

Anderson Supporters Energetically Plan

By TAMMY MCKINNON
Staff Writer

The initial meeting of UNC-G Independents for Anderson was held Thursday evening in Presby House. Campus coordinators Carol Rouse and Mark Newton conducted the meeting, which was primarily organizational. Dr. James Clotfelter, UNC-G political science professor and recipient of national recognition as a contender for Anderson's running mate, gave a campaign speech and answered questions; he was one of several speakers.

Dr. Clotfelter marveled at the lack of political experience among those in attendance, but pointed out that inexperience is common to Anderson's supporters. He feels that many who've been politically apathetic because of disillusionment have turned to Anderson as "someone to get excited about."

Dr. Clotfelter stated frankly that "John Anderson will probably lose. Probably, we will elect a candidate whom most Americans don't like....either Carter or Reagan. Probably, we will elect one about whom there is little optimism." The reason for that, he asserts, in addition to disillusionment and apathy, is an unwillingness among Americans to work for what they believe in. And, he says, it has become a pattern in U.S. politics to regret our presidential decision.

As for Anderson's competitors, Clotfelter feels that "neither Jimmy Carter nor Ronald Reagan have constructed any cohesive set of policies." Whereas the Democratic party has attached itself to symbols of the 20's and 30's, and Reagan has patterned himself as a new Eisenhower, Anderson is the candidate of the 80's. He insists we do not have to elect a president of the past.

Anderson, at least, is not a demagogue. He speaks straight and does not skirt the issues. This, says Clotfelter, is the reason that he is worth the effort of a third party race.

The prime issue in Anderson's opinion is energy. Over the past several years, he has been a leading Republican spokesman on energy. He advocates a 50 cents per gallon conservation tax on all motor fuels to cut consumption and reduce our dependence on foreign supplies. Revenues would be used to reduce employee Social Security taxes by 50%, increase Social Security benefits, and allow tax credits for businesses unfairly penalized. Clotfelter supported Anderson's stand, saying the approach is "just common sense."

Nuclear power is another energy point on which Anderson and his competitors disagree. Reagan "seeks to win the arms race and the nuclear war." Carter has devised a plan involving massive intercontinental missiles on a conveyor belt running through four mid-western states an invulnerable deterrent, to which Clotfelter referred as "the most expensive bad idea yet." Anderson's position is to put American dollars into the least developed areas of defense, rather than those already advanced. He opposes the draft and favors a voluntary military.

Another key issue is foreign policy. Anderson maintains that "we must create an environment in which Israel can feel secure while at the same time making necessary concessions." He is prepared to move the American embassy to Jerusalem, and supports the idea of Palestinian rights. He opposes the idea of a Palestinian state between the West Bank and Jordan. He does not feel that the U.S. should attempt to dictate. Clotfelter remarked that Carter's proposed solutions have solved nothing, and also pointed out that this issue is very difficult for non-incumbent to deal with.

In the area of Health Care, Anderson is "not in favor of a comprehensive health insurance plan, because neither the economy nor the national budget can handle it." He believes the solution lies in Medicare rather than national funds, and feels that any reform of health policy must provide reform of health care financing and medical coverage, emphasis on preventive medicine and special provisions for alcohol and drug abuse and debilitating diseases.

Anderson feels that Senior Citizens must be given more consideration, though he has introduced no major changes. He sharply disagrees with Reagan and Carter, both of whom intend cut-backs for Senior Citizens.

Anderson is also a staunch supporter of the Equal Rights Amendment. He voted in favor of extending the deadline for its ratification, and intends to do all he can to see it passed.

As an Independent, many Americans question Anderson's working relationship with Congress. As Clotfelter points out, "Congress is increasingly independent of whoever is in the White House, and no one will force them to act by yelling, 'I am the President!' and slamming a fist on the table." However, Anderson, with twenty years past experience as a Congressman, is probably the most likely of the candidates to work productively with Congress.

The fact that Anderson is an Independent is to his credit. He appeals to both Republicans and Democrats. Though, as Clotfelter said, he will probably lose, a victory is not impossible. Clotfelter feels the key is to present the American public with three candidates, standing side by side, and let the people make the choice. He is confident that choice will be Anderson.

Future meetings of Independents for Anderson are tentatively scheduled on Sunday evenings at 7:30 in Presby House. Attendance was scanty at the first meeting, but "as more people learn of John Anderson, more will become supporters," Dr. Clotfelter commented. Though political apathy has become a campus institution, John Anderson is a candidate who appeals to students. Even if he does not succeed in becoming America's president, he may serve to shake the lethargic state of student interest in national politics, as indicated by the willingness of UNC-G student supporters to participate in a beer buggy race to Washington with Anderson supporters from UNC-CH.

Student Body Reaches New High

By TERESA BRITTAIN
News Editor

For the first time in its 88-year history, the student body numbers over 10,000. Registrar Hoyt Price said he has not confirmed the actual figure yet, but he knows that it is "something over 10,300."

Price had originally estimated that enrollment would reach between 10,000 and 10,150 this fall. He added that enrollment had dropped only twice in 20 years. Once in the early 1960's, and then in 1978.

The registrar thinks that a combination of several factors is responsible for the record-breaking enrollment. One reason he named was the economy. "In periods of tight economy a lot of people go to school, especially young people who can't find a job. Also adults are going back to school. They think that an education may help them to get a job when the economy gets better." Another reason for the high enrollment is the growing population around Greensboro, Price said.

Not only has UNC-G's enrollment been high, but most schools in North Carolina have reported increasingly larger student bodies. Price noted that even the private schools in North Carolina, traditionally more expensive, are "doing well."

Guofeng Resigns

PEKING—Following veiled opposition from the official press, Chinese Communist Party chairman Hua Guofeng resigned due to a widespread government shake-up designed to prevent power from concentrating in too few hands and to promote young men. Hua announced vice-Premier Zhai Ziyang as his successor.

Nixon Reflects

commented on current politics saying that President Carter is "very tough" and "very shrewd"; nevertheless, Nixon doesn't anticipate Carter to win because of "his deeds."

Grant Wins

LOS ANGELES—The series "Lou Grant" was awarded top honors at the starless TV Academy Awards Sunday night. Unfortunately, due to the actor's strike Ed Asner, along with other fellow performers, was not present to receive his award for "best actor."

Hornets Sting

GREENSBORO—The Greensboro Hornets won the South Atlantic League baseball championship Sunday outlasting the Charleston Royals 7-5 for a sweep of the best three-of-five series.

The New York Yankee farm club finished the season with the best won-lost record in the league, winning both halves of the season. The Greensboro team is considered to be the leading single-A minor league club in the nation.

Fulbright Fellowship Offers Grants To Study Abroad

By TERESA BRITTAIN
News Editor

Dr. Denise Baker, advisor for the Fulbright Fellowship program at UNC-G, has announced the opening of competition for the fellowships designed for study abroad, with the deadline for applications being Oct. 17.

The requirements for applying for a grant are that the applicant be a U.S. citizen, have a bachelor's degree on the effective date of the grant, and most importantly, the person must be proficient in the language of the country to which he wishes to travel. Creative and performing artists are not required to hold a bachelor's degree in their field, but must have four years of professional study or experience equal to that.

Dr. Baker said that the first step in applying for a fellowship is to come talk to her in 111 McIver as soon as possible, about "the country in which the person would like to study and the project that they would complete there." Then the person would be interviewed by UNC-G's Fulbright Committee, and a report on the individual's qualification would be sent to the national committee. From there, 519 people will be chosen to study abroad.

The grants are available to 50 countries and are under the provision of the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961, and are aided by foreign governments, corporations, universities, and private donors.

In 1978 Barbara Joan Metelli, from UNC-G, was awarded a Fulbright Fellowship. She studied music abroad.

Campus Counselors Explain Draft Options to Youth

By TERESA BRITTAIN
News Editor

For five weeks this summer a group of 30-35 people provided a counseling service for men registering for the draft. Dr. James Clotfelter of the Political Science department, originated the idea and served as coordinator of the program.

The counselors were a group of concerned pastors, other citizens in Greensboro, and some faculty and staff from UNC-G, according to Dr. Clotfelter. He said the counseling was not designed to tell the men something to do or not to do, but to inform them of their options and to encourage them to think through their situation.

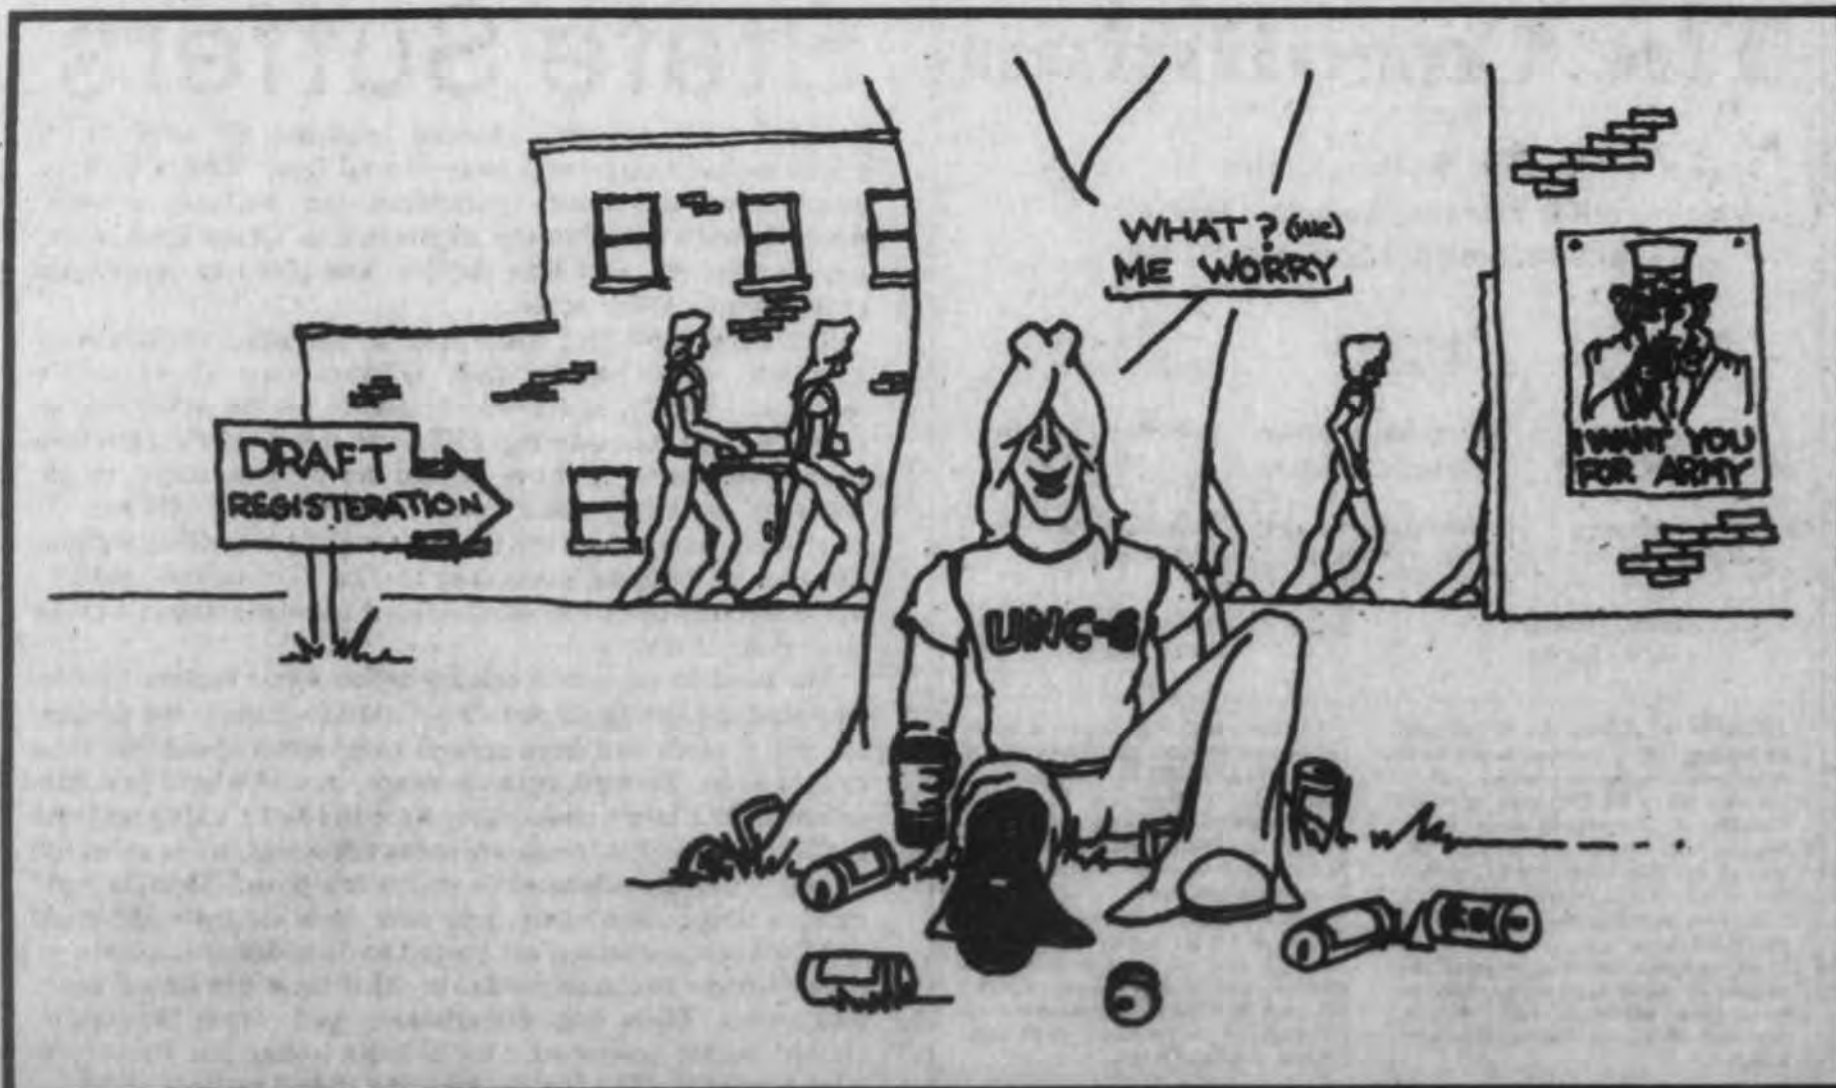

Dr. Clotfelter noted that the number of men the counselors saw was not particularly large, in that "something less than 100" men responded in person. But the counselors also talked to quite a few men on the phone, and they also distributed information through newspaper and radio ads. He said, "Some of the phone calls were long and detailed, and some of the sessions went on for a long time with a wide range of questions being raised. The counselors are satisfied that they made an impact...I am not disappointed in the number we saw."

One of the reasons the counselors did not have a larger response is what Dr. Clotfelter thinks was a "low level of information" by the Selective Service about the dates of draft registration. So because every eligible male may not have known about the specifics of draft registration, the amount of men that would respond to the counseling would naturally be lower.

Another reason for the low response was that registration was set during the summer to avoid campus rioting and other forms of opposition to the draft. Dr. Clotfelter said that if registration had been set for this fall, more men would have been on campus and more would have responded.

But while the major part of the counseling is over, the program coordinator said that some men are still coming for counseling through information they receive from the central phone number in Elliott University Center, which is 379-5510. Anyone who calls and asks for information regarding draft counseling will be given a list of available counselors.

Since males born in 1962 are required to register next January, the counseling service may be fully operative again. However, Dr. Clotfelter said that this would be "based on interest in having the counseling service."

Dedicated Staff Members Depart

By TERESA BRITTAIN
News Editor

As of this week, The Carolinian will be losing two dedicated staff members: Eric Todd, advertising manager; and Ric Hodges, photography editor. Pete Walker, editor, regrets the loss of the two department heads and says he is "going to miss them both."

Todd, who served as ad manager since last January, is leaving because his school schedule "is just too tough," although he will still be selling some ads and will handle an advertising agreement between The Carolinian and WUAG. According to Walker, Todd is "responsible for turning the paper around as far as advertising goes." Todd said his approach in trying to change the financial situation of the paper was to set goals for each issue. He was able to meet and surpass those goals with the help of salespersons, Lori Pfeffer and Kendra Smith.

Hodges, a senior, said he is leaving the paper for academic reasons also, in that his studies are more demanding this year. Hodges is also leaving to become photography editor for The Pine Needles annual. He says that The Carolinian has been invaluable in teaching him the technical aspects of photography, but with Pine Needles, he has the opportunity to "do something more artistic, which I have always enjoyed doing." Also Hodges is going to work with the annual because he feels it has been abandoned, citing the decision by the Media Board to suspend the publication if 1000 subscriptions are not sold this year. The photographer said he wants to help fight for the annual.

When he joined the staff three years ago, Hodges was a staffwriter, then he worked on the production staff and as a photographer until his promotion last October to photography editor. He feels that during his time as photo editor, his main contributions were to "make the paper as pictorially graphic as it is, and to encourage all photographers to be professional."

The position of advertising manager has been filled by Lori Pfeffer, and Herbert Gamble will replace Hodges as photography editor.

Letters to the Editor

Frat Option

To the Editor:

I would like to make a short comment to the students of UNC-G concerning fraternities and sororities.

First and most important for all of us to remember is that universities do not charter fraternity chapters; National fraternities do. Secondly, universities do not make fraternities what they are, or can be; the students who join them do.

The University has selected twelve organizations to be allowed on campus. While the selection was, I'm sure, well meaning, it is still questionable as to what qualifies these organizations over others "which would be best suited and most appropriate for this particular campus."

I would like to add that there are alternatives to those satisfied by the University. One of those being SIGMA PHI EPSILON Fraternity. SIG EP is colonizing off campus because we believe that students should have a clear choice as to how their fraternity will develop and to whom it owes allegiance; the University or its membership.

We don't intend to become a radical movement but a brotherhood of men (both on campus and off) who seek the ideals of fraternity life...Friendship.

If you are interested in SIG EP call Mark Newton or myself at 379-5616 during the day, or at night call me at 272-2236. We want to hear from you.

Randy Carlisle

Survey Praised

To the Editor:

The UNC-G Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) recently published results of their latest project in A Guide To Greensboro Banks. The guide is a survey of ten local banks, which compared their fees, hours, interest rates and other services. The guide was prepared for UNC-G and other Greensboro students. I think it will be of great help to anyone opening a local account. The banking guide is still available and of course it is free. For more information come to our next meeting, tonight September 9, Conference Room 105 Elliott at 8 p.m. or call 852-3811.

Because The Carolinian declined to print our article, I bring the information to you via this letter.

Pattie Midgett
Chairperson, UNC-G PIRG

Error Corrected

To the Editor:

In the last issue the article entitled "Support Needed to Save Pine Needles."

stated "unless 1000 Pine Needles subscriptions are sold by October 17, the annual and the Pine Needles organization will be terminated." This is not so.

Unless 1000 subscriptions are sold by October 17, the annual will suspend publication for the 1980-81 year. The Pine Needles organization, however, will NOT be "terminated" as indicated in the article.

The article also stated "an amendment to the constitution gives the Media Board the right to terminate any organization under its jurisdiction." This is not so either. Termination of an organization under the jurisdiction of Media Board requires a 2/3 majority vote of Media Board and a 2/3 majority vote of Senate. The Media Board does not intend to "terminate" anyone.

Dale Midkiff
Media Board Chairman

Type Criticized

To the Editor:

I attended UNC-G as an undergraduate and now as a grad. student, so I have seen many Carolinians come and go. I would like to say that this year's paper is one of the best, except for the Letters to the Editor section. Would you please increase the type size or supply a magnifying glass with each paper?

Signed,
Grad. with poor eye sight

The decision to print letters to the editor in 8 point type-set was necessitated by rising publishing costs and diminishing space on the editorial page. We regret any inconvenience caused by this decision, and hopefully in the future we will be able to return to the normal 10 point print size.

Town Students Face Election

Town Students: you have your chance to exercise your voice in Student Government today and tomorrow. These are the days of the town student senate representative elections. Many of you have complained in the past about how your activity fees were spent- now here's your chance to have your say-so as to how Senate spends the $6.00 of your activity fee it has to play with. To vote, simply bring your valid ID to Cone Ballroom Lobby between 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. today and tomorrow.

All UNC-G students: electing your Senate representative is only half the ball game. The other half is keeping up with him or her as to how well he or she is representing you. His or her vote will determine how your activity fees are spent; be sure that he or she spends the way you would like them spent. He or she can change things you feel need to be changed and do things you feel need to be done. But they can only do this if they know what it is you want them to do. Only if they know how their constituency feels about the issues can they represent accordingly.

Communicate with your Senate representative regularly about how you want your money spent. Your input will be appreciated. Let him or her know of any ideas you have about campus problems.

How do you find out what is going on in Senate? Read The Carolinian, check out the Senate bulletin board across from the main desk in Elliott Center, call Student Government at 379-5616, or better yet, ask your Senate representative. He or she, if a dorm representative is required to keep posted office hours of at least one hour per week; at least one town student representative will be in a lounge in Elliott University Center between 10:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m. on Tuesdays and Wednesdays. Keep in touch; they will appreciate their efforts being noticed.

Those of you who have complained about the spending of their activity fees- are especially urged to take the above measures. Every UNC-G student is entitled to fair representation in the Senate, and every UNC-G student has the right to offer their input as to how their money is being spent. No UNC-G student has the right to complain about activity fee spending until they have tried to offer their suggestions as to how it should be spent. If, after repeated tries to give your opinion are rejected, then you have a right to be upset. Write a letter to the editor and let your fellow students know that your interests aren't being represented, and perhaps theirs aren't either. But until you have made an effort to communicate, your complaint is groundless.

Your input can make a difference, but only if it is offered. Please make it a point to meet your Senate representative personally, and give him or her a call if there is something you'd like to see done. The health of our democratic process will be improved for it.

State Suffers

N.C. State students, indeed students all over North Carolina have suffered a heavy social loss. The N.C. State administration recently purchased the building complex which housed such famous nightspots as Crazy Zack's, Edward's Grocery, and Free Advice, and plans to convert the complex into office space.

The need for office space may be genuine, but one wonders why they had to pick Hillsborough Street as the location. Surely, space was available on the other side of campus; and considering Hillsborough Street's statewide reputation, such a move would have been more to the student's best interests. Now State students will have to DRIVE to party-there are no other nightspots within walking distance of campus, according to The Technician- and let's hope the number of alcohol-related fatalities doesn't go up as a result of this.

We need to take into consideration some factors that influenced the administration's decision to acquire the property. First, there had been several complaints about the noise in that area. Second, area residents, one of whom just happened to be State's chancellor, were tired of picking up trash in their yards. Yes, these are inconveniences, to be sure, but couldn't they be tolerated to save a few lives? Drinking and driving simply don't mix, and now State students, deprived of Hillsborough Street, are forced to do more of the same.

Let's hope the area residents enjoy their newfound peace and quiet. Their only disturbance, aside from the traffic, should be the sound of church bells tolling for those who were forced to drive to area bars and didn't make it back.

Women Setters Open Season

UNC-G NEWS BUREAU

Paced by the return of AIAW All-region II selection Sandra Winger, the women's volleyball team hosts North Carolina State Wednesday, inaugurating the Lady Spartans' 29-game fall schedule.

Despite the graduation of Karen Holleman and Wendy BARRICKS, UNC-G's two All-State selections in 1979 and the team's Most Valuable Player and Most Improved Player, respectively, Coach Dail appears optimistic.

"We're out to improve on last year's 28-22 record," the second-year mentor noted. "We will pace ourselves and expect peak at the AIAW Division II State Tournament in November."

Tere Dail

Returning for the 1980 campaign are All-Region selection Winger, senior setter from Dudley High School in Greensboro; Kathy McDaniel, senior hitter from Oak Ridge, N.C.; and Betsy Dowell, senior hitter from Winton-Salem.

The Lady Spartans have added one notable player to its squad. She is setter Beth Wilkie, a transfer from UNC-Asheville whom Dail describes as "a strong all-around player. Beth is a good hitter and plays defense very well."

"The team has a great attitude and is displaying unity," Dail said. "I'm excited about this season's possibilities."

Last year, the Lady Spartans finished second out of 20 teams in the AIAW tourney. Wake Forest won the state title in 1979.

"We are starting out stronger this year than last," Dail said. "Although we will not be a tall team, we seem to have better ball control and better defense."

The women's volleyball team captured three home scrimmage matches last Thursday, defeating High Point (15-3, 15-4), N.C. Central (15-5, 15-5), and Guilford College (15-13, 15-4).

Coach Dail cited Beth Wilkie, Betsy Dowell, and Kathy McDaniel for fine offensive play.

Terry Combs and Sandra Winger received praise for good serving performances.

"Brenda Suits had a good evening defensively," remarked Coach Dail.

"Our team interaction and communication was excellent," continued Dail. "The team displayed a lot of enthusiasm and hustle."

Spartans Split Tourney Outings

By TY BUCKNER
Sports Editor

UNC-Greensboro took a third place finish in the Four Point tournament at UNC-Charlotte last weekend. The Spartans lost to UNC-Wilmington, 2-1, on Friday and routed UNC-Asheville, 9-0, on Saturday.

"UNC-Wilmington won the tournament, defeating UNC-Charlotte in the championship game, 5-3.

"I felt that the best two teams in the tournament played in the opening game," commented Coach Mike Berticelli. The UNC-W Seahawks, one of the south's premier teams in 1979, slipped past UNC-G in that contest.

"We played exceptionally well, especially against Asheville," added Coach Berticelli. "I think we were frustrated after the close loss in the first game."

Against UNC-A, the Spartans took a 6-0 lead before halftime. Rui Borges scored four goals and added an assist in that consolation game. David Burek scored twice and had one assist. Steve Zimmerman scored twice and Lewis Johnstone booted the final Spartan goal into the opposing net.

Borges, Burek, and Johnstone were named to the all-tournament squad. Coach Berticelli noted that Steve Zimmerman and Mike Kennedy had outstanding performances also.

UNC-Charlotte and UNC-Wilmington compete in NCAA Division I while UNC-Asheville is an NCAA Division II team. UNC-Greensboro is NCAA Division III.

"I'm sure we'll get stronger," predicted Coach Berticelli. "I believe we're going to be a very exciting team to watch."

The Spartans open at home Saturday, September 20 against Catawba College.

Mike Cross Exposes His Life Through Story and Song

By KENDRA SMITH
Special to the Carolinian

Arts Review and Interview

The Performer:

The Performance:

Thursday night the Elliott Center Concerts sponsored an unforgettable performance by Mike Cross in Aycock Auditorium.

Opening with a fast paced fiddle instrumental, the crowds enthusiasm was evident from the start. Mike Cross's good humor kept the audience smiling even after the gruesome song "The Bounty Hunter." From his comic pieces such as "Liquor in the Well" to love ballads like "Write me a Love Song" and his Irish medleys, Mike Cross played a little music to suit everyone's tastes. The audience's response to "Kentucky Song" was one of the most spirited.

He also played a number of songs off his newest album, "Rock 'n Rye." By the end of the evening, half of the audience was on its feet. Encores were played and though one popular request ("Whiskey for Breakfast") was not played, the audience was left more than satisfied.

Accompanying Mike was an old time friend Zan McCloud. Sharing a love of Irish music, they've played together frequently. McCloud plays both acoustic and electric guitar, banjo, and various other string instruments.

Mike Cross enjoys the freedom of performing with only one other person rather than a full band. He was first impressed with this style at a James Taylor concert where Taylor appeared with only an acoustic guitar.

This style has worked for Cross. He developed an intimate feeling with the audience, chatting with individuals on a one to one basis. His response gave enough confidence to a few fans that they wandered back stage demanding t-shirts as souvenirs. The clothes remained on Mr. Cross's back but autographs and smiles were given freely, only enhancing the atmosphere of the evening.

with music, Mike says he "was anything but a child prodigy."

Studying at the University of North Carolina and on his way to law school, he first learned to play the guitar when he was twenty-one. And it was only six years ago that he picked up a fiddle. But both appeared to be extensions of his natural talent in his concert Thursday night.

"I like people in general...I guess it's good since I'm one of them."

Talking with Cross I realized that the warmth and charm he exhibits on stage is not an act. Mike Cross is a sincere performer, leaving a feeling of closeness both on a one to one basis and on stage.

Male Experiences Inquisitive Revealing Interview

By LARRY POLPEKA
Special to the Carolinian

Most women I know are appalled when they discover that I religiously read Playboy magazine. They say it's filthy, disgusting, sexist and exploits women.

Those first three criticisms are undoubtedly true. That's the only reason I read the magazine. But I'm not so sure that Playboy magazine exploits women. After all, the women who pose without clothes in that magazine are doing it of their own free will, aren't they?

In a way I often get the feeling that it's the women who are getting the better of the deal. Because while we men are paying $2.50 an issue for the right to drool over their photos, the women are walking away with thousands of dollars plus an opportunity at modeling or acting careers. Sometimes I wish there was a great that good for us guys.

Last month I finally found my answer when I spotted this ad in a trade newspaper:

"YOU could be a PLAYGIRL'S

MAN OF THE 1980's." And win over $25,000 in Prizes. PLAYGIRL Magazine is looking for the Man of the 1980's. Our staff photographers will be in the Chicago area for interviews and test shots. If you think you represent what men are all about call (312) 467-0695 for an appointment.

To tell the truth, I have never considered myself playmate material. My arms and legs are spindly, my nose is a bit large and I'm rapidly developing two bald spots on my head. But I figured I might as well take a chance and see if a spindly, balding, big-nose college student was what they had in mind as their man of the '80's, so I set up an appointment for an interview the next day.

Interviews were conducted in a three-room suite on Chicago's Michigan Avenue. The front-room reception area had a large couch, a desk with a typewriter, a few file cabinets and dozens of photos of Playgirl magazine covers lining the walls.

As I walked in I was greeted by a large man in a three-piece suit who was sitting at a typewriter answering telephones. He gave me a form to sign, verifying that I was at least 18 years old and that it was OK for Playgirl to use any photos they took of me.

In a few minutes a tall woman with short blonde hair who was wearing a red velvet blouse and a pair of extremely tight blue jeans came from a back room to greet me.

"You must be Larry," she said in a bold voice. "Well, take off your coat. We won't bite."

I dropped my coat on a chair and we went to the back room for my "interview."

I sat on a soft chair and she sat on an end table and asked me questions about my age, studies, career goals and marital status. After a few questions she told me about the "Man of the '80's" contest.

"We had this idea," she said, enthusiastically. "You see women of the '80's are looking for more than just a pretty face. They're looking for men who are intellectual, interesting and have a little something more."

"So our photographers are going to five cities—Chicago, Atlanta, New York, San Francisco and Los Angeles to take test photos. After that the editors will meet in Los Angeles and weed out the bad ones. We'll print all the rest and then have the readers write in and vote for the ones they like."

"After that we'll take 10 finalists and they'll all get flown to Los Angeles for a live shooting—on stage—and the audience there will pick the winner. And the winner gets $25,000. Any questions?"

"Yeah," I said. "How will this be a contest to choose, as you say, more than just a pretty face?"

"Oh," she said. "We'll print a line or two about each contestant next to his picture in the magazine. That's why I'm asking all these questions."

"That's good," I said. "I wouldn't want all those women out there to have to vote on just a few nice smiles."

She grinned and then asked, "Are you ready now?"

"Ready for what?" I replied.

"Oh," she said, laughing. "I forgot to tell you, David, our photographer is going to take some pictures of you now in the other room."

"Oh?" I said.

"Yeah, just a few test shots. Are you ready?"

"Uh...I guess?"

I was whisked off to a third room, where I found David, a short, bearded man with a camera strung around his neck.

We sat on a couch in his photo studio, a large, dimly-lit room, with a stereo playing soft rock music and a window overlooking the hustle and bustle of Michigan Avenue.

"First I'm going to take a few closeups of your face," he explained. "And then I'm going to want you to slowly unbutton your shirt while I take some more photos. And then I'll want you to unbutton your pants. And then we'll take a few of you totally nude. Ready?"

"Uh...?"

I was a little dazed. I really hadn't expected to do all that, but David said it in such a business-like way that I really didn't see how I could refuse. Playgirl was definitely going to get much more than just a pretty face out of me.

I took off my watch, shoes and socks and stepped onto a white mat that served as a background for the photos.

"OK. Just relax. This'll be easy."

said David peering through his viewfinder.

"OK. Start unbuttoning your shirt."

Click. Click.

"You don't have to keep looking up. Just do it naturally."

Click. Click.

"Good. Keep going."

I threw my shirt on the floor beside me and went for my pants.

"OK. Now unzip your pants partway and then let me get a few pictures like that."

Click. Click.

"Good. OK. Now your pants."

Click. Click.

"Now take off your shorts."

"Great. That's it. You can put your clothes back on now. I'll be waiting outside when you're done."

As David walked out, I finally realized that I was standing stark naked on a white mat. But it never felt like it. It was almost as if I were in a doctor's office being examined. I couldn't have been posing for a magazine, I thought. It all seemed so uneventful.

But then I remembered that wavier form I signed when I walked in. And then I realized that I may have really been posing for thousands of ogling female readers who would be voting on my flesh. I wanted to crawl under the sofa.

Finally I worked up the courage to face reality and walked back into the lobby.

"That was good," said David. "We're going to be printing the semi-finalists probably in March, so be watching the magazine. You don't get any money for being a semi-finalist but you do have a chance to win the $25,000."

As I walked out, I felt like hiding somewhere. But the more I thought about that $25,000, the better it sounded. It seemed to justify everything I did that afternoon.

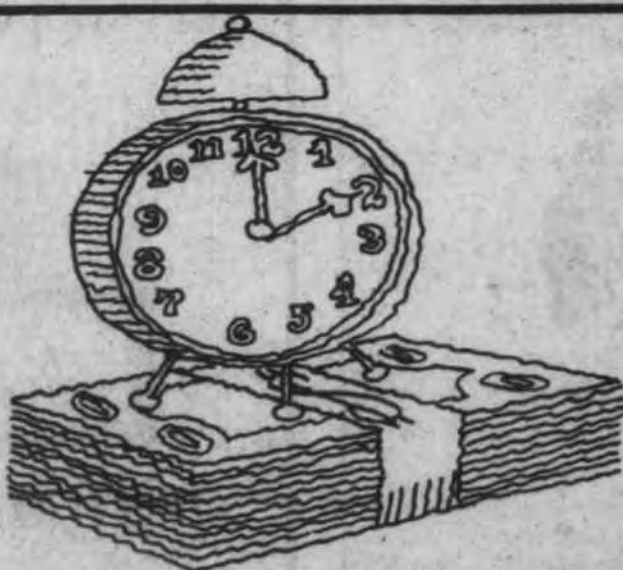

Filthy? Yes. Disgusting? Yes. Sexist? Yes. But exploitative? At that price I think I'd like to be exploited more often.

NBA Promotes Safe Drinking

By MICHAEL LAPOMARDA
Features Writer

Have you ever been to a party and seen people drunk off their...well you know what I mean, and wondered why? Or maybe you awoke one morning and wondered why you were in the former category the previous evening. Well, you may finally learn the answer to at least part of that question when the EUC Council and the Office of Student Development present the Alcohol Awareness Fair.

The purpose of the fair is to promote responsible drinking. According to Joanne Goldwater, an EUC Council member, "It (the fair) is not saying don't drink, or that drinking is bad, just do it responsibly."

Among the more interesting booths and demonstrations that will be present at the fair, is a booth by the National Brewer's Association. The booth will feature a demonstration of a still by members of the brewer's association, as well as information on alcohol. Another interesting booth is being sponsored by the Student Health Center and is a demonstration on first-aid for an alcohol overdose.

Other booth sponsors at the fair will be the N.C. State Highway Patrol with a breathalyzer demonstration, the Greensboro Cares Association, the ABC Board, the Campus Ministers Association, the UNC-G Psychology Department, and the EUC Council. There will also be a booth with a video tape and a refreshment booth serving Bloody Virgins and Mimosas.

The Alcohol Awareness Fair, scheduled for Wednesday, September 10, from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. in Cone Ballroom, will be the highlight of Alcohol Awareness Week.

Chaos Seems Endless

(CPS)-- David Hartman, a 19-year-old political science junior at California-Berkeley, remembers the confusion started when he first read about military registration last January. It hasn't ended yet.

"At first I thought, 'There's no way I'm going to register,'" he recalls. "But then I thought of the consequences." Failure to register can bring penalties of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

"...it's easy to talk now. When the time comes..."

Not knowing what he should do, he consulted friends and family, though "I knew what they would say." On balance, "I had no one to turn to."

Hartman ultimately decided to register, but his confusion persists. "I can say I won't go and fight in a war," he states, and then adds with a reflective smile, "Of course, it's easy to talk now. When the time comes..."

So it went this summer as approximately four million young men across the country tried to make up their minds what to do about military registration. Hartman's confusion was typical of the four men College Press Service followed through their decision making.

As James DeVoto of Atlanta put it: "There was no way to be right about this."

DeVoto, Hartman, and David Barardi of Cleveland finally decided to register. All recorded on their registration forms that they were complying with the law under protest. "I was too scared not to register," DeVoto explains, "but I feel like I'm chickenshit for being scared. My protest note doesn't make me feel like a man."

PLENTIFUL ADVICE
All four young men--the one who has yet to register requested anonymity--had little trouble finding advice during their ordeals. A bewildering number of protest groups competed for their attention. Though DeVoto was the only one to seek out counseling help, all encountered a lot of protest literature.

The Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors, based in Philadelphia, distributed "over 100,000" protest cards nationally for people to record their anger.

Steve Gulick, Philadelphia coordinator for the War Resisters League, estimated "about 20,000 have filled out the cards."

Vincent Cobb of the American Friends Service Committee, an anti-war group associated with the Quakers, "couldn't even begin to estimate" the number of counseling letters his group distributed to 18- and 19-year-olds across the country.

"We didn't necessarily wait for people to come to us," Cobb understates. He says the Friends' Denver office alone called 52,000 names and addresses from drivers license records, and sent them letters explaining what options were available.

Protest leaders are bullish about the results of such efforts.

At different points during the registration process, protest leaders estimated that anywhere from a half million to two million people refused to register.

'MEANINGLESS' OBJECTION
The Selective Service System reports it still doesn't know what percentage of the population complied with the law.

Paul Mocko of Selective Service says the agency "won't have very reliable numbers until October." Yet because of the rumors and widespread speculation, "we will publish a less reliable set of preliminary figures." At our press time, the agency had temporarily delayed publication of the figures.

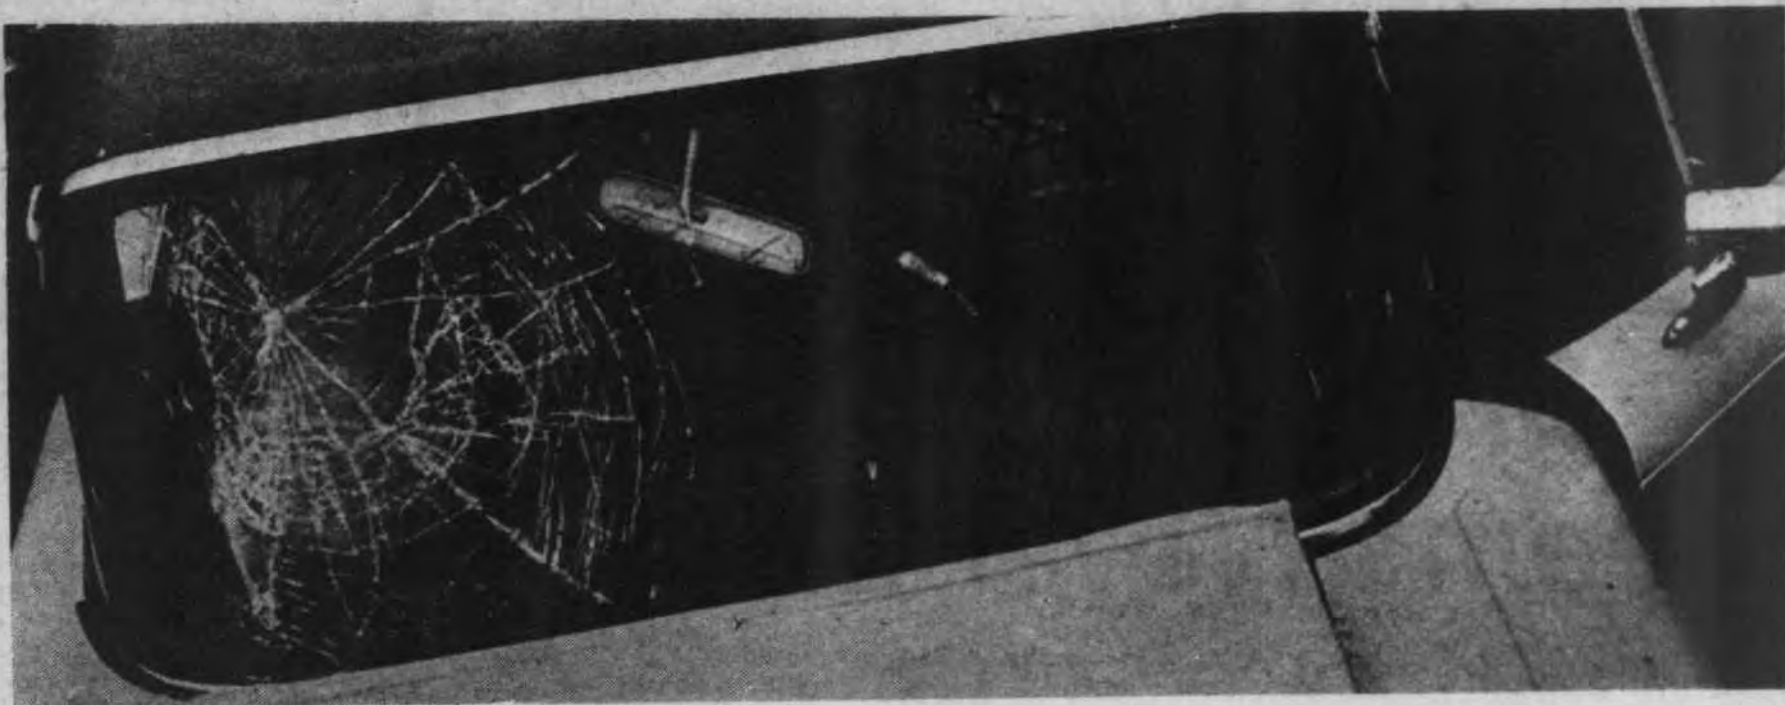

"No one knows yet," Mocko says. "It's that simple."

Similarly, no one knows how many people registered with written protests on their forms.

Mocko points out that notes like, "I intend to file for conscientious objector status" written on the forms "mean nothing to us now, mostly because we don't want any information on classification now."

Yet Selective Service keeps "the card on microfilm, so we can see the message if and when it becomes

THE PARTY'S OVER.

All too often, when the party ends, the trouble begins.

People who shouldn't be doing anything more active than going to sleep are driving a car. Speeding and weaving their way to death.

Before any of your friends drive home from your party, make sure they aren't drunk.

Don't be fooled because they drank only beer or wine. Beer and wine can be just as intoxicating as mixed drinks.

And don't kid yourself because they may have had some black coffee. Black coffee can't sober them up well enough to drive.

If someone gets too drunk to drive, drive him yourself. Or call a cab. Or offer to let him sleep over.

Maybe your friend won't be feeling so good on the morning after, but you're going to feel terrific.

Draft Confusion Seems Never Ending

classification be cranked up again.

Gulick of the War Resisters League, for one, counsels that it's "a good idea to start leaving tracks" for conscientious objector status. "Theoretically, it has no legal standing. But we recommend that you keep copies."

Much of that kind of counseling took place directly at post offices during registration.

Near the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, for example, leaflet-distributors handed, "I am registering in protest" stickers to put on registration forms.

A group called Movement Against the Draft roamed northern Illinois post offices with flyers advising registrants what they should write on their forms (a statement that the registrant wouldn't surrender his right to privacy) and what not to write on the forms (his social security number).

Inevitably, there were complaints that some of the counseling was too general and even counter-productive.

The Minnesota Public Interest Research Group concentrated on defining three general choices for potential registrants: they could evade registration, apply for conscientious objector status, or

"register and fight."

David Barardi, an 18-year-old soda salesman in Cleveland, felt the c.o. counseling was misleading.

"I'd pretty much decided to register as a c.o. after I talked to some anti-draft guy from Cleveland State or somewhere," he says. Barardi went to register only to find there was no "box to check. I asked the clerk at the counter, but he didn't know anything. He was just a clerk."

Barardi, angered upon discovering conscientious objector status was not possible at the moment, says he "winged it" by writing "I protest" on his form.

He had hoped there'd be "some protesters" at the post office to give him last minute advice, but "they were just there the first day, I guess."
