Honorary degrees offered

UNC-G News Bureau— The University of North Carolina at Greensboro will award honorary doctoral degrees to Mrs. Emily Preyer and Miss Mereb Mossman, both of Greensboro, on Sunday, May 15, during the institution's 85th annual commencement.

The honoarary degrees will be conferred by UNC-G Chancellor James S. Ferguson during the graduating exercises which will begin at 11 am in Greensboro Coliseum.

Mrs. Preyer, wife of Sixth District Rep. L. Richardson Preyer, has been involved in a long list of civic and service endeavors. Miss Mossman, retired vice chancellor for academic affairs at UNC-G, served as the principal academic administrator on the Greensboro campus from 1951 until 1971, when she resigned in order to return to teaching.

During the 94th session of Congress, Mrs. Preyer served as president of "Congressional Wives." Earlier, she had served as president of the Congressional Wives Prayer Group. From 1957-73, she was a member of the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University of North Carolina. Additionally, she has served on the Board of the North Carolina Symphony, the Board for Multiple Sclerosis, the Board of Trustees of Carolina Population Center, the Board of Trustees of A & T State University. as a member of the first Greensboro Human Relations Commission, as deacon in Greensboro's First Presbyterian Church, as president of the UNC-G Alumni Association and as past chairman of the Alumni Annual Giving Council.

Mrs. Preyer is a graduate of Woman's College (now UNC-G), and served as president of student government as an undergraduate. She obtained a master's degree from the University of Virginia. In 1958, she was chosen woman of the year in Greensboro, and four years later she won the women's singles and doubles in tennis in Greensboro. Mrs. Preyer is a past president of the Greensburo Junior League, and has been involved in many other civic activities. At various times, she has served as chairman of many charitable fund drives and has received numerous honors for her civic and service endeavors.

Miss Mossman joined the faculty at Woman's College (now UNC-G) in 1937, beginning a long term of service with the institution which continued until her formal retirement Dec. 31, 1976. She began as an assistant professor of sociology and in 1951 became dean of instruction at Woman's College. Thereafter, her titles changed successively to dean of the college, dean of the faculty and vice chancellor for academic affairs. She returned to full-time responsibilities in 1973, but continued to teach on a part-time basis through last December.

In 1956, Miss Mossman received the coveted O. Max Gardner Award, the highest honor which the UNC system can bestow upon one of its faculty members. She was named Greensboro's "Woman of the Year" in 1954. In 1960, she received the honorary degree of Doctor of Humanities from Queen's College in Charlotte. In 1969, her alma mater, Morningside College, awarded her the honorary dgree of Doctor of Literature. In 1969, Miss Mossman was named to an advisory committee to the Social and Rehabilitation Service, Social-Work Manpower and Training Program of the U.S. Department of HEW. She also has held key positions with the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, and the Southern Regional Education Board.

Getting gassed for exams

DR. BRAD KILIMANJARO

Finals are not only rough on the psyche, they also play hell with the innards. Throughout the next week, minds and bodies will take a beating as thundering herds of students stampede towards the library in the last-minute feasting on food for thought. The library becomes the great feeding grounds reminiscent of the salt-lick in bygone buffalo days.

During finals week, UNC-G students will be asked (usually more than once) to regurgitate bluebook upon bluebook of relevant information. A lot of this information has yet to be tasted, chewed, swallowed or digested (I'll do it tomorrow)—but the week is still young. Soon now, the eleventh-hour

Ms. Barbara Dirks, the Global Issues Representative from the National Association of Foreign Student Affairs will be speaking in Greensboro on Thursday evening, May 5, 1977. She will give her presentation at 7:00 pm in Room 213 of the A&T State Union. Her address wil center around global issues (population control, environmental concerns, world hunger, etc.) and is open to all concerned individuals. Additional information can be obtained from Terry Fuller, 103 Elliott University Center (5586).

gorging will take place. Mental indigestion will then set in, often accompanied by its gastric counterpart. Bloated minds will strain to dump facts, with little success, due to impacted mental pathways. The bowels, however, will generally open wide. Once again, UNC-G students will fall victim to the Final-Flatulence phenomenon (FF).

FF occurs on every college campus where finals are given. In short, finals cause pressure and pressure, in turn, causes gas (methane). And as methane gas levels rise, intelligence levels plunge drastically. Fortunately, the mental effects are usually temporary, otherwise, countless campuses would be crawling with morons. The bigger the school, the higher volume of methane (i.e. Chapel Hill has more gas than UNC-G, Berkeley has more than anybody).

Colleges are not the only target areas of FF. Look at any city where mental pressure exists, and you'll find flatulence (methane) not far behind. For example, large semipermanent methane clouds usually hover above Washington, D.C. and Las Vegas. These clouds have been known to cause severe brain damage. As a result, some of Washington's methane victims have fled to far away California. Washington's casualty rate is one of the highest in the nation.

Although FF is a human phenomenon, plants and small animals are also affected. Flowers wilt, weeds grow faster, dogs and cats turn irritable and sometimes run away. Goldfish die. As students struggle in vain to locate old notes from January classes, so too do squirrels dig fruitlessly for misplaced nuts.

Here at UNC-G, students will treat FF in a variety of ways. Common tools include: No Doze, coffee, tobacco (sweet and sour), beer, Crossroads, scripture, Pop Tarts, prayer, television and Kaopectate. In addition, many students will subconsciously choose to study in buildings with good ventilation, and this is where we finally get back to the library.

Ah, the library, where seldom is heard a discouraging word, and the skies are not cloudy all day. Thanks to high ceilings (hot air rises) and a superb ventilation system. These attributes make the library the one campus building that offers students maximum hope with minimum odor.

Of course in another week or so, the nasty, methane cloud will blow away, FF will vanish, those January notes will reappear, and the missing dogs and cats will return home. Upon abandoning the library for the outside world, students will discover that flowers have regained their sweet fragrance and UNC-G will once again be a pleasant place to be—at least for a few months. Until then, cheer up, be low and write fast.

Senate changes Forensic's class

BY TINE' JOHNSON Managing Editor

The SG Senate decided Tuesday night to grant the Forensics Association a Type II recognition of classification for their organization. The Association had been recognized as Type IV for the past years.

Forensics charged the Senate with lack of due process earlier in the week. The charge was brought to a hearing Monday night where it was dismissed due to confusion in the specific charge against Senate.

The vote Tuesday night in Senate was eight in favor, six against, and 3 abstentions in granting Forensics Type II recognition.

Immediately previous to the vote, an amendment was offered by Kurt Beron to change the motion to read: "I move to grant the Forensic Association Type IV recognition." A vote was taken on the amendment, and the vote was tied. President of Senate, Debra Turner decided not to break the tie, and the motion failed.

The main objection to granting the Forensic Association Type IV recognition was the question whether the association was academically affiliated. In negative debate to the motion, Senator Barry Frasier cited the $6000.00 given the association by the Academic Affairs Office. Several senators argued that the money, coming from the academic department, proved that the association had been considered academically affiliated.

When the motion to reconsider the Forensics' constitution was put on the floor, the Chair ruled, "No organization's recognition status may be used in debate for or against the recognition status of organization in question." The ruling was challenged by Senator Frasier, but the ruling was upheld in a vote.

In bringing the motion to reconsider the Forensic's constitution to the floor, Renee Littleton argued that the "attitude of Dr. Fadely angered ant therefore intimidated the body" last week.

Information was given by Lori Cecil, Secretary-Treasurer of Forensics, that the Association, once it is allocated the funds by Student Government, puts the money in an account in the business office. Questions were posed to her by several senators as to why they do not have to submit requests to the Appropriations Committee, as most organizations do. The argument was not pursued further.

In reaction to Senate's decision, Dr. Dean Fadely, faculty advisor for the Association, said, "It doesn't bother me. It should bother them, (the Senate.)" Fadely said his association will travel with less debators-from 27 to six or eight people.

Fadely also said his association will "probably" petition Attorney General Kevin Jarvis' office for an injunction against Senate.

Jarvis said, "Since Senate reconsidered the constitution tonight, any possible petition must address Senate's actions of May 3, (Tuesday). I have informed the Forensics Association of that fact."

The Carolinian would like to express its sympathies in the death of Mrs. Betty Anne Stanback, member of the Board of Trustees, and recognize her outstanding contributions to our university.

Alumni News reviews news

BY TRUDY ATKINS AND ERIC RIES

Seniors attending a graduation rehearsal in Aycock Auditorium at 4:00 pm on Wednesday, May 4, will each receive a copy of the current (Spring 1977) issue of the Alumni News. The magazine, a gift from the Alumni Association, is customarily sent to new graduates for nine months following their graduation.

The bonus spring issue features a cover sketch of the turrets of the Foust Administration Building which was drawn originally by Holly Schofield for the 1977 Pine Needles. Beneath the aesthetic cover of the Alumni News, however, lie some provocative articles and interesting features.

Perhaps the most outstanding aspect of the magazine is that it cuts across many areas of campus interest and thus presents a rounded view of UNC-G's people, places, and events. Several articles deal with campus institutions which virtually all students deal with, such as the library, WUAG and the cafeteria. The library article speaks directly to the problem of mutilated books, while the WUAG story tells the happy tale of a radio revival at UNC-G. The A.R.A. food service is dealt with objectively in another feature written by student Richard Griffiths.

Current national events which affect student life are also explored in a Roots-related section. Articles include an interview with Neo-Black Society coordinator Clarence Moore, a study by history professor Robert Calhoon on southerners' roots, and an article concerning the History Department's summer institute and its exploration of "Early Southern History and the Decorative Arts."

In separate articles concerning modern moods, philosophy professor Dr. Warren Ashby addresses himself to the thoughts of today's university student and Class of 1915 Women's College graduate Gladys Avery Tillett speaks of work yet to be done in the women's movement.

Human interest is, of course, also present. Deaf student Doris Stewart speaks out about her university life, and another piece chronicles the progress of efforts to remove architectural barriers to the handicapped on campus.

The Alumni News is also just what it suggests: a magazine concerning itself with the awards, marriages, achievements, and deaths of alumni. It is very complete in that aspect. However, it is much more than just a fact sheet. The Alumni News manages to link past with present, those out on their own with those still struggling for an identity. It gives UNC-G graduates their due, but also keeps them informed as to what present student moods are. Indeed, that is where its purpose lies.

Seniors unable to attend the Aycock rehearsal may stop by the Ahumni News office in Alumni House to receive their copy.

Letters to the Editor

Pharr attacks editor's article

To the Editor:

I was very surprised, to say the least, to see the article entitled "African Liberation Promoted," written by Rich Innes, the newly-elected Carolinian editor for 1977-78. This article was supposedly referring to the Neo-Black Society meeting held Wednesday night, April 27th, in Alexander Room. But disappointment and shock are better terms to describe my reaction to the article, which, for the most part, was incorrect.

The first sentence, written by Mr. Innes was entirely wrong. He stated that "an organization identifying themselves as the Revolutionary Student Brigade" spoke at the meeting. The guest organization was, correctly, the African Liberation Day Coalition, represented by Danny Brown, the national coordinator of the group. He was seated to the viewer's left of the podium. The young man pictured standing behind the podium was indeed a member of the Revolutionary Student Brigade, but he was the only known member there. and his purpose there was to preface the presentation given by Mr. Brown. Mr. Innes repeatedly referred to the guests as RSB, which was most definitely incorrect.

Secondly, Mr. Innes misquoted Mr. Brown as saying that "the best way to talk to the U.S. was with bullets." Mr. Innes should pay closer attention to what is being said because Mr. Brown stated that the black people in South Africa, after unsuccessful conferences, peace talks, and negotiations, have found that the best way to deal with the racist white South African government is with bullets.

I also have a question for Mr. Innes. Since when has it become proper for a reporter to insert his/her personal opinions in an article or story? I am referring to the statement by Mr. Innes that "the reason for white paranoia in the country is well-founded, especially if groups such as RSB realize their goals." I have always been instructed that it is the reporter's job to present the facts as truthfully as possible and then to let the public draw their own conclusions and opinions from the

And now

I am especially peeved because I, as NBS reporter, was present at the meeting from the time it started, around 7:00 pm, until it was over at 9:45 pm. If my memory is correct, Mr. Innes was present for only about 15 minutes of the meeting when Randy Sides took photographs. After that, Mr. Innes disappeared from the room and was seen no more. I personally left the meeting for five minutes to talk to Peggy Reynolds, Photography Editor, explaining that I was covering the meeting and needed extra pictures taken of guest groups in the audience, including the African Liberation Support Committee (ALSC). She came in later and took additional pictures of Danny Brown and of Mr. Nelson Johnson, spokesman for ALSC. Maybe if Mr. Innes had been present for the entire meeting, his facts and allegations would not have been so incorrect and confused.

ALSC was invited by NBS to enlighten the public about a march supporting African Liberation which is to take place on May 28th in Washington, D.C. The audience was indeed confused because there were disagreements between the guest speaker and members of the audience, including ALSC. Mr. Innes seems to imply that NBS is supporting these organizations and urging revolutionary and militaristic tactics to aid African Liberation. This is not true. We, as members of NBS, feel that it is our duty to keep the public informed as to what is going on today in government, art, culture, anything. Then it is up to the public to decide what it wants to believe and support. It's funny how Mr. Innes failed to mention any positive aspects of the meeting such as the sneaker and jeans campaign going on over college campuses to send clothing to needy blacks in South Africa who are half-naked. In fact, hardly anthing positive is ever published about the NBS and its functions. Miss Gail Hinson submitted an article about newly-elected officers a couple of weeks ago and it hasn't been printed yet.

I'm aware that everything cannot feasibly be printed because of lack of space and time. But I do believe that what is printed should be correct, unbiased, and up-to-date. I therefore, as NBS reporter, challenge Mr. Innes to review his tactics as a reporter and Editor of The Carolinian, and to be more careful, unbiased, and objective in the future of what he reports.

Jacqueline Laverne Pharr

Shame, shame...

To the Editor:

next act

Shame on the editorial staff of TWe Carolinian. Shame on any group that would be in favor of a concerted action to destroy the jobs and livelihoods of thousands of people. I wonder how you can sleep at night when you think of American citizens, textile employees, leaving their places of work not to return because you and others did not buy what they make.

Think of these Stevens employees who exercised their constitutional rights as Americans and voted against representation by the union. How can you rationalize supporting a "social justice" that deprives individuals of their livelihood?

"Social justice" isn't a new weapon in the union arsenal. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers pulled a boycott on Farrah Manufacturing, El Paso, Texas, makers of slacks. This boycott took the same pattern as the Stevens boycott with the union scampering around to church groups, student groups, politicians, civil rights groups, and any other activist they could enlist.

It took the union and its "do-gooders" 22 months and an estimated $5 million to bring Farrah to its knees.

Today Farrah has only 42 percent of the number on its payroll as it did in pre-boycott days. Several plants have closed. Farrah is reportedly trying to restructure its credit. ACTWU, the so called winner in this fight to wreck a company, doesn't bother to mention it took the jobs of 58 percent of the people to whom it brought the union brand of "social justice." This is a fact the union refuses to talk about in the currentt Stevens boycott.

Fifty-eight percent of Stevens' 40,000 hourly paid employees would be 23,200 persons. When you consider the families involved, you would probably be talking closer to 50,000 individuals. Are you proud to be endorsing an action that would have such enormous human suffering as the potential result?

WHAT NOW?

Democrats speak in capitol

BY RICHARD GRIFFITHS Staff Column

Juanita Kreps, newly appointed secretary of commerce, spoke at a luncheon in Raleigh Sunday where she was awarded the outstanding citizen

Kreps called on North Carolinians to back the president and his energy policy. "None of these problems will be solved unless the people come together," she said.

Touched by the warm reception from the crowd, the soft-spoken former Duke professor and Vice-President remarked on two of the democratic U.S. Senate hopefuls; Attorney General Rufus Edmisten and North Carolina National Bank Chairman Luther Hodges, Jr., who were sitting at opposite ends of the head table.

"Gentlemen, I hope your position on the head table does not reflect your political position. I sincerely hope to bring one of you to Washington. Sorry, Rufus."

"There hangs in my office." Kreps went on, "two pictures. One is a painting of North Carolina's other Commerce Secretary, Luther Hodges, Sr. I've studied him very carefully and he always seems to be smiling down on me, telling me to do my thing."

"The other is of former Commerce Secretary and President Herbert Hoover, who, no matter how often I straighten his picture, always seems to tilt a little to the right."

At the same dinner, North Carolina Secretary of Natural and Economic Resources Howard Lee commented on Governor Him Hunt, saying that was a tough man to work for. "I enjoy it, though," said Lee, "we think a lot alike."

"He only pushes when he needs to," added Lee, "but when he pushes, he pushes. Like every governor, he has pet projects which take up a large portion of his time. The rest is the responsibility of the Cabinet. I may not see him for almost a month. Then I'll be in his office nearly every

"There are a lot of changes I would like to make in the department (of Natural and Economic Resources), but we can't make those changes until the legislature leaves town. The sooner that happens, I guess, the better. The legislature being here is holding up appointments. Every legislator feels they have a right to have their man picked."

Lee, who is former mayor of Chapel Hill, knows many of the problems with the legislature, especially with money.

"The biggest trouble with the legislature is they appropriate you just so much money, then mandate so many projects. Two years later, they return, screaming 'why haven't you

State Senator Beverly Lake, Jr. has had a little confidence in his pornography bill shaken. Lake, who sponsored Senate Bill 539, designed to close down businesses selling or exhibiting pornographic materials, has found opposition coming from many unexpected quarters.

"It has some considerable opposition," says Lake, "surprisingly enough from very mild mannered librarians and people of that type, who are concerned that this is a witch hunt, book-burning crusade by a bunch of arch-conservatives. That is not the case at all. The bill has a very broadbased support from the business community, professional, as well as church people, job of cleaning up the problem:

"If the officials who would have this authority under this bill-assuming it passes-like to bring the suits, then it would be extremely effective. I think the law would be upheld in the North Carolina, it would certainly be fairly applied in the North Carolina courts. It would be upheld, I believe, by our Supreme Court and also, I think, by the United States Supreme Court. We've tried to define obscenity in light of the guidelines the Supreme Court has handed down."

who are all concerned about the decay of the downtown areas." Although Lake is finding out there is opposition to his bill (so far the bill has not cleared the Senate judiciary committee for it's second reading), he remains confident the bill will do the
