The protest has reportedly been in the planning stages for some time now, according to Miss Ladd, "the Palmetto Alliance (the organization responsible for organizing the movement) has been working with the police and the AGNS to insure a peaceful rally." The "Catfish Alliance" of Alabama, the "Anti-Nuclear Alliance" of Charlotte, the "Kuduz Alliance" of Durham, and the "Mobilization For Survival" will also be represented at the weekend long protest.

The "Barnwell Action" will kick-off on Saturday, April 29, with a "non-violent training and value sharing sessions at the rally site." On Sunday the protestors will gather for a "fair energy fair," featuring bands and speakers. The scheduled orators include: Dr. John Gofman of the University of California, and co-discoverer of plutonium; Dr. Helen Caldicott, who was the catalyst of the successful movement to place a moratorium on uranium mining in Australia; Dr. Benjamin Spock; and a delegation from Hiroshima. At 11 am, the protestors will assemble for a legal march to deliver a petition to AGNS owners demanding the plant to be closed or converted to a non-nuclear function. If by Monday the owners have not honored the demands of the petition, the protestors plan to "deliver ourselves as a Human Petition that will remain until the plant is closed or we are arrested."

Miss Ladd was quick to point out the passive resistance the protestors will offer, "if people get rebellious, the use of small affinity groups will hopefully negate the behavior of the '60's."

Jackson Browne, noted singer and songwriter, and a member of the "Musicians Against Nuclear Power" is performing two charity concerts on April 21, at the University of South Carolina, in Columbia, in conjunction with the Barnwell Action.

The renovation will include, "such thing as placing acoustic tile to conceal unsightly pipes, reduce noise with sheetrock walls, add kitchenettes to buildings where they do not already have them, and the installation of recessed lighting," according to Shirley Flynn, the Dean of Students for Resident Life, and head of the "Ad Hoc Planning Committee For Renovation of the Quad Dorms." The committee, formed in December of 1977, by Chancellor Ferguson, includes a representative from each quad dorm.

The money was made available through the amount of student rents collected through the years, minus the operating expenses incurred, according to H.L. Facilities Need Improving

A recent phone call to this office stated that there was no checkout system at any of the three gymnasiums on campus for procurement of a basketball. After a phone call of our own it was discerned that at Western Carolina University, for example, with proper identification a student can acquire anything from sneakers to squash paddles.

This campus is one of the only ones in the 16-member UNC system where gym equipment, such as basketballs, sneakers, hand balls, etc. cannot be checked out.

Although ranking fourth in size in the system, UNC-G is near the cellar in the area of recreational and physical education equipment.

When asked about this problem, a prominent member of the physical education hierarchy stated that the University was moving in the area of Division I Athletic Competition. He went on to say that strides have been made in the past years to improve facilities for both male and female students.

The time has come to stop talking about Division I athletic competition. The time has come to stop simply trying. The situation which exists restricts a student from playing a game of pick-up basketball unless he can afford to purchase a basketball which is, by most college student standards expensive. Purchase would have to be made after the student has paid $140.00 for a student identification card which must be presented upon entry to any of UNC-G's three small and inadequate gym facilities.

The time has come for those accountable to bring themselves forward and explain why this University community of 10,000 students lags so far behind in this area.

It is time to shake off the shackles of UNC-G being to "Women's College" of the University system.

By adding considerable amounts of equipment and personnel to the existing system, maybe the curse of apathy could be repulsed to some degree. Maybe the gym could take the place of, if only for one evening a week, the smoke filled beer-can cluttered room that is certainly an integral part of college life here and throughout the entire university system.

Possibly if these strides were taken the conditioning of the body as well as the mind could become a reality at UNC-G.

The Sixteenth Annual Spring Honors Convocation will be held Monday, April 24, at 8:00 p.m. in the Virginia Dare Room of the Alumni House. All faculty and students are invited to attend. The convocation speaker will be Dr. Elizabeth Sewell, formerly Joe Rosenthal Professor in the Department of Religious Studies at UNC-G. Also, the annual Teaching Excellence Awards and Student Excellence Awards will be presented at that time.

Letters to the Editor

Gallery Sees

More Than Senate

To the Editor,

As an observer last Tuesday night in Senate, I feel that the gallery got a better look at the action than did the Senators. I am referring to the approval of the cabinet that SG president Ralph Wilkerson chose as his advisory group.

Just to begin, it seems obvious to me that Mr. Wilkerson has a right to choose anyone he damn-well pleases to serve on his cabinet—unless the Senate can come up with some serious reasons why the person should not fill the job. After lengthy debate on the methods of voting the first cabinet member was approved. The second appointment was Adrian Whitney. Again debate and secret ballot was decided upon. Mr. Whitney was not approved. He was not told why and Mr. Wilkerson was not told why. The rest were voted on in toto which, even to a spectator, seems grossly unfair to the first two.

The point was brought up by Senator Crumley that the Senators were possibly not representing their constituents and that the appointees and Mr. Wilkerson had a right to know why they had objections to any of the prospective cabinet members. The gallery applauded. Senator Debbie Pittman (who was also up for a cabinet position) stated that she wanted to know why she would be disapproved, if so, and felt that open discussion was called for. Again the gallery applauded.

The Senators obviously could not vote in a way that they "thought" that those who elected them in the dorms would like, but they had an excellent barometer of student opinion right there in the room. The students there expressed their opinion with their applause. We are the students that elected them.

Whether or not we were pro-Wilkerson or pro-Lambert doesn't matter anymore. Ralph Wilkerson was elected by the same people that elected you, Senators. It is your duty as it is mine and anyone else's on this campus to support him and the people he entrusts as advisors. Come on Senators, get it together and work together. Let's don't carry this little game into next year.

Sincerely,
Jeff Erwin

Senate Should Vote In "Best Interest"

Dear Sir:

This is an open letter to the student body.

I attended the last session of our student government, and was appalled by the behavior of some of our Senators. After Ralph Wilkerson was sworn in along with others, the Senate got to the confirmation of Mr. Wilkerson's cabinet. The confirmation of Jeff Mangum as advisor to the President got through, before Senator Donsky and Kaplan could get a motion through for secret ballot. Secret ballot is totally inappropriate in this kind of situation, especially for our student government to use. The secret ballot was opposed by several Senators, and the Gallery I might add, but the clique prevailed. Oddly enough every Cabinet position was confirmed except one, that of Adrian Whitney as Ombudsman. Following Mr. Whitney's rejection, Senator Crumley called for a vote of confidence of Ralph Wilkerson. Keeping in mind the fact that most of the Senators opposed Mr. Wilkerson's election, and are bitter about losing, they gave Ralph a vote of confidence.

What all this shows is that the Senate clique does not like Mr. Whitney, not that he is not qualified. No questions were raised concerning Mr. Whitney's ability to perform the position of Ombudsman well. Indeed, Mr. Whitney's knowledge of parliamentary procedure, and university policy and bureaucracy exceeds that of most Senators. He is on five committees, and in my opinion has done well, always working for the best interest of the student body. I suppose his only sin was to actively support Mr. Wilkerson for the Presidency. But because two-thirds of you agreed with him in his choice for President, I don't believe that should count against him. The fact that Senate had to hold a secret ballot to reject him shows that it was personal differences which made the decision, not rational thought, especially since no Senator questioned his ability.

I urge you strongly to question your Senators as to how they voted on Mr. Whitney's rejection seventeen of them should be embarrassed. It is in your best interest to pressure these Senators to confirm Mr. Whitney as Ombudsman. Also, this event should serve as a warning to you that some Senators do not wish to cooperate with President Wilkerson. I personally know that he and his staff have some great new ideas for you. It would be a shame if these ideas could not be instituted because of the emotions of the Senate. So again I urge you to pressure your Senators to vote in your best interest. The confirmation of Mr. Whitney is in your best interest. As the poster said... WAKE UP!

Sincerely,
Wayne Abraham

Cabinet For SG

Assistant to the President: Geoff Mangum

The duty and responsibility of the Assistant to the President will be to act as an advisor to the President, coordinate policy at the cabinet level, and assist generally in the functioning of the executive branch of student Government.

Secretary for Town Student Affairs: Ken Crumley

The duty and responsibility of the Secretary for Town Student Affairs will be to work in close relationship with Town Student Executive Board, Elliott University Council, and the Dean of Students for Student Services for the purpose of co-ordinating Presidential policy for the benefit of all town students.

Secretary for Residential Affairs: Chip Culler

The duty and responsibility of the Secretary for Residential Affairs will be to serve as a link between dorm students and the President, to represent the dorm students and the President before the Dean of Students for Residence Life and other relevant administrative bodies affecting Residence Life, and to assist the President in formulating Residential Affairs policy.

Secretary for Community Affairs: Randolph Sides

The duty and responsibility of the Secretary for Community a good working relationship with the City of Greensboro, Guilford County, and their various community agencies in matters that concern both the students and the community.

Business Manager: Deborah Pittman

Secretary for Minority Affairs: Sandy Dunn

The duty and responsibility of the Secretary for minority Affairs will be to establish relations with, and represent to the President and the Administration, all students and student groups considered members in this area, and generally to advise the President in all matters affecting Minority Affairs.

All of Vice-President Payne's legislative appointments passed unanimously. The appointments are as follows: Robin Holbrook, Academic Concern; Steve Lambert, Appropriations; Pat Hamilton, Constitution-By-Laws and Social Regulations; Alan Kaplan, Classification of Organizations; Art Donsky, Judicial; Greg Greer, Legislation; Beth Hayes, Publicity; Tami Miller, Social Concerns; Marty Seymour, Legislative Assistant.

The rest of the meeting involved committee business, reports and the classification of organizations.

Wilkerson Inaugural

President of the Senate, members of the Senate, distinguished guests and fellow students:

Tonight we began again to confront the issues that both you and I. If there are any differences, they should be tossed aside for it is imperative that we begin together.

Robert Kennedy said: "Some men see things as they are and ask why. I dream things that never were and ask, why not?"

Student Government should not only ask why not but say I will.

We must make Student Government more accessible to the students. We can insure that the students are well-informed on the decisions we make. It is important that we care in a time when few care anymore. We must seek your views, represent your wishes and share your problems.

Student Government must regain the respect of the Student Body. We must pass conflict of interest legislation to insure that the special interests do not dominate the senate. In addition, we must develop a strict code of ethics. These steps are crucial in molding a government in which the students can take pride in. The words of Adlai Stevenson should echo constantly in our minds. Stevenson said: "Government should be the concern of all of us beneath the dignity of none of us."

I pledge a new spirit of cooperation with all members of the university. Student Government should play a more active role in social programming. We must work with TSEB and EUC to bring the student body together for a change.

It is essential that we work closely with the faculty, administration and the trustees. There is reason for alarm tonight - for the integrity of the university system is under attack. We must be firm in our support of President Friday for the efforts by HEW will demean, divide and destroy the UNC System not enhance the educational opportunities for every student.

This spirit of cooperation should result in resolution of issues that have been delayed. I appeal to the reasons not the passions of every member of the university. We must reach an agreement on 24-hour visitation. Such an agreement should entail some form of 24-hour visitation to be fair to the student body. support 24-hour visitation on the weekends on a trial basis for one semester. I am confident we, the student body will prove that we can conduct ourselves properly. I challenge those who oppose 24-hour visitation to give the students a chance to prove themselves.

We are acutely aware of the parking problem. I do not support eliminating virtually all the dorm parking as a solution to this issue. I propose that incoming dorm freshmen be prohibited from bringing their cars on campus; the acquisition of more property; the use of property that the university already owns, and the redesigning parking lots to accommodate more cars.

There should not be strict enforcement of all the parking regulations until the situation improves. I urge every student to carpool and I will donate one month's salary to assist in a carpooling campaign.

Student Government should improve relations with the community. In the Fall, I will submit plans to involve the students in community events. We must make Greensboro feel a part of UNC-G.

Whereas we pride ourselves for our academic excellence, we are not as strong in sports. I support a strong and competitive athletic program. I do not believe that UNC-G entry into division I basketball conference would harm our academic standing.

Social activities have received a setback due to the restrictions concerning the expenditures of activity fees for alcohol. Students in college should intelligently decide if they want their fees to purchase alcohol. These restrictions must be repealed. If necessary, I will go to Raleigh to lobby on your behalf.

This year, the graduate student was included in Student Government. I will submit to this body before this year ends a final meeting appointment for a cabinet level position for graduate students' affairs. We must insure that that graduate student receives privileges as a student at UNC-G.

Student Government does not have all the answers. It will take an injection of new ideas and innovations. Your voice and your involvement will determine our success.

Perhaps we may not become great, but if we draw from what is in our heads as well as from what is in hearts we can be no less than good.

During these past weeks, I have met students who are concerned, who want more from college than a degree. These students want their college years to be vivid and meaningful - years full of unforgettable experiences, friendships that will long last our time spent here. Together, we can achieve these goals.

An unknown poet wrote the following and I feel that it is appropriate to conclude this speech.

Do not walk in front of me, I may not follow.
Do not walk behind me, I may not lead.
Just walk with me and be my friend.

Thank you!

Senior Day at Alumni House allowed graduating upperclassmen to socialize and partake of refreshments. Held yesterday afternoon, it brought this year's seniors together to vote for alumni class officers, class speaker, and outstanding seniors.

do, then you probably just passed a team, or group of teams taking part in Dr. David Meyers', "International Systems Simulation," a part of his Political Science 240 class.

The simulation is a project in which all members of the class are divided into teams representing different countries. The teams then make policy for the country on the basis of an international crisis posed by Dr. Meyers and his assistants. Each team has a separate set of goals and the simulation lasts until a team reaches all of its goals or a deadlock occurs among contesting nations and no solution is possible. The search for peace, however, is the main ingredient in the simulation and every team tries to keep its nation out of war.

Keeping the peace, however, is a difficult task this semester. The present simulation includes representative teams from Egypt, Israel, Jordan, the Peoples Republic of China, Saudi Arabia, the United States, Soviet Union, the Palestine Liberation Organization, and the

"Easy Rider": Realism In Retrospect

BY RIC MARSHALL
Copy Editor

It does seem, looking back, that there never really was an Easy Rider, or that we were all just stoned. Perhaps that is why the movie is a classic. Perhaps what we imagined to be is really more important than what we had.

The film came at a time when everything was already established, except nobody knew it was there. The long hair was there, the pot was there, the motorcycles were there, even the American flag outfit was there. What Dennis Hopper and Peter Fonda did was merely to put it all down on paper, or celluloid as it were.

It was a lot like the Beatles, the folk art of a cultureless middle class youth gone hype-hype mass media. People growing up today somehow miss the point, just like they miss the point of the old Vietnam war protests and the point of the old student-administrator conflicts. The typical college student of today doesn't even know about napalm.

For those individuals all that remains is the humor, the insipid mock-hippie dialogue, the inherent madness of a trip to/at Mardi Gras. They miss the paranoia, the sheer and total hatred that so many otherwise Christian Americans felt when faced with "something different." The symbolism of "No Vacancy" is gone forever.

Yet the movie itself remains. Its audience is now a strange mixture of older, burned-out freaks, fearfully curious freshmen, and alienated young individualists. They watch and always find amusement, but for many, the power and intensity is still there. They may not understand the specifics, but they certainly understand the emotion.

The film has been faulted for its lack of subtlety. How subtle can a shotgun blast be? How subtle can hatred ever be? Those who were never there can never really feel what it is like, but Easy Rider comes awfully close. It may not be accurate, but its incredibly realistic. It may have been just a dream, but if so it was really a nightmare which occurred with incessant repetition.

New Jersey Native Looks Toward Second DIAC Title

BY KENT WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

His contorted serve resembles a housewife swatting flies and his ground strokes lack the long fluent motion of most college tennis players, but UNC-G senior Steve Mendek has one thing going for him—a string of three consecutive Dixie Conference Singles Tennis Championships.

As a freshmen, the Blackwood, N.J. native captured the No. 6 singles crown. The following year he graduated to the No. 2 singles spot where he achieved the "Biggest thrill" of his college tennis career thus far. He took the DIAC singles championship, then joined teammate Jack Arehart (now graduated) to win the No. 2 doubles title.

Last season he was victorious once again, this time at No. 3 singles.

Presently, the feisty Mendek has amassed a 5-2 won-loss record at the No. 4 position, with only one defeat coming at the hands of a conference player. And he is hopeful that his unusually slow style of play and consistent slices will carry him to a fourth singles championship in the upcoming Dixie Conference Tournament, April 24-25.

"Both Christopher Newport and St. Andrews have good players at the No. 4 position," stated Mendek who defeated his CN opponent earlier this season but fell victim to the St. Andrews netter. "But I feel that if I have a good day, I will have a chance at another championship."

Mendek has received varying responses to his tennis game from opponents, but so far no one has found a consistent way to combat it. "I have found that my unusual style of play is a great advantage," chuckled Mendek, an accounting major. "Everyone who plays against me knows that I am unorthodox, but a lot of them still have trouble. 'People in the conference who have been there a while are used to my slow game, but others get quite upset.'"

One thing which makes Mendek's success on the tennis court surprising is that he didn't pick up a tennis racket until just prior to his junior year at Highland Regional High School in Blackwood where he also played basketball. But he was named to the All-Olympic Conference tennis squad for the next two seasons, was the No. 1 conference player his senior year, and voted most dedicated player.

"When I began to play in high school, our coach didn't know that much about tennis," explained Mendek. "I started to hit the ball with a spin then, and when I first came to UNC-G, all of my shots were spin."

Now, even though he has developed topspin shots, Mendek still prefers slice.

"Actually I am still experimenting with topspin," he stated. "I feel more comfortable hitting the slice especially when I get into pressure positions."

"After I get out of college, I'll be confident in hitting a variety of shots," he added.

UNC-G tennis coach Bert Goldman relies heavily on the New Jersey senior as do his teammates.

"I think that Steve will do well in our remaining matches," continued Goldman. "He will have to beat the St. Andrews player to take the conference, but he is capable."

Mendek is hopeful of not only personal laurels at the DIAC Tournament, but also the prospect of returning the team title to UNC-G. UNC-G finished second last year to Christopher Newport, and those two are expected to fight it out again this year.

"I feel like our team is every bit as good as theirs even though they defeated us 7-2," Mendek said emphatically. "We didn't have a particularly good day when we played them before....maybe things will be different in the tournament."

Six Students Prepare For College Bowl

Recently competition was held for places on the UNC-G team for College Bowl, the question and answer quiz show. After competing in ten intramural games, those selected for the varsity team that will represent the school are: John Idol, Bonnie Jernigan, Lawrence Margolis, and Jeff Vance. Alternates are Ben Richardson and Jack Murphy. These students will travel to Raleigh on April 23 and 24 for a five-state regional competition.

At the regionals there will be teams representing UNC-G, UNC-Charlotte, UNC-Chapel Hill, N.C. State, Wake Forest, East Carolina, Coastal Carolina, University of Tennessee, University of the South, and the University of South Carolina.

Any college is allowed to enter the regional competition for a rather modest entry fee. There are sixteen geographic areas designated for regional College Bowl competition, and the teams that win the regionals will compete in the televised world championship in Miami during the second week of May.

The coach for the team is Bruce Harshbarger, the Assistant Director of Programming for Elliott University Center, who became interested in College Bowl competition while a student at Wake Forest. He hopes to see a College Bowl Committee formed to direct the activities of the teams here. This summer Mr. Harshbarger plans to work on a buzzer lock-out system—the first respondent will cancel the others—so that intramural competition will be professional and will aid in training for intercollegiate competition. It is hopeful that there will be large intramural teams competing next fall.

Mr. Harshbarger had planned to develop a winning team for next year, but after he contacted College Bowl officials, he decided to send a team this spring.

Some students participate in the College Bowl for the sake of competition, as in any intramural sport, or to impress their peers with their store of knowledge, or simply for fun. The organization of the College Bowl is largely a volunteer effort that requires the interest of the students. In the future there hopefully will be a College Bowl trophy to note the members of the winning team each year.

Anyone interested in the College Bowl is welcomed and encouraged to contact Mr. Bruce Harshbarger at 379-5510 for further information.

Cinema Verite At Its Best

Before Wiseman even began to shoot his documentary he went to the Philadelphia Board of Education and asked that they recommend a high school. The school picked, Northeast High, was considered a "model school." This particular fact makes Wiseman's film even more disturbing.

While some may argue that schools have improved since High School was released, it would be untrue to say that many basic qualities of the environment have. Increasingly in recent years we have seen a decline in the quality of schools, including the drop in test scores on the SAT. For all the problems this film brings out, it does not, as Wiseman has correctly stated, present a definitive solution. What High School does is serve as a source for thoughtful discussion and reflection. For this reason, therefore, High School is a film that should be viewed by all concerned and involved educators and students in this country. If this ever happens, some day it may be possible to honestly say that "We've come a long, long way."

correspondents in Washington, D.C. A correspondent since 1961, Mudd often serves as acting anchorman for the CBS evening news in the absence of Walter Cronkite.

Mudd was a floor reporter during the 1972 Democratic and Republican conventions and covered the Southern primaries during that election year. He also produced two specials, "Busing" and "The Issues of Busing," in 1972.

In 1971, he was the primary reporter for the CBS News special, "The Selling of the Pentagon." Since 1968, he has served on the CBS News Commentary panel which has evaluated most presidential speeches since that time. He was co-anchorman with Walter Cronkite for the 1968 inauguration of ex-President Richard M. Nixon.

Prior to joining CBS News, Mudd was a teacher in Rome, Ga. from 1951-52. He was a reporter for the Richmond (Va.) News Leader in 1953 and later served as news director for that paper's radio station, WRNL, from 1953-1956. He joined radio and television station WTOP in Washington, D.C., and from there went to CBS News.

The UNC-G Friends of the Library, which Mudd will address is a support organization which dates back to 1959. There are four categories of memberships in the group: contributing, $5; associate, $10; sustaining, $25; and life, $100. Rollin J. McCrory of Greensboro is chairman of the organization.

their own repairs, and any addition of new facilities," stated Ferguson.

McLawnhorn who has already completed the floor plans and designed the individual motifs or each of the dorms, ran into a few problems in the poorly planned basements. "The only thing I could do was to adapt to the things that were already there," McLawnhorn said in regard to the amount of pipes running along the ceiling. The architect also added a dance floor in each of the dorms, featuring terraced floors he explained, "the dance floor would be something you would find in a night club."

Dance works by BFA and MFA candidates will be shown in concert, Coleman Dance Studio Thursday and Friday, April 20 and 21, 8:15 p.m. The concert will include a wide variety of choreographic themes and is free of charge. The public is invited.
