COLORED COLLEGE HAD MOST SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

The commencement of the A. & M. College for the colored race, in this city, which was held last week, marked the most successful year since the founding of the institution nearly a quarter of a century ago. From June 1, 1913, to May 31, 1914, there were 258 regular students and 174 summer school students. The college has one of the best faculties among similar institutions for negroes.

A number of improvements were made during the past year and others are planned for the coming year. There is in course of construction a greenhouse at the cost of $1,000 and a poultry plant which will have as its head an expert on poultry. The erection of an agricultural building is proposed.

The college is making progress along all lines. More productive work in the mechanical department was done last year than ever before, and it was done with student labor. The college is doing a splendid work among negro farmers in this state through the extension department of the agricultural department. It has inspired negro farmers to greater activities along modern lines and the result is a formation on the part of negro farmers of a farmers' union. It has caused a remarkable appreciation on the part of negro farmers throughout the state for the conservation of everything making for the betterment of agricultural endeavors. This is done through its farmers' institutes which it holds annually. The college sends out lecturers from its faculty to give to the farmers practical talks at various times.

OVER 900 PERSONS DROWNED

STEAMER BOUND FOR EUROPE RAMMED AND SINKS IN ST. LAWRENCE RIVER.

The Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Ireland, bound from Quebec for Liverpool, sank early Friday morning near the mouth of the St. Lawrence river and 934 of the 1,367 persons on board were drowned. The steamer, which was lying to waiting for the fog to lift or day to break, was rammed by the Danish collier Storstad. The collier crashed into the side of the big Canadian liner, striking her about midway of her length and ripping her side open clear to the stern.

The accident occurred about 150 miles from Quebec and not far from the shore, and although the liner was heading for the sea and the collier coming in from it, the disaster was not one of the ocean but of the river. Unlike the Titanic's victims, the Empress of Ireland's lost their lives within sight of shore—in landlocked waters.

A wireless "S. O. S." call was sounded and the hurried appeal was picked up by two Canadian government vessels that went to the rescue. So deep was the hurt of the Empress, however, and so fast the inrush of waters, that long before either of the rescue boats could reach the scene the liner had gone down. Only floating wreckage and a few lifeboats and rafts from the steamer, buoying up less than a third of those who had set sail on her, were to be found. The rest had sunk with the liner, had been crushed to death in the Storstad's impact with her, or had been forced from exposure in the ice-chilled waters to loose their hold on bits of wreckage and had drowned.

Only a few persons were picked up by the Storstad, which was badly crippled herself. Twenty-two of the rescued died from injury or exposure.

Accounts agree that in the brief space of time—not more than 14 minutes—between the shock of the collision and the sinking of the liner there was little chance for systematic marshaling of the passengers. Indeed, everything indicates that hundreds of those on the steamer probably never reached the decks. Few women were among the saved, not more than a dozen, the lists make it appear.

"It all happened so quickly we did not really know what was going on and nobody had time to cry 'Women first,'" one of the passengers told Captain Bellingier, of the rescue boat Eureka.

The horror of the interval during the time the Empress was filling and the frightened throngs on board her were hurrying every effort to escape before she sank was added to by an explosion which quickly followed the ripping given the liner by the Storstad's bow. According to one of the rescued, the explosion probably was caused by the water reaching the boilers, bulged the liner's sides and catapulted persons from her decks out into the sea. The ship's heavy list as water pouring in weighted her on the side she was struck made the work of launching boats increasingly difficult, and when she finally took her plunge to the bottom scores still left on her decks were carried down, only a few being able to clear her sides and find support on wreckage.

It was a little over two years ago—on April 15, 1912, that the Titanic, of the White Star line, struck an iceberg and was sunk, 1,517 lives being lost.

Defaulter Hayes Arrested.

H. A. Hayes, formerly superintendent of the Methodist children's home, in Winston-Salem, who is wanted for embezzling funds from the institution, was arrested in Chicago a few days ago and will be brought back to Winston-Salem this week. Hayes embezzled several thousand dollars from the children's home, but escaped prosecution at the time on the plea of insanity. He was placed in a private sanitarium in Morganton, but soon escaped and nothing more was heard of him until a few weeks ago, when it was learned that he was traveling in the West for a school book publishing house.

LOWER CALIFORNIA AN INHOSPITABLE COUNTRY.

Lower California, Mexico's isolated peninsula, the coast of which the Pacific fleet of the United States is now patrolling, is one of least-known territories in North America. The following facts concerning this arm of land, which projects about 800 miles southeasterly from the southern border of California, have been given out by the National Geographic Society:

The width of the peninsula varies from about 30 to more than 100 miles, and its irregular coastline, more than 2,000 miles long, is bordered by numerous islands. Being mainly a mountan-ous, desert region, it is thinly peopled and presents many sharply contrasting conditions. Low sun-scorched plains, where death by thirst awaits the traveler, lie close to the bases of towering granite peaks belted by forests and capped in winter by snow;
desolate plateaus of black lava look down on valleys seamed with green-bordered streams.

At the time of its discovery in 1533
by an expedition sent out by Cortes in search of a fabulously rich island, it is estimated to have been inhabited by 25,000 Indians, who vigorously resented the intrusion and prevented the newcomers from getting a foothold for more than a century. The Jesuits then came in and were wonderfully successful in exploring the peninsula and establishing missions. They established three main trails, one along each coast and the third down the middle, which serve as the regular routes of travel today. The Indians have vanished from all parts of their former territory, except a few in the extreme northern end.

During the last half-century all parts of the territory have been visited, mainly by Americans in search of mines and other natural resources, but little of the knowledge gained has become available to the public. Gold, silver, copper, iron and other minerals and much fertile land have been found,
but the scarcity of water, fuel, forage and the difficulties of transportation have united with other causes to bring about failure to develop the resources.

The peninsula is thinly peopled,
and enormous areas remain uninhabited.
The most populous section is the region south of La Paz, where rains are more regular than further north. A few small towns and widely scattered communities along the coast, with a limited number of villages, ranches and miners' camps in the interior, cover the population. Lower California has a territorial form of government, and owing to its great length is divided near the middle into a northern and a southern district, Ensenada and La Paz being the capitals.

CHURCHES PUT BAN ON LIQUOR AND TOBACCO.

The general assemblies of the two great Presbyterian churches in the United States were in session last week—the Northern in Chicago and the Southern in Kansas City. Both bodies took advanced positions in church legislation.

The Northern General Assembly adopted a resolution calling upon all members of that church to resign from social clubs where alcoholic beverages are sold to the members of the club or to others. "This resolution means," said Prof. Scanlon, general secretary of the board of temperance of the Presbyterian church, "that the authorities of all Presbyterian churches are empowered to make a church member resign from his liquor selling clubs or leave the church."

The Southern General Assembly followed the lead of the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and went on record as being opposed to the use of tobacco among clergymen, candidates for the ministry and church officials.

Another resolution provides that all the colleges of the Southern Presbyterian Church must have an endowment of at least $100,000 each and an annual income of $12,000 to strengthen the institutions.

Members of the church were urged to increase the salaries of ministers.
The Southern General Assembly
will meet next in Newport News, Va., May 20, 1915.

Negroes Outstripping Whites.

Philadelphia Record.
Many South Carolinians feel justly alarmed because great numbers of white children are growing up in illiteracy, while the negroes are turning to the schools in rapidly increasing numbers. In the town of Florence, for instance, the number of white children has increased in four years from 755 to 1,020, while the colored attendance has jumped up from 420 to 1,030.
"Negroes," it is said, "don't need any compulsion to send their children to school; many white parents do. The result is that many white children are growing up illiterate." The remedy suggested is compulsory education;
but the politicians balk at this. The natural consequence is Bleasism, which could only flourish in an ignorant electorate.

The New York Herald says there are signs on every side that the period of retrenchment, economy, doubt and gloom has ended and that the country is about to enter upon an era of expansion and prosperity.

The prime factors in this are the assurance of continued easy money and the prospect of record-breaking crops. If the decision of the interstate commerce commission gives the railways the long-awaited advance in rates this will hasten the pace of the procession which has already started its forward march.

What are the evidences of this?
Well, bank clearings are larger than a year ago, although prices of the commodities exchanged are lower—an evidence of increased volume of business.
The same story is told by recent comparative increase in the earnings of a number of the railways. Pittsburgh tells of greater purchases of basic pig iron—the inevitable forerunner of greater demand for finished steel products. Fall River notes an improved inquiry for cotton textiles. And so runs the better feeling through the whole cycle of industries.

As a result of the hand-to-mouth policy that has long governed the buying of consumers from the largest corporation to the humblest individual supplies of commodities are at the lowest ebb. The markets for securities as well as those for commodities have been liquidated. Weak spots have been uncovered and eliminated and the business of the country is on rock bottom. With brilliant crop prospects and the initiation of a banking system that will insure continuance of easy credits, what is there to prevent a boom?

Predicts English Lynching Bee.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the famous English writer and author of the Sherlock Holmes detective stories, who is in the United States on a visit, thinks England has stood about all it can from the militant suffragettes and says
a wholesale lynching bee may be expected.

"The next thing that will happen to the English militants," said Sir Arthur, "will be a lynching. The public is well tired of their operations, and resentment will be shown by the mob hanging a few of the destructive wild women. The police on several occasions have had their hands full protecting the women. Public feeling has reached the straining point and I expect to hear of a lynching almost any day."

"The English government," he said,
"follows public opinion, and thus far public opinion has not demanded the entire suppression of the suffragette.
But it is on the point of doing so, and when the English mob is thoroughly aroused, it is not a respecter of sex."

Huerta Obtains War Munitions.

Huerta has finally succeeded in obtaining for his forces several million rounds of ammunition and a large consignment of machine guns and rifles.
The Hamburg-American steamship Ypiranga and Bararia landed these cargoes of munitions at Puerto, Mexico. It is the identical cargo that the United States held up through the seizure of Vera Cruz. In fact, the decision of the administration to move suddenly against Vera Cruz was reached so-ly because of the fact that the Ypiranga was about to land this big consig-ment of war supplies. Thus five weeks after Vera Cruz was taken at a considerable sacrifice of American life, the very arms and ammunition which were immediately responsible for the American invasion have been landed without any opposition from the United States.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY'S 1914 TEXTILE DIRECTORY.

An increase for the year of 10,702 looms and 619,964 spindles is shown in the 1914 edition of the textile directory giving cotton, woolen and knitting mills on the lines of the Southern Railway, Southern Railway in Mississippi, Mobile and Ohio Railroad, Georgia Southern and Florida Railway and Virginia and Southwestern Railway with their equipment on January 1, 1914, which has just been issued by the land and industrial department of these roads.

The directory contains a list of all mills, their equipment, the power under which they are operated and kind of goods manufactured. It shows that along these lines there are 616 cotton mills, 143 knitting mills and 31 woolen mills, a grand total of 790 textile plants of this character. These mills have a total equipment of 208,744 looms and 9,369,634 spindles. Eight new mills were put in operation during 1913. These figures do not include mills under construction or improvements not ready for operation January 1.

In addition to the information about the mills, the directory contains a map of the Southern Railway system and schedules of the daily cotton goods trains operated over the Southern Railway in connection with other lines.

Merchant Marine Badly Needed.

In addressing the delegates to the National Foreign Trade Convention in Washington Thursday, President Wilson declared that a merchant marine is one of the chief needs of the United States. "There is nothing in which I am more interested than the fullest development of the trade of this country and its righteous conquest of foreign markets," said he. "I think you will realize that it is one of the things that we hold nearest to our hearts that the government and you should cooperate in the most intimate manner in accomplishing our common object."

"I am sure that I speak the conviction of all of you when I say that one of our chief needs is to have a merchant marine, because if we have to deliver our goods in other people's delivery wagons their goods are delivered first and ours are delivered incidentally on their routes. This is a matter I have had near my own heart
for a great many years."

UNCLE SAM'S 1,000 MILE RAILROAD TO OPEN UP

Its Vast Resources Barely Touched Since Purchase Half a Century Ago.

ALASKA.

Land of great volcanic mountains, forest with gold and silver ore, fish streams and lofty fountains, wealth within its core.
Land of copper, coal and timber, oil and gas and marble fine.
Fur and fish and moose and reindeer, the richest of the Arctic line.
Land of wheat, oats and turnips, and potatoes dry and sweet,
Wheat, corn, white and luscious, and the largest sugar beet.
Land of love and love and valor, through the mountain and mine and sea,
Where the Yankee nation labors to prosper its destiny.
—Washington Post.

THAT Alaska is to have a railroad built, maintained and operated by the government, and, as a result, that the vast resources of that country are to be opened to the world, is assured by the action of both houses of congress in passing the Alaska railway bill, which was approved by President Wilson.

STREET SCENE AT ST. MICHAEL.

ment, and it is the expectation that this land will be opened. The opening of mines in Alaska, together with the building of a railroad and the opening of the Panama canal, it is estimated, will save the government from $3 to $5 a ton on its coal burned in the Pacific. Alaska itself now buys coal from British Columbia.

MILE RAILROAD RICHES OF ALASKA

Big Engineering Problem In $35,000,000 Government Ownership Project.

Alaska is said to have more copper than Michigan and Arizona, more gold than Wales and more fish than all other American waters combined. The area of its tillable land has been variously estimated at from 2,000,000 to 9,700,000 acres.

The original purchase price of Alaska about half a century ago was $7,200,000. The government has spent all told on account of Alaska $35,816,674. The production in this territory from 1867 to 1911 was $129,423,630. Revenues of one kind or another paid into the federal treasury during this period aggregated $17,117,354. Since 1911 the value of Alaskan products has increased sufficiently to make the total more than a half billion dollars.

A Great Undertaking.

The federal railway measure authorizes the construction of a thousand miles of railroad to connect Alaska's coal fields with the coast, the route to be selected by the president, to whom are also left many other important details. An appropriation of $35,000,000 is authorized for this purpose. The appropriation as the bill passed the senate was $40,000,000.

The project, says the New York Post, is of more interest than even the expenditure of the vast sum proposed would ordinarily create. Coming soon after the completion of the Panama canal, it is attracting attention as another great engineering project under the direction of the American government. In a sense, too, it compares with the government's undertaking in the sixties to push the Pacific railway across the unbroken prairies and mountains of the west and thus link together the west and the east.

Moreover, the new project is to be the first test in this country of government ownership of a public utility. It is expected to open to the commerce of the world great resources that until now have been for the most part lying idle; it will afford employment to a large army of men both in its construction and in its maintenance; it will develop Alaska agriculturally as well as in other ways by attracting homesteaders, and it is expected greatly to cheapen various commodities of commerce, notably coal.

President to Boss the Job.

The bill places great power in the hands of the president. It directs him to locate and acquire, by purchase or construction or by both means, a line or lines of railroads from tidewater into the interior of Alaska and to navigation on the Yukon, Tanana or Kuskokwim rivers. In choosing the route he is to use his judgment as to what will best promote the settlement of Alaska, develop its resources and provide adequate transportation for coal for the army and navy, for troops and munitions of war and for the mails.

The Alaskan railroad commission found that the best plan for railroad construction in Alaska would be to send a line from Cordova due north for 400 miles to Fairbanks, on the Tanana river, in the heart of a wide, sweeping valley that would hold half a dozen conventional states back home. A second railroad, beginning at Seward, would penetrate the region to the northwest as far as the Yukon river, would tap additional coal fields and would awake the echoes on great, solitary plains that have seldom heard any of the noises of civilization, but which may some time be converted into an unbroken expanse of wheat fields. Each of these routes would connect with the great navigable rivers of the interior which are open to trade for three months in each year, and whose waters flow far north and empty into the Bering sea.

The president is authorized, if he sees fit, to permit the government railroad to be operated by contract or lease, or it may be operated by the Panama Railroad company. This company has been referred to in the debates on the Alaska railroad bill as an example of successful government ownership, but it has been pointed out in reply that it is not an example of government ownership in the sense in which the phrase is generally used, because it is not a commercial railroad, its purpose being to transport men and supplies being used up and down the route of the Panama canal.

In constructing and operating the Alaskan railroad the president is authorized to employ in its construction and operation any number of men he may think necessary, choosing them as he pleases, only that those chosen from civil life shall be under the supervision, in the work of construction, of the engineers taken from the army. The appointment of any engineer from civil life whose salary exceeds $3,000 a year must be confirmed by the senate.

The interstate commerce commission, subject to the approval of the president, is empowered to regulate passenger and freight rates on the new railroad, and the rates are to be uniform, with no discrimination in favor of agents of the government except the usual provision for employees and their families. If the railroad line connects with a steamship line for the joint transportation of freight and passengers or with any other railroad now or hereafter constructed in Alaska the lines so connected must be operated as a through route with through rates on a fair and reasonable apportionment of revenue and expense.

Officials of the department of the interior, who will have supervision of the work, are prepared to go ahead with the plans for constructing the first railroad built by the government. Secretary Lane, who has ardently championed the proposed road to develop the great natural resources of Alaska, had already considered tentative plans for the project.

A Neglected Treasure Land.

"The largest body of unused and neglected land in the United States is Alaska," said Secretary Lane in his first annual report. "For almost a generation it was the rich harvest field of a single company. Individual fortunes have been made in that country larger than the price paid to Russia for the whole territory. Its mines, fisheries and furs alone have added to our wealth the grand sum of $500,000,000."

"Yet the one constructive thing done by this government on behalf of Alaska in nearly half a century was the importation of reindeer for the benefit of the Eskimos on the border of the Arctic ocean. For the white man we have done nothing. I have thought that perhaps the scandals that developed in Alaska have been in some part the result of a feeling that it was no man's land, where the primal instincts and powers were the only law."

To show how meager is the present development of the territory the native population is only 15,000 and the white population about 50,000. These are summer figures. The number of whites is about half that in winter.

Present Railroad Service.

In this territory, one-fifth the size of the United States, there are only 496 miles of railways.

The Copper River and Northwestern railway is only 196 miles long, but it takes two days to traverse its full length. It cost $20,000,000 to build. It runs from Cordova, on Prince William sound, to the Bonanza copper mines at Kennecott. For 100 miles the line runs up the Copper river, between mountain walls broken only by glaciers. Snowslides come down frequently, interrupting traffic and necessitating long lines of snowsheds. In the summer time icebergs break from the glaciers and carry out bridges, and the melting of the glaciers swells the rivers and floods the tracks. Once away from the coast the construction would not be so difficult.

Yet glaciers and railway tracks are considered the "easiest" routes of travel in that difficult land. Rates for passengers on the railway are 15 cents per mile and the trains run only weekly or biweekly.

A Railroad to "Nowhere."

The Alaska Northern railway, from Seward to Cook inlet, is only seventy-two miles long, and literally runs to "nowhere." The interests which set out to construct it through to the valuable Matanuska coal fields were halted by the obstacles placed in the way by nature. It costs 20 cents a mile to ride on it.

Of the White Pass and Yukon railway only eighteen miles lie in United States territory. It runs 200 miles from Skagway, in southeast Alaska, to White Horse. There are only a couple of other lines in the country, at Nome and Fairbanks. Both are very short.

But while the need for railways is urgent, so great are the difficulties of construction because of the glaciers, the bogs, the floods and other obstacles which nature has placed in the way that it is doubtful if private capital would have ventured further in railway construction there.

Casus Belli.

"Why do they hate each other so?" "They are rivals." "Oh, both trying to marry the same girl, eh? That sort of thing certainly does arouse man's primal passions." "In this case it is worse than that. They are both trying to marry the same fortune."—Houston Post.

THE WILSON WAY.

Through a statement issued from the White House Thursday, President Wilson again assured the business world that, in its program of business reform legislation, the administration would proceed "moderately and soberly," which might be termed the Wilson way. The statement was occasioned by the visit of a delegation of Illinois business men, who asked the president that all legislation affecting business, except the trade commission, be withheld until a trade commission could look thoroughly into the business situation. The president told his visitors that, in his judgment, nothing was more dangerous for business than uncertainty; that it had become evident through a long series of years that a policy such as the Democratic party was now pursuing was absolutely necessary to satisfy the conscience of the country and its perception of the prevailing conditions of business; and that it was a great deal better to do the thing moderately and soberly now than to wait until more radical forces had accumulated and it was necessary to go much further.

The president urged upon his callers the necessity of patriotic co-operation on the part of the business men of the country, in order to support rather than to oppose the moderate processes of reform, and to help guide them by their own intimate knowledge of business conditions and processes. The conservative business element of the country accepts Mr. Wilson's statement that it is his earnest desire to serve and not to hinder or injure business, and we believe events will prove that the course he is pursuing is the wise and serviceable course.

ROOSEVELT TO SHOW 'EM.

Word comes from Washington that Col. Theodore Roosevelt, principal owner and managing director of the Progressive party, will entertain no proposition looking to an amalgamation of the Republican and Progressive parties until after the congressional election next fall. Before such a fusion may be negotiated the Bull Moose leader expects to administer another decisive defeat to the Republican "old guard" and in that stroke convince the rank and file of the old organization that success at the polls can be achieved only through him. This is the word the Progressive captains and lieutenants have received from their general, and it is upon this basis that they expect to go into the fight. They no more expect to win in their own name this year than they expected to win two years ago. They do expect, however, to contribute to a smashing defeat of the Republican candidates and thereby profit almost as much as if their own instead of the Democratic candidates received the pluralities. In either event the Republican banner would trail in the dust. In carrying out this program the Progressives will put a candidate in the field in every doubtful state that elects a senator and have candidates for the house in most of the districts in the East and West. They will not again invade the South.

The long-awaited vote on the Panama canal tolls exemption repeal bill is expected to be taken in the senate this week and the measure will be passed by a safe majority. The leaders on both sides are agreed that there is no need for prolonging the debate beyond this week.

The state Democratic convention to meet in Raleigh Thursday promises to be a brief and quiet affair. Aside from adopting a platform, the convention will have only to renominate United States Senator Overman and Corporation Commissioner Travis to succeed themselves and ratify the nomination of Superior court judges in ten districts.

The tenth district Democratic congressional convention, which met in Waynesville Friday afternoon to nominate a candidate for Congress, is in a deadlock. After taking 318 ballots, the convention adjourned at midnight Saturday until this afternoon, when the contest will be renewed. The two leading candidates are Congressman Gaudier and R. R. Reynolds.

The Philadelphia Record's Popularity.

Ask a dozen readers of the Philadelphia Record why they prefer it to any other newspaper and you'll get a dozen different answers. It is the favorite of each because it is strongest in the particular news field which especially interests him. Boil down the answers and you'll find a consensus of opinion that it's a well balanced, all-around newspaper, covering with exceptional fairness and accuracy every field of human activity.

The Philadelphia Record rides no hobbies and plays no favorites. It gives all the news for just what it is worth. It steers clear of sensationalism. It is clean and wholesome. Its sporting department is a tower of strength. Its financial reports are authoritative. Producers swear by its market quotations. Its editorial policies command respect and confidence. Its good-natured cartoons invariably hit off the leading topics of the day. Good judges deem De Mar the best cartoonist in the country.

The same reasons which make the daily issue of the Philadelphia Record a favorite have popularized the Sunday issue. The Sunday Record includes, besides the usual daily features, a live magazine section devoted to women's interests, science and invention, the entertainment of the little folks, special articles of news interest, and humor. There is also a four-page section of colored comics and a weekly fiction magazine.

The daily issue and the Sunday issue of the Philadelphia Record, appealing as they do to every member of the family, are leaders in their respective fields, and deserve the popularity they have achieved.

Matters of Interest Reported by Our Corps of Correspondents.

DEEP RIVER CHURCH.

Last Sunday was young people's day at Deep River. There was a good crowd present and the exercises were enjoyed very much.

Mrs. Willie Lane and niece, Miss Lena Lane, of Greensboro, were the guests of Mrs. J. M. Foster and family Sunday night and Sunday.

Mr. Ed. Woodin and sister, Miss Maud Woodin, and Mr. Rankin Smith, of Oxford, visited friends here Sunday and attended services at Deep River.

It is very dry and farm work is almost at a standstill. Very little tobacco has been planted and corn is coming up badly.

IN MEMORIAM.

Margaret Emma Coble.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Coble was made intensely sad when the departed entered on May 24, at 11 p. m., and claimed their little daughter, Margaret Emma. She leaves a father, mother and little brother to mourn their loss. Margaret was a sweet child, and was loved by all who knew her. We can't see why one so young was taken, but "some time we'll understand."

The home will, of course, miss her most of all, but her friends and playmates will miss her, for she always greeted them with a smile and a warm welcome. The voice we loved to hear, and that was so sweet is now still, and the little feet will not be heard, and her little chair is now vacant.

We feel especially bereaved in her death, and we extend to the grief-stricken family our sincere sympathy.

Always Leads to Better Health.

Serious sicknesses start in disorders of the stomach, liver and kidneys. The best corrective and preventive is Dr. King's New Life Pills. They purify the blood—prevent constipation, keep your bowels in healthy condition. Give you better health by making the system of fermenting and passing foods. Effective and mild. 25 cents at your druggist. Bucklen's Arnica Salve for all cuts.

Dr. J. F. Venable has tendered his resignation as president of the University of North Carolina and the matter will be acted on at a meeting of the board of trustees tomorrow. Dr. Venable has been away for a year on a European tour and sent his resignation from London. It is probable that Dr. Edwin K. Graham, the acting president of the university, will be elected to succeed Dr. Venable. Dr. Graham succeeded Dr. Edwin A. Alderman as president of the university in 1909 and it is understood that he will remain with the institution as a member of the faculty.

Don't Lose Sleep Coughing at Night.

Take Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. The very first dose surprises you. It glides down your throat and spreads a healing, soothing coating over the inflamed, tickling surface. That's immediate relief. It loosens up the tightness in your chest, stops stuffy wheezy breathing, eases distressing, racking, tearing coughs, soothes the irritated, inflamed bronchial tubes and air passages. Children love it. It is mild, laxative—as a cough medicine should be—and does not upset or distress the most sensitive stomach. Refuse any substitute. Contains no opiates. Conyers & Sykes, adv.

While attempting to escape from the convict camp in Gaston county, Clarence Hunt, a young white man, whose home was in Cleveland county, was drowned in the Catawba river.

The North Carolina Supreme court has finished its work for the spring term of 1914 and adjourned for the summer. There will be no more decisions until early in September.

Palmer Patterson, a white man wanted in Yancey county on the charge of the murder of Bob McKay in 1911, was arrested in Shelby a few days ago by the sheriff of Cleveland county. There was a reward of $200 for his capture.

The annual meeting of the Scottish Society of America was held in Fayetteville Thursday and was attended by a big crowd. The principal address was delivered by Dr. J. A. McDonald, of Toronto, Canada, editor of the Toronto Globe.

Press of official business prevented Secretary of State Bryan from keeping his engagement to make a speech at the home-coming celebration in Newbern Saturday. His place on the program was filled by Congressman Richmond Pearson Hobson.

The members of the Durham Ministerial Association have resolved not to support any candidate for the legislature who will not promise in advance to vote for and use his influence to secure the passage of the bill to prohibit the delivery of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes in any part of the state of North Carolina.

Congressman Yates Webb, of the ninth North Carolina district, has been formally elected chairman of the house judiciary committee to succeed Hon. Henry D. Clayton, of Alabama, who resigned from Congress to accept an appointment as federal judge.

Hayden Clement, of Salisbury, is the Democratic nominee for solicitor of the fifteenth judicial district. He was appointed solicitor by Governor Craig to succeed W. C. Hammer, of Asheville, when the latter was appointed United States attorney for the western district of North Carolina.

Governor Craig has granted a reprieve of 30 days in the case of Robinson Rogers, town marshal, and Waldo McCracken, of Haywood county, under sentences of 18 months each for manslaughter for killing a man they were attempting to arrest without a warrant at Clyde, Haywood county. The Supreme court has affirmed the sentence and an attempt will be made to procure a pardon.

Bishop James Atkins, of Waynesville, has been selected by the college of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as member of that body to make the episcopal visitation of the countries of the Far East, where the Methodist church maintains missions. The bishop, accompanied by Mrs. Atkins, will sail from Seattle about the middle of July and will visit China, Japan and Korea.

Col. P. M. Pearsall, a well known Democratic politician of the eastern part of the state, who a few months ago was appointed deputy clerk of the United States court at Newbern, has resigned the position. He says it interfered with his law practice, and he also objected to a ruling of the department of justice that court officials under this administration must not be active in partisan politics.

A granite boulder to mark the seat of government for four years of the colony of North Carolina was unveiled on historic Tower Hill, four miles from Kinston, Thursday. The marker was the gift of the North Carolina Society of the Colonial Dames of America, and its inscription relates that early in the eighteenth century Tower Hill was by act of the colonial assembly the capital of North Carolina.

Governor Craig, who was chairman of the Democratic progressive meeting recently held in Raleigh, has appointed Clarence Poe, of Raleigh; H. Q. Alexander, of Mecklenburg county; A. W. Graham, of Oxford; A. M. Scales, of Greensboro, and R. F. Bensley, of Monroe, a committee to present the progressive platform to the Democratic state convention, which meets in Raleigh Thursday.

At the commencement exercises at Salem Female Academy and College last week an honorary diploma was granted to Mrs. Stonewall Jackson, of Charlotte, widow of the famous Confederate commander, whose grand-niece, Miss Elizabeth McRee, was one of the graduates. Mrs. Jackson was present to receive the diploma. She was educated at Salem, completing her course in 1843, but at that time there were no graduating exercises and no diplomas.

Herman C. Smith, who recently was arrested charged with embezzling funds from the National Bank of Goldsboro and the Goldsboro Savings and Trust Company, was convicted Friday in Wayne Superior court and sentenced to the penitentiary for four years. Smith had been a trusted employee of the two banks for a number of years. The shortage, amounting to about $50,000, was made good by Geo. W. Norwood, president of the National Bank of Goldsboro.

Mrs. G. C. Hand, of Burgaw, who last week shot and killed her brother, George P. Jordan, has been released from jail under habeas corpus proceedings and will be allowed to remain at her home under guard until Wednesday, when she will be given a preliminary hearing. Mrs. Hand and her brother had been estranged for some time over the settlement of an estate, and the woman alleges that she shot her brother when he was attempting to enter her home by violence.

The Democratic executive committee of the third congressional district spent two or three days last week in Goldsboro canvassing the votes cast in the recent preferential primary for candidates for Congress and found that not one of the five candidates had received a majority. George E. Hood, of Goldsboro, leads, with ex-Congressman Charles R. Thomas, of Newbern, as a close second. Congressman Faison ran third. The contest will be settled in the congressional convention, which will meet in Goldsboro Wednesday.

The Hollow of Her Hand

For a long time he sat there in silence, looking out over the darkening water, unwilling, unable indeed, to speak. His heart was full of compassion for her, mingling strangely with what was left of scorn and horror. What could he say to her?

At last he turned to him. "Now you know all that I can tell you of Hetty Castleton—of Hetty Glynn. You could not have forced this from me, Brandon. She would not tell you. It was left for me to do in my own good time. Well, I have spoken. What have you to say?"

"I can only say, Sara, that I thank God for everything," he said slowly. "For everything?"

"I thank God for you, for her and for everything. I thank God that she found him out in time, that she killed him that you shielded her, that you failed to carry out your devilish scheme, and that your heart is very more today."

"You do not despise me?"
"No. I am sorry for you."
Her eyes narrowed. "I don't want you to feel sorry for me."

"You don't understand. I am sorry for you because you have found your self out and must be despising yourself."

"You have guessed the truth. I despise myself, but what could be expected of me?" she asked ironically. "As the Wendalls would say, 'blood will tell.'"

"Nonsense! Don't talk like that! It is quite unworthy of you. In spite of everything, Sara, you are wonderful. The very thing you tried to do, the way you went about it, the way you surrender, makes for greatness in you. If you had gone on with it and succeeded, that fact alone would have put you in the class with the great, strong, virile women of history. It—"

"With the Mediceas, the Borgias and—" she began bitterly. "Yes, with them. But they were great women, just the same. You are greater, for you have more than they possessed: a conscience. I wish I could tell you just what I feel. I haven't the words. I—"

"I only want you to tell me the truth. Do you despise me?"
"Again I say that I do not. I can only say that I regard you with—yes, with awe."

"As one might think of a deadly serpent."

"Hardly that," he said, smiling for the first time. He crossed over and laid his hand on her shoulder. "Don't think too meanly of yourself. I understood it all. You lived for months without a heart, that's all."

"You put it very gently."
"I think I am right. Now, you've got it back, and it's hungry for the sweet, good things of life. You want to be happy. You want to love again and to be loved. You don't want to pity. I understand. It's the return of a heart that went away long months ago and left an empty place that you filled with gall. The bitterness is gone. There is something sweet in its place. Am I not right?"

"She hesitated. "If you mean that I want to be loved by my enemies, Brandon, you are wrong," she said clearly. "I have not been chastened in that particular."

"You mean the Wendalls?"
"It is not in my nature to love my enemies. We stand on the same footing as before, and always shall. They understand me, I understand them. I am glad that my project failed, not for their sake, but for my own."

"He was silent. This woman was beyond him. He could not understand a nature like this."
"You say nothing. Well, I can't ask you to understand. We will not discuss my enemies, but my friends. What do you intend to do in respect to Hetty?"

"I am going to make her my wife," he said lightly.

"She turned away. It was now quite dark. He could not see the expression on her face."

"What you have heard does not weaken your love for her?"

"No. It strengthens it."

"You know what she has done. She has taken a life with her own hands. Can you take her to your bosom, can you make her the mother of your own children? Remember, there is blood on her hands."

"Ah, but her heart is clean!"
"True," she said moodily, "her heart is clean."

"No cleaner than yours is now, Sara."

"She uttered a short, mocking laugh. "It isn't necessary to say a thing like that to me."

"I beg your pardon."
Her manner changed abruptly. She turned to him, intense and serious.

"She is so far away, Brandon. On the other side of the world, and she is full of longing for me. How am I to regain what I have lost? How am

I to make her understand? She went away with that last ugly thought of me, with the thought of me as I appeared to her on that last, enlightening day. All these months it has been growing more horrible to her. It has been beside her all the time. All these months she has known that I pretended to love her as—"

"I don't believe you know Hetty as well as you think you do," he broke in. "You forget that she loved you with all her soul. You can't kill love so easily as all that. It will be all right, Sara. You must write and ask her to come back. It—"

"Ah, but you don't know!" Then she related the story of the liberated canary bird. "Hetty understands. The cage door is open. She may return when she chooses, but—don't you see?—she must come of her own free will."

"You will not ask her to come?"
"No. It is the test. She will know that I have told you everything. You will go to her. Then she may understand. If she forgives she will come back. There is nothing else to say, nothing else to consider."

"I shall go to her at once," he said resolutely.

She gave him a quick, searching glance.

"She may refuse to marry you, even now, Brandon."

"She can't!" he cried. An instant later his face fell. "By Jove, I— I suppose the law will have to be considered now. She will at least have to go through the form of a trial."

She whirled on him angrily. "The law? What has the law to do with it? Don't be a fool!"

"She ought to be legally exonerated," he said.

Her fingers gripped his arm fiercely. "I want you to understand one thing, Brandon. The story I have told you was for your ears alone. The secret lives with us and dies with us."

He looked his relief. "Right! It must go no farther. It is not a matter for the law to decide. You may trust me."

"I am cold," she said. He heard her teeth chatter distinctly as she pulled her thick mantle closer about her throat and shoulders. "It is very raw and wet down here. Come!"

As she started off along the long, narrow pier, he sprang after her, grasping her arm. She leaned rather heavily against him for a few steps and then drew herself up. Her teeth still chattered, her arm trembled in his clasp.

"By Jove, Sara, this is bad," he cried, in distress. "You're chilled to the marrow."

"Nerves," she retorted, and he somehow felt that her lips were set and drawn.

"You must get to bed right away. Hot bath, mustard, and all that. I'll

This Woman Was Beyond Him.

not stop for dinner. Thanks just the same. I will be over in the morning."

"When will you sail?" she asked, after a moment.

"I can't go for ten days, at least. My mother goes into the hospital next week for an operation, as I've told you. I can't leave until after that's over. Nothing serious, but—well, I can't go away. I shall write to Hetty tonight, and cable her tomorrow. By the way, I— I don't know just where to find her. You see, we were not to write to each other. It was in the bargain. I suppose you don't know how I can—"

"Yes, I can tell you precisely where she is. She is in Venice, but leaves there for Rome, by the Express."

"Then you have been hearing from her?" he cried sharply.

"Not directly. But I will say this much: there has not been a day since she landed in England that I have not received news of her. I have not been out of touch with her, Brandon, not even for an hour."

"Good heaven, Sara! You don't mean to say you've had her shadowed by—by detectives," he exclaimed, aghast.

"Her maid is a very faithful servant," was her ambiguous rejoinder.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Disturbing News.

He walked home swiftly through the early night, his brain seething with tumultuous thoughts. The revelations of the day were staggering; the whole universe seemed to have turned topsy-turvy since that devastating hour at Burton's inn. Somehow he was not able to confine his thoughts to Hetty Castleton alone. She seemed to sink into the background, despite the absorption he had been so ready, so eager to grant her on hearing the story from Sara's lips. Not that his resolve to search her out and claim her in spite of everything was likely to weaken, but that the absorbing figure of Sara Wendall stood out most clearly in his reflections.

What an amazing creature she was! He could not drive her out of his thoughts, even when he tried to concentrate them on the one person who was dearest to him of all in all the world, his warm-hearted, adorable Hetty. Strange contrasts suggested themselves to him as he strode along, head bent and shoulders hunched. He could not help contrasting the two women. He loved Hetty; he would always love her, of that he was positive. She was Sara's superior in every respect, infinitely so, he argued. And yet there was something in Sara that could crowd this adored one, this perfect one out of his thoughts for the time being. He found it difficult to concentrate his thoughts on Hetty Castleton.

How white and ill Sara had looked when she said good night to him at the door! The memory of her dark, mysterious eyes haunted him; he could see them in the night about him. They had been full of pain; there were torrents of tears behind them. They had glistened as if furnished by the fires of fever.

Even as he wrote his long, triumphant letter to Hetty Castleton, the picture of Sara Wendall encroached upon his mental vision. He could not drive it out. He thought of her as she had appeared to him early in the spring; through all the varying stages of their growing intimacy; through the interesting days when he vainly tried to translate her matchless beauty by means of wretched pigments; up to this present hour in which she was revealed, and yet not revealed, to him. Her vivid face was always before him, between his eyes and the thin, white paper on which he scribbled so eagerly. Her feverish eyes were looking into his; she was reading what he wrote before it appeared on the surface of the sheet!

His letter to Hetty was a triumph of skill and diplomacy, achieved after many attempts. He found it hard not to say too much, and quite as difficult not to say too little. He spent hours over this all-important missive. At last it was finished. He read and reread it, searching for the slightest flaw: a fatal word or suggestion that might create in her mind the slightest doubt as to his sincerity. She was sure to read this letter a great many times, and always with the view to finding something between the lines: such as pity, resignation, an enforced conception of loyalty, or even faith! He meant that she should find nothing there but love. It was full of tenderness, full of hope, full of promise. He was coming to her with a steadfast, enduring love in his heart, he wanted her now more than ever before.

There was no mention of Challis Wendall, and but once Sara's name used. There was nothing in the letter that could have betrayed their joint secret to the most acute outsider, and yet she would understand that he had wrung everything from Sara's lips. Her secret was his.

He decided that it would not be safe to anticipate the letter by a cablegram. It was not likely that any message he could send would have the desired effect. Instead of reassuring her, in all probability it would create fresh alarm.

Sleep did not come to him until after three o'clock. At two he got up and deliberately added a postscript to the letter he had written. It was in the nature of a poignant plea for Sara Wendall. Even as he penned these lines, he shuddered at the thought of what she had planned to do to Hetty Castleton. Staring hard at the black window before him, the pen still in his hand, he allowed his thoughts to dwell so intimately on the subject of his well-meant postscript that her ashen face with its burning eyes seemed to take shape in the night beyond. It was a long time before he could get rid of the illusion. Afterwards he tried to conjure up Hetty's face and to drive out the likeness of the other woman, and found that he could not recall a single feature in the face of the girl he loved!

When he reached Southlook in the morning, he found that nearly all of the doors and windows were boarded up. Wagons were standing in the stable yard, laden with trunks and crates. Servants without livery were scurrying about the halls. There was an air of finality about their movements.

"Yes, sir," said Watson, in reply to his question, "we are in a rush. Mrs. Wendall expects to close the house this evening, sir. We all go up this afternoon, I suppose you know, sir, we've taken a new apartment in town."

"No!" exclaimed Booth.

"Yes, sir, we have, sir. They've been decorating it for the past two weeks. Seems like she didn't care for the old one we had. As a matter of fact, I didn't care much for it, either. She's taken one of them expensive ones looking out over the park, sir. You know we used to look out over Madison avenue, sir, and God knows it wasn't hinderspin!" Yes, sir, we go up this afternoon. Mrs. Wendall will be down in a second, thank you, sir."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. FRAUD ALLEGED IN SALE OF GUILFORD PROPERTY.

In the Superior court of Forsyth county Saturday afternoon the suit of M. T. Chilton vs. Thomas S. Groome, which had been transferred to Forsyth from Stokes county, was concluded with a verdict for the plaintiff for $750 and interest.

The case grew out of the sale of the Freeman's mill property, in this county, to Mr. Chilton by Mr. Groome. The plaintiff alleged that Groome misrepresented the purchase price paid for the property and defrauded him out of $750; that Groome told the plaintiff that the mill could be purchased and that the owners asked $6,500 for the property; that they went partners on the deal and purchased the property; that it later developed that the owners only asked $5,750 for the mill, and that in this way the plaintiff was defrauded.

The defendant claimed that it was a legitimate transaction; that he purchased the mill at $5,750, and that he sold it to Mr. Chilton for the amount alleged; that there was no fraud. The jury, however, gave a verdict against the defendant.

Memorial Service For Deceased Elders.

A memorial service in honor of the memory of the deceased elders of the First Presbyterian church of this city was held at that church yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. A tablet bearing the names of the deceased elders was unveiled and an address was delivered by Rev. Dr. Ebert W. Smith, a former pastor of the church.

In his address Dr. Smith spoke of the life and character of the 25 dead elders, he having enjoyed an intimate personal acquaintance with all but eight of them. He spoke feelingly of the good example of the lives of these sainted men.

Second Death From Boiler Explosion.

Susan Watkins, colored, who was injured in the boiler explosion at Mr. R. C. Yow's residence last Monday afternoon that resulted in the death Thursday morning of Mr. Yow, died Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at St. Leo's hospital, to which place she was carried immediately after the accident. She was about 22 years old and had been employed in this city for several years. The funeral and interment took place yesterday at her old home near Guilford College.

GENERAL NEWS PARAGRAPHS

SUMMARY OF EVENTS THAT GO TO MAKE UP THE WORLD'S NEWS OF THE DAY.

H. T. Thompson, a white farmer, is under sentence of death at Greenville, S. C. July 31 for criminally assaulting his own daughter.

A fight in the senate is coming on the bill reported by Senator Reed to exclude from the United States the products of convict labor abroad. The bill was introduced by Senator Stone, of Missouri.

Oscar D. Williams, employed by the Southern Express Company as a messenger, was arrested at Macon, Ga., in connection with the disappearance of $4,900 entrusted to the company's care. He is charged with larceny after trust. China will have the largest display of any foreign nation at the Panama-Pacific exposition. The Chinese government has appropriated $1,500,000 for its exhibit and has asked for 50 per cent more floor space than could be given.

After 47 years of married life, Mrs. Mary E. Bebb, of Spokane, Wash., has been granted a divorce from her husband. The wife alleged that her husband had not spoken to her in 12 years. She grew weary of the long silence and asked for a divorce.

President Wilson hopes that all so-called partisan questions will be settled at the present session of Congress, so that the remainder of his term may be used to deal with constructive questions, such as merchant marine and other subjects regardless of party.

Jacob A. Riss, of New York, a noted writer and social worker, died last week at his summer home in Massachusetts. He was born in Denmark in 1849 and began life as a carpenter's apprentice. He came to the United States as a youth and for years worked as a reporter on New York papers.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels' pet amendment to the naval appropriation bill, providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate and report on the advisability of establishing a government armor plate factory, was given a knockout in the senate last week, at least, so far as the present session of congress is concerned.

President Wilson and Hon. Champ Clark, speaker of the house of representatives, Saturday delivered addresses at the Memorial day services under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic at the Arlington national cemetery, near Washington. The president had not expected to participate, but fearing that a false construction had been placed on his declination, decided at the eleventh hour to speak.

Senator Overman Friday read in the senate a petition signed by numerous citizens of Durham protesting against the alleged existence of polygamy in Utah. When the petition had been read and filed, Senator Sutherland, of Utah, asserted that polygamy has been abandoned in his state, though he admitted that there are some old people who entered that relation many years ago who still maintain their households. The weight of the evidence seems to be against Senator Sutherland's denial, for it is well understood that the Mormons generally have no regard for the law against polygamy.

The Emergency Value of Big Organization

WHEN a real catastrophe happens to a telephone system; when a fire destroys an exchange and the terminal apparatus, or a storm lays low the pole lines, the value of a big organization is quickly shown.

When a conflagration swept the city of Chelsea, Mass., it burned the Bell telephone exchange and destroyed the telephone equipment.

The next day a temporary central station was established, amid the ruins, and the service restored.

With similar promptness telephone service was re-established in Baltimore, San Francisco and Bangor, and after the more recent disasters in the Middle West.

To meet great emergencies, complete switchboards and apparatus valued at over $100,000 are kept at Chicago and New York, crated and ready for shipment whenever the call for help comes from any part of the organization.
