Do your parents ever seem confused when you talk about campus activities or everyday events that take place in the dorm? If so now you have a chance to show them where you spend most of your time. (No, B.G. Feathers is not having open house.) Parents' Weekend, which is scheduled for the weekend of Nov. 12 and 13, is designed to give your parents an opportunity to learn more about the UNC-G campus. Parents will soon be receiving a brochure in the mail containing a list of the activities for the weekend, hotel information, and a reservation form. While you are home for Fall Break why not talk up Parents' Weekend and encourage your parents to learn more about your school and where their money goes.

Resident Students Take Part In RHA Campaign

By LEIGH TRAPP
Asst. News Editor

The Residence Hall Association has recently begun its campaign to encourage resident students to participate in campus/residence hall events.

According to Linda Piper, the Head Coordinator of RHA, "this association hopes to provide an opportunity for all residents to be involved in campus and residential life activities."

The UNC-G RHA is part of the state, regional and national associations—which provide an opportunity for each campus to talk with other campuses about the different policies and events at the individual universities, especially within the residence halls. Communications between the campuses are made possible by representatives from each school structure.

RHA as an individual school structure provides for a campus-wide RHA and for Residence Hall Councils. The campus association is made up of representatives from each Residence Hall Council. The hall councils are made up of representatives from each floor, the hall association representative and the officials of each council.

Currently, Piper said the RHA is stressing students' involvement within their residence hall. "Whether the students call themselves a hall council, a programming committee or a social committee, or whatever...we just want to get students involved in their residence hall activities."

According to Piper, the residents' activities can range from those which use money to those which don't require anything but participation. Piper suggests that budgets for each residence hall can come from social fees, activity fees or a fund-raiser. In order to use the activity fee, the Council would help with the Residential Staff activities. "Councils would provide input as to what events the student would like to have. They would also help set up and work in these events," she said.

Those who do not have a budget, or who don't wish to form a budget, are advised to have a suggestion board to suggest ideas to the residence hall staff as to what activities residents would like to have.

At this time, Piper is working with the RGA Advisor Jude Schropshire (Area Coordinator) and Steve Haulman, (Residence Life Director), to find a budget for the campus RHA and separate councils. Until this time, Piper stresses councils should find budgets or make an effort to help in deciding residence hall programs.

Most importantly, RHA is trying to promote students to participate in their residence halls and to set up a strong campus-wide association. "Each residence hall has to elect a representative for the campus-wide RHA," said Piper. She is still accepting the names for representatives even though the deadline for the representative elections has passed. "All the representatives must be elected by the residence hall; once I have representatives for most of the halls, I will work on scheduling the first campus-wide meeting."

Presently, RHA is also promoting the regional RHA conference which will be held Oct 28-30 at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. The cost is $60 per person and any resident who is interested in the program is able to attend. "We are hoping that not only individual residents will attend, but also that residence halls will try and raise money to send an individual or individuals."

According to Piper, leadership sessions, policies on campuses, programming ideas and much more will be discussed at the conference. She said any interested individuals should call her at Reynolds dorm for more information on the conference.

The campus-wide RHA will not only provide a means for residence halls to communicate but also as an outlet for their ideas. Piper remarked that, "I work on the Renovation Committee for Residential Life. I will be talking to the RHA hall representative about their hall's ideas on campus changes and improvements. This is one area they will work in...they will also be able to talk to Residence Life about specific hall problems."

Publicity will continue as RHA continues to develop this fall and through the next semester. Piper says, "Mainly, we would like to stress that this is the residents' chance to participate in their residence hall events. This is not taking away from the Residence staff - it is an additional help and a big plus within the halls...for students this is their chance to take part and have a 'say-so' in the programs within their residence area."

House Approves Dam Project

WASHINGTON—The House of Representatives on Thursday approved the Water Resource Development Appropriations bill, which includes funds to begin construction of the Randleman Dam project.

Sixth District Rep. Robin Britt said the bill, which was passed by the House by a voice vote, must still receive Senate and White House approval. But, he added, there "is no question that the project is a lot closer to becoming reality than ever before."

The appropriations bill provides $103.1 million for 39 Army Corps of Engineers projects, including the Randleman Dam. The amount appropriated for the Randleman Dam project is not specified in the bill and will be determined by the corps if final approval is given on the project. Britt said the project, located on Deep River about 15 miles south of Greensboro, would enable High Point and Greensboro to meet future water needs.

"The Randleman Dam is critical to the long-term development of our region," he said. "The continued attraction of high-quality industries and the jobs they bring with them depend upon an assured water source in the future. The Randleman Dam provides this assurance."

In Congress, prospects for the project were boosted considerably on September 23 when the House Appropriations Committee reported out the bill passed by the House on Thursday. Committee approval had been a major obstacle in the funding of the project.

On Thursday, Britt reiterated earlier promises to devote himself "to ensuring that planning and construction is taken with a total commitment to environmental objectives."

"I will be working with local and state officials as a team to establish the Randleman Dam as a model of how development and careful environmental planning can go hand in hand," he said.

Young Democrats Promote Voter Registration

By SANDY ALVIS
News Editor

Rainy weather received much of the blame for low voter turnout at Tuesday's primary elections. Approximately 11,001 of Greensboro's 80,892 voters turned out for the primaries.

Young Democrats, a political organization on campus, is trying to reconstruct the broken fervor of registered voters and to plant the political seed in those that are of age and have not yet registered.

Young Democrats recently held officer elections at their second meeting. Vice-President, Kelly Baldwin reports that they are "still in the organizational stage." Despite this, President Tony Horney and the rest of the group have planned a campus-wide voter registration on Monday, Oct. 24 from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. in Sharp McIver Lounge in Elliott University Center.

Registration will be available only for students who are Guilford County residents. These students should bring some type of identification.

Senate Approves Yearly Budget

PSSA, Outing Club, NBS and WUAG Among Recipients

By LEIGH TRAPP
Staff Writer

Senate approved yearly budgets for the Student Government Organizations SF3, PSSA, Outing Club and NBS at the October 11th meeting. Senate also approved an appropriation for WUAG and another allotment for PSSA. It also retracted money allotted for campus maps and passed a resolution dealing with a request to EUC Council.

Senate started its annual budget procedures for four of the SG organizations. The other organization budgets will be appropriated at the next Senate meeting (after Fall Break).

The Science Fiction Fantasy Federation (SF3) was appropriated $2380 for their line item requests of professional fees, general supplies, postage, telephone, publishing, duplicating, miscellaneous, publicity advertising, equipment rental and projects.

The Political Science Student Association (PSSA) was allotted

$2790.00 for their yearly budget. This amount was more than the original 15 percent allowed for each organization to raise its funding requests from the previous year's budget. Cory Huggins, Appropriations Chairperson, stated that this was due to the amount of funding needed to buy permanent equipment which will be used now and several years in the future. Senate approved these appropriations for Outing Club line items: general supplies, permanent equipment, subscriptions, contract services, insurance, licenses, equipment maintenance, postage, publicity, travel, duplicating, miscellaneous, projects, and telephone costs.

In addition, Senate appropriated

$7658.00 for the Neo-Black Society's yearly budget. This budget covers their line items of salary (pianist for the choir), professional fees, general supplies, continued services, equipment rental, postage, telephone, travel, duplicating and printing, registration, miscellaneous and publicity.

Britt Condemns Helms

WASHINGTON—Sixth District Congressman Robin Britt on Tuesday criticized recent remarks made by Senator Jesse Helms, which he says constitute an "attack on the character of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr."

On Monday, Senator Helms said that Dr. King espoused "action-oriented Marxism and other radical political views" and vowed to filibuster a bill making Martin Luther King's birthday a national holiday.

Speaking on the House floor, Britt said Senator Helms' comments were "not made in good faith but represented charged rhetoric calculated to divide, not reconcile. It was a voice that does injury to the body politic. It was not the voice of North Carolina."

"Dr. King moved us from the politics of violence to the politics of non-violence. He opened the broad avenues of hope through the political process, and shut down the dead-end street of violence as a means of achieving social change."

Britt added, "It is altogether fitting and proper that we should honor Dr. King's contribution by setting aside a day in his memory." After his remarks on the floor, Britt said he hoped that the Senate would move quickly on the Martin Luther King holiday bill - passed overwhelmingly in the House - "and thereby quiet the divisive voice of Senator Helms."

Freshmen Athletic Ineligibility A Good Idea

When the NCAA granted freshmen eligibility to participate in varsity football just over ten years ago, there were many objections.

Before that time nearly every school had a freshmen team with incoming players set up on a less rigorous training and playing schedule than upper-classmen.

The social and educational drawbacks of allowing freshmen to participate in varsity athletics are once again being examined.

The NCAA Select Committee on Athletic Problems and Concerns in Higher Education has proposed that freshmen be held back from varsity football and basketball.

We agree.

The freshmen year is a tough time for many students, including athletes. They need their first year to develop academically and socially, as well as athletically.

If freshman teams are reinstated, allowing the younger players to grow into college, everyone will benefit, especially the students.

There have been too many cases of college athletes making their way through four years of eligibility only to discover that they can't find a job because they can't read.

This problem has been partially solved by Proposition 48, a law which requires freshmen to pass a high school core curriculum and score a minimum of at least 700 on the college entrance exams. The only drawback is that this law will not be effective until 1986.

However, if both this law and the freshmen ineligibility proposition pass, we will be on our way to ensuring that students are students first, and athletes second.

On The Right

Vacillating Social Response Writing

By RANDALL BURGESS
Copy Editor

Students often must read confusing textbooks which lack clarity, organization, and meaning. In the next few paragraphs I will attempt to explain why and what can be done to correct this problem.

Most textbooks written today serve the purpose of counteracting and vacillating trans-situational patterns. What this essentially means is that they submerge psychosocial precepts. This causes students to feel frustrated and intellectually inept. They learn quickly that thorough readings of textbooks cause the development of intrinsic, contextual behavior.

Many students complain that this diffuses their cognitive equilibrium. In other words, it dissolves their optimal peer-group orientation and causes synergistic strivings. They also complain that it contributes to an undesired contextual orientation.

Faculty members claim that this is pure, unadulterated, minimal, social awareness. They also claim that students are just poor affective cognitive adjusters. This is possible, but I don't really think so, yet according to one high ranking faculty member, "what we have here is a nonoptimal peripheral orientation."

There are three things which can be done to correct this terrible situation. First of all, students should co-develop textbooks which do not counteract and vacillate trans-situational patterns or submerge psychosocial precepts. This can be done by cutting down the amount of verbose undifferentiated, affective response writing contained within textbooks and by increasing intrinsic interactional identification.

Secondly, students should let their instructors know which textbooks diffuse their cognitive equilibrium. Instructors, instead of contributing to this minimal social awareness, should listen attentively to the students' complaints and remember at one time they too were unsophisticated and simple.

Lastly, faculty members must realize that this situation cannot be attributed to a nonoptimal peripheral orientation. It is in fact a conflicting cognitive adjustment and can only be corrected by oxidizing the guilty textbooks and by eviscerating those responsible for writing them.

I hope the reader will find this a helpful and reasonable way to do away with confusing writing. I hope I have made myself perfectly clear.

Those Poor Freshman Athletes

On The Necessity Of Critics

By MARK A. CORUM
Staff Columnist

I was going to write something about critics and reviewers this week.

Fortunately, a letter I received at the last minute from an old friend I had mentioned this idea to earlier dissuaded me from publishing that article by convincing me of the worth of critics in our society. Perhaps it will convince you too.

Dearest Old Friend and Personal Confidant,

I was sitting here in my comfortable old recliner, sipping from a half-consumed carafe of Chateau Neuf de Pape 1958 (a fine vintage year, I'm sure you realize) in front of the great stone fireplace on my family's estate when I decided to compose to you in this moment of contemplation a short repartee to that communique I received from you in this morning's post.

Ahh, my old friend, how little you understand of the truly intellectual rapture one receives from literary and theatrical critiques; the fine discipline of distilling for those less refined minds the essence of pageantarian delights that they cannot appreciate (or, nay, even understand) fully without insightful commentaries such as mine.

In your rather simply composed and overly blunt letter, you seemed not at all convinced of the thoroughly overwhelming need that this small planet has for the magnificently endowed, properly honed minds capable of explaining such intricate, transcendently encompassing works as Shakespeare to the bourgeois that compose the mass audience. Why am I a critic, you ask? I reply quite simply that I must be a critic because to not fulfill my appointed station as liaison between the intellectual rapture of the classics and the common folk would be, to say the least, an almost criminal loss to mankind.

How, my old friend, could a simple toiler of the land or unrefined paper-pushing businessman expect to enjoy forthright literary bliss without spending years honing his tastes unless moi and others like moi were there to guide him through his first few, wobbling steps? Not to do so would be criminal—allowing such varied and base tastes as Stoppard, or, even worse, Irving, to propagate themselves on a world where their lack of delicate intellectual stimulus would go unnoticed and unchecked.

What end would it serve, tell me, to allow inferior minds to misunderstand and misinterpret what could only be truly taken to the heart by one prepared to do so? Should we sit back in our little ivory towers and simply allow them their flawed and superfluous opinions, when the truth can be so easily dispersed?

Try to imagine the displeasure and dismay you would face in trying to explain to a companion or fellow theatre patron the truth behind a scene without seeming pompous in your vastly superior understanding. The critic's way is far less painful to those being informed—saving them the gross embarrassment of having their half-baked opinions so neatly dissected in public or over cocktails. After absorbing the truth from the printed page, the commoners can know they see the play the way it was meant to be seen—and can even repeat the contained references to the positive and negative aspects of the play to their companions—gaining for themselves new respect in the eyes of their peers which they could not have themselves earned. What quiet and wonderful service we do provide for these who understand little more than the surface of what we purvey, but thus is the crux of the critic—one I must bear.

Alas, my friend, I am rushed at this hour and must now depart with but a last thought for you to ponder. You may have reservations as to the necessity of the profession of the critic—especially such critics as myself who strive to raise our audiences to a higher plane of thinking—but can you imagine the diversity and variation from the tried and true traditions of dramatic performance that might develop were we not here to guide this discipline along the path for which it was intended?

Horrors!

As always,

Letters To The Editor

To the Editor:

I have never been so disappointed in your newspaper as I was on October 11, 1983. I do not appreciate the fact that Ms. Cynthia Moore's picture was not present on the front page of the Carolinian.

First of all, I know that you might say that her picture was in the Carolinian a few weeks ago. This is not the issue. The fact is that Ms. Moore was elected Homecoming Queen 1983-84 and she deserves the recognition for this accomplishment. Just merely mentioning her name in an article about homecoming is not acceptable to me. Last year when the queen was crowned, her picture appeared on the front page. Is it possible that the photography editor of the Carolinian made a gross mistake by not including Ms. Moore's picture? My answer to this is that maybe he did not feel she should be in the Carolinian for a third time. Well I think that her picture should have been included in the paper no matter how many times she has already been in it.

Outside of this slight mishap, Ms. Moore did not receive a warm welcome when she was crowned during the half-time festivities for the homecoming soccer game. She was not congratulated openly by the other members of the Homecoming Court. She also was overlooked by certain members of the faculty and administration that were present. Frankly, if members of the Neo-Black Society had not been present, I feel that Ms. Moore probably would not have received any kind of warm reception.

I know that it was a shock to UNC-G to have a Black Homecoming Queen, but she should have been accepted no matter what her race.

I would appreciate it if in the future things like leaving out the picture of the Homecoming Queen would not be done by the Carolinian editors. If you think about it, leaving out important things could be saying something about the personality of the editors and staff at the Carolinian.

Courtney Able

Editor's Note: The decision concerning any photograph in the Carolinian is made at one of four points; the desk editor for the story, the photography editor, the managing editor or the editor-in-chief. The use or absence of any photograph from the paper is a standard editorial decision, and does not reflect any specific opinion of the staff of The Carolinian.

To the Editor:

The mere fact this letter is in the Carolinian means that something awful must have provoked me to write. Lawrence Lens' article, "Why Should King Have a Holiday?" is a terrible insult to oppressed people everywhere. Too much struggling has been put into making this country as fair as it is; far too much bloodshed (you see, Mr. Lens, Dr. King was a "loyal American" after all). Mr. Lens, Dr. King is more to us Americans (and certainly us Black Americans) than a mere person. He is an idea, a very powerful idea. Supposedly, every citizen of this country has the right to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Pardon me if I err, but I truly believe that the main thing Dr. King wished to do was to keep emphasizing the word "everyone" until this noble idea somehow became reality.

Trivializing Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. can never kill this idea. It can never make us forget his tremendous efforts for world peace. It can never make us give up hope. And it certainly does not make him a "phony."

Jeanne Dickens

To the Editor:

I was really surprised when I looked at Tuesday's paper and didn't see a picture of the Homecoming Queen. The Homecoming activities were talked about all over campus, and everyone was looking forward to them, so it really bothered me that being crowned the Homecoming Queen didn't get as much attention as it should have. Our soccer team is doing great, and I support them 100%; it was good to see their picture on the front page. I just feel that Cynthia deserves some recognition too. It's pretty bad when someone wins something and isn't recognized for it by a simple picture. Sure, her name was in the paper, but where was her picture?

SENATE

These four budgets will go into effect in two weeks, when Senate will determine appropriations for the other SG organizations. Because of this, $300 was allotted to PSSA to be used before the yearly budgets are actually appropriated. This money will be used to pay half the cost of a film that PSSA will be showing sometime this month. The money was appropriated separately so that PSSA can order the film this coming week instead of waiting for another two weeks.

Money was also allotted for WUAG, an organization which does not receive its yearly budget from Senate, to buy three Realistic Monitor Speakers at a price of $59.85. According to David Alexander, General Manager at WUAG, in his letter for requests of funds, "renovation costs for the new facility, coupled with reduced enrollment, have left WUAG's budget severely lacking in the area of most urgent need...equipment." So to "facilitate the proper operation," WUAG requested funds for the organization's equipment.

In other appropriations matters, Senate retracted its funding for the cartoon maps which were to be given out at the Homecoming game this past Saturday. Since the maps were never printed out, Senate moved to retract the $975.00 allotted for this project.

Other business included the approval of a resolution to EUC Council. This proposal was submitted by Chuck Murph, president pro-tempore and Author Goodwyn, the chairman of the Publicity Committee. The resolution states, "Let it be resolved that the UNC-G Student Government demands in the name of the student body that EUC Council greatly improve the publicity for its programs." This was brought about by the concern of many who feel EUC does not publicize its events (such as the promotion for the Homecoming Dance) enough to make the student body aware of

Spartans Tie Wake, 1-1

By JEFF SCHULZE
Sports Editor

UNC-G's winning streak, the longest this season in all divisions, came to an abrupt end yesterday as the Spartans battled to a 1-1 tie with Wake Forest in Winston-Salem. The Spartans played a sloppy first half, but played to their potential in the second half, tying up the score and sending it into overtime. Neither team could score in the two ten minute periods, and UNC-G marked its first tie for the 1983 season. The Spartans' winning streak ended at 23 wins in a row—a new club record. The Spartan undefeated streak will continue at 23 games despite the tie.

Wake scored their sole goal of the game 22 minutes into the first half. A Spartan penalty gave the Deacons an indirect kick near the Spartan goal. The kick was stopped and controlled by Wake forward Bill DeAraujo who passed to Wake senior forward Mark Erwin. Erwin shot the ball past to Spartan goalkeeper Tim Borer for the initial score of the game.

The Spartans settled down and started playing their game in the second half. 21 minutes into the second half, forward David Roffo passed in front of the Deacon goal to freshman forward Ron Bertolacini. Bertolacini chipped by Deacon goalkeeper Jose DePeralta for the Spartan goal, tying the game at one apiece.

It was a rough game for both sides. Several Wake players were injured during the course of the game. Except for Mike Sweeney, who was banged up a little during the game, the Spartans came out of the match with no injuries. UNC-G outshot Wake 21-11, and both Borer and Wake goalie DePeralta made nine saves each.

Spartans Spike Monarchs

By RICHARD MASON
Staff Writer

With a convincing victory over Methodist College, UNC-G improved its conference record to 6-1 while improving its overall record to 13-3.

The Spartans made quick work of the Monarchs, winning three games 15-7, 15-3, 15-4 in less than an hour.

In the first game, UNC-G's front line dominated play with precise passing and setting by juniors Sandra Smith and Maggie Hayes. The passing of Smith helped the Spartans break open what had been a close game in the opening moments.

UNC-G took complete control of the game with the strong serve of Simona Hunt.

In the second game, UNC-G used strong serves by Georganne Wyrick and Lisa Beverly to set up the majority of the Spartans' points. The strong serves forced Methodist to hit free balls instead of spikes from the front line.

In the final game, the UNC-G offense and defense worked to near perfection. Until the match was over, the Monarchs were unable to keep their serve or break the Spartans'. UNC-G locked up the match on a winner by Laura Morris.

With a little over three weeks left in the regular season, head coach Terry Dail is pleased with the team's progress but feels the team still has work to do before the upcoming conference tournament. Dail noted the play of the juniors on the squad, Lisa Beverly, Shirese Moore, and Maggie Hayes. Without any seniors on the squad, the team's three junior starters provide a lot of on-court leadership. Dail feels the progress and performance of the starting freshmen, Jen Emery, Simona Hunt, and Laura Morris, will play an important role in how the Spartans perform in the tournament.

Of the remaining games, the Salisbury State College Tournament will be a big test for UNC-G. The tournament field will include several Division III squads attempting to get into the top twenty. UNC-G made the NCAA Division III Volleyball poll at position seventeen.

In the remaining conference games, the October 27 match against Greensboro College will be important because the Spartans' only conference loss this year came against the Hornets. Coach Dail also felt the match against Wake Forest will be important because she feels beating a Division I school will help the team.

Eddie Radwanski:

Maturing Into The Complete Soccer Player

By DEBORAH HARGETT
Staff Writer

When junior midfielder Eddie Radwanski moved up from back position, it seemed as if he might need a long period of adjustment. However, Radwanski found himself immersed in soccer once again, though in a role he never expected.

Radwanski feels his summer workouts have contributed to his rapid adjustment to playing out of the back field. This past summer, he was able to work and talk with the Tampa Bay Rowdies of the NASL during their off season.

"This helped me a great deal," said Radwanski. "It helped my maturity and self-confidence, and that has a great deal to do with my performance."

It seems as if Radwanski has become a leader or at least has been put into the role as leader on the field. Yet, he denied this.

"I'm not the captain, but I do try to talk alot while we are playing. But I don't feel that I or any of my teammates are selfish or bossy."

Even though the team is playing better than last year, Radwanski attributes it to maturity rather than talent.

"The reason for our success is not that we're a better team than last year, but that we've developed more confidence and maturity."

There is a special feeling among most of the players, especially the juniors such as George Dyer, Louis Pantusco, Mike Sweeney, Doug Hamilton, David Roffo, Vinnie Campanile, and myself because we all came in the same year and have matured together."

The Spartans have rolled to a 15-0 record in what looked to be with ease. Yet, the Spartans are consistently able to get up for a team that plays below the Spartans' level.

"Coach Berticelli said never take any team lightly, so we just get up for every game with that in mind and play with confidence."

In games, Radwanski will take on any player with little or no fear.

"I'm not afraid of any player and I'll take on any member of the opposition and this intimidates them," said Radwanski. "You have to go out there and make something happen."

In all games, the Spartans have been able to maintain control after establishing a substantial lead that almost always assures victory.

"We rely heavily on our mental tactics," replied Radwanski.

It seems to always be a Radwanski to Sweeney combination that results in a goal for the Spartans.

"This is not pre-planned, but I seem to have the ball a great deal of the time and Sweeney always seems to be somewhere near by," said Radwanski. "I know if I can get it to him, he will probably score."

When searching for the Spartans' best asset, Radwanski feels it's the team's experience and confidence. He doesn't think that this team is that much better than last year, but that they play with more confidence in themselves and each other and play a much more composed game.

"The fan support makes a big difference," commented Radwanski. "The fans are the reason we play. Their support is not only wanted—it's needed!"
