DEMOCRATS IN CONVENTION

OVERMAN AND TRAVIS RENOMINATED AND PLATFORM IS ADOPTED.

The attendance upon the State Democratic convention in Raleigh Thursday was not large, owing to the absence of any spirited contest, but delegates were present from every section of the state and the proceedings were not without interest. The convention adopted a platform in line with the sentiment of the democracy of this state, renominating United States Senator Overman and Corporation Commissioner Travis, and confirmed the nomination of Superior court judges.

The convention was called to order by Thomas D. Warren, of Newbern, who named N. J. Rouse, of Kinston, as temporary chairman. Hon. G. Chatham, of Winston-Salem, was elected permanent chairman and George L. Peterson, of Clinton, permanent secretary.

Senator Lee S. Overman was placed in nomination to succeed himself by his fellow townsman, Hon. Theo. F. Klutz, of Salisbury, former representative in Congress from the eighth district, and the nomination was seconded by Clyde R. Eley, of Shelby, assistant United States attorney for the western district of North Carolina. Edward L. Travis, of Halifax county, chairman of the corporation commission, was nominated to succeed himself by Walter E. Daniel, of Weidon, and the nomination was seconded by S. M. Gattis, of Hillsboro. Both nominations were made by acclamation.

Governor Craig responded to calls from the delegates and made a brief speech. The governor declared that he believed in primaries and hoped the convention would place a plank in the platform endorsing a legalized state-wide primary. "I am not a reactionary and never have been," said he, "but I am opposed to the initiative and referendum." Loud applause followed this statement, it being noticeable that Senator Overman joined in it. "I do not believe this measure is needed at this time; the legislatures have always been responsive to the people," he said. "But some say that the state legislature did not give us a primary. Well, they should have passed the primary act that was before them at the last session." He advocated a plank favoring a restriction whereby no child under the age of 14 be allowed to work in the factories and no woman to work in the mills at night.

Mr. William C. Redfield, secretary of the United States department of commerce, who had delivered the commencement address at the University of North Carolina the previous day, was introduced to the convention and made a speech in which he presented the splendid success that has attended the Democratic administration, the address being especially well received. He spoke for about an hour.

Platform Adopted.
The report of the platform committee was submitted by Cameron M. Brown, of Charlotte, the chairman, as follows:

"We, the representatives of the Democratic party assembled in convention under conditions of Democratic responsibility in state and in the republic in this large measure of success with which Democratic measures have been enacted into law and with which Democratic principles have been applied in restoring equal opportunities to all sections and all classes.

"We reaffirm our allegiance to the cardinal principles of Democracy and government and again present our cause to the people in confidence that a continuation of Democratic control will result in a complete restoration of the high ideals of constitutional government as established by the fathers of the republic and interpreted to meet the needs of the progress of times.

"We endorse the administration of Woodrow Wilson and the broad statesmanship, high ideals, earnestness and application with which he is administering his high office. The Democratic party under brave and wise leadership has merited the confidence and support of the American people. It has restored the government to the people and wrested the power from the hands of the favored classes under which the Republic had placed it. The tariff has been revised downward and the power to tax the people wrested from the favored few. It has dethe monopoly of credit and a banking system which will equal banking facilities for all the people without regard to section or class.

"We especially commend the just and patriotic foreign policy of the president of the United States in dealing with other nations. Our country, under the guidance of President Wilson's great intelligence and sincere love of justice, has acknowledged no standard of conduct beneath that demanded by Christian nations.

"We heartily endorse the record of achievement and leadership in the national Congress of our United States senators and representatives, and take pride in the opportunity that came to our state to furnish their wise and seasoned leadership in the successful working out of the great problems of a nation's Democratic administration.

"We endorse the administration of Governor Locke Craig and the other state officials, and especially commend the successful efforts of the general assembly, the governor and the corporation commission for the readjustment of intrastate freight rates and express the confidence that their zeal in this cause will be productive of further fruitful results until discriminations will be entirely removed, and we pledge a continuation of our efforts to remove all such discriminations.

"We rejoice in the progress our state is making in the cause of education of all the children under Democratic rule, and we pledge to the people of the state the continued support of the party until a six-months' school in every district throughout North Carolina shall be realized and that the resources of the state will be used under Democratic rule to promote this end just as rapidly as economic conditions will permit, and to this end we urge co-operation of state and county for the establishment of six-months' school terms.

"We endorse the legalized state-wide primaries for national, state and judicial offices and pledge the party to the endorsement of such a law as will make this principle apply to all political parties.

"We recommend that our penal system be revised in the light of the most modern methods. We congratulate all concerned upon the advances made by our governor and the general assembly, and especially upon the epoch-making victory recently won before the interstate commerce commission in the matter of relieving North Carolina points of the discrimination in freight tariffs in favor of other points in other states, and we urge that the struggle so well begun shall be pressed until there shall not remain a shadow of suspicion that the people of this state labor under any disadvantage so far as the common carriers are concerned, both interstate and intrastate.

"We likewise ask that the present investigation of insurance rates be pressed to a culmination that will remove all questions as to discrimination adverse to our people.

"We bring before our party the special demand and the needs of the farmers of North Carolina, in the conviction that all that serves them serves all the people. We recommend that the state follow up its increasingly useful work of inspection, education and instructions with aid to a system of rural credits designed to enable the producers of the wealth from which the state draws its life to manage their enterprises at the lowest possible rate of interest and to market their products to the best advantage. We urge our representatives in Congress to uphold the president in his plans to aid our farmers in the matter of rural credits. We recommend the encouragement of studies in practical agriculture in our free schools."

Minority Report Filed.
A. J. McKinnon, of Maxton, for himself and A. L. Brooks, of Greensboro, members of the platform committee, presented the following minority report:

"We regret to dissent from the report of the majority of your committee on resolutions and platform with relation to any matter coming before this convention, but there is one plank of the platform which we feel sure should not be adopted as reported by the committee, and that is the one relating to legalized primaries for the state.

"We believe that the Democratic party can only hope to succeed in the state and nation by placing the management of governmental affairs directly in the hands of the people and by proper election machinery enabling the masses to directly express their preferences in the selection of those officers who are to administer the affairs of their government.

"We believe the Democratic party should either go back to the delegate system of selecting candidates or give to the people an honest, bona fide primary election law for all officers of all parties to be held throughout the state on the same day, the expenses of same to be borne by the state, so safeguarded by a corrupt practices act that dishonesty in elections will not be possible.

"We therefore offer as a substitute for the committee's report on the primary question the following:

"We demand the enactment of a legalized state-wide primary election law by ballot for all parties and for all elective offices, to be held on the same day throughout the state, at the expense of the state, and we urge the general assembly to provide such an act as will clearly and distinctly effectuate this purpose and properly safeguarded by a drastic corrupt practices act."

Mr. Brooks spoke for the minority report, saying he did not attend the recent progressive Democratic meeting in Raleigh, for if there was anything wrong with the party, he wanted to come to a Democratic convention to fight it out. If it is a good thing to have primaries for United States senators, why is it not a good thing to have them for legislative officers? He believed such action would build up the Democratic party and help to destroy the Republican party. If we have a primary, let us have it in truth and in fact.

Cameron Morrison spoke in opposition, insisting that the western counties that do not want county primaries believe they will hurt their Democratic chances should not have such primaries forced upon them.

The convention voted 268 for and 572 against the minority report, thereafter adopting the platform as reported by the majority of the committee.

The 26 votes of Guilford county, which has the legalized primary, were cast for the minority report. The vote of the other counties in the district was as follows: Alamance, 4 for and 10 against; Caswell, 6 against; Forsyth, 21 against; Granville, 11 for; Orange, 7 for; Durham, 7 1-2 for and 5 1-2 against; Surry, 14 against. Person and Stokes did not vote. Randolph, which is in the seventh district, cast 19 votes for the minority report.

The following members of the Democratic executive committee were elected from the fifth district: A. M. Scales, of Guilford; Charles O. McMichael, of Rockingham; S. C. Bralley, of Durham; S. M. Gattis, of Orange; D. G. Brummitt, of Granville, and A. H. Eller, of Forsyth. There are 60 members of the state committee, six from each of the ten congressional districts.

THE PRICE DEMANDED BY GEN. HUERTA TO QUIT.

According to advices received from Mexico City, the price demanded by Gen. Huerta for his retirement is the legalization of his official acts since he assumed the provisional presidency of Mexico. This is said to have been the proposal Huerta authorized his delegates to offer at the mediation conference at Niagara Falls.

Gen. Huerta is said to realize that he has only a slim chance of winning out, but he is understood to be determined not to abandon power without adequate provision being made for the protection of his own future and for that of the men with whom he has surrounded himself.

The constitutionalists, it is said, have insisted that no act of Gen. Huerta's administration shall ever be regarded as legal, and in this case Gen. Huerta foresees enormous financial losses for those who joined in the flotation of his loans as well as personal risk for the members of his cabinet, for the new congressmen installed in place of those whom he imprisoned and for thousands of minor officials and even private citizens who, willingly or unwillingly, aided his government.

The Confederate monument in Arlington cemetery, Washington, was unveiled Thursday with an address by President Wilson.

Tate, testified that during the past ten months he had advanced the defendant various sums of money amounting to $2,700 to be loaned by Hawkins, the money having been advanced by Tate on the strength of orders signed by the borrowers. He testified that recently he became suspicious of the genuineness of some of the orders and an investigation revealed the fact that 42 of them were forgeries. DISQUIETING NEWS OF THE MEXICAN SITUATION.

Washington, June 7.—Another crisis in the Mexican situation faced the government tonight, a situation fraught with perils for mediation and with possibilities that might precipitate actual warfare between the United States and Mexico.

General Huerta has brought about the new crisis by ordering his gunboats to blockade the port of Tampico and to seize a cargo of ammunition en route there for the Mexican constitutionalists. The shipboard is aboard the steamer Antilla from New York, flying the Cuban flag. Huerta has notified the powers of the intent to blockade the port and that he proposes to seize the cargo consigned to the belligerents against his sovereignty as contraband of war.

The purpose of the United States to suppress the attempt to blockade and prevent interference with the Antilla was indicated tonight when Secretary Daniels issued an official statement announcing that, while no new orders had been given Rear Admiral Badger, there had been no change in the policy of the government in reference to its desire that the port of Tampico shall be open to all commerce.

More Ammunition For Mexicans.

Washington, June 5.—Information reaching Washington late today that the American schooner Sunshine, from Galveston, had landed ammunition at Tampico for the Mexican constitutionalists, without interference on the part of the United States or the Huerta government, was received in official quarters here without comment. State and navy department officials declined to verify the report, but from other sources it was learned that the presence of the Sunshine off Tampico with arms aboard had been known to the Washington government for several days. In view of the fact that there had been considerable apprehension regarding the attitude the United States might take toward the landing of the ammunition at this Mexican port, the delivery of the munitions without interference was regarded with significance.

Board of Education Meets.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Guilford county board of education Saturday Mr. J. Van Lindley was elected a member of the board to succeed Mr. John C. Kettner, who resigned recently to accept an appointment as deputy United States marshal. The two other members of the board are Dr. W. T. Whitsett and Mr. C. H. Ireland.

A delegation appeared before the board and asked that a new building be erected at the Monticello school. The board took the matter under advisement and decided to erect the building as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made.

A. WAYLAND COOKE'S SPEECH NOMINATING MAJ. STEDMAN

Following is the speech made by
A. Wayland Cooke, Esq., of the Greensboro bar, in presenting the name of Hon. Charles M. Stedman to the Democratic convention of the fifth district in this city June 2 for the nomination for Congress:
"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention:

"The county of Guilford commissions me to propose for representative of the fifth congressional district in Congress a nomination full worthy without apology or defense, of the endorsement of this convention, Maj. Charles M. Stedman:

"Born in Chatham county, reared in Cumberland, educated at our university, a lawyer of ability, a statesman, student and scholar, beloved by the people of this district, we will honor ourselves in again honoring him. Major Stedman is a man of large conceptions and wide experience. He has seen much of men.
He has seen much of the world. He is familiar with the history of our people, and the science of government has been with him a life study.

"His personality is attractive and delightfully inspiring. No man in North Carolina has more personal friends than Major Stedman. Men who have known him long and intimately believe in him with all their soul, and see in him the lineaments of a gentleman of that refined character which united with gentleness, sympathy and democracy, and wed with manhood, makes a man.
When he entered Congress he had the advantage of a personal acquaintance and friendship with many of the nation's greatest statesmen who were members of that body, and by his pleasing personality, his splendid bearing, ripe wisdom and rare attainments soon won for himself as large a share of personal friends as any member of

"I have known Major Stedman intimately for fourteen years. If I were to name his greatest traits of character, I should say that they were his constant and unswerving adherence to duty, his absolute fearlessness and fortitude, his eminent truthfulness and his fidelity to his friends. He is sympathetic, generous, charitable and kind, yet he is as adamant in the pursuit of duty as he understands it. I never knew Major Stedman to harbor malice. He has had occasion to feel aggrieved at uncalculated assaults of the misinformed, the misguided, and sometimes the vicious, but the thoughts of them quickly passed from his mind. I do not claim Major Stedman is a perfect man, but in the light of all that I have seen of men in the thirty odd years I have lived, I declare to you that in my judgment he is one of the highest type of men the state of North Carolina has ever produced.

"His spirit has never known defeat. He has never run away from a fight. Generations yet unborn will take courage from his history of a stalwart, courageous soldier of peace as well as war when they read of his career. Twice defeated for the nomination for governor, he was never dismayed. He never sulked in his tent, but, without malice, without hatred, without bitterness,
he arose from the conflict each time a stronger man. Major Stedman has heard it thunder a good many times, but no man ever saw him afraid.
His courage and his fortitude, when avalanches of adversity and his power to stand up and conquer every obstacle in his way and emerge triumphant have been the marvel and delight of his friends throughout the state.

"I commend him to you as a true man, true to all the trusts committed to his care. I commend him to you as a North Carolinian devoted to the honor, glory and welfare of our state, whose best interests he has always sought to serve. I commend him to you as a Democrat, loyal, fearless, active and uncompromising, unto whose life the principles of our party have become a part.

"I commend him to you as a soldier of the South who was first at Bethel, four years in service without a furlough and who laid down his arms with Lee at Appomattox and the only officer of the Southern army now in Congress.

gloriously the people rallied to his

STORY OF COLORADO SIEGE

Frantic Mothers Scooped Out Holes in the Earth in Which to Conceal Themselves and Their Children—Havoc Wrought by Machine Guns of the Militia Graphically Described.

Mrs. Pearl Jolly of the Women's Trades Union league, testifying before the United States industrial commission, gave a graphic picture of the horrors of Ludlow camp colony in Colorado on April 20, when men, women and children were besieged by the state militia and it became necessary to dig caves beneath the camp to escape the fire of the well trained machine guns. She testified in New York.

Mrs. Jolly told of the siege of the camp. She said the trouble opened with the firing of two bombs into the heart of the camp and the ignoring of a white flag carried by the leader of the striking miners.

"Then the bullets from the machine guns began to find their way everywhere," said Mrs. Jolly. "The women set to work digging holes in the ground in which to hide their children. There were 500 of the women, many of them about to become mothers; others with nursing babies and still others old and infirm. There were also the 500 men."

Grewed Away on Their Stomachs.

"To distract the fire from the camp, which it was presumed was aimed at the men, the miners departed for the hills. They crawled away on their stomachs, while the women were using crude implements to dig into the ground. Four men remained to look after the women and children."

"There were only forty rifles in all of Ludlow camp. This shows that it was not an armed body, as has been reported."

"It was becoming so desperate that I decided to pin a red cross on a white dress and go forth into the open so that the men with the machine guns could see me. I was in the camp in the capacity of nurse in the event my services were needed."

"As soon as I showed myself the militiamen began to pepper at me. One of the bullets struck the heel of one of my shoes, and others struck all about me. I thought it was about time that I got under cover."

"As I walked into my tent I noticed three men lying alongside of it. They had dragged the telephone through a slit and were frantically calling help from Trinidad."

"Opposite the entrance to the tent was a mirror. My reflection after I had entered was in the mirror. You can get a good idea of what fine shots these men with the rifles and the machine guns were when they shattered the mirror to smithereens in less than five minutes. They thought they were actually shooting at me."

"I thought my end had come. Going to the door, I dropped to the floor and lay still. Apparently the men with the machine guns thought I was dead."

"Later I managed to work my way around to the men who were lying against the side of the tent telephoning. 'For God's sake, go away, woman,' they whispered. 'You're a hoodlum!'"

"I think after that the militiamen must have relocated us, for the fire became dangerous again."

Only the Caves Saved Women.

"To stay where we were meant death. All the pits were filled with the weeping women and the crying children. There was no room for us."

there. I saw three men who had been hiding near me run for a coal pile and I followed. A rain of shots followed.

"For an hour, with no letup, machine guns sputtered steel jacketed bullets about the coal. Enough shots were turned in our direction to carry off a regiment."

"We saw an innocent, blue eyed, twelve-year-old boy throw up his hands with a bullet in his heart. His father, his eyes wild with grief, crawled to our side. He wanted to go out into the open and get to the men with the murder machines, but we held him back."

"At 3 o'clock that day the machine guns got even a better range. Every sign of life was annihilated. Dogs, chickens, cats and other domestic animals were picked off with ease, so expert were these marksmen. If the caves had not been dug every one of the 500 women and children would have been shot."

"One little Italian woman, whose three children had been murdered by the machine guns, became insane. 'Perhaps the worst feature of the siege was the unearthly screams of the women and children as a bullet found one of their number.'"

Doll Used to Instruct Mothers.

Mothers of Wisconsin may learn from the state university how to dress their babies. The home economics department of the extension division already has shown several thousand mothers by demonstrations with a model doll given at the community institutes. In this way the latest results of science in dressing of infants are given directly to mothers.

Don't Lose Sleep Coughing at Night.

Take Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. The very first dose surprises you. It glides down your throat and spreads a healing, soothing coating over the inflamed tickling surface. That's immediate relief. It loosens up the tightness in your chest, stops stuffy wheezy breathing, eases distressing, racking, tearing coughs, soothes the irritated, inflamed bronchial tubes and air passages. Children love it. It is mildly laxative—as a cough medicine should be, and does not upset or distress the most sensitive stomach. Refuse any substitute. Contains no opiates. Conyers & Sykes. adv

STORING WINTER CLOTHES.

Your winter clothes can be safely put away without a cedar chest and without the disagreeable odor of moth balls.

"Direct sunlight has caused the death of many a germ and moth egg," says Miss Anabel Turner, instructor in home economics of the University of Wisconsin extension division. "If the clothes are well brushed and cleaned, with due attention to pockets and seams, then well exposed to bright sunlight and tied up tightly in cotton bags, you may feel safe about them until the cold days bring them out again."

"Newspapers or tar paper may be used instead of cotton bags, but care must be taken to have the packages tightly sealed."

"Moths seldom touched clothes that are frequently disturbed."

HOLDS HOPE IN CANCER CASES

These Are Given by Officer of Society Formed to Fight the Disease in Public Message, Emphasizing Necessity of Prompt Investigation of First Suspicious Signs.

Says Curtis E. Lakeman, executive secretary of the American Society For the Control of Cancer:

Cancer can be prevented or cured and the needless sacrifice of thousands of lives can be stopped by educating the public as to the facts about this disease. Safety lies only in early recognition of the symptoms and prompt operation. Radium is useful in some cases, but it is not to be relied upon as a substitute for surgical treatment—the only known sure cure.

This message of the hope to be found in early and competent treatment should be spread broadcast. The need of supplying the public with better knowledge about the disease is vividly shown by a newspaper clipping received at the office of the American Society For the Control of Cancer. A woman wrote to the inquiry column of the newspaper that a lump on her breast had been growing about a year. She said she had been told that "kerosene rubbed on it was good for it" and had tried it without result except to cause inflammation, and so she was "very much worried." The answer published along with this letter advised her to "bathe the spot thoroughly and apply a pad of antiphlogistic."

The foremost surgeon of the world recently said in a public address that people wait, on the average, a whole year after discovering some suspicious symptom before they go to the operating table. Another surgeon studied his own records and those of six of the largest New York hospitals to throw light both on the frequency of cancer and the delay in seeking treatment. Out of 12,345 surgical patients he found 542 cases of cancer, approximately one in twenty-two, or 4.39 per cent. In sixty-five cases of first operation for cancer he found that after discovery of a tumor or after the first suspicious symptoms the thirty-five men had waited, on the average, 12.2 months before consulting the surgeon and the thirty women an average of 11.9 months.

Delay Means Death.

In like manner Dr. Winter of Koenigsberg, Prussia, the pioneer in the education of the public on cancer, analyzed 1,087 records of operable cases and showed that 87 per cent of these patients could and should have come to treatment much earlier.

A preliminary study of the records kept at the hospital and laboratories of one of the largest American centers of medical education shows that the chances of a permanent cure, if operation be resorted to promptly, are very high. It shows equally that these chances decrease with every day of delay. And as the likelihood of cure becomes remote the immediate danger and damage of the operation become greater. That is to say, a new and small cancer may be removed without much pain and without much mutilation, but an old and dispersed cancer leaves a serious wound behind it.

These records have already been analyzed and tabulated for cancer of the lip, tongue and breast. The statement of results takes account of the conditions said to precede actual cancer, such as tobacco blisters, white spots and sore places about the teeth. While there is a difference of opinion as to the bearing of such conditions on the development of true cancer, it cannot be denied that in many cases they seem to cause the disease.

In operations on the tongue the figures show that the prompt removal of the "precancerous lesion" resulted in 100 per cent of cures. In the second stage—i. e., that of malignant wart—complete removal was equally effective. But when the actual figures of developed cancer were studied the proportion of cures dropped at once to 50 per cent.

Cancer of the Breast.

In cancer of the breast the danger of delay is equally apparent. In the milder form, called adenocarcinoma, the percentage of cures in all cases was 76, but in the late cases—i. e., those in which the cancerous nature of the tumor was already obvious to the eye—it was much less. In these early cases there is a warning lump in the breast, but no outward sign of malignant tumor. In the more malignant forms of breast tumor the general percentage of cures dropped to 36 and in late cases to 33, or one patient out of three. But even here the cures in early cases reached 85 per cent.

In operations for cancer of the lip the reports show 100 per cent of cures in the earliest stages and 75 per cent of cures after complete operation in the later stages.

The evidence so far collected on early cancer also gives an opportunity for a message to the people who seek help in the later stage of cancer. Although the chances of a cure here are less, the disease in many instances is by no means hopeless.

DISCOVERY LIFTS DEATH PERIL OF MERCURY TABLET

New Drug to Contain Bichloride and Tartar Emetic Useless as Poison.

In Pediatrics, a monthly medical magazine, Dr. William Edward Fitch, its editor, who is a lieutenant in the medical reserve corps, United States army, announces that he has succeeded in compounding a bichloride of mercury tablet which, if swallowed by any one, will have no more serious result than to cause nausea. He explains that his tablet contains tartar emetic that will exert its full action before the corrosive sublimate.

Dr. Fitch's formula for the tablet, which he proposes to give to the world for the benefit of mankind, is:

Seven and three-tenths grains of bichloride of mercury.

Seven and three-tenths grains ammonium chloride.

One and one-quarter grains tartar emetic.

As explained by Dr. Fitch, the tartar (antimonyl et potassil tartras) is so compounded in the tablet that it will promptly exert its full emetic action on reaching the stomach before the corrosive sublimate (bichloride of mercury) can begin to exert its violent, irritant and deeply caustic action. This combination, it is said, will in no wise hinder the bactericidal, germicidal, disinfectant or antiseptic work of the bichloride of mercury, but, on the other hand, the tartar emetic will have a synergistic activity or force.

"The physiological action of tartar emetic," Dr. Fitch says, "produces prolonged nausea, violent and repeated vomiting and retching, completely evacuating the stomach contents."

"Those with whom I have discussed my remedy have pronounced it a wonderful discovery."

"When bichloride of mercury tablets are made up according to my formula and legislation prevents the sale of the poison to the laymen in its present form there will be an end to suicides caused by mercury and deaths through carelessness in its use."

COULD SCARCELY WALK ABOUT

And For Three Summers Mrs. Vincent Was Unable to Attend to Any of Her Housework.

Pleasant Hill, N. C.—"I suffered for three summers," writes Mrs. Walter Vincent, of this town, "and the third and last time, was my worst."

I had dreadful nervous headaches and prostration, and was scarcely able to walk about. Could not do any of my housework.

I also had dreadful pains in my back and sides and when one of those weak, sinking spells would come on me, I would have to give up and lie down, until it wore off.

I was certainly in a dreadful state of health, when I finally decided to try Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I firmly believe I would have died if I hadn't taken it.

After I began taking Cardui, I was greatly helped, and all three bottles relieved me entirely.

I fattened up, and grew so much stronger in three months, I felt like another person altogether."

Cardui is purely vegetable and gentle-acting. Its ingredients have a mild, tonic effect, on the womanly constitution.

Cardui makes for increased strength, improves the appetite, tones up the nervous system, and helps to make pale, sallown cheeks, fresh and rosy.

Cardui has helped more than a million weak women, during the past 50 years. It will surely do for you, what it has done for them. Try Cardui today.

A year's labor of the congressional joint committee on railway mail pay has culminated in a bill prepared by Representative Tuttle, of New Jersey, to pay the railways not on the weight of mail carried, as at present, but upon the car space required. It is expected to save $400,000 a year.

Rev. C. J. Tatum, pastor of a church at Beaumont, Texas, and a machinist by trade, was shot and killed at Beaumont by B. V. Cooley, another machinist, in an argument about a business transaction. When arrested Cooley carried a pistol and another was found by the side of the dead man.

The distilleries of Peoria, Ill., the largest producing center of distilled spirits in the world, have paid the national government in the last 13 years enough money to build the Panama canal. These figures became public with the retirement of Percival G. Renwick, collector of internal revenue since 1901. In that period he collected $408,425,861.

Frenzied with rage when his fiancée, Miss Helen Smith, 26 years old, and attractive, refused immediate marriage after he had procured a license, Michael Salovick, of Philadelphia, fired three shots into her body at her home in Atlantic City and then turned the weapon on himself, inflicting injuries that will probably result in death. The young woman is expected to recover.

HOW ALASKA IS HINDERED

GOVERNMENT RED TAPE IS RAIGNED BY SECRETARY OF INTERIOR.

In a report sent to Senator Pittman and Congressman Houston, chairmen of the senate and house committees on territories, respectively, Secretary Lane, of the interior department, urges the creation of a development board to have complete control of the natural resources of Alaska, and makes a severe arraignment of the present red-tape methods in the administration of government affairs in that territory. Bills for the creation of boards or commissions to administer the government of Alaska have been introduced in the senate by Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, and in the house by Delegate Wickersham, of Alaska. These bills differ only in detail and are in accord with the recommendations of Secretary Lane.

The development board plan urged by the secretary provides for a board of three members, appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, which is to have headquarters in Alaska, and is to be charged with the general conduct of all government affairs there connected with the natural resources and development of the country.

Secretary Lane proposes that the board shall take over the work now done in Alaska by the general land office, forest service, road commission, bureau of mines, bureau of education and secretary of the interior. Besides, he urges that the board shall have complete control of all government activities connected with the development of industries and transportation. This, he believes, should include the control of water powers, building and maintenance of roads and trails, operation and rates of the railroads and telegraph lines, protection and control of game, fur-bearing animals, public lands, mineral deposits, coal, oil, gas, hot springs, timber lands and timber. Supervision of education among the Indians and natives is also included in the recommendations.

It is pointed out in the report that at present each of at least a score of government bureaus in Washington, divided among the various departments, has something to do with the government of Alaska, and that there is a vast amount of red tape and circumlocution in the administration of public affairs under this system. Instances are given in the report of delays of several years in the handling of uncomplicated land and other matters which should have been promptly disposed of.

The new policy, it is declared, is not to invite a few men to exploit the cream of Alaska's riches, but to develop all the resources and possibilities of the territory harmoniously for the best interests of all people.

The secretary says: "Alaska's problems are largely peculiar to Alaska. Our present system of government there is heterogeneous. Instead of one government in Alaska we have a number, interlocked, overlapped, cumbersome and confusing. There is a government of the forests, a government of the fisheries, one of the reindeer and natives, another of the cables and telegraphs. There is a government for certain public lands and forests. Each of these governments is intent upon its own particular business, jealous of its own success and prerogative, and all are more or less unrelated and independent in their operation. Experience has demonstrated that efficient administration is best secured by centralizing responsibility and authority in the hands of a few men, who can be held to strict accountability for the results of their actions." And, continuing, the report cites scores of instances of the red tape caused by the division and multiplication of authority in Alaska.

Mr. Lane points out that there are now only 862 miles of wagon roads, 617 miles of sled roads and 2,166 miles of trails in the whole of Alaska, for the construction and maintenance of which about $2,600,000 has been spent. He urges that roads and trails are as essential to the opening of Alaska to settlement as railroads, and that these roads for several years to come must be built by the government. Secretary Lane believes Alaska can be made self-supporting within a few years, as soon as conditions are created which will enable settlement, development and produce revenues.

Matters of Interest Reported by Our Corps of Correspondents.

WHITSETT.

Ernest C. McLean has returned home after a visit of some days to LaFayette, Ala., where he attended the marriage of his brother, William DeRoy McLean, to Miss Marie Brock. After a few days spent here with relatives, he will return to his work in New York city, where for some years he has resided. Mr. and Mrs. W. D. McLean are now in Washington city and after a visit to other Northern points will return South in two weeks, stopping over here for a few days, after which they will go to Anderson, S. C., where Mr. McLean is secretary of the Anderson Realty Company.

Cards have been received announcing the marriage of Dr. W. W. Stancill, now assistant physician in the state hospital in Raleigh. He graduated at Whitsett about ten years ago and has made quite a success in his chosen field.

Rev. George A. Ingle, a graduate of 1909, will preach at Brick church next Sunday. Numbers of his friends here will go over to hear him.

Prof. and Mrs. J. P. Wagner are visiting friends in the state for a few weeks. He is now superintendent of the schools at Bienville, La. He has been in that state for several years teaching, and has made quite a success of his work. He is a son of Mr. John Wagner, a prominent farmer of Alamance county.

M. J. Moye, of Greenville, Pitt county, is here for a visit and reports that the extreme dry weather prevails over the east as well as in this section.

On Wednesday Dr. W. T. Whitsett returned from Chapel Hill, where he spent a few days attending the University commencement. He states that the commencement this year was more largely attended than for some years past. It was made notable by the presence of two members of President Wilson's cabinet—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels and Secretary of Commerce William C. Redfield.

Numbers from here attended the State College commencement on Wednesday, among them being Prof. and Mrs. J. H. Joyner, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Summers, Miss Carrie Curran, Misses Minnie, Lizzie and Eva Clapp, and others.

Applications for the new catalogue of Whitsett Institute are being received by every mail. It is now completed and will be ready for mailing very soon. It is a great improvement over any previous catalogue sent out by the school and shows a marked advance in the work of the school, which will enter its twenty-seventh year under the present management on August 26, at which time the fall term will open.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Davenport will be in Montreat for a rest within a short while. Mrs. Davenport's sister, Mrs. Hamilton, accompanied by her little daughter, went some days ago to open her cottage at that place.

Robert Fitzgerald, of the University, has gone to Davidson county to visit his brother. He made a fine record in scholarship during the past year and was classed as one of the leaders in the junior class.

Richard Wharton, of the Charlotte city schools, is visiting his parents near here, after some days spent attending the commencement at the University of North Carolina.

Mrs. W. C. Rankin, of Charlotte, was a recent visitor. She was on her way to Goldsboro to attend the burial of her mother, Mrs. R. P. Howell.

Mrs. C. T. Ross is having some improvements made upon her home near here.

Rev. D. C. Cox will hold his first service in the Reformed church here at 3 o'clock in the afternoon on the second Sunday in June, at which time the regular appointment will be announced.

Rev. Robert E. Redding, who was at the First Presbyterian church in Greensboro for the recent ceremony of the dedication of a tablet to the deceased elders of the church, says that it was an occasion of unusual interest, and that the exercises made a profound impression upon a very large congregation.

A number from here speak of attending the commencement at Trinity College in Durham this week.

Our enterprising neighbor, Gibsonville, is now the proud possessor of a most excellent weekly newspaper, The Gibsonville Times, which is meeting with much favor.

It is said that a marriage or two in the immediate future will greatly interest two of our friends. More definite particulars will be given later.

RULES TO BE OBSERVED IN BORROWING MONEY.

Five rules designed to convince farmers that there is no magic about credit are set down in Farmers' Bulletin 593, "How to Use Farm Credit," which the United States department of agriculture has just published. Unless the farmer who is thinking of borrowing money fully understands these rules and is willing to be guided by them, the government's advice to him is, don't. As it is, there are probably almost as many farmers in this country who are suffering from too much as from too little credit. Of these rules the three most important are:

1. Make sure that the purpose for which the borrowed money is to be used will produce a return greater than needed to pay the debt.
2. The length of time the debt is to run should have a close relation to the productive life of the improvement for which the money is borrowed.
3. Provision should be made in long-time loans for the gradual reduction of the principal.

The first rule is of course the key to the wise use of credit. Between borrowing money to spend on one's self and borrowing money to buy equipment of some sort with which to make more money there is all the difference between folly and foresight, extravagance and thrift. If the money is borrowed for a wise purpose it will produce enough to pay back principal and interest and leave a fair margin of profit for the borrower into the bargain. If it is borrowed for a foolish purpose it will produce nothing and consequently there will be nothing with which to repay the loan. From this point of view it matters comparatively little whether the interest be high or low. It is the repayment of the principal that is the chief difficulty.

Rules 2 and 3 deal with the most satisfactory ways of repayment. Underneath them both is the same principle: The loan must be repaid with the money it earns itself. For example, if the money is used to buy a machine that will last ten years, the machine must earn enough in that time to pay for itself or it never will. The loan, therefore, should be entirely repaid before the ten years are up or the farmer will lose money on the transaction, paying out interest for no benefit in return. On the other hand, if too early a date is set for repayment, the machine will not have had sufficient opportunity to make the requisite money and the borrower may have difficulty in raising it elsewhere. Rule 3 provides for some form of amortization, the system by which the principal is repaid in installments so that the amount of the loan is continually diminishing and in consequence the interest charges also. Such a system is quite feasible when the loan is really productive, when it returns to the borrower a definite revenue each year. Tables showing the payments required to pay off principal and interest in varying periods of time are appended to the bulletin and are recommended to the serious consideration of everyone who contemplates borrowing money.

The bulletin also advises the farmer to secure the lowest possible interest. At first sight this seems too obvious to be worth mentioning. Of course the interest should be as small as possible. Everybody knows that—except the lender. But if the other rules are observed, if the borrower manages his financial affairs soundly, he will be surprised to find how much easier it is to obtain favorable terms. The right kind of lender does not want to foreclose mortgages; he wants his money back with a fair profit, like any other merchant. For money that is borrowed wisely, for money that is sure to be repaid, he charges low interest.

This is in fact why the government has published these rules for borrowers. It is not so much a matter of driving a shrewd bargain as it is of observing a few fundamental principles which alone can make credit a blessing and not a curse.

It's out of the question, Redmond," said his wife, a shocked expression in her face as much as to say that he must be quite out of his head to suggest such a thing. "We shall be dreadfully busy for several days, unpacking and—well, doing all sorts of necessary things."

"She is pretty sick, I hear," mumbled he.

"Hasn't she got a nurse?" demanded his wife.

"I merely offered the suggestion in order—"

"Well, we'll see her next week. Any other news?"

"Mrs. Booth, Brandon's mother, was operated on for something or other day before yesterday."

"Oh, dear! The poor thing! Where?"

"Philadelphia, of course."

"I wonder if—let me see, Leslie, isn't there a good train to Philadelphia at four o'clock? I could go—"

"Really, my dear," said her husband sharply.

"You forget how busy we are, mother," said Vivian, without a smile.

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Wrاندall, in considerable confusion. "Was it a serious operation, Redmond?"

"They cut a bone out of her nose, that's all. Brandon says her heart is weak. They were afraid of the ether. She's all right, Carroll says."

"Goodness!" cried Mrs. Wrاندall. One might have suspected a note of disappointment in her voice.

"I shall go up to see Sara this afternoon," said Vivian calmly. "What's the number of her new apartment?"

"You have been up to see her, of course," said Mrs. Wrاندall acidly.

He fidgeted. "I didn't hear of her illness until yesterday."

"I'll go up with you, Viv," said Leslie.

"No, you won't," said his sister flatly. "I'm going to apologize to her for something I said to Brandon Booth. You needn't tag along, Les."

At half-past five in the afternoon, the Wrاندall limousine stopped in front of the tall apartment building near the park, a footman jerked open the door, and Miss Wrاندall stepped out. At the same moment a telegraph messenger boy paused on the sidewalk to compute the artistic but puzzling numerals on the imposing gridded doors of the building.

Miss Wrاندall had herself announced by the obsequious doorman, and stood by in patience to wait for the absurd rule of the house to be carried out. "No one could get in without being announced from below," said the doorman.

"I can get in all right, all right," said the messenger boy. "I got a telegram for de lady."

"Go to the rear!" exclaimed the doorman, with some energy.

While Miss Wrاندall waited in Sara's reception hall on the tenth floor, the messenger, having traversed a more devious route, arrived with his message.

Watson took the envelope and told him to wait. Five minutes passed. Miss Wrاندall grew very uncomfortable under the persistent though complimentary gaze of the street urchin. He stared at her, wide-eyed and admiring, his tribute to the gorgeous. She stared back occasionally, narrow-eyed and reproving, her tribute to the grotesque.

"Will you please step into the drawing-room, Miss Wrاندall," said Watson, returning. He led her across the hall and threw open a door. She passed into the room beyond.

Then he turned to the boy who stood beside the hall seat, making change for a quarter as he approached.

"Here," he said, handing him the receipt book and a dime, "that's for you." He dropped the quarter into his own pocket, where it mingled with coins that were strangers to it up to that instant, and imperiously closed the door behind the boy who failed to say "thank you." Every man to his trade!

There was a woman in the drawing-room when Vivian entered, standing well over against the windows with her back to the light. The visitor stopped short in surprise. She had expected to find her sister-in-law in bed, attended by a politely superior person in pure white.

"Why, Sara," she began, "I am so glad to see you are up and—"

The other woman came forward. "But I am not Sara, Miss Wrاندall," she said, in a well-remembered voice. "How do you do?"

Vivian found herself looking into the face of Hetty Castleton. Instantly she extended her hand.

"This is a surprise!" she exclaimed. "When did you return? Leslie told me your plans were quite settled when he saw you in Lucerne. Oh, I see! Of course! How stupid of me. Sara sent for you."

"She has been quite ill," said Hetty, non-committally. "We got in yesterday. I thought my place was here, naturally."

"Naturally," repeated Vivian, in a detached sort of way. "How is she today? May I see her?"

"She is very much better. In fact, she is sitting up in her room." A warm flush suffused her face, a shy smile appeared in her eyes. "She is receiving two gentlemen visitors, to be perfectly honest, Miss Wrاندall, her lawyer, Mr. Carroll, and—Mr. Booth."

They were seated side by side on the uncomfortable Louis Seize divan in the middle of the room.

"Perhaps she won't care to see me, after an audience so fatiguing," said Miss Wrاندall sweetly. "And so exasperating," she added, with a smile.

Hetty looked her perplexity.

"But she will see you, Miss Wrاندall—if you don't mind waiting. It is a business conference they're having."

An ironic gleam appeared in the corner of Vivian's eye. "Oh," she said, and waited. Hetty smiled uncertainly. All at once the tall American girl was impressed by the wistful, almost humble look in the Englishwoman's eyes, an appealing look that caused her to wonder not a little. Like a flash she jumped at an obvious conclusion, and almost caught her breath. This girl loved Booth and was losing him! Vivian exulted for a moment and then, with an impulse she could not quite catalogue, laid her hand on the other's slim fingers, and murmured somewhat hazily: "Never mind, never mind!"

"Oh, you must wait," cried Hetty, not at all in touch with the other's mood. "Sara expects to see you. The men will be out in a few minutes."

"I think I will run in tomorrow morning," said Vivian hastily. She arose almost immediately and again extended her hand. "So glad to see you back again, Miss Castleton. Come and see me. Give my love to Sara."

She took her departure in some haste, and in her heart she was rejoicing that she had not succeeded in making a fool of herself by confessing to Sara that she had said unkind things about her to Brandon Booth.

Hetty resumed her seat in the broad French window and stared out over the barren treetops in the park. A frightened, pathetic droop returned to her lips. It had been there most of the day.

In Sara's boudoir, the doors of which were carefully closed, three persons were in close, even repressed conference. The young mistress of the house sat propped up in a luxurious chaise-loungue, wan but intense. Confronting her were the two men, leaning forward in their chairs. Mr. Carroll held in his hand a number of papers, prominent among them being three or four telegrams. Booth's face was radiant despite the serious matter that occupied his mind. He had reached town early in the morning in response to a telephone message from Carroll announcing the sudden, unannounced appearance of Hetty Castleton at his offices on the previous afternoon. The girl's arrival had been most unexpected. She walked in on Mr. Carroll, accompanied by her maid, who had a distinctly sheepish look in her eyes and seemed eager to explain something but could not find the opportunity.

With some firmness, Miss Castleton had asked Mr. Carroll to explain why the woman had been set to spy upon her every moment, a demand the worthy lawyer could not well meet for the good and sufficient reason that he wasn't very clear about it himself. Then Hetty broke down and cried, confessing that she was eager to go to Mrs. Wrاندall, at the same time sobbing out something about a symbolic dicky-bird, much to Mr. Carroll's wonder and perplexity.

He sent the maid from the room, and retired with Miss Castleton to the innermost of his private offices, where without much preamble he informed her that he knew everything. Moreover, Mr. Booth was in possession of all the facts and was even then on the point of starting for Europe to see her. Of course, his letter had failed to reach her in time. There was quite a tragic scene in the seclusion of that remote little office, during which Mr. Carroll wiped his eyes and blew his nose more than once, after which he took it upon himself to dispatch a messenger to Sara with the word that he and Miss Castleton would present themselves within half an hour after his note had been delivered.

The meeting between Sara and Hetty was affecting. . . . Almost immediately the former began to show the most singular signs of improvement. She laughed and cried and joyously announced to the protesting nurse that she was feeling quite well again! And, in truth, she got up from the couch on which she reclined and insisted on being dressed for dinner.

In another room the amazed nurse was frantically appealing to Mr. Carroll to let her send for the doctor, only to be confounded by his urbane announcement that Mrs. Wrاندall was as "right as a string" and, please God, she wouldn't need the services of doctor or nurse again for years to come. Then he asked the nurse if she had ever heard of a disease called "nostalgia."

She said she had heard of "homesickness."

"Well, that's what ailed Mrs. Wrاندall," he said. "Miss Castleton is the cure."

Booth came the next morning. . . . Even as she lay passive in his arms, Hetty denied him. Her arms were around his neck as she miserably whispered that she could not, would not be his wife, notwithstanding her love for him and his readiness to accept her as she was. She was obdurate, lovingly, tenderly obdurate. He would have despaired but for Sara, to whom he afterwards appealed.

"Wait," was all that Sara had said, but he took heart. He was beginning to look upon her as a sorceress. A week ago he had felt sorry for her; his heart had been touched by her transparent misery. Today he saw her in another light altogether; as the determined, resourceful, calculating woman who, having failed to attain a certain end, was now intensely, keenly interested in the development of another of a totally different nature. He could not feel sorry for her today.

Hetty deliberately had placed herself in their hands, withdrawing from the conference shortly before Vivian's arrival to give herself over to gloomy conjectures as to the future, not only for herself, but for the man she loved and the woman she worshiped with something of the fidelity of a beaten dog.

At a later conference participated in by Sara, Booth and Mr. Carroll, the old lawyer spoke plainly.

"Now are you both willing to give serious consideration to the plan I propose? Take time to think it over. No harm will come to Miss Castleton, I am confident. There will be a nine days' sensation, but, after all, it is the best thing for everybody. You propose living abroad, Booth, so what are the odds if—"

"I shan't live abroad unless Hetty reconsiders her decision to not marry me," said the young man dimly.

"Gad, Sara, you must convince her that I love her better than—"

"I think she knows all that, Brandon. As I said before, wait! And now, Mr. Carroll, I have this to say to your suggestion: I for one am relentlessly opposed to the plan you advocate. There is no occasion for this matter to go to the public. A trial, you say, would be a mere formality. I am not so sure of that. Why put poor Hetty's head in the lion's mouth at this late stage, after I have protected her so carefully all these months? Why, take the risk? We know she is innocent. Isn't it enough that we acquit her in our hearts? No, I cannot consent, and I hold both of you to your promises."

"There is nothing more I can say, my dear Sara," said Carroll, shaking his head gloomily, "except to urge you to think it over very seriously. Remember, it may mean a great deal to her—and to our eager young friend here. Years from now, like a bolt from the sky, the truth may come out in some way. Think of what it would mean then."

Sara regarded him steadily. "There are but four people who know the truth," she said slowly. "It isn't like ly that Hetty or Brandon will tell the story. Professional honor forbids your doing so. That leaves me as the sole peril. Is that what you would imply, my dear friend?"

"Not at all," he cried hastily, "not at all. I—"

"That's all tommy-rot, Sara," cried Booth earnestly. "We just couldn't have anything to fear from you."

With curious inconsistency, she shook her head and remarked: "Of course, you never could be quite easy in your minds. There would always be the feeling of unrest. And I to be trusted, after all? I have proved myself to be a vindictive schemer. What assurance can you and Hetty have that I will not turn against one or the other of you some time and crush you to satisfy a personal grievance? How do you know, Brandon, that I am not in love with you at this very—"

"Good heavens, Sara!" he cried, agape.

"—at this very moment?" she continued. "It would not be so very strange, would it? I am very human. The power to love is not denied me. Oh, I am merely philosophizing. Don't look so serious. We will suppose that I continued along my career as the woman scorned. You have seen how I smart under the lash. Well?"

"But all that is impossible," said Booth, his face clearing. "You're not in love with me, and never can be. That's for your philosophy!"

An appropriation of $15,000 was made toward defraying the expense of a North Carolina exhibit at the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco, next year.

The grand jury of Craven county Superior court has indicted L. C. Scott and J. M. Saunders, of Newbern, for murder on account of the death of N. C. Babson, who was killed in the Norfolk Southern Railway yards at Newbern when a train in charge of Saunders shoved a freight car against a car on which Babson was working. Scott's connection with the tragedy is not stated.

Expert Accountant Leslie Abbott, who has just finished an audit of the books of the city government of Winston-Salem, finds that Forsyth county is indebted to the city schools to an amount in excess of $13,000. The indebtedness seems to have arisen from the fact that the county authorities, in apportioning the school fund, ignored the city's share of the fines and forfeitures derived from the Municipal court of Winston-Salem.

Reports from different sections in the eastern part of the state are to the effect that the drought has seriously injured all truck and farm crops. Tobacco is having a hard time getting a start and there will be a short crop. The corn cotton and other crops will also be short. The truck crops have been almost ruined, and this is especially true of the Irish potato crop, which is not expected to yield more than one-fifth of the usual harvest.

Kearns R. Thompson, agent of the Southern Express Company at Reidsville, Friday killed a negro, Charlie Hurba, who had made his escape from officers after he was arrested on a charge of abduction. Chief of Police Walker Williams, having become exhausted in pursuit of the negro, deputized Thompson to make the arrest and furnished him with his pistol. The negro drew a knife and a brick on Thompson, who shot and instantly killed him.

Governor Craig has pardoned R. H. Denton, the Tarboro liveryman who was found with several barrels of liquor in his possession. Denton claimed that he was holding the liquor for another party, as security for a debt, but he was convicted and sentenced to 12 months on the roads, the conviction being affirmed by the Supreme court. Denton had served four months of his term. Pardon recommended by the judge who tried the case, the solicitor, county officers and many citizens.

Finley L. Williamson, who was appointed postmaster of Burlington some time ago, has resigned the position, effective June 15. He found that he did not have time to attend to both the duties of the office and his private business affairs. It is probable that O. F. Crowson, editor of the Burlington News, who was Williamson's strongest opponent for the office, will be given the appointment. Congressman Stedman is expected to make a recommendation in a day or two.

SUPERINTENDENT FOUST TO GUILFORD TEACHERS

To the White Teachers of Guilford County:

As you know, this is the year that all teachers of Guilford are required to attend a two-weeks' institute. As a regular teachers' institute will be held at the State Normal and Industrial College, we will not have a separate institute for Guilford county. All who expect to teach will be required to attend either the institute at the State Normal and Industrial College or at some other place where an institute is conducted that is approved by the state superintendent of public instruction.

The regular six-weeks' work for teacher training will begin June 16 and continue for six weeks. I hope that a large number of Guilford county teachers will attend the full six-weeks' course, although they are required by law to attend for two weeks only. If you have not received a bulletin giving full information about the teachers training work, also the institute work of two weeks, write to President J. I. Foust, State Normal College, Greensboro, and he will send this bulletin to you.

The registration fee for the six-weeks' course and the two-weeks' institute course will be refunded to the Guilford county teachers. This fee will be paid by the county board of education out of the appropriation for institute work.

As I said above, I hope you will be able to attend the full six-weeks' course, but if you cannot possibly do so, you are required by law to attend the two weeks of institute work. We are fortunate in Guilford in having the opportunity of attending at so small cost a school that will count much if we take advantage of it.

If there is any question you desire to ask, I shall be glad to answer it. I hope that you will have a pleasant vacation and that you will be enrolled among the teachers of Guilford next year.

Very sincerely yours,
THOS. R. FOUST,
County Superintendent

STATE BOARD ADOPTS NEW PLAN OF HEALTH WORK

The state board of health has changed its plan of fighting hookworm disease. Instead of selecting a county and spending a short time there—the dispensary method—the board now selects a community and sends a member of the force there to stay until every case of hookworm is treated and cured. In addition to that, sanitary precautions are installed in every home in the community which will prevent hookworm disease, typhoid fever and all other diseases due to soil pollution.

One community, Knotts Island, in Currituck county, has had already the benefit of such intensive work. Three communities—Salem, in Sampson county; Castle Haynes and Wrightsboro, in New Hanover county, and Philadelphia, in Robeson county—are being worked along this plan at the present time.

Any community in any county in the state may have such work done, and the board of health invites interested individuals or officials to communicate with the office in Raleigh for further information.

A negro giving his name as Davis was arrested yesterday for breaking into and robbing the home of Deputy Sheriff Joe Phipps, north of the city. The robbery was committed during the absence of Mr. and Mrs. Phipps. The negro was seen leaving the house by Mr. John E. McKnight, who, accompanied by Tom McKnight and Deputy Sheriffs Clark and Caffee, gave chase and captured the robber after a chase of several miles. The negro was committed to jail to await trial.

Ex-Congressman Charles R. Thomas, of Newbern, who was defeated by George E. Hood, of Goldsboro, for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the third district last week, protests against the action of the convention and says it was without authority. He claims that the convention was not called to make a nomination, but to ratify the action of the primary. Mr. Thomas has given notice that he will carry the matter before the state Democratic executive committee.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J.
