed by the hand of Death last Wednesday afternoon. The summons came with shocking suddenness, as her nearest and dearest friends had not realized in the comparatively brief illness that preceded her demise that the end was so near. Mrs. Smith had not enjoyed robust health for several months and had spent much of the past summer in the mountains of western North Carolina. Since her return to Greensboro only a few weeks ago there had been a more marked decline, but the buoyant hope of the sufferer and the natural cheerfulness of her disposition were as a cloak to the ravages of the dread disease, tuberculosis, that finally claimed her as its victim.

Mrs. Smith was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Reynold, who live on East Bragg street. It was at their home she died. Her home for a few years had been in Fitzgerald, Ga., where her husband, the superintendent of the Atlantic & Birmingham Railroad, has his headquarters. Her age was thirty-one years. Beside the grief-stricken husband she is survived by four children, the youngest being about three years old.

Mrs. Smith possessed all the graces that go to make up a model wife and mother. Her love for her family was surpassed only by her love for the God she had served and worshipped from her youth. Her earthly interests all centered in the happy home over which she presided with becoming grace and dignity. Overwhelming is the grief caused by her untimely death.

Mr. Smith was not here when the end came. His duties were so pressing that he had to leave the Sunday previous, but he thought as did everyone else that his wife would be spared to him for some time yet. How little any of us know of the Great Mystery called Death.

The funeral services over Mrs. Smith's remains took place Friday morning at Centenary church, of which she had been a devout member for many years. The pastor, Rev. A. T. Bell, was assisted by Rev. H. W. Battle, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church, and Rev. J. F. Williams, pastor of Friends church. Beautiful floral tributes covered the casket and later lent their fragrance to the newly-made mound in the city of the dead on Greene Hill. The pallbearers were Messrs. W. I. Underwood, C. C. McLean, Z. V. Taylor, G. P. Crutchfield, T. A. Brooks and T. A. Glascock.

Death of Two Well Known People.

Rev. Sam P. Jones, the noted evangelist of Cartersville, Ga., died Monday of heart disease in a sleeping car on train No. 4 of the Rock Island Railroad, near Perry, Ark. Mr. Jones had been conducting a most successful revival at Oklahoma City, and left there Sunday night for his home in Georgia. He desired to attend a family reunion yesterday it being the 59th anniversary of his birth. Mrs. Jones and his two daughters, Mrs. Annie Pyron and Miss Julia Jones, were with him when he passed away. Rev. Walter Holcombe, of Mt. Airy, was also a member of the party.

Mrs. Jefferson Davis, widow of the President of the Confederacy, who had been ill for a week at the Hotel Majestic, in New York city, died at 10:25 o'clock last night. Death was due to pneumonia induced by a severe cold which Mrs. Davis contracted upon her return from the Adirondacks, where she had spent the summer months. She was 80 years old and leaves one son.

While responding to an alarm of fire on Lewis street Monday morning about 2 o'clock the chemical engine and team attached were thrown into a promiscuous heap at the corner of South Elm and Lewis streets, a line catching in the harness and preventing the driver from guiding the team at the turn, with the result that it came in violent contact with a telephone pole. The driver, a young man who was acting as a substitute that night for Mr. Bevil, the regular driver, escaped injury by falling on one of the horses. The wagon was badly battered and the team was slightly injured.

Guardianships frequently last through many years. Individuals desiring to keep their estates free from complications are usually unwilling to accept the position of Guardian, and when they do, it is frequently very unsatisfactory to both the guardian and the ward.

During the lapse of years the guardian may die or become insolvent or leave the community or state, but on the other hand we are permanent. If an officer dies, another is elected to take his place. We can manage the ward's estate economically and satisfactorily.

This department is under the immediate supervision of Mr. A. M. Scales, our General Counsel and Second Vice President.

Meeting of Orange Presbytery.

There was an adjourned session of the Presbytery of Orange at Westminster Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon to deal with a request of Rev. S. M. Rankin to be allowed to give up Bethel and Springwood churches and devote half of his time to Alamance Presbyterian church and half to the prosecution of missionary work under the auspices of the Home Missions Committee of the Presbytery. Mr. Rankin having been invited to take up the work abandoned by Rev. C. F. Rankin, evangelist of the Presbytery, who was called to a Portsmouth church. The Springwood and Bethel churches were very averse to giving up Mr. Rankin's services and the Presbytery by a decisive vote sustained them in their position.

We are selling a good many of our women's $1.50 Kangaroo shoes this fall. They come in four styles, plain toe (no cap) lined and unlined, with cap toe in low heels and regular heels. While these are "mighty good shoes for the price" we have two styles, Whitteather and Seiden calf at $1.75, that are a great deal better. The Whitteather shoe is very heavy and is intended for the hardest kind of service, while the Seiden calf is more pliant and easier on the feet. Our stock of rubber shoes and boots and wool lined buckle arctics is large and complete.

One good second hand two-horse power at a bargain price, and a large stock of feed cutters, all sizes, at Townsend & Co.'s. 41-4t

The first marriage ceremony performed in the new parsonage of Spring Garden Street Methodist church took place Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, the pastor, Rev. Harold Turner, tying the nuptial knot for Mr. Eugene Leonard and Miss Clara Hayworth, both of High Point.

Two cases of burning cotton flannels which had presumably been set on fire in a box car by a spark from a passing engine, caused the fire department to be summoned to the depot Thursday evening shortly after seven o'clock. The blaze was quickly subdued but the incident caused considerable excitement among the throng which filled the streets at the time.

Baxter Holmes, a colored man who had been cooking at the Huffline hotel for a couple of weeks, was arrested Thursday charged with the theft of a watch from John Wilson, with whom he had formerly worked in a Winston hotel. The watch was found in Holmes' possession, but he put up the usual plea of having bought it from another negro whose name he could not recall.

Mr. L. H. Murray, a prominent citizen of Burlington and a brother of the late W. R. Murray, of Greensboro, died Thursday after an illness of over two years and was buried Friday afternoon. He was sixty-six years old and is survived by three children, his wife having died several years ago. Mrs. M. A. Murray and her son R. W. Murray went to Burlington Thursday morning to attend the funeral.

In Squire Collins' court Wednesday afternoon Robert L. Laughlin, of High Point, was arraigned on the charge of obstructing a public highway, near High Point. The warrant was sworn out at the instigation of the board of county commissioners. The case did not go to trial, an agreement between counsel being reached by which the warrant was withdrawn and the defendant taxed with the costs.

Harriet Ruth, the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Paul G. Welch, died last Wednesday afternoon at the home of her grandparents, Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Eller, on Bellemade avenue, aged one year and nine months. The funeral services took place Thursday, conducted by Rev. H. W. Battle, D.D. The pallbearers were Messrs. Lee H. Battle, J. Norman Wills, J. B. Stroud and W. A. Scott. Interment was made at Greene Hill cemetery.

Two marriage ceremonies were performed in the office of the register of deeds Thursday morning within an hour, the officiating minister being the register of deeds, Rev. A. G. Kirkman. The first couple to be united in holy wedlock were Mr. Thomas Bowles and Miss Annie M. Stout, both of High Point. The contracting parties to the other marriage were Mr. Finley Robbins and Mrs. Rattie A. Robbins, both of Randolph county. The bride was the widow of the groom's brother.

Road Improvement in Southeastern Guilford.

Most of rural free mail route No. 1 from Hartsboro is in southeastern Guilford. The carrier in a recent communication to the Graham Tribune says:

"Since our last writing we have had a considerable amount of work done on our roads. The Guilford county convict force has opened and nicely graded up the new road from old Brick Church postoffice by way of G. M. R. Clapp's to the colored church, a distance of some three miles, all of which is on our route. They have cut down that steep rough hill at Kimesville, and are now building a bridge across the creek at Kimesville, which will be of great convenience to the public travel and will greatly add to the appearance of the factory. The force will grade the new road beginning at Monroe Thompson's and connecting with the Greensboro road at David Smith's, which is also on our route. Guilford is doing a good part for her southern territory. Let us hope that Alamance will go and do likewise."

County Candidates to Speak.

At two o'clock P. M. on the days mentioned and at the places indicated the legislative and county candidates will discuss political issues. Let everyone turn out and hear what may be said.

LETTER TO M. SCHIFFMANN, Greensboro, N. C.

Dear Sir: You know, diamonds don't go by size. Size with paint.

We make paint, one gallon of which goes as far as two of another and lasts twice as long; that's four to one.

You know it is true in diamonds; they don't go by the gallon, do they? If you're going to paint your house, you go first to your painter and say: "I'm going to paint; do you want the job? and what'll it cost?"

If he happens to know, he'll say: "Depends on the paint. I can do it for somewhere about $100 or $200, whichever you like; $100 will make a good job; $200 a poor one."

And you, if you happen to have your wife, ill say: "I'll take the good one, when'll you do it?"

Painters ought, all, to know about paint; and jewelers ought to be able to get a good job. We do what we can to help both.

One gallon Devco is better than two of average paint, goes as far—that is, your house will take about 20 gallons Devco and 40 of average paint—and Devco will wear a long time; the life of average paint is very uncertain, it may be a year, it may be five.

Why is it that painters don't know about paint? Do jewelers know about diamonds? They know more than they tell sometimes. There are painters and painters; so there are jewelers; so there is paint, and the least-gallons paint is Devco.

Yours truly, F. W. DEVCO & Co.

The Odell Hardware Co. sells our paint.

ALDERMEN DISCUSS SUNDAY LAWS.*Final Action Deferred, However—Petition for the Grading of Wainman Street Granted—Other Matters of Municipal Business Considered.

The board of aldermen were in regular semi-monthly session for a short time Friday afternoon with Mayor T. J. Murphy presiding and all the members of the board in their places.

A good portion of the time was taken up in the discussion of Mayor Murphy's construction of the meaning of the word "necessities" in the ordinance relating to the observance of Sunday. Action in the matter was deferred until some future meeting. It is understood that in the meantime the restaurants will be allowed to remain open on Sunday.

The discussion was brought about by a question asked by Alderman Wyson. He wanted to know if restaurants could be permitted to keep open all day Sunday instead of being allowed to open only at certain hours as specified by Mayor Murphy in his order to the chief of police.

Mayor Murphy then stated his position in the matter, saying that after the adoption of the revision of the city ordinances, of which this was one, he was approached by a great many people asking for an opinion as to the constitutionality of the ordinance, and he did that in his letter to the police, expecting that when the board met again it would arrange the matter satisfactorily to all concerned.

Alderman Wyson thought that restaurants should not be required to close, at the hours specified by the mayor, for a person who missed his dinner would be hungrier at 4 o'clock than at 2:30 o'clock.

Alderman Brandt thought that soft drinks were as much a necessity as cigars and was not in favor of forbidding the sale of either.

Alderman Odell was of the opposite opinion, stating that when the soft drink establishments were open they were a congregating place for the boys and girls, leaving the impression that the city was a wide open town. Alderman Hunter was of the same opinion.

Finally upon the suggestion of Alderman Wyson the entire matter went over to another meeting with the understanding that the mayor's interpretation should remain in force until that time, except that restaurants be allowed to keep open.

Alderman Hunter presented an ordinance putting Clay street in the special assessment district, but owing to a resolution formerly passed that no more streets should be included until the city force was up with the work now in hand, action was deferred.

W. H. Spencer was refused the privilege to peddle without license.

A petition asking for the grading of Wainman street was presented and upon the motion of Alderman Hunter was granted.

Alderman Odell said that there were several streets marked the same name and recommended that a committee be appointed to see that the streets were properly marked. The motion was carried.

C. C. Taylor asked that the name of Park Drive be changed to Park Place. Referred to street committee.

The committee on street signs was continued for further duty.

Mr. A. W. Cooke appeared before the board and asked that privilege be given his client, a Syrian, to peddle without license. The request was refused.

Alderman Thompson suggested that the rent for sewerage be collected by the city tax collector instead of by the sewerage inspector, stating that unless this was done an assistant would soon be required in the inspector's office in a short time. After some discussion the matter was referred to the city attorney and chairman of the sewerage committee for action.

The board confirmed the action of the street committee in having Sycamore street from Ashe to Spring graded and curbed.

UNIVERSITY ALUMNI CELEBRATE.*Guilford Organization Will Establish a McIver Loan Fund to Aid Deserving Youths

University Day was elaborately celebrated in this city by the University Alumni Association of Guilford county with an enjoyable banquet at Hotel Clegg last Friday night. The dining room was elegantly decorated, the menu served was a most tempting one, and the toasts were exceptionally good. Covers had been laid for seventy-two persons and all but a few were used. Among the number were many ladies. The door to the dining room was thrown open shortly after ten o'clock. When the guests had all entered and taken their seats the toastmaster, Prof. W. H. Swift, asked the audience to rise for the invocation by Prof. Geo. H. Crowell, of High Point.

In introducing the first speaker, Maj. Chas. M. Stedman, Prof. Swift made a few remarks about the meaning of the occasion, the past of the University and what he hoped for it in the future.

Just before the adjournment at a late hour Dr. J. E. Brooks was elected president of the Guilford Alumni Association on motion by Mr. Chas. L. Van Noppen. The following committee of three were elected to work in concert with the officers in arranging for the annual banquet: Prof. W. H. Swift, Mr. A. B. Kimball and Mr. Clem G. Wright.

Dr. J. E. Brooks announced that the association had decided to depart from its usual custom of giving a scholarship to some deserving young man and instead to establish a "McIver Loan Fund," for general use in helping needy boys entering the University regardless of what part of the state they were from. A substantial sum was subscribed.

Following is a list of the toasts that were responded to:

The Ideal University Man, Major Charles M. Stedman.
Dr. Eben Alexander, A. M. Seales.
The Literary Societies, A. W. McAlister.

The Old Time Darkey at the Hill, Col. James T. Morehead.

Only one of the eight railroad damage suits docketed in the Federal court was disposed of last week. After a hearing covering over three days Louella May, was given a verdict for $5,500 for the death of her husband, G. H. May, an engineer who was killed on the Norfolk &amp; Western Railroad at Henry, Va., in 1904. Another special term of the court will convene October 29th for the hearing of the bankruptcy proceeding in which the Simmons Hardware Company and others are plaintiffs and R. H. Hardin and other defendants.

Lillian Lavine Maddox, the nine-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Maddox, died Friday at the home of her grandfather, Mr. J. R. Pitts, on West Lee street, after an illness of only a few days. The funeral was held Saturday, and after services conducted by Rev. A. T. Bell interment was made in Greene Hill cemetery. The pallbearers were Misses Mamie Thomas, Alice Aiken, Hazel Wyson and Brouna Clymer.

The cold wave which centered in the southeastern states last week gave special consideration to Greensboro. The official temperature as recorded here was 26, the coldest weather known for October since the establishment of weather bureau stations in the state. Killing frosts extended far South and cotton suffered all over the belt east of the Mississippi.

"JACOB'S VOICE, BUT THE HAND OF ESAU."

"Tab Keeper" Says It Was Marion Butler in 1895 and 1897 and It Is Marion Butler Now.

EDITOR PATRIOT: Who will deny that the present political fight in North Carolina at the present time is the same fight we had in the days of 1895 and 1897?

The same leaders are cozening the people as then. It was Marion Butler then. It is Marion Butler now. It was Pritchard then, and Mr. Butler tells Tommie Rollins to step aside and let Adams in. It is "now you see it and now you don't," but behind the scenes always is Marion Butler. What they did then, they will do now if they can. It is Butler whose hand is upon the springs which moves Adams in and puts Tommie out, which moves Adams' political legs and Adams' political tongue. Who is the power behind the throne?

Let the Tar Heel (Republican) of the issue of May 31st, 1906, speak.

Following that elucidating picture of Tommie out and Adams in to fool the people, which the Tar Heel printed during the fight for the chairmanship of the bung-smellers and revenue doers in this state, was the following in big head lines:

"JACOB'S VOICE, BUT THE HAND OF ESAU."

"It is not to be denied that the action of State Chairman Rollins at the meeting of the state executive committee last Saturday in Greensboro was a distinct surprise, as claimed by those who regard it as smart politics. While prepared to expect almost anything after the conference of Butler, Duncan and Rollins in the Bond building in Washington, we were not prepared to witness a performance so utterly lacking in every element of candor, fairness and propriety on the part of Mr. Rollins. Let us see if he was candid and fair and if his action was proper and valid under the circumstances. Mr. Rollins had called his committee together for a special purpose. The object of this published call, as stated in the published call, was to fix the time and place for a state convention. This was clear cut. The members of the committee and the members of the party naturally assumed that this notice meant what it said and meant nothing further. Every member of the committee and every Republican in North Carolina, outside of Butler's charmed circle, assumed that the committee would meet for the specific purpose and for no other. For this reason there was not a full attendance of the committee. The members of the party at large attached little significance to the meeting of the committee for the perfunctory performance of its duty. The meeting of the committee for the specific object for which it was called was entirely proper. The action of the committee in fixing the time and place of the convention was entirely within the bounds of propriety and in accordance with custom and the party's law. But when the state chairman went beyond that and tendered his resignation and insisted upon the immediate election of his successor, he violated custom and all propriety, to say nothing of the validity of such a proceeding. If it was the purpose of Mr. Rollins to resign and to ask his committee to select his successor, was it not fair that he should have stated that as a part of the object and business of the meeting in his published notice? Was not the election of a state chairman of vastly more importance and significance to the party than the trivial and unimportant matter of merely fixing the time and place of the state convention? Why should he have announced to the public the least important object of the committee meeting and concealed the more important business with which the committee was expected to deal?

"The question naturally arises, was it a part of the original purpose of Mr. Rollins to resign at the time he issued the call, or was his resignation fixed and agreed upon at the Butler conference in the Bond building in Washington when he and Mr. Butler and Mr. Duncan were conferring on Thursday last week? Mr. Rollins is a lawyer. He is a man of some legal and business experience. It must have occurred to him that such action on the part of his committee could scarcely be proper and valid, unless public notice thereof had been given in the call for this special meeting of his committee. Are we then unkind in charging that he was not candid and fair? Are we unjust in concluding that his action was not proper under the circumstances and that he not only violated the proprieties attaching to his position, but that he had abused the trust with which his party had honored him? Did he not owe it to his party to give public notice of his purpose to resign so that there might be at least a full attendance of the members of the committee and so that the members of the party might have had some opportunity to have had some voice in an indirect way, if not direct, in the selection of a man for this responsible position? Can any candid man call it less than snap judgment? Can any fair minded Republican in North Carolina for a moment contend that Mr. Rollins' action, under such circumstances, was fair and proper?

"Following these developments of Saturday there comes to us the flaming announcement from Washington that the Butler faction is on top. It is charged by Mr. W. A. Hildebrand, a reputable and truthful Washington correspondent, that Mr. Butler himself goes to the Washington Post in person, makes a plea for the publication of his statement and even writes the headlines about the 'Butler faction being on top.' What are we to conclude from these disclosures? We have waited patiently and have studied the conclusion that Mr. Butler was 'in it.' We have read attentively and re-read carefully the utterance of Judge Adams since his election, hoping that therein we might find some evidence that Mr. Butler was not behind this whole scheme. We have read and re-read the studied utterances of Mr. Rollins, as given in his published interview, but the more we read the more fully we are convinced that 'The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau.' Butler is the Rebekah in the plot. It is his scheme conceived, suggested and matured by him. Only 'his' voice and no fetch them," says Butler, in the language of the 13th of B. O. K.

The fight is still on. The issue remains clear cut. There can be no peace while Mr. Butler remains the active and dominant power in the Republican organization. Let the battle wage between the people on one side and the Federal officials, including all the doers, on the other side. If the people prefer Butler, they now have the opportunity to say so in their primaries and to declare the result in his favor on the 10th of July next. Those who are behind him need not construe the anxiety of the Tar Heel for peace as a willingness to tamely submit to the domination of Mr. Butler. In any trace and in all terms for peace in the Republican ranks, it must be understood that his leadership is the first thing to be eliminated."

Don't Fail to Register!

And to the people of Guilford county and state of North Carolina:
"Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

TAB-KEEPER.

BAN ON QUACK DOCTORS.

Postoffice Department Accomplishing Much in Matter of Ridding the Country of Criminal Practitioners.

Washington, Oct. 13.—(Quack doctors, fraudulent medical specialists and criminal medical practitioners have come under the ban of the Postoffice department. They have been pursued by state and municipal authorities in many cities; but hundreds of them, by hook or by crook, have managed to evade serious trouble. In many instances, their influence is tremendous. It is a matter of constant surprise to the Federal officials how much personal and political influence such men can wield; but it counts for nothing in dealing with the Postoffice authorities.

Several months ago, the subject of reaching these fraudulent and criminal practitioners through the Postoffice department was presented to Postmaster General Cortelyou. The whole matter was considered very carefully. Some of the stories related of the practices of these so-called "doctors" were enough to make one shudder. Murder after murder has been traced directly to them and several of the most notable crimes of the past decade in this country have had their origin in the offices of these men.

Municipal and even state authorities have found it difficult always to deal with practitioners of this character, not only because of their shrewdness in covering up their tracks, but also because of their local influence. In some instances it has been found that scores of well-meaning people were willing to testify to the excellent character of a "doctor" under suspicion; indeed, people went so far as voluntarily to defend men who were known to the authorities to be practicing criminally. Positive evidence was difficult to procure, because of the attitude of both the "doctors" and their patients.

Finally, an appeal was made to the national authorities. Of course, even after a determination to act had been reached by the officials of the Postoffice department it was necessary to proceed slowly and cautiously lest injustice be done to innocent people. However, after evidence of a satisfactory kind had been obtained of the criminality of a "doctor's" practice, the newspapers and periodicals through which he advertised were notified that if they continued to publish his advertisements they would be debarred from the mails. Naturally, further advertising by that "doctor" was refused by all publications. Then the "doctor" would begin to work his influence. Some of the men upon whom the department's ban was placed have visited Washington in person, called on the department officials and brought strong political influence to bear to obtain release from the predicament in which they found themselves. It all has availed them nothing.

Following up the action of the post-office officials, municipal authorities, in many cases, have been able effectively to put a stop to the nefarious work of these practitioners. Scores of them have been driven out of New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia and several small cities; and now the department is working among the same lines in Buffalo and cities farther west. It is proposed to continue the work until every one of the persons known to be engaged in such criminal practice shall have been driven out of business and, if possible, into the penitentiary.

Hon. W. W. Kitchin's Appointments.

Mr. Chas. T. Wilson, chairman of the Fifth district Democratic congressional executive committee, favors us with a list of twenty-eight appointments arranged for Congressman W. W. Bride and Groom Fry Suicide.

Liberty, Mo., Oct. 11.—As the outcome of a suicide pact, Jesse Webb, son of a prominent farmer, was today shot and dangerously wounded by his wife at their home at Smithville, near here. Mrs. Webb then shot herself through the heart, dying instantly. The couple had been married but one week and were yet on their honeymoon trip.

Webb, who had been suffering from tuberculosis, became worse during the last few days. In a statement secured he says that his wife and he had talked it over and decided "it was better to end it all."

UNDER CIVIL SERVICE.

Complaints of Pernicious Activity Against Revenue Officers May Result in a General and Sweeping Change.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Senator Simmons, who is in the city, is greatly interested in a report shortly to be made by the civil service commission to President Roosevelt concerning the matter of pernicious activity among deputy revenue collectors in North Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky and other states where revenue collectors are stationed. For a long time complaints of a serious nature have been coming into the commission to the effect that assessments were being levied by the collectors, and Senator Simmons is understood to have filed formal charges with the commission.

These collectors throughout the country number between 1,100 and 1,200; with salaries that will average about $1,200 per year. As a result of investigations recently made by Commissioner Green they will in all probability be placed under civil service rules by an executive order January 1, next. Mr. Green's investigations are now being made into a report that will shortly be submitted to the President and it is believed that he will immediately order all deputy collectors, wherever located, placed under civil service rules.

The testimony secured by Commissioner Green while making a tour recently through Kentucky, North Carolina and Virginia was sufficient to satisfy him of the genuineness of the complaints that had previously been filed with the commission. From such expressions of opinion that have been received from Commissioner Green and other members of the commission it is believed that the placing of all the deputy collectors now in the internal revenue service under the rules of the commission would go far toward removing the constant complaints of the pernicious activity which are reaching the commission.

Last year conditions are said to have become so bad in the western district of North Carolina that all deputies working there were placed under the rules of the commission by the President. This step led to an investigation in other districts with the result that the commission believes it in the interest of the public service to include every deputy collector in the internal revenue bureau under the rules of the commission.

Senator Simmons says that Federal office-holders in North Carolina have always been more or less active in behalf of their candidates against the Democratic candidates. This year, he says, marshalled as an army under the direction of its chief, they present a front of organized activity never before shown by them in North Carolina. Senator Simmons also declared a short time ago that if the Governor and the courts did not take hold of the collectors of the western North Carolina revenue collector's district he would be compelled to demand a senatorial investigation.

THE TIME TO REGISTER.

The Books for Fall Election to Close September 27th.

The registration books opened on the 6th of this month and will close on the 27th instant at sunset. Those who registered and voted in the general election two years ago are not required to register again in order to vote in the November election, but those who have become of age since the last general election must register if they expect to vote this fall. Those who have removed from one precinct to another during the past two years should get a certificate from the registrar at their last polling place and see that their names are properly entered on the books at their present voting precinct, otherwise they will be unable to vote in the approaching election. The registrars of the county may be found at their places of business during the week, but on Saturdays they will be found at the precinct voting places. It is known that there are a large number of people who have not registered.

It behooves every Democrat to register and to register promptly. On Saturday the 20th and on Saturday the 27th the registrars will attend at the polling places in each precinct. In the meantime these registrars can be found at their respective places of business where they will register any person desiring to be registered.

The registrars and polling places in this city are as follows:

Precinct No. 1—J. Willie Smith, registrar, grand jury room, court house.
Precinct No. 2—E. J. Stafford, registrar, Boren building, on West Washington street, opposite J. W. Scott & Co.

Precinct No. 3—D. H. Collins, registrar, Eagle Hose Co., fire house on Davis street.

Precinct No. 4—G. H. McKinney, registrar, office of Capt. J. H. Walsh.

Dr. R. C. Washburn, of Battle Ground, was painfully bruised Friday 11: a runaway accident which terminated near the new library building. He came to Greensboro for some lumber that morning with two or three teams and had scarcely gotten started toward home when a fractious team he was driving took fright at a wood sawing outfit on South Ashe street and ran to Library place, where in making a short turn into West Gaston street the Doctor and his load of lumber were unceremoniously dumped onto the hard concrete sidewalk in front of one of Mrs. Keeling's houses. Fortunately no bones were broken and he was able to go home in a buggy a short time after the accident. The frightened team ran with the front wheels of the wagon to Mr. George Donnell's place a block further west on Gaston, where it stopped on coming in contact with a fire hydrant and a telephone pole.

The celebrated tapered spoke Nissen round and square bound wagons are sold only by Townsend & Co. 41-4t

Don't Fail to Register!

Branch of the Juvenile Protective Organized Here.

A number of prominent men and women of the city assembled in the parlor of The Benbow Monday night and organized the Guilford County Juvenile Protective by the election of the following officers: President, O. C. Wysong; vice president, C. H. Ireland; secretary, Mrs. W. H. Osborn; treasurer, Mrs. Lula B. Carr.

This organization is the result of the mass meeting held in the Smith Memorial building Sunday afternoon, when Rev. Crawford Jackson, of the Central Juvenile Protective, with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., delivered an address before a large audience of citizens interested in the movement.

The following were selected as a committee to draft a bill to be presented at the next legislature looking to the establishment of a juvenile court and probation system for Guilford county: Messrs. W. B. Streeter, A. M. Seales and Col. W. H. Osborn.

Rev. Crawford Jackson was present and stated the object of such a society. The object as outlined by him is to protect the wayward children in this city and county from being incarcerated in jail and worked on the roads and work house with hardened criminals by taking them out on bond and giving them pleasant employment, and to appear in the court in their behalf and request the court to deal with them as it seems best to them that the wayward child should be dealt with.

The primary object in perfecting the organization is to secure for this county a juvenile court and that the youthful criminal may be tried in a court other than where the hardened criminal is tried, and to get the probation system that the child may be given a chance to reform without having to go behind prison walls.

Guilford Battle Chapter D. A. R. Elects Officers.

At the last regular monthly meeting of the Guilford Battle Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, officers for the ensuing year and delegates to the state convention were elected. The following are the newly elected officers:

Mrs. H. B. Blake, regent; Mrs. J. G. Brodnax, senior vice regent; Mrs. E. P. Wharton, second vice regent; Mrs. Weldon E. Schenck, recording secretary; Mrs. Lucy Moss, treasurer; Mrs. J. J. Horney, registrar; Mrs. W. L. Grissom, chaplain; Mrs. C. L. Van Noppen, historian.

Mrs. Blake, regent, and Mrs. Horney were elected delegates, and Mrs. Van Noppen and Mrs. Schenck alternates in the order named to the state convention to be held October 25.

Mrs. John N. Staples was leader of the meeting and read a most interesting paper on the "Edenton Tea Party." The next meeting will be held by Mrs. Frank Dalton.

Barbecue and Basket Picnic.

The Democrats of Randolph are preparing for a monster political demonstration at Asheboro on Thursday, Oct. 25. Hon. Lee S. Overman, Hon. Jas. H. Pon, Hon. R. N. Page and other distinguished speakers will make addresses. Three brass bands will furnish music and a barbecue and basket dinner will be served. A great crowd from Randolph and adjoining counties is expected, as the invitation is wide open and hearty.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION.

Prof. J. Allen Holt States His Position in This Matter.

EDITOR PATRIOT: I hear that the Republicans are circulating a story that I am in favor of compulsory education and that if I am elected I will get such a law passed. This is in keeping with what might be expected from a party that refuses to come out into the open and make its charges, if it has any, where they can be refuted. I believe in being fair with the people and am telling those who come to hear me what I believe in.

I have not the remotest purpose of introducing any bill or working to secure any law looking to compulsory education. We haven't school facilities to take care of the children of the state if such a law were passed and enforced. Besides, there are other considerations and difficulties which would make such a law at present undesirable.

If the people of North Carolina can't be persuaded to educate their children by furnishing good, comfortable school houses and appeals to their love for their offspring, I know them too well to believe that they would tamely submit to being driven to do so.

In Guilford county we are moving forward in every line of activity and our great difficulty at present is to find seating capacity and teachers enough for those who are eager to avail themselves of educational opportunities.

Respectfully,
J. ALLEN HOLT.
Oak Ridge, Oct. 15, 1906.

New Orleans Now Has Sewerage.

New Orleans, Oct. 11—For the first time since this city was founded, 188 years ago, a modern sanitary and underground sewerage system was put into operation tonight. The pipes connected are part of a $24,000,000 sewerage drainage and water system, building of which began eight years ago.

In an area measuring 25 blocks by 42, including the principal business section of New Orleans, tonight's connection marks the end of cess pools and of portable vaults in business houses, which have for many years been a danger to public health. It will be many months before complete connections can be made with the pipes opened tonight.

Pension Statistics.

State Auditor B. F. Dixon announces that there are 14,353 old soldiers on the state Confederate pension list this year. There were 14,035 last year. The state will pay in pensions this year $275,000 and first class pensioners will receive $50, second-class $45, third-class $35, and fourth-class $18. The warrants on the state treasury for the pensions will be issued December 15, so that the old soldiers will as usual receive their pension money as a sort of Christmas present from the state.

Little Edna Lystra Scott.

On the evening of October 7th, while the Death Angel was gathering jewels for his Master's crown he hovered near the home of Mr. S. J. Scott and plucked from it a beautiful bud, Lystra Edna, daughter and only child of C. F. Scott. Lystra was very young, being a little over fifteen months old, yet we hope her short life may help us to learn more truly the lesson of leaning on the strong arm of the Master who "doeth all things well." All that is mortal of her now rests beneath a flower-covered mound in Alamance church yard, beside that of her mother who preceded her thirteen months.

Give your children the best education you possibly can, even if they should not live to profit by it and should disappoint all your hopes; you will have the consciousness of having discharged your duty to them, of having done all in your power to make them good, courageous men and women.

Notice of School Election.

A petition having been presented to the Board of County Commissioners of Guilford county, signed by one-fourth of the freeholders in the territory hereinafter named, and endorsed by the County Board of Education, asking for a new registration and election to ascertain the will of the people whether there shall belevied annually in said district a special tax of not more than thirty cents on the one hundred dollars valuation of property and not more than ninety cents on the poll to supplement the general school fund which may be apportioned to the district by the County Board of Education of Guilford county. A new registration is ordered and the election is hereby ordered to be held at the Springwood schoolhouse on Tuesday, November 20, 1906.

The territory is as follows: Beginning at the southeast corner of the corporation of the city of High Point and running west with said corporation to the Oak Hill special tax district line, thence southerly with said line to the Randolph county line, thence east with the Randolph county line to the Jamestown township line, thence north with the Jamestown township line to the Welch special tax line, thence easterly with said line to the corporate limits of High Point, thence south with said corporation line to the beginning; except that the farms of the following persons, who live in Jamestown township, shall be included: Lane Robbins, W. W. Hayworth, John Roberts, Ed. Robertson, Ed. Cox, James Low and Jacob Swing. J. S. Riddick is appointed registrar for said election, and the following are appointed judges of election: James Low and Wesley Hedrick.

This 15th day of October, 1906.

Administrator's Notice.

Having this day qualified as administrator of the estate of John S. Barber, deceased, this is to notify all persons having claims against said estate to present them to me duly attested on or before the 17th day of October, 1907, or this notice will be pleaded in bar of their recovery. All persons indebted to said estate are requested to make immediate payment.

This 15th day of October, 1906.

J. F. BARBER, Administrator.

ROAD NOTICE.

A petition having been presented to the Board of County Commissioners asking for the opening of a public road leading from the Greensboro road in Summer township to Ryman's X Roads and joining the Tabernacle road at or near Council Bluffs, in Pentecost township, this is to notify all persons objecting to same to appear before said board at the next regular meeting on Monday, November 12, 1906, and state said objection.

The Publisher's Claims Sustained

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular Unabridged" thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation.

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the Dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition, and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.

Very large crowds went from here to the Carolina Fair last Thursday. Many went Tuesday and Wednesday, but Thursday drew the largest crowd by far.

The large crowd of students now here makes this a fine market for produce, poultry, beef, etc. Ready sale is found at good prices. Farmers will do well to take note.

GUILFORD COLLEGE ITEMS.

Miss Bobbie Clapp spent last week at Guilford college, the guest of Miss Mary Stanley.

The graded school at this place took holiday last Thursday to attend the Greensboro fair.

Mr. George Roberson, of Statesville, spent last Saturday and Sunday with his mother at this place.

Misses Lizzie Stewart and Lillie Wilson, of Greensboro spent last Saturday evening and Sunday with Miss Mary Stanley.

Several Guilford College people attended the Greensboro fair last week and some of them carried away premiums on their exhibits. Mr. Richard S. Smith took 3 first and 3 second premiums on his bronze turkeys and also made a creditable showing on his chickens. Mr. Nereus Knight received premiums on his young mules, and Mrs. Younts took first premium on carpet.

Our road from this place to Greensboro has been very much improved and the distance somewhat shortened by the new road just opened from the end of West Market street. We are sorry that the work could not be continued on this line till the whole distance was completed to Guilford college. We think at least the gravel should be put on the new road at once so far as it is graded.

PINE GROVE ITEMS.

It is thought that Miss Tula Fentress is taking the fever.

Quite a crowd from our community attended the fair last week.

Mrs. Ezekiel Elliott is visiting relatives in your city this week.

Miss Mabel Fentress, who is in school at Greensboro, visited her parents Sunday.

Mrs. Sallie W. Perkins is visiting her daughter, Mrs. S. B. Hockett, this week.

Mr. D. T. Perkins, of Wilson, visited friends and relatives in this community last week.

Mr. Fremont Fentress, whose critical illness has been noted in this paper, is slowly improving.

Mr. Nathan Perkins, of Goldsboro, and his son Isaac, who is in school at Guilford College, visited relatives in this community last week.

Miss Lina Boyd, the trained nurse who is nursing Mr. Fremont Fentress, spent Saturday night and Sunday in Greensboro with her parents.

OAK RIDGE ITEMS.

Prof. J. T. Bennett expects to reach home Wednesday from St. Louis.

About 150 students and all the faculty went to the Central Carolina Fair last Thursday.

The county candidates speak here on Friday night at the institute. Everybody invited.

Prof. Earl Holt, who has been ill for a week, is able to resume his work in the class room.

Bingham school (Asheville) plays a return game here November 2nd. The team is improving daily.

Prof. M. H. Holt got first prizes on his fine Berkshire hogs at the fair last week. They attracted much attention.

The foot ball team leaves Thursday night for Asheville to play Bingham school Friday and Asheville school Saturday.

Prof. Raper, of Chapel Hill, was prevented by illness from lecturing here last Saturday night. He will come at an early date.

The frost and freeze finished up all vegetation in this part of the county. Sweet potatoes are said to have been seriously injured.

McLEANSVILLE ITEMS.

Mrs. Nora Green and daughter, Miss Jessie, have been visiting relatives here the past week.

Mr. Lacy D. Hines passed through our village yesterday afternoon on his way to Greensboro, where he holds a responsible position with the Clymer Machine Co.

The members of the Philolathean literary society engaged in a "mock trial" Friday night which proved to be a most interesting occasion. Lawyers were selected by the defendant and plaintiff, and the other officers the same as in legal proceedings. The prisoner at the bar was charged with stealing a match. Upon the whole it was a very creditable performance.

Henry Blount, the famous lecturer and entertainer of Wilson, was here Saturday night and addressed a fair sized audience in Jefferson Academy. He is truly a most wonderful man. His original wit and humor would bring shouts of laughter at frequent intervals. And at other times his matchless oratory and eloquence would cause a breathless silence. He left on the early morning train Sunday for home.

MIDWAY ITEMS.

Mr. Onslow Whitsett is critically ill. Nearly all of our people went to the fair Thursday.

Several of us attended "Old People's Day" at Holt's Chapel Sunday. There was an interesting programme.

Miss Cora Donnell has gone to be assistant teacher at Brightwood. We shall miss her in the Sunday school.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Scott Saturday night, Oct. 6, and carried the soul of their little grand-daughter to heaven. We sympathize with her father and grand parents.

Mrs. Jane Cable, whose illness was mentioned last week, died last Tuesday night and her body was laid to rest in Holts Chapel graveyard Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Cable will be missed in her home and in the community. May our Heavenly Father comfort her sorrowing relatives and friends.

A Heavy Load to Carry.

Along with dyspepsia comes nervousness and general ill-health. Why? Because a disordered stomach does not permit the food to be properly digested, and its products assimilated by the system. The blood is charged with poisons which come from this disordered digestion, and in turn the nerves are not fed on good, red blood, and we see symptoms of nervousness, sleeplessness and general breakdown. It is not head work, nor over physical exertion that does it, but poor stomach work. With poor, thin blood the body is not protected against the attack of germs of grip, bronchitis and consumption. Fortify the body at once with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—a rare combination of native medicinal roots without a particle of alcohol or dangerous habit-forming drugs.

A little book of extracts, from prominent medical authorities extolling every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will be mailed free to any address on request by postal card or letter. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Many years of active practice convinced Dr. Pierce of the value of many native roots as medicinal agents and he went to great expense, both in time and in money, to perfect his own peculiar processes for rendering them both efficient and safe for tonic, alterative and rebuilding agents.

The enormous popularity of "Golden Medical Discovery" is due both to its scientific compounding and to the actual medicinal value of its ingredients. The publication of the names of the ingredients on the wrapper of every bottle sold, gives full assurance of its non-alcoholic character and removes all objection to the use of an unknown or secret remedy. It is not a patent medicine nor a secret one either. This fact puts it in a class all by itself, bearing as it does upon every bottle wrapper the Badge of Honesty, in the full list of its ingredients.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" cures, weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver and biliousness, ulceration of stomach and bowels and all catarrhal affections no matter what parts or organs may be affected with it. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little liver pills, first put up 40 years ago. They regulate and invigorate, stomach, liver and bowels. Much imitated but never equalled. Sugar-coated and easy to take as candy. One to three a dose.

STOPS LYING MEAT LABELS.

Chopped-up Hog Snouts Can No Longer Pass for "Potted Chicken."

Washington Post, 21st.

With the view of preventing any possible deception in the preparation of meat and meat products, the Secretary of Agriculture yesterday issued instructions to the inspectors regarding the proper labeling of meats.

The instructions direct that the new labels shall show the true name of the product, the name of the manufacturer, and the place of manufacture. Labels that are now on hand may be used until January 1, providing that a "stickler," approved by the Agricultural Department, is attached.

Explicit instructions are given to prohibit the use of any picture, design, or device that will in any way mislead the consumer. Veal or pork which bears the picture of a chicken will be on the black list.

In regard to the use of geographical names, a compromise was effected. It was decided that they may be used, but if the product on which they appear was not manufactured in the place named, the words "type," "style," "brand," and "cut," must be used.

If Frankfurter sausages are made in America, they must in the future be labeled "Frankfurter-style sausages." Virginia ham, which did not come from that state, must have "style" affixed to its title.

Mixtures, when the names indicate a mixture, such as sausage, mince and hash, need not be marked "compound." Otherwise their names must be marked "compound." In the case of compounds containing lard, steatin, or other fats, or cottonseed oil, the names of all the ingredients must appear upon the label.

The word "ham" without a prefix indicating the species of animal, is considered by the department to be pork ham, but trimmings removed from the ham and used in the preparation of potted meats or sausage, or when used alone, may be known as "potted ham" or "ham sausage."

The rules clearly define what constitutes pure lard, but prescribe that a substance composed of lard, steatin, or animal fat and vegetable oil may be labeled "Lard compound."

Among the other restrictions are the following: "Picnic hams" cannot be called "hams," but may be called "picnic" or "picnic shoulders." "Little pig sausage" may be called "little pork sausage" or "pigmy sausage." Extract of beef must be actually made from beef, and veal loaf cannot be called such unless the meat used is veal only.

The same rules apply to other canned products, and manufacturers are warned that the rulings do not exempt them from the enforcement of state laws.

"The Shyster."

Raleigh News and Observer.

There is a rumor of a courageous Greensboro lawyer who is to appeal to the Supreme court for action against the "shyster" class who make a practice of soliciting business. It must be admitted that the standards which once prevailed in the legal profession have been lowered in this respect. The law has by many who have been permitted to practice in the courts, been commercialized. In the matter of solicitation of business the abuse has become noticeable. It has clogged the courts with litigation, added greatly to the expense of counties, and created a false idea of equity and justice among a certain class of people. As a result of such methods corporations, particularly, are inclined to look with skepticism upon jurors and the appeals of lawyers in the courts have inevitably appealed to a prejudice which has in some instances made justice blind. These conditions may in large measure be justly attributed to the fee-hunting lawyer, who has prostituted the traditions of a high profession to sordid ends. The abuse should be ended if possible, and the unnamed lawyer who is bold enough and energetic enough to prosecute and unveil the offenders will deserve the thanks of the whole state for his unselfish endeavor.

Every abuse, however, has a cause, and while condemning the shyster lawyer, it must not be forgotten that he is in some sense a product of other abuses. It was not always true that a corporation could with justice complain that it was the victim of a popular prejudice and malicious litigation. The shoe, in fact, was on the other foot.

Just laws governing the relations of the employed and employer, such as the fellow-servant got, came only after the strenuous opposition of railroad corporations. Such popular prejudice as exists and as the shysters enter to encourage was carefully sown. As a result, any great railroad disaster furnishes disgusting evidence on the one hand of the shark-like propensities of the shameless lawyers and, on the other, the desperate efforts of the railroads to avoid the consequences of their negligence by underhand methods. It is true that some lawyers rush to an accident like vultures to a battlefield. It is equally true that the agents, disclosed and secret, of the railroads do not under such circumstances hesitate at bodily suffering or mental aberration or even in the presence of death itself, to impose on ignorance and poverty to the end of obtaining "release" from wrong. The whole relation of corporation practice and shyster lawyers to the people needs to be purified.

Another shyster is the lawyer Shyllock, who needs attention as badly as the contingent fee contingent. These birds of prey every town can recognize for itself. They make no pretense of practicing law in any legitimate way. They are frankly and openly blood-suckers, and their licenses are frankly a shield against punishment for their operations. It is said that these gentry cannot now be barred from their practices. It is doubtful whether the other class can be touched at present. They are both deserving of the attention of a plain and stringent law, which in weeding out the great majority of unworthy lawyers, may remove a reproach from an honorable company, who follow a high calling.

This is the season of decay and weakened vitality. Nature is being shorn of its beauty and bloom. If you would retain yours, fortify your system with Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. Gardner's and Holton's Drug Store's.

BAKED APPLE DUMPLINGS.

Peel and core as many apples as your appetite may wish. Six or eight—perhaps a dozen—Make a dough like cracker biscuit. Roll it thin—with skill and care. Place an apple lightly on it—Take your knife and cut it square—Large enough to fold your fruit in. Then within the vacant place Of the core, a bit of butter, Cinnamon and sugar place. Draw your square up well together, Pinch it gently on the top, So your dough will be protected, Lest the cooking juices pop. When your apples are all covered, Take a fork and prick them through, 'Twill prove better in the baking—Half a dozen times will do. Bake them slowly, and, while cooking, Take of sugar, just a cup, And a modest lump of butter—And with light hand cream them up. Adding extract, and your hard sauce Set on ice to harden more: Lift your apples from the oven, And your labors will be o'er. Serve them hot—the sauce adds flavor. And each dumpling, firm and brown, Is a practical achievement—Adds a jewel to your crown.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Correspondence of the PATRIOT.

Washington, Oct. 13.—The outcome of the Cuban rebellion seems to be a greater disappointment to the Cubans than to anyone else concerned. It has been anticipated heretofore that this was an annexation revolution, and all developments tend to confirm this view. The residents of the Isle of Pines were most deeply interested in it, and they have addressed an urgent petition to Secretary Taft for the American government to take over the island and grant it a separate government while he has the chance. No reply to this petition has as yet been officially sent but the government promised to take the matter under advisement and answer later. It can be very safely said, however, that the government's answer is already prepared. The position of the United States with regard to the Isle of Pines was taken when General Wood, in defiance of the treaty with Spain, turned the little island over to Cuba, and when his action was approved by Secretary of State Root.

There need be no thought of annexation either of the Isle of Pines or of Cuba at the present moment, because it would not be convenient to this government. There is little fear, however, that the reorganized Cuban government will only need a year or two to revert into just the sort of a tangle from which the American government is now extricating it. When this time comes, the chances are that there will be no elections on and if the Republic party is still in power, it will very gladly assimilate the whole republic and give as an excuse the statement that the Cubans cannot be trusted to run an independent government of their own. The annexation moment is delayed but has by no means been indefinitely postponed.

Considerable comment and amusement has been caused by the fact that General Funston is to return to the United States in company with Secretary Taft. There was every reason to suppose when he was first ordered to Cuba that he was just the man to fit the emergency. There is no question that General Funston is a good officer, and that he has a way of doing things regardless of red tape delays, but it was found after he reached Cuba that he was not persona grata to many of the politicians there, and as the reconstruction movement is beyond all things a benevolent movement, he has had to be shipped back home. This recalls the days of the last Cuban rebellion when General Funston, then a hard working correspondent, went into the brush with the Cuban rebels and was finally made a commissioned officer in the insurgent army. He did not altogether approve of the way that things were managed, and ultimately wanted to return to the United States. The Cubans did not want to let go of a good thing and objected strongly, so General Funston cut the Gordian knot by going in and surrendering to the nearest Spanish patrol. He got himself very cordially disliked for this, but it answered his purpose, and the incident has never stood in his way until the present abortive attempt to assign him to Cuban duty.

The Department of Justice has gotten all stirred up again over reports of slavery and kindred outrages in the South. A complaint has been made to the President and an appeal has been sent for aid in running down the ghastly state of affairs said to exist somewhere south of Tampa. The allegation is that a number of big commercial companies, running turpentine factories, lumber mills and phosphate mines, have instituted a system of peonage and are holding hundreds of both white men and negroes in what amounts to a state of slavery. The story as laid before the Department of Justice has all of the stage setting of Uncle Tom's Cabin, even down to the armed guards and the bloodhounds. It is said that the laborers of these works are shot at the first attempt to escape, and that the settlers in the vicinity are afraid to give information to the authorities even when they know that the law is being violated.

One of the interesting features in connection with this charge is that the men who are responsible for these conditions are not Southerners but are large Northern capitalists who may or may not know how their works are being run in the South. It will be recalled that about a year ago the Department of Justice embarked on a similar line of inquiry with regard to peon settlements that were said to be run in Missouri. The department is still investigating, and it is said that it will take up the Florida cases and push them all to a conclusion. This, however, will take some time and if the allegations with regard to the peon settlements are true, the chances are that there will be a number of vacancies in the list of special investigators before the department gets all the information that it needs prior to bringing the cases into court.

There is another interesting case somewhat along the same lines that is now being looked up by the Bureau of Immigration. This case only came in to print through the fact that one Washington newspaper broke faith with the Department of Commerce and Labor and printed the story before it was officially "ripe." Everybody in newspaper circles has known for a week past that a special agent of the Bureau of Immigration was to be sent to Gastonia, N. C., to investigate alleged violation of the alien contract labor laws there. The case came to light through a girl, who was picked up by the police in Washington and sent to the House of Detention. She gave her name first as Hilda Barnes and afterward as Hilda Elliott. After unravelling the conflicting stories that she told, it seemed fairly probable to the authorities that there had been extensive immigration frauds perpetrated in connection with the Southern cotton mills. It is believed that as many as a thousand girls, many of them under factory age, have been inveigled from England on the promise of big wages in the Southern mills. This, of course, was in defiance of the law against alien contract labor, and the department has arranged to send an official from the Bureau of Immigration to investigate the conditions. The official will still go, but the story has been already printed, the chances are that his investigations will not amount to very much and if the law has been violated, the criminals will have been put on notice and will be able to cover up their tracks.

Section-Master Killed.

Reidsville, Oct. 14.—Mr. F. C. Catlett, section master of the Southern Railway, was killed near Mizpah, about three miles south of Reidsville, yesterday morning. The linemen of the American Bell Telephone Company were throwing cross-arms, it is said, along the road from the moving train at each pole, and one of the cross-arms struck Mr. Catlett, who was superintending some work along the track. Death was instantaneous.

Mr. N. C. Thompson, depot agent of the Southern at Reidsville, notified Col. Craig, one of the county commissioners, in order that, if necessary, an inquest might be held. Col. Craig decided that it would be useless. At noon the body was brought to Reidsville and carried to Barber's undertaking establishment, where it was prepared for burial.

May End Machinists' Strike.

Washington, Oct. 11.—There will be a conference tomorrow between President O'Connell, of the International Association of Machinists, and the officials of the Southern Railway regarding the strike of nearly 1,000 machinists of the system for more wages, and Mr. O'Connell tonight expressed his belief that at this conference all the differences between the railroad and the striking machinists would be satisfactorily adjusted. General Mauney Spencer issued a statement addressed to the strikers today, saying the gravity of the situation demands most careful consideration by each employee and that after such consideration the employees would conclude doubtless that their attitude toward the company is not entirely justified.

Stokes Mandamus Case.

Winston-Salem, Oct. 13.—Judge Ward this morning rendered an opinion in the mandamus case from Stokes county wherein citizens of Sauratown and Meadows townships are endeavoring to force the Stokes county commissioners to allow taxes on the Norfolk & Western and Southern Railways to be expended for better roads and improvement of public schools in said townships. Judge Ward ruled with the plaintiffs in regard to the taxes from the old Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley road, now owned by the Southern Railway, and against them in regard to the Roanoke & Southern road, now owned by the Norfolk & Western. Both sides have agreed to appeal to the Supreme Court.

WHAT THE RECORD SHOWS.

Facts Do Not Bear Out the Claims Made for the Fifty-Ninth Congress.

President Roosevelt says that the 59th Congress at its first session effected more good legislation than any other Congress in many years. The truth is that it effected nothing of any permanent value, while it rejected more good measures and adopted more bad ones than any other Congress in the history of the United States.

It rejected the Tillman bill to prevent contributions by corporations to party campaign funds, although that excellent bill passed the Senate.

It rejected the Williams bill to reduce the tariff on all articles on which the duty now exceeds 100 per cent., the Philippine tariff bill, and all other tariff propositions.

It rejected the anti-injunction bill, which had passed the House of Representatives unanimously on May 2, 1902.

It rejected the eight hour bill, after the Committee on Education and Labor had reported it favorably.

It rejected the bill relating to suits for injuries brought by employees of railroad and mining corporations.

It rejected the bill relating to contempt in Federal Courts and providing for trial by jury in cases of indirect contempt.

It rejected the prison contract labor bill.

It rejected the bill relating to hours of labor of railroad employees.

It rejected the La Follette Amendment to the railroad rate bill, a proposition endorsed by Organized Labor, defining the liability of employers for injuries to employees while engaged in the performance of duty; and passed a separate bill, opposed by Organized Labor, deceitfully styled the "employer's liability bill."

It rejected an amendment to the railroad rate bill to provide for excluding watered stock from the valuation put upon railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission in determining reasonable compensation for capital invested.

It rejected another amendment to the same bill, intended to prevent judges having a personal interest in railroad cases from sitting in judgment in such cases.

It rejected the Bailey Amendment to the same bill, intended to prevent Federal judges from enjoining, restraining or setting aside orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission fixing reasonable rates.

It rejected the Immigration bill.

It defeated the Beveridge amendment to the Agricultural Appropriation bill, requiring the beef packers to pay expenses of Federal inspection, and placed the cost of such inspection on the tax payers. It rejected a bill to untax building material for stricken Frisco, and the Republicans of that state have since endorsed such a bill.

All these measures and many more of similar character Congress refused to pass.

Congress did pass the Aldrich resolution for the protection of the Steel Trust and other trusts, by requiring all material and equipment for the construction of the Panama Canal to be bought from the trusts.

It did pass an amendment to the urgent deficiency bill, abolishing the eight hour law, the alien contract labor law, and the Chinese exclusion act as to the laborers on the Panama Canal.

This Congress has appropriated more money for the Army and Navy at one session in time of peace—$102,091,670 for the Navy and $71,817,165 for the Army.

Resolutions of Respect.

The Daughters of the Confederacy adopted the following resolutions on the death of Mrs. Ernest Clapp:

Since the Guilford Chapter Daughters of the Confederacy disbanded for the summer, the Grim Reaper has entered our circle and taken from our midst one of our sweetest and best loved members, and it is not meet today, when we have met again, to strew fresh flowers of kindly remembrance upon her tomb.

"She is not dead—
There is no death! the stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore,
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
they shine forevermore.

"And ever near us though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there is no dead!"

Resolved, That we recognize and trustingly submit to the wisdom and power of God's providence in taking from us one of our most faithful members, Mrs. Kate Bradshaw Clapp, and wish to extend to the husband and family our sympathy in this great bereavement, and to pay this tribute of respect to one who was faithful to every trust and whose love for the heroes of the "Lost Cause" will never be forgotten.

Also, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her husband and family entered upon the minutes of the chapter and published in the city papers.

Col. Lusk in a Hole.

Asheville, Oct. 13.—The county campaign is on here with vigor. Charles A. Webb, the Democratic nominee for the state Senate, at the meeting today at Black Mountain, wore Colonel Lusk, his Republican opponent, to a frazzle. Lusk in his speech, declared that he is not in favor of the Watts law and in reply to a question from Mr. Webb, declares that he has never favored the Watts or Ward law. Mr. Webb then produced a petition that was sent to the Legislature from Buncombe requesting their best efforts to have this temperance measure passed. One of the signers was Colonel Lusk. The Colonel at first denied having signed the petition, but others in the crowd verified the signature. The petition has knocked Lusk out of the box.

Simp Dogan, of Hendersonville, said to be one of the wealthiest negroes in western North Carolina, was convicted at last week's term of Superior court of Henderson county of receiving stolen goods and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary and to pay all the costs in the case.

NOTICE

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage of February, 1899, by A. F. Forbis and wife and recorded in Book 114, page 427, of the office of the Register of Deeds of Guilford county, I shall, on at 12 o'clock M., at the court house door, in the city of Greensboro, sell, for cash, the following described lands lying and being in the county of Guilford and state of North Carolina, in Jefferson township, adjoining the lands of J. W. Summers, Josiah Lewey, Henry Reece, John Paisley and others, and bounded as follows:

First tract: Beginning at a stone and running north fifty-five and one-half poles to a stone on Summers' line; thence east thirty-six poles to a stone; thence north fifty-nine poles to a stone on the bank of Birch Creek; thence down said creek with its meanderings to a stone; thence west about twelve poles to a stone; thence south twenty-six poles to the beginning, containing forty acres, more or less.

Second tract: Beginning at a stone, J. F. Forbis' corner, and running thence west sixty-eight poles to a sassafras tree in Paisley's line; thence north fifty-eight poles to a stone, Reece's corner; thence east sixty-nine and one-half poles to a stone; thence south fifty-eight poles to the beginning corner, containing twenty-five acres, more or less.

The above-described tracts of land are a part of the home place of the late A. F. Forbis and will be sold together with a certain other tract which, with these two, compose said home place.

This October 5, 1906.

SAMUEL PHIPPS,

F. P. HOBGOOD, JR., Attorney.

Notice of Dissolution.

State of North Carolina,
Department of State,
Greeting:

Whereas, It appears to my satisfaction, by duly authenticated record of the proceedings for the voluntary dissolution thereof deposited in my office, that the Hylawatha Manufacturing Company, a corporation of this state, whose principal office is situated at No. — Street, in the town of Greensboro, county of Guilford, state of North Carolina, J. A. Davidson, secretary, being the agent therein may be served, has complied with the requirements of an act of the Legislature of North Carolina (session 1901), entitled "An act to revise the Corporation Law of North Carolina," preliminary to the issuing of this certificate that such consent has been filed.

Now, therefore, I, J. Bryan Grimes, Secretary of State of the state of North Carolina, do hereby certify that the said corporation did, on the 10th day of October, 1906, file in my office a duly executed and attested consent in writing to the dissolution of said corporation, executed by more than two-thirds in interest of the stockholders thereof, which said certificate and the record of the proceedings aforesaid are now on file in my said office as provided by law.

In testimony whereof, I have hereto set my hand and affixed my official seal, at Raleigh, this 9th day of October, A. D. 1906.

J. BRYAN GRIMES,

Secretary of State.

Auction Sale Of City Lots

SATURDAY, OCT. 20, 1906

I shall sell 78 very choice, large, high and dry lots, situated on Park, Greyland, Bessemer and Battle Ground avenues, and 1st and 2nd streets, in northwest part of the city.

Remember, these lots are all inside the city limits, and on good wide streets. They are surrounded by houses occupied by white people exclusively, the occupants generally owning their own homes.

This section of the city is just now being looked to to supply cheap and medium priced lots to the man who cannot pay $500 to $1,000 for a lot on which to build himself a home, and yet does not care to go two or more miles out and pay car fare twice a day.

Investors will find these lots a good thing, as they will undoubtedly grow in value faster than property outside city limits and will probably double in value within one year. These lots are within easy reach of the cigar factory, finishing mill, tobacco warehouses, etc. In fact, all who have business or work north of the court house will find these lots just the thing. No higher or prettier lots are to be had at any price.

Carriages will be standing in front of my office at one o'clock to carry every one who wishes to attend this sale free of charge. These lots have been placed in my hands to sell and every one that is offered will be sold regardless of price.

Sale on the ground, beginning at 2 o'clock. Terms: One-fourth cash, balance on 6, 12 and 18 months time at 6 per cent. interest, or 6 per cent. discount for all cash. No by-bidding will be permitted. Everything will be fair and square. Come and bring your friends with you.

S. S. BROWN, Agent

Don't forget the date--Saturday, October 20th.

WHAT WAS PROVED.

Things North Carolinians Ought Never to Forget.

Raleigh News and Observer.

The recent debate at Smithfield between Mr. Pou and ex-Senator Marion Butler developed a few things which the people of North Carolina ought not to forget.

First. In 1892 Mr. Butler published in his paper, the Clinton Caucasian, an editorial in which he stated that the administration of the Democratic party in the state was above criticism—that our state affairs had been conducted honestly and economically. Mr. Pou quoted from that editorial and asked Butler when he told the truth, then (in 1892) when he was a Populist, or now, when, after betraying the Populist party, he had gone over to the Republicans.

Second. In 1897, during the last days of fusion legislature, Butler printed several editorials in the Raleigh Caucasian, in which he charged that the fusion legislature of 1897 was a damnable disgrace to the state; that it was composed of a set of miserable pie hunters; that no bill could be passed unless it was in the interest of some job. Mr. Pou read these extracts to the ex-Senator and asked him to say whether he told the truth then (in 1897) or now, when he is trying to elect another legislature of the same kind. What was the reply of this patriot who has betrayed every party he has ever belonged to? Silence—perfect silence.

Mr. Pou gave him a terrible lash for his refusal to say whether he spoke the truth in 1892, when he said the administration of the Democratic party had been above criticism. In 1897, when he said the fusion legislature was a damnable disgrace to the state or now, when he is trying to put the Republican party under obligations to him so he can make more money as a lobbyist in Washington city.

Butler denounced the people of the state for the disturbance which took place in the campaign of 1898 and 1900, and charged that Senator Simmons encouraged mob rule. Mr. Pou's reply was one of the most terrific the writer has ever listened to, and I wish every decent white man in the state could have heard it. "You charge Senator Simmons with encouraging mob violence," said Mr. Pou. "You know the charge is false, and you shall not slander a man who is better than you are in his absence. I charge here and now, Marion Butler, that you are responsible for every drop of blood that was shed in the city of Wilmington. You betrayed the thousands of good men who had followed you into the Populist party, and you formed an alliance with the leaders of the negroes of our state in order that you might go to the Senate. In the county of New Hanover you put forty negro magistrates in office. All the police of the city of Wilmington were negroes. Nearly all of the deputy sheriffs were negroes. The result of course was a carnival of crime. Such an era of lawlessness the people of that city had never seen. Highway robberies were committed in the open day time. Burglaries were committed night after night within the very shadow of the city hall. White women were knocked off the sidewalk by insolent, drunken negroes. You will not stand up here and deny that you were more responsible than any other man for putting these venal and incompetent negroes in office. You accomplished that when you sold out the organization of the Populist party. Do you expect white men to submit to such conditions? You are a white man yourself, and you ought to be conscious of the things that your race cannot and will not submit to. Now, I deplore every violation of law which has ever taken place in our state. I expect I deplore these things as much as you do, but I tell you here and now, in the presence of your own people, that it does not lie in your mouth to denounce the people of Wilmington, or any one else in North Carolina, for anything that was done in 1898 and 1900 to rid the state of your work. It was all largely the result of your work, and that is why you did not dare stand up in eastern North Carolina and attempt to defend your record in 1900 and 1902. That is the reason you have waited all these years before you return to face the people you have betrayed. You think that they have forgotten, and that you can deceive them once more by your soft and hypocritical words."

The ex-Senator had raised the issue and he got what he deserved. He tried to reply by abusing Senator Simmons, but Mr. Pou's rejoinder was, if possible, even more crushing. "Neither Vance, nor Ransom, nor Simmons, nor Overman, nor any Democratic Governor of North Carolina," replied Mr. Pou, "was ever guilty of conspiring with a lot of Wall Street Jews to add to the burdens of the people who elected them to office. There is a syndicate in New York today engaged in the business of gathering together the $12,000,000 of worthless special tax bonds issued by your party in 1866. While Senator you suggested a way by which these bonds may have to be paid. If you think it decent and creditable to do this while you were United States Senator you are welcome to such credit as it is. I believe the immortal Vance would have died before he would have done what you admit that you did, and history will record you as the only senator from North Carolina who ever did such a thing even as a lawyer while he held that high position."

NAVY'S COSTLY BUNTING.

Each Ship Carries Two Hundred and Fifty Flags—Total Expense is Sixty Thousand Dollars a Year.

Washington Post.

Stowed away on every ship of the United States Navy, from tugboat to 16,000-ton battleship is a bundle of flags, shoulder high and about 15 feet long. About half the lot is composed of foreign flags which are encased in thick paper bags, with the name of the country stencilled on the end of the bag. The remaining, including those for ordinary use, are not wrapped, but tied in round bundles and lettered. The pile contains 250 flags, the regulation number each ship must carry.

The making of this number of flags costs the United States $60,000 a year, of which $13,000 is paid for material alone. Each ship has forty-three foreign flags on board constantly. These flags are 25 feet long and 13 feet wide. With these on board the ship is prepared to meet and show the proper courtesies which naval etiquette demands to all nations whose high officials should come aboard or whose waters the vessel should enter while on a cruise.

As a ship's quota of flags is renewed every three years, it is no small job to keep enough flags on hand, and to this end Uncle Sam keeps a large flag-making establishment running at full blast the year round at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Here there are nearly 100 skilled needlewomen working every day of the year, except Sundays and holidays, cutting the various colored bunting into strips and sewing and stitching them together in their proper place.

The most difficult part of the work is the making of the foreign flags, for some of them, be it known, are fearfully and wonderfully made. Take, for example, the flag of San Salvador. In the back is a belching volcano, pouring forth its lava and white smoke. On the sides of the mountain is the green foliage and shrubbery. Directly in front is a tranquil sea of sapphire blue. Above the volcano is a rising sun, set in a design of overflowing cornucopias, and a diamond, from which the rays are scintillating in every direction. To the right and left of the volcano are draped, in varied design, banners, which laboriously try to pattern the Stars and Stripes, and yet not show the plagiarism. Around the whole conglomeration is a wreath of cactus branches lovingly embracing the volcano, while at the top the date of the country's independence is inscribed.

To make a flag of San Salvador costs the United States government just $52.50, and when one of these flags is placed on each battleship every three years it can be readily seen that the insignificant little republic to the south of us is really costing the tax-payers of the country more than they would care to admit.

Then there is the flag of China, with its long, crawling, mythical blood red dragon. To make that flag costs the government something like $40. The flag of Costa Rica, with its scenic beauty of mountain and sea, costs $50, nearly as much as the costliest of them all, that of San Salvador.

The largest flag made by Uncle Sam's flag makers is the United States ensign No. 1, which is 36 feet long and 19 feet wide. It costs $40 to turn out a flag of this style.

The President's flag, while not the largest, requires the longest time of any to make, as it takes one woman a whole month to finish it. It is a simple design, being a blue field with the coat of arms of the United States in the center. The life-sized eagle, with outstretched wings and other emblems, are all hand embroidered, and involve the most patient work. The embroidery silk used on this design, which is 10 by 14 feet in size, costs $9 per pound.

The Monument to Jackson.

Waxhaw Enterprise.

The announcement to the effect that the erection of a suitable monument to Andrew Jackson's birthplace in this community has been set apart as the special work of the Mecklenburg Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution during the coming year will be interesting and welcome news to our people. A fund for this purpose has already been started, with Mr. D. A. Tompkins, of Charlotte, as trustee. To this the Daughters of the American Revolution will add a liberal appropriation from their own treasury, and try to raise as much additional money as possible by personal subscriptions. The fact that the patriotic ladies of Mecklenburg have taken the lead in this matter should not be the cause of any indifference toward the movement on the part of our own people. On the other hand we have occasion only for gratitude to them for the interest and zeal they are manifesting in a cause so worthy of their attention and so thoroughly in line with the objects of their organization. No doubt an opportunity to contribute to this fund will, at the proper time, be extended to everybody, and it is hoped that when the opportunity presents itself the good people of this community will respond liberally. The cause is one that should and doubtless will appeal to the patriotism of every loyal son and daughter of the Waxhaws. Let us withhold no aid from the Daughters of the American Revolution in their unselfish effort to mark with a suitable monument the birthplace of the hero of New Orleans and the great American statesman.

North Carolina Furniture.

Manufacturers' Record.

Between 1900 and 1905 the number of furniture manufacturing plants in North Carolina increased from 44 to 105, the capital invested in them from $1,023,874 to $4,621,994, the number of wage-earners from 1759 to 5164, and the value of the output from $1,547,305 to $6,181,619, raising furniture making from the seventh to the fifth place in the rank of the state's industries. This notable advance has come about through the utilization at home of some of the vast hardwood resources of the state, under the spur of experience at High Point that has changed that place within less than 20 years from a small town to the leading furniture manufacturing center of the South. A promise of still further realization of potentialities on this line is given in the fact that a Concord, (N. C.) store is exhibiting in one of its windows a set of furniture made by five boys of that town who are members of the freshman class in the technological department of Newberry College, S. C. When the young men of any state take pride in making part of their education the acquiring of skill and turning into marketable products the raw material for industry of their state, proof is given that breathing the industrial atmosphere is having a most practical and gratifying effect. It would be well for North Carolina if it had at least 10,000 of its young men in institutions of its own training themselves to become the prime shapers in the benefits of North Carolina industrial development.

Brighter Prospects
Increase Your Yields Per Acre
We have many actual photographs of cotton fields on which no fertilizers were used and pictures of fields on which "other makes" of fertilizers were used. Results of these crops were dismal failures. There are much brighter prospects ahead for the progressive farmers of the South. Two and three bales to the acre are only ordinary yields where are used with proper cultivation. Make your cotton mature early, and thus escape the boll weevil and other damaging insects. You can easily do this, as well as increase the number of bolls (and their size) on your plants by plentifully using Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers. This method will tremendously increase your yields per acre. Don't be fooled into buying a substitute.

Talmage Sermon

By Rev.
Frank De Witt Talmage, D. D.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 14.—In this sermon the preacher shows that as storms, stress and elemental confusion are the forerunners of growth and orderly development in nature, so social disturbances, upheavals, labor strikes and the conflict of "the classes and the masses" are the inevitable precursors of orderly national development. The text is Proverbs xiv, 4, "Where no oxen are, the crib is clean, but much increase is by the strength of the ox." All true lovers of the beautiful should read the messages of its great high priest, John Ruskin. There never lived a man who wielded a poetic-prose pen like his. His "Seven Lamps of Architecture" and "Ethics of the Dust" and "Stones of Venice," his "Sesame and Lilies" and "Crown of Wild Olive," his "Studies of Wayside Flowers" and of "The Cloud Form" and the "Relation of Natural Science to Art" offer to the aesthete enthusiast visions of this world which cannot be found among the writings of any other writer, living or dead.

Well do I remember the powerful fascination which held me when I first perused one of his books. Though I have seen many sages, yet not one of these ever impressed me with the awe with which I looked upon the trembling form of this mighty penman, whose face I saw many years ago when as a student traveling through England I saw a nurse lead John Ruskin along the country road for his afternoon walk. What was the more remarkable about this view was this: At that time I was looking only upon the shell of a man. I was watching a great writer whose body was alive, but whose mind was dead. If you have read the biography of John Ruskin you know that in his last days he was a mental wreck. The brain which had created thoughts which will charm the English speaking world for all time had burned itself out. When I saw John Ruskin he was an old, worn-out, helpless man. His mind was a Melrose abbey in ruins.

If you have read John Ruskin carefully you may remember how in one chapter he makes a mighty plea for the aesthetics of life against the ruthless invasion of commercialism. He denounces in vehement language the heartless vandalism of the business world which would paint a horrible advertisement of some patent medicine upon the rocks of a majestic passade or frowning Gibraltar. He bewails the fact that England's artistic sensibilities are so chilled and dulled that she would allow the manufacturer's wheel to turn into a muddy stream the clear, beautiful waters that leap out of the mountains, and he execrates the leonine brutality of the lumberman which would bury the ax in the heart of the grand old oaks that for centuries have been lifting up their leafy hands to God in an attitude of prayer. But, though John Ruskin, our teacher, our Gannett, our aesthetic high priest, who leads us in worship at the altar of the beautiful, makes this plea for the preservation of the woods and the valleys, though he would strike down the hands of the leonist who would desecrate the high cliff, yet the whole world knows that if commercialism did not shut its eyes at times to the aesthetic our railroads would be unable to tunnel under the mountains and the farmers could never cover their fields with grain. In order that the increasing human race may live we must cut and tear down and shove. In many senses we must have a chaotic cosmos in order to have progression.

Disorder Is Necessary.
If you will turn to my text and read it carefully, as the inspired penman meant it to be read, you will find that the thought which I am enunciating King Solomon taught in his book of Proverbs thousands of years ago. He goes out one morning, when the complaining farmer enters his barn. Everything there is filthy and dirty. The straw beds upon which the oxen slept are all matted up and must be raked out into the barnyard and the stalls cleaned. The chickens have flown into the haymow and scattered the hay. The grain bins have been broken open by the mice. The manger itself is in a fearful state. The oxen in nosing for their food have scattered it everywhere. "Oh, dear," exclaims the farmer, "just look at that barn. Did you ever see such a mess? It is work, work, work, clean, clean clean. I never finish fixing up the barn one day, but I have to go to work and fix it all up again the next." "Tis true that what you say is hard," answers the wisest of all men. "But, farmer, remember that you cannot have tidiness and cleanliness if you have oxen, and if you did not have any oxen you could not plow your fields and could not sow your grain and could not receive any financial return from your lands." Thus King Solomon says to us today: "Friend, sometimes it is best to have disorder. Sometimes it is best to have an upheaval. Where no oxen are, the crib is clean; but much increase is by the strength of the ox."

A valuable practical lesson is this thought for almost every department of life. In the first place, it will apply to the disorders of the natural world. Some people, if they could have their way, would never have a rainstorm.

They would never have a blizzard. They would never have the trees robbed of their leaves. They would never have them stand in a uniform of spotless white, like grim soldiers with their bayonets of ice as sharp pointed as the Roman spears. They would never have the wagon wheels sink hub deep in mud or the robins and the thrushes fly away from the New England hills to the land of the flowers. They would always have their orchards heavy laden with fruits, and their lawns covered with incense waving flowers, and their wheatfields with their ripened grain, making the valleys look like a banquet hall of gold, and the blue heavens unblackened by one dark cloud. The sun for them would send forth a never ceasing radiance. "Oh, why should we have the rain?" they cry. "Why do the December winds come to make our teeth chatter and our blood to freeze? Why do we have the spring freshets wash out our roads and sweep away our country bridges? Why all this disorder and confusion in the natural world? No man can worship God in drizzling fog or he truly happy when he has to hie a fire in a house which has to be hermetically sealed to keep out the winter's biting blasts." Thus we hear the weather pessimists complain when the country roads are impassable with snowdrifts, and the ice has to be broken in the drinking troughs, and the twinkling stars are snuffed out by the black robes of a shrieking tornado, and midnight by an eclipse of the sun is changed into the darkness of midnight.

Bad Weather a Blessing.
But in the light of my text, are not atmospheric disorders a blessing? Are not the frosts and the raindrops and the soft white quilts of snow hung over our lawns and the spring freshets benefactors instead of curses? I enter the silent American forests in January. There I find everything lifeless and still. Here and there I may see the track of a doe or a wild rabbit. There I may hear once in awhile a squirrel chattering and scolding at me. But for the most part the paths of the woods are deserted and everything is still. I go up to one of the grand old trees and pat its sides and sympathetically say: "Poor fellow! How cold you must be. How you must long again to be dressed in your beautiful robes of green. How bitter you must feel at these blizzards which chill you and stop your sap from flowing, as they are now trying to congeal my blood by freezing it in my veins." But, much to my surprise, the old oak is not satisfied with my sympathy. "No, no, no!" it answers sharply. "The frost is not my enemy, but my friend. It comes to me as a lover and puts its white arms about me and says: 'Tree, I want thee to live a hundred years. I want thee to grow thousands upon thousands of leaves. But in order to do this I must blizzard thy strength. I must give thee an annual rest. I must enrich the soil where thy roots are buried. Trust me. Believe me. I am thy friend, for the deeper I pile the snowbanks about thy trunk the richer the food thou shalt have to live upon when the warm summer sun comes back from its journey on the other side of the equator and kisses thy cheeks.' The frost is my friend and not my enemy." When the tree speaks thus, instead of condemning a winter blizzard, I thank God for the winter's cold as well as the summer's heat.

The Necessity of Rain.
I turn from the forests and enter the valleys. There I find the corn and the wheat and the vegetables growing everywhere. It is now July instead of January. I have foolishly gone out without my heavy boots and mackintosh. My wife warned me that it might rain when I started out, but I heeded not her advice. The dark clouds were even then gathering. Suddenly there sounds a muttering of thunder. Then the lightning flash and a tree is shattered by my side. Then comes the rain falling in a perfect deluge. The rain does not matter much to me, because I know that if I walk briskly and keep my blood in circulation I shall not catch cold. But the poor flowers! The poor grain! The poor corn! They seem to be almost human. They seem to have their heads as though they do not want the water to spatter into their faces. "Poor things, poor things!" I say. But almost instantly a mighty chorus of protest sounds from the fields. "We are not poor things," they answer. "We are parched, and God has sent us this rain to quench our thirst. We are filthy, and God has sent us this shower bath to cleanse us. We would die of hunger, but God, by this rain, has swelled the brooks until they come leaping down the mountain sides to irrigate the valleys that our food may be moistened so that our roots can suck it up. God has sent us this atmospheric disorder that we may grow strong and feed a hungry world. The rain is just as essential to our lives as the sunbeam." Wonderful and true answer that. When I tramped home I did not find fault with my wet garments. I knew that the rain, as truly as the sunshine, was sent as a messenger of divine love. "Where no oxen are, the crib is clean, but much increase is by the strength of the ox." Do you not grasp the sublime proverb as applied to the physical or natural life?

But we can have "a stagnating cosmos" in our mental life as well as in our physical or lower entities. The man who physically basks under the summer sun, who never wishes to do any manual labor, who always sits down in preference to standing up and rides instead of walks; the man who never takes any more active exercise than walking upstairs to his bed and who never feels the exhilaration of a pedestrian expanding his chest against the beating winds, either becomes a physical degenerate or is foolishly signaling his own death warrant. On the other hand, the man who simply allows his brain to lie fallow, who never develops his mind, who never studies, who never struggles up the mountain heights of thought, as the Alpine climber pants and pushes and pulls himself up the crags of the Matterhorn, is a man who becomes a mental degenerate. It is only by work, only by discouragements, only by shutting the teeth and bracing the will and pushing ahead, that the chaotic conditions of the mental realm can be evolved into the harmonies of a mental cosmos.

The Development of the Mind.
John Ruskin once beautifully described the development of the mind. "Your minds," he wrote, "are endowed with a vast number of gifts for totally different uses—limbs of mind which if you do not exercise you cripple. One is curiosity—that is a gift, a capacity of pleasure in knowing, which if you neglect you make yourself cold and dull. Another is sympathy—the power of showing the feelings of living creatures, which if you destroy you make yourself hard and cruel. Another of your gifts is admiration—the power of enjoying beauty or ingenuity, which if you destroy you make yourself base and irreverent. Another is wit—the power of playing with the lights of the many sides of truth, which if you destroy you make yourself gloomy and dull to others. In choosing your way of work it should be your aim as far as possible to bring out all these faculties—not one merely, but all of them. The way to bring them out is to concern yourself earnestly with each faculty. To cultivate sympathy you must be with living creatures and thinking about them. To cultivate admiration you must be among beautiful things and looking at them." But some people have "a stagnating mental cosmos." They are never willing to read. They are never willing to study. They care nothing about the great wide world and its doings. They literally would not go across the street to see the most beautiful picture ever painted or hear the most exquisite harmonies ever sung, while on the other hand some men are never satisfied with their present mental condition. They are always reaching up and reaching out. They will go to any trouble to learn. No work for them is too difficult if they can only improve themselves and learn something new.

"That that boy!" the farmer says. "He is not worth two pinches of salt. I can never make a man out of him. He is always idling his time away with some study. I send him down into the fields to plow, and as soon as dinner time comes he opens his tin pail and looks at the same time and then begins to read. Then he forgets everything but his book. I am just as liable to find him there reading an hour later as not." No, farmer, you will never make a man out of that boy if your definition of a man is to be hedged in by a cabbage patch. That boy has higher visions of life than planting corn. He is dreaming. He is looking ahead to the time when, as a minister of the gospel, he shall save men for Christ, or when as a physician he can relieve the pain of the fevered brow, or when as a lawyer he can defend an innocent man in the clutches of the law. Through the disorder of a corn-crib he sees the work which God is calling him to take up.

Not a Loner.
"You miserable, lazy loafer!" cried the peasant's angry wife to the stranger brooding at her fireside. "Did I not tell thee I would give thee thy dinner if thou wouldst watch that it did not get burned? Now by thy negligence thou hast spoiled everything." "Tis true that the man who was sitting by the peasant's fire had neglected the task the peasant's wife set him to do, but was he a lazy, contemptible loafer? That man was the fugitive king of the English throne. That man was Alfred the Great. He may have been blind to the operation of the peasant's fire, but those smoldering embers suggested the dream of the flame of liberty he was soon to ignite. He was dreaming, like Moses, of the people he was to lead and the country he was to rule and the mighty kingdom he was to establish, which would be a refuge to all the downtrodden who would come to his shores. Do not grumble, O wife, because thy husband's thoughts are sometimes winging their flight a thousand miles away. Do not complain, O mother, because that daughter is neglectful of the little things when she is reaching up for the higher. When Cardinal Richelieu told the great Cardinal de Retz that for three years he had done all his writing with one pen and the pen was still as good as new, Cardinal de Retz came to the conclusion that his brother cardinal was a man of very small mental caliber. My friends, in your mental life live for something higher than the point of a pen. Struggle, strive, push. Turn, if necessary, your study into a very bedlam of confusion. By thy upheavals seek for a new mental cosmos. Remember the broad sweep of the Solomon proverb, "Where no oxen are, the crib is clean, but much increase is by the strength of the ox."

It is only the ignorant, the stupid, the selfish, the stagnating mind, that is satisfied with its present conditions. Progress is not like a swamp, with fetid air and surface of slime. There everything is still and quiet. True mental progress is like the commotion and disordered waters of a brook. There the waters are pure and sweet, because one moment they are tumbling over a cascade, the next they are being dashed into foam against some boulder, and the next they are as a waterfall leaping over some cliff. They are never still. They are always moving, always readjusting themselves to new conditions.

As I note the restless commotions of the individual mind, so I note also the restless conditions of the social world and the conflict of the classes against the masses. The socialistic upheavals of the present time are not a sign that our present governmental life is to be destroyed. They are a sign, and a sure sign, that out of these upheavals there shall come forth a better truth, a better honesty, a purer social life. How many wrongs there are to be righted on both sides! Capital, with its vast resources and machinery, frequently has more mercy upon its iron and steel bars and its leather bands and its huge pile drivers than upon the bone and sinew and muscle of its workmen. Capital does not say to itself, "How much can I make these goods for and sell them at a fair rate of profit, that the people may buy them the cheapest and yet I get a fair return for my money?" No, Capital does not say that. Capital says, "How can I make these goods the cheapest and sell them the dearest? How can I decrease my expenses at home and yet sell at the maximum price the needy people will pay?" Ah, there is something commercially wrong about such a condition as that. Capital, by her own actions, stands as a confessed usurer and extortioner. Her motto often is, "Squeeze the last drop of blood out of the people. Do not run a business for a fair competence, but run it to get every cent of profit out of the human race that we can."

Sins of Capital and Labor.
On the other hand, Labor is just as cruel and selfish an extortioner as Capital when she gets the chance. In a famous bookstore of Chicago there was one corner which went by the name of "Saints and Sinners." Books of all creeds were placed there side by side. There infidel and atheist and minister would sometimes meet for a quiet chat in a Monday symposium. But in the social world, taken as a whole, there are no "saints." Too often we find both Capital and Labor robed in the black garments of selfishness instead of the white robes of altruism. Their motto becomes, not "Live and let live," but "Live ourselves and get all we can at the other man's expense." Of course I am not now talking of the capitalist and the laborer as individuals.

Yes, Capital today cannot be proud of her past record. She has a heart of stone. Neither has labor today anything to be proud of in her past actions. She has an adamant heart of selfishness and greed. But when I look upon the struggles of these two mighty social factors I am not a pessimist, for in the social storms, in the strikes and reformations, in the blows, which are now falling thick and fast, in the wars and rumors of wars, in the universal social disorder, I see a bright day coming. Peace and prosperity and universal brotherhood shall yet be evolved out of the present social chaos. No "stagnating social cosmos" is here. All these social upheavals are only rainbow signs in the heavens that the social wars shall soon cease. "Where no oxen are, the crib is clean, but much increase is by the strength of the ox."

What is true of the mental, physical and social realms is emphatically true of the spiritual life. It is not by a life of spiritual ease that we are going to receive God's true messages. It is only by struggle, only by prayer, only by agony, only by wrestling, as Jacob wrestled with the angelic messenger through the long, dark night, that Christ reveals his face to us in the "beauty of holiness." We must do as Jesus did. We must spend forty long days in the wilderness before we can come to our true spiritual cosmos and walk hand in hand with God.

I was never more impressed with this thought than some time ago when I was reading "The History of a Preacher's Life," by Dr. Rainsford, late rector of St. George's Episcopal church of New York city. Dr. Rainsford had been preaching the gospel for many years. He was at that time one of the most prominent preachers of Canada. Suddenly there came a time when his old theology was passing away. He could not see things as he once saw them. Try as he would, he could not see them with the old eyes. Like Samson, he seemed to be shorn of his strength. His audiences left him. His power seemed to be gone. But he kept bravely on in his spiritual struggle. He prayed. Oh, how earnestly he prayed! Then one day the new light came. He was praying in his study and reading the parable of the prodigal son when the new gospel truth dawned upon him. He said: "That prodigal son went away from God, but he never ceased to be a son of his Divine Father. Some of us may wander far, far away, but we are all God's children. He never ceases to love us. He is ready to receive and forgive all of us if we only come back to the Divine Father's love." At once Dr. Rainsford's old faith was revived; the theological mysteries passed away; from the chaos, the disorder of his religious hopes, there came the cosmos of the faith of a simple child.

Friend, I would look into your eyes today. You are worried. You are like Martha, troubled about many things. But you are not like Mary's sister, worried about a heavenly feast. You are worried about your relationship to God. Oh, I thank Jesus today that you are worried. I thank God that your theological crib is disordered. You are miserable; you are distressed; you are anxious, but this is well. It is out of such distress that you come to eternal rest and peace. The danger is when a man is content with himself, when he is indifferent and untroubled. That is when the crib is clean. The way to happiness is through the turmoil that is hard to bear while it lasts, but afterward brings the peaceable fruit of righteousness. No "stagnating spiritual cosmos" is yours. Reach up. Reach on. In thy darkness keep on Scriptures. Keep on. Keep on.

RECORD-BREAKING ATTENDANCE.

Over Twenty-One Thousand People Visit the Central Carolina Fair Thursday—Crowds on Other Days Larger Than Usual.

Despite the cool weather the attendance at the Central Carolina Fair last week surpassed all previous records, taken by corresponding days of previous years and as a whole. For the first time in the history of the fair turnstiles were used at all the entrances and the exact number of admissions were readily determined. Thursday, the "big day," as it is commonly called, over 21,000 people passed through the gates, perhaps 5,000 more than the largest estimated attendance at any former fair. Street cars were crowded from early morning till late at night, collecting 15,279 fares, while the Southern Railway, with a train hauling twelve coaches regularly and eighteen during the rush hours, handled an equal or perhaps greater number. There were acres and acres of private vehicles in and about the grounds. Street carriages conveyed hundreds who sought to escape the crushes on the cars.

Excursion trains from neighboring towns and cities were crowded as never before. Our busy neighbor on the south, High Point, took a day off and sent up half its population, 5,000, while all schools, colleges and mills within a large radius likewise took a holiday and helped to swell the throng.

As we stated last week, the exhibits in every department surpassed in quality and quantity those of all previous fairs, and of course proved pleasing to all the visitors. The poultry exhibit was a whole show in itself, as was also the live stock department. One Rock Hill, S. C., firm, Parker & Miller, brought a car load of fine poultry to the fair, while two Rural Hall breeders, Messrs. Wolf and Bodenhamer, together brought another car. These with the exhibits sent by many nearby and local breeders made up a show that would attract attention anywhere. The South Carolina firm carried off the largest number of premiums. The experience this year in this department as well as others makes it evident that still greater facilities will have to be provided for exhibits.

The main building, always at a high standard, lacked nothing in the way of interesting features this year. The prizes awarded exhibitors for the most attractive booths follow in the order named: Huntley-Stockton Hill Co., Helms' Drug Store, Benefield Furniture Co., Young Women's Christian Association and The J. Van Lindley Nursery Co.

The Midway shows, refreshment booths, etc., were all well patronized during the week, while the racing and free attractions interested everyone. The absence of all gambling devices and objectionable fakirs was the source of much favorable comment. The management has demonstrated that a fair can be run successfully without these features, and the rule will hereafter be observed.

The automobile races, the sham battle, the good music, the good order and every other feature of the fair that contributed to the enjoyment of the fair patrons are worthy of special mention. All in all the fair of 1906 was a tremendous success, and the efforts of its energetic and capable promoters were rewarded in a way that will stimulate them to greater achievements next year.

Greensboro itself feels honored by the presence of so many interesting visitors and will welcome them all again at the first opportunity.

A Western Union lineman named W. H. Smith had a miraculous escape from death at the Southern depot Monday morning. While working near the top of a forty-foot pole he accidentally touched a heavily charged wire and fell, landing, however, on a street car that was standing in the back line. The car was one belonging to Mr. Chas. L. Corl. The driver, a colored man named Chavis, happened to be standing on the sidewalk nearby or he probably would have been badly injured if not killed, as the falling man landed in his seat. The top of the car was demolished, but Smith's injuries were so slight that he was able to resume work within fifteen minutes.

Mr. Geo. M. Hancock, of Manhattan, Nev., who had been here visiting his sisters, Mrs. W. M. Barber and Mrs. W. I. Underwood, left last Wednesday night for New York, where he spent a few days before starting home. His visit was highly appreciated, as neither of his sisters had seen him in over fifteen years.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dread disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.
