NINE DEAD AND 40 MISSING

LATER REPORTS FROM STORM CENTER ARE WORSE THAN FIRST REPORTED.

Montgomery, Ala., July 8.—Nine persons are known to have been killed and at least 40 are reported missing as a result of Wednesday's tropical storm on the Gulf coast and inland through the interior of Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia. In addition unconfirmed reports say that nearly a score of others persons were killed in isolated villages near Mobile.

Several days will be required to determine the complete correct number of casualties, owing to prostrated wire and rail communication throughout the storm swept region. Property damage probably will reach $5,000,000. Crops and timber suffering seriously.

The dead: Farmer killed near Cairo, Ga., when his home was demolished by tornado.

White engineer and negro fireman killed Friday at Bond, Miss., in wreck due to washout.

Three negroes drowned in flood near Birmingham.

Two negroes drowned in gale on Warrior river near Tuscaloosa.

Negro drowned in flood at Hawkinville, Ga.

New Orleans, July 7.—Not including Pensacola and the west Florida coast, which are yet to report, property damage by the tropical storm Wednesday and Thursday was conservatively estimated tonight at $4,000,000. This total covers Alabama and Mississippi and includes damage to buildings, crops, timber, shipping, railroads and telegraph and telephone wires.

This far no reports of loss of lives have been verified. The aggregate of damage probably will be materially increased when communication with western Florida is re-established and threatened floods in Central Alabama, where torrential rains fell all day today, may add to the total.

Complication of reports from points in Southern Mississippi indicated damage in that section to cotton, corn and other crops was about $1,500,000. Lumber interests in Mississippi and Alabama suffered about $1,000,000 damage, telegraph and telephone companies about $300,000, and railroads about $200,000. The remainder of the damage was estimated to buildings, shipping and crops in Alabama.

Wire service north of New Orleans was being rapidly restored today, but no communication by wire was obtainable to Mobile and Pensacola and it seemed probable that those cities would be isolated for several days more.

Railroad traffic out of New Orleans was being rapidly restored to-night with the exception of the Louisville and Nashville, which was hampered by washouts on its line to Mobile.

Two train derailments as the result of washouts were reported on different railroads today and in one a trainman was killed and two others injured.

BOY IS ACQUITTED OF KILLING HIS FATHER.

George Handley, the 14 year old son of W. F. Handley, a farmer of Portsmouth, Virginia, has been acquitted of killing his father several days ago when the youth fired a shotgun from a distance and opened up such a terrible wound on the father's body that he died subsequently from loss of blood.

When given a preliminary hearing the boy's father told a tale which excited the sympathy of his hearers. He said his father had set upon his mother and beaten her cruelly about the face. He said also that his father had struck his sister. While the quarrel was at its height the boy intervened on his mother's behalf and took down a shotgun. His father seeing this called the boy, who ran away pursued by his father. When in danger of being overtaken the lad called and bade his father approach at the risk of his life. His father backed up and received the fatal shot in the side.

The magistrate who heard the case dismissed the boy on the grounds that the shooting was in self defense.

SAM STOCKS HELD FOR TRIAL IN $10,000 BOND.

Kinston, July 8.—Samuel Stocks, held for trial by jury at the adjournment of the investigation into the lynching of Joseph Black, in progress here during the past five days, walked out of jail today when Lovit Hines, a prominent manufacturer, declared he would stand for the entire amount of the $10,000 bond, which Stocks, farm tenant, would have been unable to raise with means of his own, rather than see the man remain in prison. The following men, representing a total wealth of approximately half a million dollars, according to the tax books, insisted upon signing the bond with Hines: L. P. Tapp, J. H. Darden, Sr., a survivor of the "Immortal Six Hundred" of the Confederacy; W. C. Knox, R. S. Wooten, W. D. Larque, postmaster of Kinston; R. W. Fowler, J. B. Taylor, J. J. Wilson, W. E. Newborn, J. H. Parham, P. S. B. Harper, J. Q. Miller, E. L. Hardy, A. H. Hardy and Franklin Dail. All are citizens of Kinston or Lenoir county. Several of the bondsmen declared that a Greene county man should not have to, nor be allowed to, go the bond.

Stocks, reiterating that he had no part in the lynching of Joe Black, but that he had been made drunk by a party supposed to include a state's detective who testified against him in the probe, left for his home in Greene county. Held on "probable cause," he will be tried in Duplin county, adjoining Lenoir on the south, instead of in Onslow as announced by Judge Bond yesterday, a question of jurisdiction, since Onslow does not adjoin Lenoir, having impelled Judge Bond to make the change.

DURHAM GIRL IS VICTIM OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS.

Durham, July 8.—Miss Belle Cameron, 17-year-old daughter of Col. Benham Cameron, state senator from this county, is seriously ill at a local hospital with infantile paralysis. This is the only case known of in Durham.

Miss Cameron, physicians said, developed what was thought to be typhoid fever while at school in Baltimore. She was brought to a local hospital Monday, and today her physician diagnosed the case as infantile paralysis. An epidemic of the disease in Baltimore causes physicians to believe she developed it there.

Dr. Arch Cheatham, superintendent of health in Durham county, says every precaution against any spread of the disease will be taken. He will leave next week for Baltimore to become better acquainted with the disease, and be prepared to cope with any situation that might arise.

DURHAM FARMER KILLED BY EXCURSION TRAIN.

C. B. Thompson, a farmer of the Merry Oaks section of Durham county, was instantly killed by a Durham and Southern passenger train chartered as an excursion by the First Baptist Sunday school, near Merry Oaks, Thursday morning. Mr. Thompson, who was sixty odd years old, made an effort to swing aboard the train as it pulled out of Merry Oaks. He missed his hold and the steps of the car knocked him beneath the wheels. Three coaches passed over his body, the lower half of which was ground to pulp. The tragedy was witnessed by dozens of people, including a ten year old son of the deceased and a brakeman who signalled the conductor to stop the train. The inanimate form of the aged farmer was picked up and carried inside the railway station. The excursion was held up for about a quarter of an hour because of the accident.

Mr. Thompson was not one of the excursionists. Just why he tried to swing himself aboard the train is and always will be a mystery. He was a stranger to all on the train. He had no ticket calling for transportation and he was dressed in overalls. The train was running about eight miles an hour when the accident occurred.

Socialist Candidates.—Greensboro this year furnishes two of the candidates of the Socialist party for state officers. They are: R. J. Morton, the nominee for lieutenant governor, and W. M. Weatherly, for secretary of state.

DENTS IN GERMAN LINES

ALLIES STILL HAVE THE ADVANTAGE—GERMANY IS FACING A GRAVE CRISIS.

London, July 7.—British and Russian armies striking simultaneously on the western and eastern fronts today made further dents in the German lines and created what military critics believed to be the greatest problem yet faced by the German general staff.

For the first time during the war Germany has been called upon to meet a determined double offensive on opposite fronts, and the German tacticians must now determine how to meet the new, co-ordinated strategy of the entente allies and how best to utilize Germany's available military resources.

Gen. Haig's army today gained several important successes. It captured further positions in the immensely strong position known as the Leipzig redoubt, while east of La-bollesse it captured German trenches on a front of nearly 2,000 yards to a depth of 500 yards. They also forced their way into the village of Orvillers after capturing five hundred yards of the German front, while north of Fricourt they drove the enemy from two woods and captured three lines of trenches.

Gen. Evert's Russian army is attacking on a hundred mile front running approximately from the Vila line north to Baranovichi in the south. The seriousness of the crisis is reflected in the paucity of information given the German public in Berlin's official bulletins, which, however, at last admit the loss of Hem and Belloy on the western front.

There is no confirmation of the report from Rome that the whole German line on the eastern front is retreating, but the Russians continue to report success after success.

The latest official statement issued by Berlin admits a retirement from a salient in the Czartorysk region, and the Russian statement tonight announces that Russian cavalry has captured Mamevitchie, which is only some 50 miles from Kovell.

Clearly the Russian offensive towards Baranovichi, Kovell and Lemberg, added to the collapse of the Austrians, greatly endanger the whole German lines. Heavy fighting is continuing along the whole line and the Russians are adding to their captures of prisoners and booty hourly. Prisoners captured by the Russians during the past few days number nearly 20,000.

The English official statement of tonight announcing results of today's fighting said that the German casualties during the day must have been severe. Large numbers of troops, retreating over the open, were caught by artillery fire and the village of Bazen-Le-Petit was heavily shelled at a time when it was seen to be full of German reserves.

Little is known of the casualties suffered by the British either in today's fighting or previous drives of the present movement. The first list was published tonight and names over 200 officers, of whom 25 were killed. It says 1,700 men were killed and wounded. Among those killed was Col. Robert Jeffray Douglas.

The question whether Great Britain will be able to maintain an adequate supply of ammunition at the present rate of wastage received an answer in part today from Frederick G. Kellaway, M. P., secretary to Dr. Christopher Addison, who next to David Lloyd George is the most important official in the ministry of munitions. Mr. Kellaway says:

"We are not yet at the full flood of our output of guns and shells. If the Germans cannot be driven home otherwise, our army shall have such a supply of guns that the limbers shall touch each other in a continuous line from the Somme to the sea."

He added that 90 new arsenals had been provided and that 4,000 controlled firms are producing munitions. The total number of munition workers in 1914, he said, was under two million and there now are three and a half million. The labor problem, Mr. Kellaway asserted, has been to a large extent solved by the women. Before the war 184,000 women were engaged in war industries. There are now 666,000 so engaged.

Misses Nellie and Kate Hoskins, of Summerfield, have gone to Linville Falls to spend a few weeks.

AN INVASION SCOFFED AT

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION IN NEW YORK SEES NO DANGER FOR NEXT 20 YEARS.

Lessons learned from the European war, how they should be taught to the youth of this country, and what the public school can do toward maintenance of permanent peace were subjects discussed in New York before the convention of the National Educational Association.

Phillander P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education, in an address opposing compulsory military training in the schools, asserted that if we want a real preparedness in America, we should appoint a commission to devise a national system of education "which shall be democratic, flexible and practical."

"Just think of the situation," said Mr. Claxton, "not for 20 years can any big nation think of invading us and then we shall be 150,000,000 strong. If we are well prepared and our minds are conscious of our might, we will be unconquerable."

"Speaking of war with us, the Japanese minister of war said: 'We probably could take the Philippines and perhaps Hawaii, too. We might land an army on the Pacific coast, but by that time the big nation would be awake and soon there would be no more Japan and our only successes would be of no avail.' Does it not sound reasonable? Is it not likely other nations are of the same opinion?"

"A noted educator told me once that 87 per cent of the education comes from things we do. I don't know whether his figures are exact, but I believe they are substantially correct. The great Germany of 60 years ago, to which all the world went to school and incomparably greater than the Germany of let us say another day, was the generation after the school was set up in the gymnasium. The Greece that was great did not become so studying archaeology. Do these facts point toward a solution for our problem of today?"

UNITED STATES PAYS A MILLION FOR A RAILROAD.

One more big step was taken in the development by Uncle Sam of Alaska last week when he paid the final $1,000,000 for title to the Alaska Northern Railroad.

Five hundred thousand dollars of the million and a half purchase price was paid last February.

Last week's payment marks the transfer of the title to the property from the original owners to the American government. From the time of the first payment until the final payment the title has been in hands of a trust company at Washington.

This final payment is the forerunner of the actual opening of the coal lands of Alaska to settlers this fall.

Secretary of the Interior Lane doesn't know exactly when this opening will be announced, but it is expected to be before early winter sets in.

The Matanuska coal fields of Alaska are among the richest in the world; and the small miner is to be given a chance to make a living and a competence from small claims the government will parcel out.

The government has carefully guarded these coal lands from monopolization by big holding companies. In stopping the development of all claims, regardless of who held them, just to be sure to keep the lands from being monopolized, Uncle Sam has stood up so straight he has bent over backward. Hundreds of small investors will welcome the opening of the fields.

Work begun on the extension and improvement of the government railroad line to the heart of the coal fields is being rushed to completion by thousands of laborers. Some of these groups of workers have built new towns on their way up the line.

The line should be completed by the end of this year from Anchorage to Matanuska. From there it is to be pushed on up from Matanuska river through the Sustina valley.

Secretary Lane said he considered the Alaska Northern a good investment at $1,500,000 because the actual value of the property; it's cost, that is to say, to the men who built it originally, was $2,750,000.

Mrs. E. E. Bain and two daughters are spending some time at Ocean View, Va.

200 CARRANZA TROOPS ARE KILLED BY YAQUI INDIANS.

Nogales, Ariz., July 8.—From 200 to 300 Carranza soldiers and camp followers were massacred by Brancho Yaquis early this week in Lower Sonora, according to arrivals here today. Those of the de facto detachment not killed by gunfire, it was said, were burned at the stake.

While reports place the number of dead at 300, conservative estimates made on the known disposal of troops near the scene, put the loss at 200.

News of the disaster to the Carranza forces has caused extreme unrest among the several thousand Yaquis and Mayos now at Empalme.

General Estrada has had several thousand troops in the Yaqui valley, holding back the Yaquis, and it is believed the opportunity for the reported massacre came about when Estrada moved his main command north to Hermosillo and Magdalena in the course of mobilization maneuvers.

DURHAM MAN CHARGED WITH HEINOUS CRIME.

With his prisoner firmly handcuffed, Sheriff J. W. Staples, of Patrick county, Virginia, left Durham Thursday on the Southern westbound train for Stuart, Virginia, with Richard Rakes, the young white man who was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Joe Pleasants, of West Durham, Wednesday, upon advices received telling of his being wanted to answer to a charge of rape. The officer said that he would take an automobile at Greensboro and motor from there to Stuart in order to circumvent if possible the designs of the mob who he said had threatened violence.

The affair, according to the Virginia officer, was a very brutal one. The victim of the young man's designs is a highly respected married lady and the circumstances attendant upon the deed are said to have been of a most horrible nature. According to the report the husband has vowed to wreak vengeance on Rakes and the people of the community where the outrage occurred are determined to visit the young man with summary punishment.

Deputy Sheriff Pleasants received a certified check for $150 from the Virginia officer, this amount having been offered as a reward for the capture of Rakes.

DEMOCRATIC HEADQUARTERS WILL BE OPENED IN RALEIGH.

Campaign headquarters for the Democrats will be opened in Raleigh August 1, according to information given out by State Chairman Thomas D. Warren. Mr. Warren said he had not finally closed for a place for headquarters. Two years ago campaign headquarters were at the Yarrowborough.

"Speaking will not begin until September," said Mr. Warren. About two months of speaking should be sufficient, Mr. Warren thinks.

Practically ever since his re-election, on April 27, Mr. Warren has been busy arranging the preliminaries of the campaign. A great deal of literature already has gone out and much has been done in the direction of arousing the organizations in the counties.

"The big problem," said Mr. Warren, "is the same this year that it is every year, namely, to get out the vote. Our folks are so accustomed to victory that unless they are repeatedly appealed to, a goodly number of them do not take the trouble to vote."

The organizations in the counties are in the main in pretty good shape, Mr. Warren has learned. In cases where the party leaders are not actively at work, he will use his best endeavors to get them aroused to the end that a full vote may be gotten out in November.

Asserts Kaiser Weeps.

Paris, July 7.—The kaiser has burst into tears several times recently, says the Petit Parisien. Intrigues showing that things are not going well in Germany are one cause of his grief, the newspaper asserts, and another is that the big men of the empire are showing a disposition to abandon him.

"The story is not a mere sensational invention," adds the newspaper. "The tears would naturally be produced by Germany's unfavorable situation."

SUBMARINE BRINGS A CARGO

GERMAN SUBMARINE REACHES PORT SAFELY, ELUDING ENEMY BLOCKADING FLEET.

Baltimore, Md., July 9.—The world's first submarine merchantman, the German underwater liner Deutschland, anchored below Baltimore tonight, after voyaging safely across the Atlantic, passing the allied blockading squadrons and eluding enemy cruisers watching for her off the American coast. She carried mail and a cargo of 750 tons of costly chemicals and dyestuffs, and is to carry home a similar amount of nickel and crude rubber sorely needed by the German army.

Sixteen days out from Bremerhaven to Baltimore, the submarine reached safely between the Virginia capes at 1.45 o'clock this morning, passing in on the surface covered by a heavy pall of darkness which settled over the entrance of the bay with the setting of a tell-tale half moon. Once inside, the visitor threw caution aside and began shrieking his siren, signaling a pilot, and at the same time attracting the attention of the tug Thomas F. Timmins which had been waiting in the lower bay for nearly two weeks to greet the Deutschland and convoy her into port.

ECLIPSE OF MOON AND SUN IS DUE DURING MONTH.

North Carolinians interested in solar and lunar topics will be interested to learn that there will be an interesting partial eclipse of the moon on the night of July 14-15, about 80 per cent of the moon's surface being covered by the earth's shadow. It should be observed in Greensboro, weather permitting, about 9.30 o'clock on Friday night, when the shadow commences, and lasts until after midnight.

An eclipse of the moon can only occur at full moon, or at "opposition," it is termed; that is, when the moon in its orbit about the earth is on opposite of the earth to the sun, all three bodies being in line—the moon, the earth and the sun—the moon passing through the earth's shadow. As the earth's shadow at the point through which the moon passes is nearly three times the diameter of the moon, it will be seen a total eclipse may occur when these bodies are not in exact alignment. The length of the earth's shadow is approximately 857,000 miles and that of the moon, 232,000 miles.

The eclipse of the sun will occur on July 29, and will be what is termed "annular," that is, the position of the moon and the sun at the time of the eclipse will be in such relation to the earth, the sun being at its nearest point and the moon at its most distant, that the moon will not cover the sun's disc, a narrow rim of sunlight showing entirely around the moon. When these relative conditions are reversed we can have a total eclipse.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS IS SPREADING IN NEW YORK.

New York, July 9.—Nineteen more deaths from infantile paralysis in New York city for the 24 hours ending at 10 o'clock this morning, were reported by the department of health tonight, making the total fatalities 224 since the epidemic started. Eighty-eight new cases were reported today, against 95 the day before. The total number of cases now has reached 980. The mortality rate is still about 23 per cent.

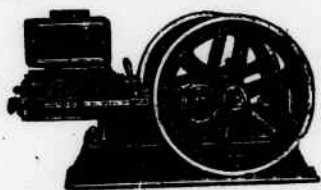

Several New Jersey towns have served notice that non-resident children under 16 will not be permitted to enter.

Federal and city health authorities here are uniting their efforts to prevent the spread of the disease to outlying districts and, it was said, are urging the railroads to co-operate.

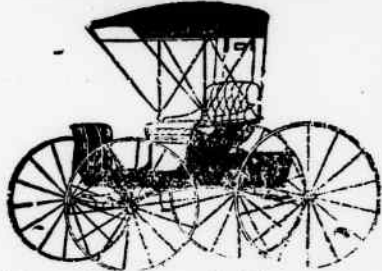

Dr. Haven Emerson, health commissioner, announced that offers of accommodations in 10 private hospitals have been accepted, and beginning this week volunteer relief stations with nurses in charge will be opened all over the city.

In the churches today pastors read from the pulpits bulletins advising parents how to guard their children against the disease.

Mr. H. E. Cartland has returned from Richmond, Va., where he spent a few weeks in a hospital for surgical treatment. He is regaining his strength rapidly.

His Backache Gone.

Just how dangerous a backache, sore muscles, aching joints or rheumatic pains may be is sometimes realized only when life insurance is refused on account of kidney trouble. Joseph G. PAYS PENALTY FOR BURGLARY CRIME.

Raleigh, July 8.—The first criminal to die in the electric chair in North Carolina for first degree burglary paid the death penalty yesterday morning at the state prison when Lawrence Swinson, a negro from Wilmington was electrocuted for his crime at 10.30 o'clock. It required two shocks before Dr. J. B. Rogers pronounced the negro dead.

The crime for which Swinson died occurred in Wilmington about a year ago and was one of a series of burglaries that puzzled the authorities of that city for some time before Swinson was arrested and charged with the capital offense. There were several counts against him.

Swinson, like others who have preceded him in the chair, took his seat with no show of emotion and had but few words to say while in the chair. "Oh, Lord, have mercy on me," were his last words uttered just before the powerful current snuffed out his life.

He was baptized Thursday by Rev. James Satterwhite, and one of the last things he did while in his cell was to write a farewell note in which he urged all of his race to avoid bad company. It was bad associations, he said, that led him to commit his crime that brought him to the electric chair.

The body was prepared for burial in this city and today will be sent to his mother in Wilmington for interment. There were no relatives here to take charge of the body.

Still Captured in Randolph.

Randleman, July 7.—A hundred-gallon still and 1,500 gallons of beer were captured in Providence township, Randolph county, yesterday by Deputy Sheriff's Steed, Baker and Lessiter. Will Nunnery and a man named King were found at the still, but King escaped. This is the biggest still ever captured in this county.

Mrs. Laura Beall, Plattsburg, Miss., writes: "Last April I got in bad health; my left side hurt all the time. I had symptoms of Bright's disease. I took Foley Kidney Pills and feel all right now." They quickly relieve backache, rheumatism, aches and pains. Bladder troubles, too, are corrected by this remedy. Conyers' Drug Store. Adv.

OVER 15,000 CLUB FARMERS
PEANUT, CORN, AND PIG CLUB BOYS' AND GIRLS'
CLUB MEMBERS IN N. C.
Raleigh, July 8.—While the state is overrunning with patriotism because of the way in which its national guard has responded to the calls of duty, it is well that North Carolina's other army is not forgotten. This is the one which is enrolled in the fight against superstitious ideas in regard to better methods of farming, against old methods of soil exhaustion, and working for better farming, better homes, and better business methods on the farm. This army is the 15,000 young people engaged in club work.
Fifteen thousand young folks representing the best blood of the farming communities are now engaged in a fight, the like of which the state has never seen before. These boys and girls seem to be more enthused over their work this year than ever before and the members of the different clubs have shown that they are of the dependable kind. One great reason for this is that the work has been broadened and extended to take in practically all phases of the farm work as well as give something of interest to the housewife. In many communities where there are representatives of all the clubs, "Township Clubs" have been formed for the purpose of having a regular organization with definite times for meeting. Crop Rotation Clubs have also been formed so as to teach the boy that he must labor to make his land better year by year rather than rob it of a big crop one year and leave it to make a small one the following.
North Carolina is a leader in the production of peanuts and Peanut Clubs have been formed for those boys in the eastern section of the state who find them more interesting than the Corn Clubs. The Pig and Poultry Clubs are furnishing the farm boy a fine outlet for his inherent love for some form of livestock. The fact that only pure bred livestock is allowed in the clubs has made the animals of still further value in his eyes and has held the interest of every member joining.
The extension service has made it plain to the young folks that quitters are not wanted in the enrollment. If a boy cannot stick up under adverse conditions such as drought, an over-abundance of rain, poor stand, or sickness in his animals, then that boy will never develop the qualities of "stickability" that are so necessary in the world's busy life of today. Mr. Browne has stressed this point in a circular letter recently sent out to the parents of the young club members so that they may give them encouragement when it is needed. The membership so far seems to be more dependable than it has been before.
At the end of the first six months of this season's work it has been found that the Corn Club boys, in nearly all cases, have their acres in good cultivation and the crop is looking fine. Practically every Pig Club member has secured his pig and about fifty per cent of the animals are pure bred stock. These boys are feeding and caring for them according to the best rules of swine growing. The Poultry Club members are also showing great interest. They are building good coops, furnishing clean, sanitary quarters and are feeding the flocks with more intelligence. And it might be stated right here that it has not been long since any old food was considered good enough for poultry and pigs. Now it has been shown by the "new army" that good food, good attention, good feeding and care are worth made with these two farm products than with any other two produced in the state.
A larger number of favorable reports are being received by the office in charge of the agricultural clubs. The boys who are writing in seem to know that they are some of North Carolina's most important farmers at the present time and want the advice to know how they are getting along. One boy wrote that "My crop will not take a prize this year, as the land is thin, and I got a late start, but am looking forward to do better next year. Yours in hope for the future, C. H." His crop is not doing so well, but the crop of manhood that he is developing will be worth considerably more to him than any gold medal or farm implement. He is typical of the new dependable sort of manhood that is now in the club work. In years previous, a number of boys would not go into the club work because some few of the boys used unfair means to win the prizes offered. Now the boys are all looking at the club work in a different light and are competing honestly and with more intelligence. In some of the meetings of the agricultural clubs or township clubs the boys have prepared and delivered papers that were worthy of an agricultural graduate. When asked as to where such interesting material was obtained, the reply was, "I got all that from the letters and bulletins which are sent me."

But only 7,723 of the "new army" are boys. The remainder are girls and young ladies. These are increasing the income of the farm home and are preparing more digestible foods where the influence of the extension service has been felt. More home conveniences, better knowledge of home economies, more stylish garments, and more money are all drifting into the homes where the girls and women have enlisted as Amazons in the ranks for the fight for better homes in the back country. At the meetings of the township clubs it is usually the girls who aid in making the occasion a success, even though some important club boy may be the president or secretary.
In carrying on this work with the boys Mr. Browne and his co-workers have traveled during the past six months, 25,576 miles by rail, 6,228 miles by team; they have attended and addressed 257 meetings with an attendance of 18,736 people; they have written 2,981 letters; have prepared 49 circulars, of which 58,652 copies have been mailed out; and they have visited personally 714 club members.
This is a good record, especially when the members are scattered from the ocean to the mountains and are largely in rural districts. A number of these members will attend the short course for club boys at the Agricultural and Mechanical College during the month of August, and plans have already been made to give them an instructive as well as an interesting stay. The program for these August meetings is now being prepared and the motion picture will enter largely into the instruction that the young folks will receive. It is planned to give them all methods of up-to-date farming and then to spend some time on showing them views of the United States. These latter views will be obtained from the secretary of the interior at Washington, and should prove of great value and interest. Two different films will be shown each night.
And so it is in this way that the service hopes to break down the walls of custom that have so long made North Carolina folks follow closely the farm work that was done by their fathers before them, and in teaching the present generation of boys and girls while young to know a better method of doing the same thing. It wants to teach economy, careful thought, systematic accounting. It tries to show that pure bred animals are better and cheaper than scrubs and it wants the young folks to learn that the soil, the basis of all wealth, is not inexhaustible, but will soon wear out if not given the proper care and attention. Then finally this young army of over 15,000 souls is learning through its community activities the true meaning of that wonderful command, "Love thy neighbor as thyself."
Tipperary His Last Music.
Trenton, N. J., July 5.—After having played a talking machine almost up to the last minute and with "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" as his closing number, Emil Swentain, of Monmouth county, went to his death in the electric chair at the state prison with a smile on his face. Swentain was convicted of the murder of John Boston, an aged recluse living near Farmingdale, who was believed to be wealthy and whose money Swentain sought. The murder occurred two weeks after Swentain had been acquitted of killing Mrs. Jane Oakes, an aged woman who lived alone in the same vicinity. Developments of his second trial, however, it is said, also placed the responsibility for her death upon Swentain.
The condemned man passed the entire afternoon and a good part of the evening in the enjoyment of the music. He had an assortment of 30 records from which to select, and played all of them two or three times. He derived an especially large fund of pleasure from the "Tipperary" number and had it on the machine when the guards came to lead him from his cell to the electric chair.
Swentain was 30 years old and had a wife and two children living in Germany.

CAPT. T. V. BUNCH DIED AT RALEIGH THURSDAY.
Captain Thomas V. Bunch, for many years station master at the union depot in Raleigh and known by face if not by name by a large percent of the traveling public of the state, died at his home, 508 South Harrington street, Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.
Captain Bunch had been confined to his home for about six months and had been in failing health for the past year. He was pensioned by the railroads two years ago but continued, on frequent occasions, to go down and assist his successor, Mr. L. R. Thacker.
Captain Bunch was born in Wake county, near Auburn, March 8, 1836, and was eighty years and four months old at the time of his death. He married Miss Jane Keith, also of Wake county, who preceded him to the grave in 1902. There are three sons, B. H. and Guy L. Bunch, of Raleigh, and R. E. L. Bunch, of New York.
Captain Bunch commenced his long and successful railroad career in January, 1873, as baggage agent of the Raleigh and Gaston Railroad. Later he was made joint baggage agent of the Raleigh and Gaston and the Richmond and Danville, which position he held until the present union station was occupied, about 23 years ago, when he became station master, holding the position until two years ago and still being on the pay roll of the railroads at the time of his death.
During all his long service of the railroad, Captain Bunch never lost a day's pay because of sickness. He was as regular as clockwork and it was the general comment of the traveling public and fellow-workers that the railroads never had a more faithful and reliable employee.
With the same fidelity that marked his connection with the railroads he served as a soldier through the war between the states, being a member of company K, forty-seventh North Carolina regiment.
GOVERNMENT EXPERTS FOUND STATE VACCINE SATISFACTORY
According to recent reports, a number of samples of anti-typhoid vaccine now on the market have been found upon examination by the government experts to be of little or no value as an immunizing agent against typhoid fever. Immediately upon hearing of these reports, samples of anti-typhoid vaccine regularly furnished by the state laboratory of hygiene were submitted to the government experts with a request for examination. According to a report just received from the federal experts, "this vaccine appears to be entirely satisfactory and comes up to the required standard."
It is gratifying indeed to know that the state product is not only up to standard but that it will be furnished free to every citizen of the state who will apply for it through his family physician. Those who have been and are now being immunized against typhoid fever may rest assured that their immunization will be satisfactory.
While the state board of health can give no information as to the names of manufacturers or companies producing and selling the vaccine which was found by the government experts to be of little or no value, it is urged by the state board of health that all those using anti-typhoid vaccine other than that furnished by the state laboratory of hygiene, at Raleigh, ascertain through the agents or through the manufacturers themselves if their product meets with the standard of the federal authorities.
Bear Whipped Four Men.
Hibbing, Minn., July 7.—A fight with a big black bear in Indian Point Lake, in the Swan Lake country, lately, in which four men in a gasoline boat had a narrow escape from being swamped by a storm which raged, is the tale that Frank Correy, of Hibbing, is telling.
According to Correy, the four men were in a boat headed for shore when they noticed something black which looked like a dog swimming ahead of their craft. The men made for the black object and discovered it was a large bear.
With oars the men kept the bear away from the boat, while one of them threw a rope about the bear's neck. They towed the animal in to shore, where the beast put up such a fight that the men were forced to cut the rope and let bruin take to the woods.

WILL OF MRS. HETTY GREEN FILED FOR PROBATE.
The will of Mrs. Hetty Green, long known as the wealthiest woman in America, leaves the bulk of her estate to her son, Colonel Green, and her daughter, Mrs. Wilks. The remainder is distributed in smaller bequests to old friends of Mrs. Green.
No estimate of the total value of the estate is contained in the will, a document of nine typewritten pages, dated March 28, 1911.
The following "tokens of esteem" are bequeathed:
Mrs. Herbert Bancroft, of New York, a friend of Mrs. Green, $5,000; Amory A. Lawrence, of Boston, $10,000; Ruth Lawrence, New York, $5,000, and Matthew Astor Wilks, husband of Mrs. Green's daughter, $5,000 as "an appreciation of having made an ante-nuptial relinquishment of any claim on his wife's property."
The will disposes of the estate of Mrs. Green's husband as directed in his will. This property goes to the son and daughter.
A trust fund is then provided for the daughter, and the son is directed to serve as trustee without pay. Nearly $5,000,000 in bonds and mortgages are to be held in trust by the son and daughter for ten years, the income to be given to the daughter every three months and the capital to revert to her at the termination of the trust.
The residue of the estate is left to the son and daughter. No stipulation appears in the will as to the disposition of the estate after the trust expires.
Discuss Plans to Retain Control of Senate.
Vance McCormick, chairman of the Democratic national committee, has been discussing with Democratic senators the part the committee will take in the fight to retain control of the senate. Senator Saulsbury, of Delaware, was selected tentatively to take charge of that feature of the campaign and may be made head of a bureau, under Mr. McCormick, rather than chairman of a senatorial committee, independent of the national committee. Senator Walsh, of Montana, and possibly other senators are expected to be selected by Mr. McCormick as members of the campaign committee.

SECRETARY LANSING WRITES NOTE TO CARRANZA IN FRIENDLY TONE.

Washington, July 7.—Inception of the diplomatic conversations which it is hoped will result in a settlement of differences between the United States and the de facto government of Mexico awaited tonight a suggestion from Gen. Carranza as to how they should proceed. State department officials believe more can be accomplished through informal conferences between Eliseo Arredondo, Mexican ambassador designate, and Frank L. Polk, acting secretary of state, than by a more formal interchange of views. They are willing to accede, however, to some other plan should the de facto government propose it.

Mr. Arredondo transmitted to his government today a brief and friendly note handed to him by Secretary Lansing, expressing gratification over the turn affairs between the two governments have taken and accepting proposals for diplomatic settlement of points in dispute. The communication was approved by the cabinet. The text follows:

"Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your courteous note transmitted to me by Senor Arredondo on the 4th instant, in which you refer to my notes of June 20 and June 25, and to assure you of the sincere gratification of my government at the frank statement of the difficulties which have unfortunately arisen in our relations along the international boundary, and the unreserved expression of the desire of your government to reach an adjustment of the difficulties on a broad and amicable basis. The same spirit of friendship and of solicitude for the continuance of cordial relations between our two countries inspires my government, which equally desires an immediate solution of the matters of difference which have long vexed both governments.

"It is especially pleasing to my government that the de facto government of Mexico is disposed to give quick as well as practical consideration in a spirit of concord to the remedies which may be applied to the existing condition. Reciprocating the same desire, the government of the United States is prepared immediately to exchange views as to a practical plan to remove finally and prevent a recurrence of difficulties which have been the source of the controversy.

"Accept, Mr. Secretary, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

"I am, sir,

"Yours very sincerely,
"ROBERT LANSING."

FRANCIS J. HENEY'S DECLARATION AND ITS VALUE.

That picturesque Progressive, grimly dubbed by his political enemies the Wild Ass of the Desert, Francis J. Heney, of California, has declined to follow Roosevelt into the Hughes-Barnes-Penrose camp, preferring Woodrow Wilson, the tried executive, to the party that is still controlled by the same men whose "political corruption four years ago deprived Roosevelt of the Republican nomination." Mr. Heney would have supported the colonel, "loyalty," had he been a candidate, but he refuses to be delivered into the enemy's hands along with other of the Progressives who have accepted their late leader's dictum. We note that the Democratic national committee proposes to use the Heney revolutionary document as campaign propaganda. But, perhaps, its importance is slightly overestimated. Mr. Heney has been outside the breastworks, so to say, in California for several years. Originally a Democrat, he cast his lot with the Johnson forces in the rescue of California from railroad political dictation and for a time stood high in the Progressive party councils of the state. Then his personal political aspirations clashed with those of the governor and as a result Heney was eliminated from the inner circle. Leaving San Francisco, he opened a law office in Los Angeles with the view, it was stated, to pursue with better hopes of accomplishment his campaign for the United States senatorship, to succeed Works, a Los Angeles man. By general consent, California's two senators are chosen according to geographical location. Senator Phelan, of San Francisco, succeeded Senator Perkins; ergo, Senator Works' seat will naturally go to a southern California candidate. Herein is Governor Johnson's weakness; he would like to exchange his gubernatorial honors for the toga. Heney knows this and may decide to enter the lists to make Johnson's defeat the more certain. If he becomes a candidate it will have to be as a Democrat, however, since the Progressive party has lost its identity in the state and Heney himself is no longer persona grata with the late leaders. California, in all likelihood, will endorse the Republican electoral ticket next November, thus insuring a Republican United States senator in place of Judge Works, elected by the Progressives and later repudiated by them. So, while Heney's pronouncement has a sentimental value to the Democratic candidate for president, in a practical way, so far as aiding in carrying California, his support will be of little avail.—Richmond Journal.

A LIST OF THE "FIRST" EVENTS IN EUROPEAN WAR.

When and where did we fire the first shot in the great war? On sea, the ball was probably opened by the Grafton, which, about midnight on August 4, 1915, put a shot across the bows of a German barque in the North sea, made her crew prisoners and seized her as a prize of war.

But the honor of landing the first blow on sea fell to the Amphion, which on August 5, 1914, sank the German mine layer Koenigen Luise. The Amphion herself was sunk by a mine on the following day, and was the first of our losses. We did not score against German warships proper, however, till August 9, 1914, when the Birmingham sent the U-15 to the bottom.

In land operations our first shot was fired on August 20, 1914, by the Fourth Dragoon guards. The same regiment was the first to begin killing Germans. This took place at Hermignies at about 5 A. M., on August 20, when a part of C. squadron opened fire on a number of the enemy at a distance of about 600 yards. The first Hun to fall was an officer.

It seems clear, further, that on this occasion the Fourth Dragoons not only took the first prisoners, but fired the first machine guns used on our side in the war.

As regards the first shell fired on land, there is some dispute, both E battery and D battery, Royal Horse artillery, claiming the record. The evidence in favor of the former, however, is much the stronger. It went into action at Bray, near Mons, at 11.15 A. M., on August 22, and the case of the first shell it fired is now in England.

When, again, was gas first used? The earliest record is 5 A. M., on April 22, 1915, when the Germans released it in the northern sector of the Ppres salient, and among the first, if not the first, of the units to get the "benefit" was the Second London Heavy Battery, Royal Garrison Artillery (territorial), some of the men of which were "gassed."

Here is another hotly disputed point: Which regiment gained the first Victoria Cross? The royal engineers say the record is theirs, and both an officer and a lance corporal in that famous corps certainly won the coveted distinction on August 23, 1914.

The officer was Capt. Theodore Wright, who, at Mons attempted under heavy fire to connect up the line to demolish a bridge, and, though wounded in the head, made a second trial. He was mortally wounded at Valley on September 14. On the same day—August 23—Lance Corporal C. A. Jarvis won the Victoria cross for great gallantry at Jemmapes.

But the royal engineers were run very close by both the Fifteenth Hussars and the Fourth Battery, Royal Fusiliers, to each of which fell a Victoria cross on August 23, 1914. In all, the most-prizes of military decorations was won four times on that fateful day.—From London Answers.

IMMENSE FORCES EMPLOYED BY THE ALLIES IN FRANCE.

Facts and impressions come in overwhelming numbers to the press correspondent who is on the move morning and night trying to grasp the details of the gigantic struggle which is in progress in northern France. At every turn he realizes the immense forces of material and men that are being employed in this determined offensive.

Everywhere the eye can reach are perspiring and dust-laden soldiers, while on the side lines groups of peasants call out to the passing soldier and the drivers of ammunition trains, endlessly going and coming, for the latest news. British and German wounded are seen limping off the field side by side, while processions of trucks of reloaded shells, and ambulances deliver wounded at the dressing stations to be passed on to waiting trains. Where the British and French lines join there is another world of blue and khaki uniforms and varied kinds of transport vehicles. An automobile took the Associated Press correspondent to a point on the battlefield which a week ago had been in sight and range of the German machine gunners. Reserves were sitting about among the shell craters wrought by the terrific fire of the British guns. German rifles were being gathered in piles and German dead in rows for burial. The correspondent was offered captured German helmets on all hands by the soldiers, German officers' revolvers and even a pair of binoculars.

Change in Scene Amazing.

The change from the scenes presented by the monotonous trench warfare to those of an advancing army was amazing. From the ruins of the German positions between Montauhan and Matetz the correspondent looked over the whole field toward the second great line of the German defenses where the barbed wire entanglements were plainly discernible; from the field won by the British with its battle litter and silent shell holes the spectator looked forward to where the battle still ranged and west beyond Fricourt to where the British infantry were advancing to take another position.

Men who were spoken of talked of "good luck" or "bad luck," which meant that they had made the rush across the zone between the old British and German lines against little opposition, or that some machine guns had been still in position and snipers had survived the shell fire.

As an instance of the amazing rapidity with which the British troops advanced, a British colonel took his first real sleep since the fight began in a German dugout where his predecessor's candle still burned on the table.

FLIES MORE DANGEROUS THAN BULLETS ON BORDER.

"Never mind the bullets, but watch out for the flies," is the advice of an army surgeon, who served in the war in Cuba and who has recently been in service at the various army posts along the Mexican border, to the North Carolina boys now leaving for the banks of the Rio Grande. He says that there is more danger from flies alone in Mexico than from hot weather and bullets combined and that there's safety to be had only behind screens and not even then unless the greatest care is taken with the food and water.

As to anti-typhoid vaccine as a preventative against typhoid fever, he says that it is a great thing, a wonderful thing, but unless the boys take the utmost care as to their eating, drinking, their personal hygiene and their sleeping, that not even will vaccination keep off all typhoid fever, but that it will reduce their chances against it over a thousand times. "Then, too," says he, "there's pneumonia to guard against, for the thermometer in Mexico runs to 160 in the sun and from 106 to 108 in the shade, while at nights it often drops so low as to bring on a sudden chill. This makes pneumonia dangerous, but with the proper care of one's self, a man may keep fit and avoid sickness.

"Another health hazard," says the doctor, "that a soldier is likely to encounter down in Mexico is typhus fever. As you know, it is carried from one to another by the body louse just as malaria or yellow fever is carried by the mosquito. Carefulness and good personal hygiene is again one of the best preventatives. Frequent bathing and clean clothes do much to keep off the louse and down the infection, while naphthalene, kerosene and various powders are recommended for killing the lice and nits.

"But," says the doctor, "if a soldier has been vaccinated against typhoid and smallpox and will guard against infection and will practice daily as much personal hygiene as is possible, these will give him his best chances for coming back home."

Diplomacy teaches us that the only way to get along with some people is by carefully concealing our opinion of them.

SAYS THE ALLIES WILL WIN

VISCOUNT BRYCE SAYS THEY ARE STRONGER ON LAND AND CONTROL THE SEAS.

Presiding at a luncheon given by the Pilgrims to James M. Beck, former assistant attorney general of the United States, in London, Viscount Bryce said he had received an address signed by some Americans, a large proportion of whom had come from Germany, saying: "The war must end in a draw; why not make peace at once and save further bloodshed?"

He would tell the guest of the day, Viscount Bryce continued, why neither the British nor the allies could follow that advice. He yielded to none in his love of peace, but he declared "we cannot agree to any such peace as is suggested either by these gentlemen or by the German government."

"In the first place, do not think this war will be a 'draw.' The allies are going to win. We believe this not merely because our army in France is driving back the Germans, nor because Russian troops have made a brilliant advance, nor because the soldiers of France have been standing like a rock with magnificent valor against the furious attacks made on Verdun. We believe it because the allies will prove to be stronger on land than the Germans and because we hold unshaken and unshakable control of the seas."

"Secondly, peace cannot be made now because the German government is not prepared for it on any terms we could accept. The German government may know they are going to be beaten, but the German people do not yet know it. They are ignorant of the true facts, and their government, which has fed them with falsehoods and held out prospects of territorial gains, fears to accept terms which would recognize their own failure."

"Thirdly, because peace made now on such terms as the German government would accept would be no permanent peace, but a mere truce. It would mean for Europe constant disquiet, fresh alarms of war, more preparations for war and further competition in prodigious armaments."

"Lastly, because we are fighting for great principles—principles vital to the future of mankind, principles which the German government outraged and which must at all costs be vindicated."

"We do not hate the German people; we do not wish to break up Germany or destroy her national unity, or inflict permanent injury upon her. What we desire is to exorcise an evil spirit and discredit the military caste which delights in war and threatens not only Europe but all countries, America included."

"Not content for Germany to be a great prosperous nation among other nations, the German government desires to dominate the world. The only safety for the world is to discredit by defeat that military caste and the military system which gained its control and laid its yoke upon German people by three successful wars."

In concluding Viscount Bryce said that Great Britain was fighting for the deliverance of Belgium and France and such change in the east as will make it impossible for the Turkish allies of Germany "ever again to massacre their Christian subjects."

COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO HAVE EDUCATIONAL DAY.

The Guilford County Sunday School Association is arranging for a big rally to be held in Greensboro Saturday, September 23, which will be known as educational day. The co-operation of all the white Sunday schools in the county is invited. The association has issued the following statement in regard to the event:

"Saturday, September 23, has been set aside as educational day for the Sunday schools of this county. It is desired that every school enter into the plans to make this one of the greatest and most interesting days in the history of Sunday school work in Guilford county. The program committee will see that something 'worth while' will be going on."

"It has been proposed that we have a parade of cradle roll babies, beginners, primaries, juniors, intermediates, seniors, adults and members of the home department made up of the members of every school which will enter. This will be a big demonstration of an organized Sunday school and will further emphasize the fact that the Sunday schools of the county can together accomplish those things which they cannot accomplish separately."

"The program will make special provision for the recognition of members of the training schools and classes of the county and for announcements concerning the educational work of the new year."

"Recognition will be given to those schools which have reached the ten-point standard of organization and efficiency as promoted by the county association and the denominations."

"The exhibit will be of interest to the children as well as to the teachers and officers of our schools, as it will contain specimens of the handwork which is being done by pupils in the different schools in Guilford county. Special seals, or ribbons, will be placed on the work of the students who have completed the work required by the individual schools."

"Objects which have been made by teachers for illustrating lessons, posters, pennants and any other materials which have been used for special days will also be placed in this exhibit."

"Mrs. G. W. Whitsett, of Greensboro, is chairman of the committee on exhibits, and schools which have anything which would add to the interest of the exhibit are asked to communicate with her so that she may be able to arrange for collecting and presenting the material."

LIEUTENANT ADAIR FOUGHT LIKE A DEMON AT CARRIZAL.

Of all the heroic little band of Americans that withstood the fight at Carrizal a few weeks ago the figure of Lieutenant Harry Adair stands out as the most spectacular, according to members of the party which brought the nine bodies of those killed back to the United States.

"The Mexicans at Carrizal are still marveling at the bravery of 'these troops,'" said one of the party. "Especially do they have unlimited praise for Lieutenant Adair. A Mexican who saw the whole affair told me of Adair's end."

"He fought like a demon. All around him were his dead countrymen. Captain Boyd had fallen with a bullet through his eye, but Lieutenant Adair kept on. He had been shot in half a dozen places. There was blood across his face and over his arm. His blouse had been ripped off and he was bare to the waist."

"He was using his automatic like a machine gun, sweeping the Mexicans with it as they closed in. Finally the pistol was empty. Then he swung his arm and hurled the pistol in the faces of the Mexicans."

"One of his black troopers handed him another pistol. He shouted as he took it. The Mexicans in front of him began to break and together with a trooper Adair began to struggle through. When their pistols were empty again they fought with their fists. But it was too magnificent to last."

"Then they reached the little irrigation ditch and Adair twice had to order his trooper to leave him before the negro would obey."

"Adair died with his head in the water."

A girl must indeed be susceptible if she can fall in love with a man after seeing him eat a dish of spaghetti.

That the race is not always to the swift is demonstrated by the fellow who runs away from his opportunities.

The man who believes a good beginning makes a bad ending is a natural born pessimist.

When you hear of a fellow who wins in a walk, it's a pretty good guess that he was the only entry.

WHY PEACE IS STILL FAR DISTANT.

Prince von Buelow, former German chancellor, has written a book called "German Policies," and in the preface the author discusses Germany's future and the form that a peace treaty must take in order to protect his country from the wrath of the allies in the coming years. To forestall their lust for revenge by gaining certain guarantees von Buelow regards as absolutely essential to the salvation of the German empire, "both as a recompense for the unheard of trials and sufferings we have endured and as a security for the future." Even as the British and French are found declaring that the result of the war must be positive, not negative, so, too, is von Buelow's conclusion. Simple re-establishment of the status quo ante bellum, he points out, would mean a loss, not a gain, when one considers the hatreds engendered by the war. Hence the need of gaining real securities in the peace settlement, the strengthening of political, economic and military powers that will enable the Germans to regard with equanimity the enemies on all sides. The distinguished author lays stress upon the importance of fostering a friendly feeling with those states "with which Germany did not cross swords, irrespective of whether the propaganda of the enemy press and enemy agitators influenced the feelings of the people against us during the war." It is a canny Prince von Buelow. He recognizes the commercial necessity for the retention or restoring of friendly relations among "neutral" nations if Germany is to find a market for her industries. He cautions his people that "political necessities must disregard national likes and dislikes, even though they be justified." Evidently, the former chancellor had a transatlantic vision when he dictated that paragraph. Justification, however, is a term that is easier to employ than to prove. "Even those states with which Germany did not cross swords" may be difficult to placate in view of the many violations of their statutes by German officials in the spreading of war propaganda. Prince von Buelow's observations are chiefly interesting as reflecting what the central bureau is undoubtedly thinking and planning. Clearly, Germany is in no position yet to attain those "securities" which von Buelow considers as requisite to her safety. And with the allies equally determined that the result of the war shall be similarly positive, it is patent that peace is still far distant.—Richmond Journal.

Maternity! The Word of Words

It is written into life's expectations that motherhood is the one sublime accomplishment. And if there is anything, no matter how simple, how apparently trivial it may seem, if it can aid, help, assist or in any way comfort the expectant mother, it is a blessing. And such is a remedy called "Mother's Friend." You apply it over the stomach muscles. It is gently rubbed on the surface, and makes the muscles pliant; expansion takes place without undue effect upon the nerves. And as the time approaches, the mind has gone through a period of repose, of gentle expectancy, and this has an unquestioned influence upon the future child. That this is true is evidenced by the fact that three generations of mothers have used and recommended "Mother's Friend." Ask your nearest druggist for a bottle of this splendid remedy. He will get it for you. And then write to Bradford Regulator Co., 407 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. for a most interesting book of information to prospective mothers. It is mailed free. Write today. It is a book you will enjoy.

CHAPTER XVII.
Off to the Fair.

JOE. Mr. Weston and Tom Ralston were ensconced on the train bound for the fair. It was packed with a jolly crowd of visitors for the same destination.

"Oh, by the way, father will meet us there," said Tom Ralston joyfully. "I wired him last week we would leave today. He said last spring he wanted to see the fair and would try to get down in time, so I heard from him yesterday. He's already there and has engaged quarters for us at the hotel."

"I'll be mighty glad to see him," said Joe. "And I guess it's a good thing he has rooms for us. I saw in the paper that there was such a crowd in town that all the places were filled up and folks were sleeping in chairs in the hotel lobbies."

"I'm glad he's fixed it, too," said Mr. Weston. "I ain't much on this chair-snoozin'. Every time I go to sleep in my chair it gives me a crick in my neck."

They arrived at the capital city a bit before noon. Streets and stores were gay with banners and bunting, bands were parading, and an excited, eager stream of people extended from the depot, where several excursion trains were discharging their loads.

Mr. Ralston was watching for the party and seized on them at once, shaking hands jubilantly.

"My, my! it's a sight for sore eyes to see you! I've been here a day and a half, and, say, this fair is great! It's a liberal education to see it. I'm coming every year. And such stock! Why, I never saw the like of fine cows!"

"Any muley black ones?" innocently inquired Tom. His father gulped, began to turn red and grinned sheepishly.

"Now, Tom; now, Tom!" he began pleadingly.

"I just wanted to know. I think the muley ones are the safest. They can't buck—only bark!" said Tom demurely. Mr. Ralston grinned.

"Yes, I suppose so, and if we ever buy any more cows I'm strong for the muley kind," he said.

"Look here, what's the joke?" demanded Joe Weston.

"Oh, just a little private one between us," said Tom. "I can't give it away yet."

"Come on up to our rooms and wash up. We'll get some dinner first, then go to the fair afterward. We can get supper there," suggested Mr. Ralston.

He had put two hands one adjoining room, and after the dust of travel had been removed from the new arrivals Mr. Ralston handed Joe the morning paper.

"They are expecting you, Joe," he said. "Big wrap-up of the Corn club contest, and you seem to be considered the man they've all got to beat. It's the field against you." Joe saw his name in big type in the headlines.

"I think I've got 'em tied out," he said confidently, as he showed Mr. Ralston the record.

"Why, one whiz, you are as certain to win on this showing as we are to go ourselves," the manufacturer exulted. "That fine. And I'm going to send Tom along with you, if you don't mind, for a year at that school."

"Suits me all right. It will be just fine," heartily agreed Joe Weston.

"I looked into the matter of the prize," said Mr. Weston. "That scholarship is worth $500. The fair management got it for less on account of the advertising, but if you want they'll commute it for $200 cash. That's what they are actually to pay for it. I understand."

"No, sir! If I win I want that scholarship," said Joe.

"Yes, that's worth more than the money, by a heap!" agreed Mr. Weston.

"All right, let's go down and eat," suggested their host and led the way to the crowded dining room.

The four were seated at a table placed close to another one. At the next table were three men, and one with his back to them was talking. Evidently, from the conversation, he was a college student bent of education from somewhere in the state. He talked in rather a loud voice, and every word of what he said was audible.

"That's a crowd of," said he, "is that the state champion of that sport?"

"The mention of it," the other man made his party picking up the conversation.

"I do," answered the first man, "but I'm not so set on anything," he continued.

"Any special reason?" said one of the men at his table, helping himself to a stalk of celery and munching idly away on it.

"Yes, there," asserted the school-teacher earnestly. "The most urgent reasons. You see, this boy I am interested in is only fifteen years old. He's the eldest of four children, all three considerably younger than he is. His mother is a widow—been so for four years now. Her husband was a trifling drunkard who mistreated them and died, leaving them absolutely destitute and on the hands of charity. And this boy has been the man of the family ever since."

"Too bad, too bad!" said the other of the listeners.

"They moved out in the edge of town on this little patch of ground and in a tumble down cabin. The church ladies helped them out that first year. The mother took in sewing. The children gathered dandelion greens and pokeberry shoots for salad and blackberries. The Lord only knows how they got through that first year. Then a good hearted man gave them a cow, and the ladies gave a few chickens. They sold milk and eggs, and that helped."

"I don't reckon anybody could get closer to bedrock poverty than that," said the first listener, with a shudder.

"They could not!" asserted the school teacher. "Then this boy, Henry, he's been like a father to those children. He works from daylight to dark. He put in a sort of garden the next year; that helped give a living, and he peddled some vegetables from it and worked at odd jobs. He's kept on hauling manure out there on that land and got it pretty rich. There are seven acres in the place."

"Why, that's fine!" said one of the men.

"The garden was better next year, and the cow had a calf, and that promises to be a good cow. They've got more chickens and make plenty to eat, and he sells more, and those children are able to go to school in winter now, thanks to Henry. And this year he squeezed in three months himself—the first schooling he ever had."

"My, my, what a tough time that boy has had!"

"Indeed, yes; but not a whimper from Henry. He's got the heart of a Roman soldier in him. And, do you know, the old skindint that owns that place has gone to charging that poor outcast rent on it?"

"Oh, you don't say—the old rascal!" chorused the two men.

"Fact. Why, that place was in such bad shape a nigger family moved out of it before these folks were dumped there by the Ladies of Charity. That old rascal has given an option on the place for $400 to a friend of mine. If Henry can buy the place and stop the drain for rent they'll get along fine. Rent ain't much, but a nickel looks as big to them as a cart wheel."

Mr. Ralston looked at Joe. He was white and breathing hard and straining his ears to catch every word.

"So," continued the school teacher, "if he wins he can commute this scholarship for $300 and make nearly another $100 off the corn he sells. I'll personally see that the balance is made up and enough is raised to buy him a good mule and wagon. If he gets the chance he'll actually make and save money there. If he loses on this I believe it will be the last straw. I actually believe it will break his heart—his spirit—and take the fight out of him."

"What's his record?" inquired the other man.

"Two hundred and fifteen bushels at 15 cents."

"That's wonderful," said the first listener.

"Well, he's an experienced gardener by now, but it's a fine record. No record filed up to this time equals it, so I say that Joe Weston is the only one I am afraid of. A few have made a few more bushels than Henry has, but the cost was so much greater. Why, guess what that boy did?"

"Can't imagine."

"He went around town and cleaned out every chicken house in town to get the guano. He couldn't afford to spend much money on fertilizer. What do you think of that for resource?"

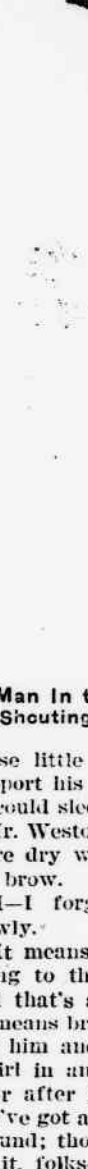

"Just splendid, and I hope the little chap wins," said the listener heartily.

There was very little talk at the table where Joe and his father sat. Nor did Mr. Ralston or Tom seem inclined to break the silence. All had heard the words of the man at the next table and all seemed depressed and the life gone out of them.

When the meal was finished they went to the fair grounds and made for the Agricultural hall, where the Corn club exhibits were the first thing. It was a magnificent array and showing. The whole party went into ecstasies over it.

A man in the center of the space where the Corn club exhibit was began shouting something through a megaphone. They stopped and listened.

"All entries for the contest for the state championship of the Boys' Corn club growers will close at 3:30, positively. No records will be admitted to file after that hour!" he announced.

A Man In the Corn Club Exhibit Was Shouting Through a Megaphone.

those little half orphans and helping support his mother, why—why—I never could sleep at night again!"

Mr. Weston moistened his lips, which were dry with excitement, and wiped his brow.

"I—I forgot about him," he said slowly.

"It means a heap more to him than going to that college means to me—and that's a whole lot, as you know. It means bread and meat and a chance for him and those children. We can whirl in and make enough money by year after next for me to go a year. We've got a home and our feet on solid ground; those people haven't. I can't do it, folks—I won't do it." Joe was very earnest in what he said.

"That's so, boy; that's so," said Mr. Weston, gently putting his arm about his son's shoulders.

"Just think how much my winning meant to me—to all of us—the first year, and what it led to," continued Joe. "Honest, now, daddy, you wouldn't have me enter?"

"Not for a thousand dollars, poor as we are!" blurted his father. "There's folks poorer than us. We've got our start; we can go ahead. Let's give the other fellow a chance. You're teetotally right, Joe."

Mr. Ralston and Tom stood by in silence. They felt that this was a matter to be settled between father and son, without any outside interference or advice.

"Entries are closed!" remarked Mr. Ralston, in the lull which followed Mr. Weston's speech. Joe gave a long breath.

"I do hope that boy wins," he said.

"Let's all go see," said Mr. Weston.

There was no need to ask questions. The radiant face of the county superintendent who had been talking at the hotel was answer enough. Mr. Ralston went up to him.

"Well, your boy won?" he asked.

"Thank God, yes! It meant everything to that boy, to his mother, to those children!" he said, fervently.

"What's he going to do—take the scholarship or the cash?" inquired Mr. Ralston.

"Oh, he can't go to school; he'll take the three hundred and be glad to get it."

"Come here a minute; I want to talk to you," said Mr. Ralston in a low voice. They stepped out on the portico of the building.

"All right, sir?" asked the superintendent.

"Is that scholarship his to do as he pleases with?"

"That is correct; yes, sir."

"I'll give you $500 for it."

The man gasped and stared at him as though he did not comprehend.

"I mean it; I'm not joking. If your boy can sell that scholarship I will give you $500 cash for it."

"You're sure bought it?" said the man. "Come on up to the office of the fair management and we'll trade right now!" He did not even wait for his hat.

On arrival there the management confirmed the fact that the scholarship was the property of Henry and could be sold or used as he pleased. The county superintendent showed a boyish scrawl of a note authorizing him to act for Henry.

"He couldn't spare the time to come up here," he said.

Mr. Ralston laid down five $100 bills, took the transfer of ownership and the scholarship certificate and a receipt.

"But—I don't understand why you are doing this, and for whom is it?" queried the superintendent.

For answer Mr. Ralston tossed over to him the record he had borrowed from Joe Weston. The man glanced at it, and the color left his face a moment.

"Why—why—er—he is really entitled to the prize!" he whispered apprehensively.

"He would have been—if he had entered," corrected Mr. Ralston.

"But—why didn't he enter. Too late?" said the man.

"No—too big," said Mr. Ralston.

"I don't just understand"—puzzled the superintendent.

"We heard you talking down at the hotel today at dinner," said Mr. Ralston. "We were at the table behind you. And Joe was just too big and too fine to take it away from a chap that has had less of a chance than he has."

"And who are you?" asked the wondering schoolteacher, with a great respect in his voice and manner.

"I'm just a 'rich Yankee,' as you folks down here call us, that likes to do a bit of good once in a while with some of his money," smiled Mr. Ralston, as he left the office.

He found Joe and Tom looking at the Corn club entries.

"Where you been?" inquired Mr. Weston. "We got lost from you."

"Oh, I've been rambling around some on my own hook," he answered, smilingly.

"Well, I beat 'em out again on the best twelve ears—got $40 as a prize for that, anyway!" said Joe jubilantly, as he pointed to the blue ribbon on his corn and a card placed thereon with his name as winner.

"Want to sell it? I'll give you $3 an ear for it," queried an enterprising seedsmen, bustling up.

"You certainly have bought twelve ears of corn," said Joe. "Where's the money?"

"Here!" said the man, counting it out. Joe wrote a receipt and an order for the twelve ears to be delivered to him.

"A hundred and one dollars for twelve ears of corn is a sort of a record breaker itself!" said Joe. "County prize, $25; state prize, $40, and $3 an ear for the corn."

"You bet it's a record," said Tom Ralston.

"Come on, let's go to this eating place and get supper before the crowd rushes in. I'm used to eatin' early," said Mr. Weston.

When the party were seated and the waitress had gone for their order Mr. Ralston looked at Joe intently.

"Got any secrets about losing that scholarship, Joe?" he inquired.

"Not a one, sir; I'd do it again in a minute if I had the chance!" answered Joe sturdily. "Just think how much it means to those folks, to that boy! Well, they've got their chance now—like I had."

"You've still got yours," said the manufacturer. "I think, Joe, the work you are doing is a good influence in the county and in the state. It has been a help to me, and it is making a fine chap out of Tom."

"Oh, yes; I'm going ahead, but it's going to put off my trip a couple of years. I'll have to wait that long to learn some of the fine points of farming—that's all."

"No, it is not going to put it off one day, Joe—Not one day. Here's your scholarship, take it as a slight token of the appreciation of one who would do more for you gladly if there was any way to do it!" Mr. Ralston handed over the certificate.

"Hooray ter goodness! Is it really so?" inquired Mr. Weston rising out of his seat.

"It sure is, pa; and I thank you, Mr. Ralston, from the bottom of my heart. Will the poor boy get the money all right?"

"The full price, Joe—$500. I did not want you to think you had taken advantage of him for a penny. He got $200 more than they expected."

"Well, we'll study hard, won't we, Tom, and try and show we are worth it?" said Joe happily.

"We'll give a good account of ourselves," asserted his chum.

"And, say, I do hope this won't get in the papers and make that poor boy feel that he really didn't win, after all—that it was a sort of a charity scheme, you know?" said Joe earnestly. "The way a thing comes to a person has a heap to do with the enjoyment."

"I've fixed that," said Mr. Ralston. "It was part of the trade with the superintendent that he would keep his mouth shut, and we won't do any talking, either."

"My, my, but this has turned out fine! Won't mother and Annie be glad?" asked Joe Weston happily.

THE END.

Says They Are Wonderful

Hot weather is doubly dangerous when digestion is bad. Constipation, sick headache, biliousness, or other conditions caused by clogged bowels yield quickly to Foley Cathartic Tablets. Kind's NEW DISCOVERY

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF FORM

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO THE READERS OF THE PATRIOT FAR AND NEAR.

Married Saturday.—Mr. John J. Kilfoil and Miss Lota Gray, of Pleasant Garden, were married in this city Saturday afternoon, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. H. Bennett at the parsonage of Centenary Methodist church.

G. H. Royster Ill.—Mr. George H. Royster suffered a sudden attack of serious illness while on a visit to relatives in Granville county a few days ago, and for a while his condition was alarming. He was able to be brought to his home in this city yesterday.

Receipts Growing.—The receipts of the Greensboro postoffice for the past quarter amounted to $31,611.46, an increase of $2,220.01 over the corresponding quarter last year. The receipts for the month of June were $9,779, which exceeded by $17.10 the receipts for June, 1915.

Another Bond Election.—Another bond election for street improvements has been ordered in High Point and is to be held August 15. The proposed bond issue is for $50,000. An election on a similar amount was defeated a few months ago, but the bond issue is expected to be carried this time.

Suit Against City.—Mr. and Mrs. J. T. B. Shaw have entered suit against the city of Greensboro for $2,500 for alleged damage by water to their residence on North Elm street during the recent heavy rains. It is alleged that the city failed to make provision for caring for the excess flow of water in that immediate section.

Accepts Pastorate.—Rev. E. L. Folk, of Pittsburgh, Pa., has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Lutheran church, and is expected to arrive in the city this week to take up his work. Mr. Folk is a native of Virginia and has spent the greater part of his life in that state. He is said to be a strong preacher and a popular pastor.

Dead in California.—Mr. Robert T. Ladd, who went from Greensboro to Los Angeles, Cal., nine years ago, died Thursday. The message announcing his death was received here by a brother, Mr. James Ladd, and gave no particulars, though it is known that the deceased had been in feeble health for a year or longer, suffering from tuberculosis of the throat. The funeral and interment took place in Los Angeles. Mr. Ladd was 35 years of age.

Dead in China.—Mrs. A. W. McAllister received a cablegram Saturday announcing the death of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Lucy Little, wife of a well known Presbyterian missionary in China. Mrs. Little, who was Miss Ella Davidson, of Yorkville, S. C., went to China as a missionary of the Southern Presbyterian church in 1882 and in 1909 was married to Rev. Lucy Little. Mrs. Little had been ill over a month and died in a hospital in Shanghai.

Little Boy Dead.—Settle Sharpe, the 20-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Sharpe, Jr., died Thursday morning in Ashe county, where he had been carried a few weeks ago in the hope that the change would benefit his frail health. The body was brought to Greensboro Thursday night and the funeral was held from the residence of Dr. W. P. Beall Friday morning. Rev. Robert E. Rice, of Holy Trinity Episcopal church, conducted the services.

Troops Called Out.—The Guilford county local military company, was ordered to Wilmington by Governor Craig Friday night, along with companies from Raleigh, Charlotte and Salisbury, to prevent threatened trouble on account of a strike of street car employees. Reports from Wilmington state that everything was quiet, although the soldiers are being held in readiness for any disorder that might develop. Maj. J. C. Kuykendall, of this city, is in command of the companies on duty at Wilmington.

Many Are Vaccinated.—Dr. F. C. Beatt, the city health officer, reports that many Greensboro people are being vaccinated against typhoid fever, though the number is not nearly so large as last year. Dr. W. M. Jones, the county health officer, makes practically the same report. Both physicians are vaccinating a few people every day, but there is no rush to take advantage of the free anti-typhoid treatment, as was the case when the health officers first began to administer it. The treatment given in the past is considered largely responsible for the few cases of typhoid reported this year, although only a relatively small percentage of the population has been rendered immune by vaccination. There are twenty thousands of people in the county still susceptible to typhoid, and the health officers of the city and county are willing to vaccinate all who may apply for the treatment.

Condition Favorable.—The attending physicians report that the condition of Mrs. Charles Woods, who was run over and seriously injured by an automobile on Spring Garden street extended last Wednesday afternoon, is as favorable as could be expected under the circumstances. Both legs and a wrist were broken and it was feared that the injuries would prove fatal. No internal injuries have developed and the physicians now think Mrs. Woods has a good chance of recovery. The patient is at St. Leo's hospital.

To Extend Aid.—The good roads bureau of the Chamber of Commerce has appointed a committee to co-operate with a similar committee from the Greensboro Merchants' Association in raising a sum of money to aid in the completion of the road the Randolph county authorities are improving to the county line near Climax. The Randolph officials have appropriated $2,500 for the work, but this sum is considered insufficient. In view of the fact that the road is used by many Randolph people in coming to Greensboro, the business men of this city naturally feel an interest in the matter and are expected to contribute the money needed to properly complete the work.

To Command Regiment.—Governor Craig has been notified by the war department that Capt. Ellison L. Gilmer, a native of Greensboro, who is stationed at Fort Adams, R. I., in command of a company of coast artillery, is to be promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel and placed in command of the first North Carolina regiment of the national guard, now mobilized at Camp Glenn. He is to succeed Col. J. C. Bessent, of Winston-Salem, who resigned on account of physical disability. Capt. Gilmer volunteered for the Spanish-American war and saw active service in the Philippines. Later he was appointed a lieutenant in the coast artillery branch of the regular army and some years ago was promoted to the rank of captain.

STATE TROOPS MAY NOT SEE LONG SERVICE ON BORDER.

From present prospects militiamen may be able to return from the border by Thanksgiving. The chances of war have diminished perceptibly, in view of the conciliatory note received from General Carranza, and officials feel that it will be unnecessary, after three or four months, to keep the guardsmen on the border any longer. By that time it is expected the regulars will be able to do the policing necessary.

Despite this optimism, preparations have not ceased to rush guardsmen along when they are ready. There would be a risk in not sending them along to police the border until the regular troops and the Carranza government can handle the situation, in the opinion of the authorities.

"Personally, I don't believe there will be any war with Mexico," said Representative Ragsdale, of South Carolina. "However, the guardsmen may be kept at the border several months."

Mr. Ragsdale had just returned from South Carolina and said the Palmetto boys were in good shape and ready to go to the front.

"I have hopes that in the selection of brigades no politics will be played and that no effort will be made to take care of any military office. I hope the only consideration will be to have a man in charge who will take care of the men and bring them back safely."

Rooster Crows Doxology.

Vernon Green, of West Rush, owns a Plymouth Rock rooster, which he keeps in a poultry yard adjoining the Lutheran church. Thus the birds have had all kinds of opportunity of hearing church hymns and sacred music.

One morning recently he saw the Plymouth Rock rooster stretching its neck and unmistakably crowing a tune. That is to say, he saw the cock and heard the tune. Mrs. Green then stated that she had noticed the bird on the previous Sunday listening as the Doxology was sung and apparently trying to imitate it.

Mr. Green, who is an accomplished violinist, got his violin and played the Doxology through. Whereupon the rooster (in unconcealed delight) repeated it faultlessly in a lusty crow. Since then the bird has done the same thing many times and has been heard by several of the neighbors.—New York World.

Children just cannot keep covered at night and that is one way they take cold. Foley's Honey and Tar is a reliable family cough medicine that contains no opiates or harmful ingredients. Mrs. Wm. Leonard, Pottsville, Pa., writes: "My baby had a very bad cough. The first dose gave her relief." Conyers' Drug Store.

INDIAN WIZARD REAPPEARS IN RIO GRANDE VALLEY.

Albuquerque, N. M., July 7.—An interesting story has been unearthed to confirm the legend of the old man of Tijeras canyon, the story no doubt being the foundation for the impersonation which some one is apparently attempting for a purpose as yet unknown. At least this is the assumption of those who, during the past week, have seen the man in his strange garb in the canyon.

One of the oldest Indians at San Domingo traveled all the way to Albuquerque recently to explain the story after having heard that after many generations the protector of the Rio Grande Valley had again been seen. It was impossible to convince the Pueblo that the old man is not what he seems to be.

He held stoutly to the opinion that there has again appeared the wizard who hundreds of years ago first took up his abode in the mountains east of the valley, and thereafter for many decades occasionally appeared to right the wrongs of the Indians, settle differences and in other ways act as the protector of the tribes living in the Rio Grande.

According to the Indian's story, the legend has been handed down for at least 300 years, the first appearance of the wizard dating before the Spanish occupation. He was called the Wizard of Sa-Id-Nas, and was revered by all the tribes in the Rio Grande. Whenever there was want, he found some means of supplying food. He eradicated the pests and made the crops grow.

Before the Spanish occupation, this tradition said, he informed the Indians of the invasion, and after the Padres had settled in the valley, he was their friend. The old man was regarded as a spirit, as no one knew how he existed. The story is that he was always old but that he apparently grew no older.

The San Domingo Indian asserts that even in the lifetime of his father, the old wizard was seen in the northern end of the valley, although long before that he had ceased to offer his services because, as the story runs, the Indians had at one time spurned his advice at the bidding of a young and hot-headed chief who a short time later mysteriously disappeared.

If someone is attempting to impersonate the Wizard of Sa-Id-Nas at the present time, the impersonator has certainly secured from the Indians the story, for the make-up seems to be perfect. The San Domingo Indian's story of the wizard's appearance as handed down in the tribe and the description given by those who have recently seen the apparition agree perfectly.

BELL BOY ATTACKED BY A SHARK; DIES FROM INJURIES.

While hundreds of summer visitors on the beach and in the south end pavillion looked on helpless, Charles Burder, a bell boy in one of the largest beach front hotels at Spring Lake, N. J., was attacked by a shark and before help could arrive lost both of his legs. He died ten minutes after he was brought to shore.

Burder had gone 100 feet or more beyond the life line when he was heard to cry and the water about him was red with blood. The guard launched a boat and was at his side in a short time.

The two guards pulled him into a boat and brought him to shore, giving him first aid while waiting for a physician, but he died within ten minutes. Examination of the body disclosed the fact that the shark had bitten Burder in the side before taking off his legs. There was a deep bite below his left arm.

This is the second case of the kind reported on the New Jersey coast within the last week.

Queer Fish Caught.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 8.—It remained for a Knoxville man to show the people of Florida something new in the way of fish. Dr. H. J. Kelso, who, with Mrs. Kelso, is spending 10 days at Pass-a-Grille, Fla., hooked and landed a very beautiful fish, the name and species of which no one on the island has been able to determine.

Dr. Kelso and E. R. Burns, with J. A. Saunders as guide, had caught 40 fine kingfish, and were on the verge of returning to the land, when suddenly the genial doctor realized the fact that he had hooked a wampus of some kind, and, after a strenuous fight of 15 minutes, the strange fish was pulled into the boat. It weighed 15 pounds, and was shaped a good deal like a pompano, and had the most beautiful scales ever seen on a fish, being of a changeable nature, varying from silver to gold, and the most peculiar feature of the entire fish was its tongue, which was exactly like a calf's, with an oblong spot in the center, which was rough like emery paper.

Wigwag—"My wife's away for the summer." Gnaggs—"Mine went this morning." Wigwag—"Does she miss you?" Gnaggs (rubbing a bump on his head)—"She used to, once in a while, but her aim seems to be improving."
