Standards high enough

University of Maryland at College Park raises criteria; UNCG not following behind

MICHELLE MARQUARDT
Senior News Writer

Students who want to participate in Greek life have harder criteria to meet this year.

At least that is the case at the University of Maryland. The Greek system there has launched an ambitious campaign to raise and meet 19 standards over three years. (USA Today, Nov. 6, 1995).

The three main changes are a required grade-point average of 2.3, a minimum of 12 hours and shorter pledge periods.

Maryland claims the reasons for the new standards are an attempt to improve their Greeks' image.

"Many Greeks are hounded by 'Animal House' reputations," according to USA Today.

Do students feel UNCG should follow in Maryland's footsteps? The answer is no, so say Greeks and non-Greeks alike at UNCG.

Alpha Delta Pi sister Lisa Soddu says, "Our standards are high enough. They are higher than UNCG requires of every student to stay in good academic standing." Alpha Delta Pi's minimum grade-point average is an impressive 2.6.

The Pi Kappa Phi house at 1020 West Market Street is one of three official fraternity houses at UNCG. Recent changes in the fraternity system at the University of Maryland have forced other schools to question their own Greek systems.

Heather Rattelade agrees that the standards are high enough, but she feels that, "it has more to do with who you are, and your personality, than your academic success when you rush." Rattelade, who is not in a Greek organization, went on to say, "the social sororities on campus more offer friendship and leadership opportunities than they do academic or career-oriented ones. Some students feel it is unnecessary to imitate the University of Maryland because UNCG simply does not have the caliber of problems that Maryland has encountered.

Cam Coley, a brother of Pi Kappa Phi said, "We have never had the kind of incidents that would bring us to this level."

A small consensus of Greeks feel that an image change is hopeless. They feel that all the work they do for UNCG and the community is overshadowed by the myth that all Greeks do is party.

This group of brothers and sisters would be happy to know that many non-Greek students know about and applaud the service projects and ongoing philanthropic activities conducted by fraternities and sororities.

There are a variety of UNCG Greek philanthropies. They include PUSH (People Understanding the Severely Handicapped), the Ronald McDonald House, Robbie Page Memorial Fund, the Greensboro Battered Women's Shelter, "Brothers Feeding Others," and the Make-a-Wish Foundation.

Some students feel that there are requirements involved in Greek selection that have to do with a person's character and background.

In general, most UNCG students feel the Greeks have high enough standards, at least academically.

Powell wins mock election

By KAREN PALERMO
Senior News Writer

The Political Awareness Club (PAC) sponsored a 1996 mock presidential election to gauge who UNCG students would favor if a real election was held.

PAC is a nonpartisan club open to students of any major.

Of the choices offered to students General Colin Powell came in first overall with 77 votes, but this week announced that he will not run for presidency.

President Clinton was edged out of office by Republican Bob Dole 68 votes to 64.

PAC will hold similar elections after the primaries next spring.

PAC meets every Monday at 1 p.m. in Graham 209. President Jason Barbour said that

"PAC is a way for students to interact and educate themselves about political events happening around them."

Elizabeth Robinson, president of the College Democrats said, "I think that between now and next November is a lot of time. The outcome of financial aid will have a big effect on students." Robinson also said, "Now is too early to discuss next year's election in serious terms."

Della Jenkins, the central regional director of the College Republicans said, "I'm seeing that the Democrats are going further left and the Republicans are moving further right."

According to Jenkins, the majority of the campus Republicans are commuting students. Jenkins said, "I think that students on campus lean to being a democrat."

Sullivan hears students

Chancellor's office installs suggestion boxes for students

From staff reports

Do you have a helpful idea for making an improvement in some area at UNCG? If so, Chancellor Patricia A. Sullivan wants to hear from you.

To provide a vehicle for such suggestions, the Chancellor's Suggestion Box system is being initiated in early November.

The Chancellor's Suggestion Boxes are located in six key buildings on campus, including the lobby of the University Dining Hall and Elliott University Center.

Forms on which to write suggestions will be placed in a holder beside each box.

In addition, suggestions may also be made by e-mail.

The e-mail address is: SUGGESTION_BOX@HAMLET.UNCG.EDU.

"I am asking for suggestions on how we can continue to make improvements at UNCG," said Sullivan. "Such suggestions can help strengthen our academic programs, services, work environment, procedures, and other areas. Each suggestion will be reviewed and given thoughtful attention. I welcome good suggestions because they can help make UNCG an even stronger university."

The suggestion boxes will be for use by the entire campus community, including students, faculty and staff, as well as for visitors to UNCG.

Dr. Griffith to deliver speech in Coliseum

Dr. Kelley Griffith, an associate professor of English at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, will give an address titled, "The Monster's Education," at the academic convocation for August and December graduates.

The event, which will be held in the Greensboro Coliseum Special Events Center, will be on Sunday, December 3 at 1 p.m.

This year 400 undergraduates and approximately 235 graduate students are expected to finish degrees during the fall semester.

Griffith, a graduate of Wake Forest University, joined the UNCG faculty in 1968. He now serves as the director of undergraduate studies for UNCG's English department. From 1991 to 1993, Griffith served as the coordinator of the Western Civilization program in UNCG's College of Arts and Sciences.

The University Women's choir will provide the music for the event. The group will be directed by Dr. Richard Cox, and the University Brass Ensemble, conducted by Dennis Askew.

Weatherspoon receives $20,000 from Dillard Paper Company

Dr. Richard L. Moore II, UNCG vice chancellor for advancement, announced that Dillard, a ResourceNet International company of Greensboro, has given $20,000 to Weatherspoon Art Gallery. The donation is to be used to sponsor the 31st Annual Art on Paper exhibition which opened November 12 and will run until January 21, 1996.

Moore said, "Weatherspoon Gallery's national reputation grows with each new Art on Paper exhibition, and its Dillard Collection now contains nearly 430 works of art with a value of more than $1 million. Our university, once again, is most grateful to Dillard for its gift."

Dillard's headquarters are at 3900 Spring Garden Street in Greensboro. The Company was founded in 1926 as Dillard Paper company. Dillard presently covers the entire Southeast region of the United States.

The Weatherspoon Art Gallery, located at the corner of Spring Garden and Tate Street, is a part of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

UNCG plans more spring night classes

Course offerings to accomodate scheduling needs for students who require evening classes

By NATALIE WATSON
Senior News Writer

During the spring 1996 semester, UNCG will be offering 323 classes during the late afternoon and evening hours.

These courses have been planned to accommodate the schedules of those for whom evening classes are more convenient.

For students with daytime commitments, the departments of the university are offering evening classes in 52 areas of study at both the graduate and undergraduate level.

Freshman Krissy Ostiguy said "More night classes would really benefit my hectic schedule as a student athlete."

Areas include Accounting, Freshman Seminars, Chemistry and Nursing.

Evening classes at UNCG are offered from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. on weekdays.

The Office of Student Evening Services offers administrative services to students who are not on campus during the day.

Working in conjunction with admissions and financial aid, John Sharpe, the head of the Office of Student Evening Services, provides a way for students to get IDs validated and other services that would generally only be offered to students on campus during the day.

Plans are in the works with Student Government and Safety for campus phones to be installed in all the academic buildings for the safety of those students who take advantage of the evening courses.

"More night classes would really benefit my athletic schedule."

Williams brings Bradymania to UNCG

By JUDY SMITH
Senior Features Writer

"Nixon could be coming back from the dead to announce the end of the world and he wouldn't get this much hype."

These words were uttered Tuesday night by Brian Long, public information officer. The event that would get more publicity than Nixon's rising was the arrival of Barry Williams, a.k.a. Greg Brady from "The Brady Bunch".

Williams was in town on Tuesday to give a spirited lecture in Cone Ballroom to a few hundred fans. Most of those attending had no idea there were that many other Brady Fans on campus. And boy, were there fans.

Before Williams even hit the stage to capture his audience's attention, roughly half of those present starting singing the unforgettable theme song (you know, "Here's the story...").

When he did arrive on stage, Williams entertained with behind-the-scenes stories involving him and the rest of his "family."

He discussed juicy and humorous moments with Florence Henderson ("Carol Brady") and Maureen McCormick ("Marcia Brady"). Williams even went so far as to describe the uncoordination of Chris Knight ("Peter Brady"), in particular, during the dance sequences on the show.

In between lecture segments, Williams showed clips and montages of classic Brady footage, including Greg in his new "bachelor pad," the boys breaking Carol's favorite vase, and Greg surfing.

In a press conference before the lecture, he said the Hawaii episode was the most fun to film, because in real life, he is a surfer. "I told the producers that I had to get there a week early to practice and they went for it."

In addition to Williams' enjoyment in the surf, the cameras also captured his near fatal wipeout. "I was lucky, because I hit the coral reef feet-first and not head-first," he said.

During one of the clips, Williams sat down in the audience after a group of students yelled out, "Greg, come sit with us!" It would seem he felt as if he were among friends, not fans.

Halfway through the lecture, Williams demonstrated his fine singing ability by performing "Bring Him Home" from "Les Miserables."

While he is obviously proud of his Brady heritage, he is trying to distance himself slightly from his alter-ego, to let people know that he is Barry Williams and not Greg Brady.

In 1992, Williams published a book, "Growing Up Brady: I Was a Teenage Greg," in an attempt to break through beyond the Bradys. He has also had a successful career on and off Broadway.

Toward the end of the lecture, Williams came on stage in bellbottoms, platform shoes that he said he got from Elton John, a "groovy" butterfly-colored shirt, a fringed vest, and a headband.

This was the part of the show during which he invited audience members on stage with him to learn the "Brady Stomp." While the dancing was amusing to watch, it was probably even more amusing to participate in.

At the end of the night, Williams sat on stage and signed autographs and posed for pictures.

When asked about his college tour, Williams said he enjoyed it. "I don't feel compelled to talk about it [the Brady Bunch], but this has been great fun," he said.

Williams also said that this was not his first visit to UNCG and that he thought it was a beautiful campus.

Needless to say, due to the buzz about campus, he will be welcome back anytime. The "story" will continue.

Spartans take first exhibition

By JOHNNY RICH

Senior Sports Writer

The UNCG Spartans defeated the Charlotte Royals in an exhibition game Tuesday night at the Fleming Gymnasium by a score of 80-65.

The first half was characterized by sloppy play from both sides as the teams combined for a total of 24 turnovers. Charlotte committed 11 turnovers, while UNCG committed 13.

The first nine minutes of the game were very close as the Royals and the Spartans were tied at nine a piece.

UNCG then began to distance itself from its opponents by going on an 11 to 3 run. This run consisted of two Derrick Nix layups, a Larry Gilbert layup, a Tony Daughtry layup and a Daughtry three-pointer, while the Royals could only answer with a three-pointer.

The Spartans continued to keep the lead over Charlotte during the first half and went into halftime, leading 35-25.

Charlotte clawed its way back into the game in the second half with a 17 to 6 run and took a one-point lead with 13 minutes

UNCG	80

After losing the lead, the Spartans went on a 15 to 3 run to gain a 56-45 advantage over the Royals, an advantage that they never relinquished.

The Spartans ended the game with a thunderous dunk from freshman Demetrius Cherry that impressed a very nice sized crowd.

Senior point guard Scott Hartzell finished the game with 17 points, including making three of five three-pointers.

Senior forward Jonathan Clifton had 8 points, 10 rebounds and 2 blocks on the evening and senior Eric Cuthrell had 2 points, 5 rebounds, and a block.

Senior forward Brian Brunson finished the game with seven points and six rebounds, and senior forward Skeet Woolard had six points and six rebounds.

"Brian is probably our best offensive post player," Spartan head coach Randy Peele said. "Skeet rebounded very nicely."

Perhaps one of the most promising signs was in the play of the younger players. Sophomore guard Derrick Nix had 10 points and 6 rebounds on the evening and sophomore forward Larry Gilbert had 14 points, 7 rebounds and a block in only 13 minutes of play.

"Larry has a lot of talent," Peele said. "He just has to learn how to play with it. Tonight he played well and got a lot of mid-range opportunities. He is probably our best mid-range shooter."

"What I originally started to do was to play everybody," Peele added. "The killer instinct is there but it's difficult when you play all 12 people. As we get into game situations, things will change."

The Spartans will play their second exhibition game this Sunday at 7:00 p.m. against Nunawading of Australia in Fleming Gymnasium.

The Spartans will then open their season with away games at South Carolina (November 24) and Duke (November 29).

Their first home game of the regular season will be played December 2 at 7:00 p.m. against Campbell at the Fleming Gymnasium.

ANDREW PAYNE/The Carolinian

Larry Gilbert makes an acrobatic move to tip in a Derrick Nix shot. This put back brought the crowd to its feet. The Spartans' next game will take place Sunday at 7:00 p.m. in Fleming Gymnasium against Nunawading, Australia. This game is an exhibition game that is part of a double-header; the women play at 5:00 p.m. against the Charlotte Royals.

Hornets need to move to replace its inside attitude

SPORTS COMMENTARY

By Steven Huntley

When the Charlotte Hornets traded Alonzo Mourning for Glen Rice and Khalid Reeves, I was intrigued. Now after several games of watching the Hornets inside game flounder, I can honestly say the Hornets are terrible.

The Hornets capped their wonderful string of performances with a loss to one of the worst teams in the league, the New Jersey Nets.

The Nets pulled their record to an even .500 on Wednesday evening by defeating the Hornets 90-79 in New Jersey.

Charlotte looked extremely good in the first half, taking a 52-38 lead into halftime. Then their true colors came through. The Hornets scored exactly nine points in the third quarter. Nine points is not an awful lot considering the thousands of dollars that the Charlotte management was forced to pay for the quarter. If I were part of the Hornets I would ask for my money back.

The Nets, led by Jayson Williams and Armon Gilliam, out-rebounded the Hornets 46-32.

That's right, Jayson Williams (14 rebounds) and Armon Gilliam (9 boards). I'm not talking about real rebounding powers. Both are ranked in among the top 20 in the league in rebounding, but the season is young. Even Sacramento's Olden Polynice is in the top in field goal percentage at this point in the season.

The real offensive strengths that the Nets possess sat the bench on Wednesday. Kenny Anderson and Derrick Coleman both sat out the contest due to injuries. Think about the massacre if those players had been allowed to show up.

The center by committee idea is a good one, but you need centers to accomplish this.

Whether I want to admit it or not, Chicago Bulls' centers Luc Longley, Will Purdue and Bill Wennington had some talent.

Charlotte's Robert Parish, George Zidek and Matt Geiger combined for 11 points and 14 rebounds for the entire game. Geiger received the bulk of the playing time, scored seven points, and grabbed eight of the 14 rebounds.

The two players, in addition to Geiger, that the Hornets received in the trade disappointed as well on Wednesday.

Rice lost his fire somewhere on the way to New Jersey, scoring 15 points in 36 minutes of play. Khalid Reeves, the supposed "steal" of the trade, scored zero points and dished out two assists.

Mourning, on the other hand, continued to plug along with Miami. The center scored 21 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in a loss to the Pacers in Indiana on Wednesday.

Charlotte now stands at 3-5 on the season and have lost every single road game that they have participated in this year.

There isn't a guard in the NBA that is afraid to take the ball to the basket on the Hornets this season. Several CBA stars would get calls driving in on Geiger or Zidek. Zidek has potential, but that doesn't help the Hornets now.

Parish has a wealth of experience, and in his prime he was the best in the business. Now age has taken its toll and although Parish is capable of playing well for several minutes at a time, he cannot put together a whole game.

Matt Geiger is not the answer, unfortunately. The Hornets need to make a move to put the attitude back into the Hornets low post game.

Several decent centers could be bought for a price. Ron Seikley, a player that the Hornets should have drafted when they had the chance, would be perfect for the Hornets up-tempo style since his tenure at Golden State. The Warriors have former Maryland center Joe Smith who would make Seikley expendable.

Without an inside game, the Hornets are doomed to futility while Miami sits comfortably in third place in the Eastern Division of the NBA.

I have agreed with only three of the Hornets picks since day one, and they traded Kendall Gill away once. Alonzo Mourning was the backbone of the Hornets. The attitude and the intimidation are gone from the hive.

The Hornets need to make a move that will stop the league's competent centers from laughing every time they hear the words "Charlotte Hornets."

Test your fitness at the Fit Stop

By GARETH GRIFFITH

Staff Writer

Have you ever wondered if you are in shape? Has it ever crossed your mind to ask, "Are all these workouts I'm doing really improving my fitness level?" If so, then Campus Rec sponsors a great service to help you answer these questions.

The Fit Stop, in operation on Monday and Wednesday afternoons from 4:45 to 6:45 at the base of the stairs in the Rec, is a free service that provides a quick assessment of your fitness level.

In less than 15 minutes you can be evaluated in six areas that measure basic components of physical fitness and health.

Exercise and Sport Science graduate student Ann Marie Welch runs the Fit Stop. She notes that a lot of people choose to be evaluated in just one component of overall fitness.

A large number of patrons are interested in knowing their body fat composition, or percent fat, which she estimates in just a few minutes with a couple of skinfold measurements.

Other patrons stop by to make a weekly check of their blood pressure.

Welch points out that the Fit

Stop is a great service for anyone who is starting to exercise. "A complete assessment will give someone an idea of their fitness baseline. If they check back periodically throughout their exercise program they can measure their progress. Regular testing can provide a source of motivation for anyone who works out."

The Fit Stop measures different components of overall fitness. An exerciser can pinpoint areas that can be improved in the future.

For example, "Someone may spend an hour a day on the stationary bike," Welch observes, "and be in great cardiovascular shape. A test for muscular strength and endurance, however, might reveal upper body weakness."

Welch's background in Exercise and Sport Science has given her the knowledge to help patrons interpret their Fit Stop assessments.

"Regardless of where you are in your workout habits, don't forget about Fit Stop," Welch concludes. "It can serve a wide variety of purposes depending on your needs. Besides," she says, "people pay good money at health clubs for services like the Fit Stop. Here you get it for free."

*Hey, you wouldn't give your money away to just anyone, would you? Neither can we. Offers expire January 15, 1996. No payment of principal or interest will be required for 90 days. Interest accruing during this 90-day period will be added to the principal and will bear interest which will be included in the repayment schedule. The monthly payment quoted above is an estimate based on a total loan amount of $2,164.89, which includes a sample purchase price of $2,035 for the Power Macintosh 7200/75 CD system shown above. The total loan amount also includes a 6.0% loan origination fee. Interest is variable based on the Commercial Paper Rate plus a spread of 6.35%. For example, the month of October 1995 had an interest rate of 12.17% with an annual percentage rate (APR) of 13.95%. Monthly payment for the total loan amount described above would be $37.17. Monthly payment and APR shown assumes no deferment of principal and does not include state or local sales tax. Monthly payments may vary depending on actual computer system prices, total loan amounts, state and local sales taxes, and a change in the monthly variable interest rate. Prerequisite: expedited the loan process, but does not guarantee final loan approval. Subsequent acceptable verification documents must be received before your loan is approved.
