Materials to be renewed via phone, computer in the future

By KERRIE KOSLOWE
Staff Writer

The technology revolution is about to come to the Jackson Library. Students will be able to renew materials via the telephone or through computer terminals sometime in the near future.

According to Doris Hulbert, Director of Jackson Library, the process is still not complete because Data Research Associates, the software company that the library works with, has to put together a new system to allow for books to be renewed over the phone and via computer terminals. According to Hulbert, developing a software package that will incorporate the library's current computer functions and the new renewal programs will be a challenge.

"We have to get the pieces together. We are working as fast as we can," Hulbert said.

According to Hulbert, renewing books by computer has been one of the primary goals for the library in recent years. Hulbert hopes that the computer renewal system will be very useful for students.

"The students will be assigned PIN (personal identification number) and they will be able to renew their own books from the computer. We hope this will be done in a year," said Martha Ramsly, head of the Circulation Department.

Associate Vice Chancellor for Computing and Information Systems Gary Grandon explained that the new renewal system will use the technology that the computers already have in place to identify students by their user name. The PIN number which Ramsly referred to will provide an extra way for the computer system to verify a student's identification.

"What we're going to do is add what's called a personal ID field ... so that it (the computer) knows you are who it thinks you are," Grandon said.

Lili Rivera, an employee in the Reserve Room of the library, does not favor the new system. Rivera is concerned that allowing students to renew their books via computer terminal will create problems for other students who might need to use the materials.

"It is not a good idea because the books might not be available to other students to have them," Rivera said.

The new crop of student leaders

From staff reports

Student Government Association (SGA) elections will be held today and tomorrow, March 28 and 29, between 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. Commuter students are asked to vote in the Elliott University Center; on-campus residents vote in the Atrium.

The following are personal statements from those candidates who submitted one to The Carolinian for publication.

SGA Presidential candidates:

Steven Ade-tomiwa
junior, Marketing and Information Systems Management major

"Under my leadership, there will be total quality service, (TQS) for every student. I will maximize SGA system of operations to benefit all students and improve the students' awareness with SGA functions. I will promote ethnic and cultural diversity within our University community."

Melanie Alston
junior, Political Science major

"This past year I decided to become a junior delegate so that I could voice the concerns and ideas of my fellow UNCG schoolmates to the administration. I think that the students' needs must be heard whether they are singing the praises of UNCG or not. I feel that by becoming SGA President I will be in an even better position to further the student voice even more effectively. I plan to achieve this goal by starting a Student Quality Service (SQS) program which is designed to make the administration more responsive to the student body's needs. It is the student that makes UNCG possible."

India Ochs
junior, Political Science/History major

"I am running for the office of President because I want to contribute back what UNCG has taught me so that this campus can be a better educational environment for all. My theme for this election is 'Inform, Improve, Involve.' I would like to see the students more informed on issues that affect them, and I feel by informing them, the campus will improve with more involvement. I have the experience, determination, and perseverance to lead UNCG into a better and brighter tomorrow. I want to be the voice of the students at UNCG."

Durenda Johnson

Ade-tomiwa

Alston

Ochs

freshman, International Business major

"Dedicated, responsible, and willing to overcome the barriers of change. God, family, and true friendship are quite important to me. As a freshman, I have maintained a high GPA and have been quite active within the University, as Hawkins Hall Council President, Residence Hall Association member, and on the Quality Service Advocacy Council. As a Sophomore Delegate of the Student Government Association, I plan to break the barriers of communication between students and faculty by opening the doors to small group discussions, committees, and forums. Don't vote for the name, vote for the bridge to make the change."

Candidate for Campus Activities Board (CAB) President:

Tanya O' Briant
senior, Leisure Studies major
"I have been involved with Campus Activities Board for the past three years. During this time, I have served as Trips and Recreation Director, planning events such as ski trips, whitewater rafting, and the Oozeball Festival. Currently I am serving as Concerts Director. I feel that being involved with CAB has strengthened my communication and leadership skills. I enjoy talking with students to find out what types of events and activities they would like to see here at UNCG. If I am elected CAB President, I will do my best to meet the

Briefly Speaking ... GLAD Bag-A-Thon roundup Saturday

On Saturday, April 1, an estimated 1,000,000 volunteers will fan out in over 100 cities around the country to cleanup parks, neighborhoods, roadsides, streams, and schoolyards. The project, known as the GLAD Bag-A-

Thon litter roundup and recycling program, will be held locally between the hours of 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

From noon until 2 p.m., Greensboro Beautiful will provide refreshments for litter pickup volunteers.

Last year, Greensboro residents collected nearly 10,000 pounds of litter.

For information on joining this year's cleanup effort, contact Greensboro Beautiful at 373-2957.

Campus Safety

Breaking and Entering, Larceny, Fraudulent Use of a Credit Card
3-20-95, 6 p.m. Two resident female students reported that about 2 p.m. they decided to go outside to play catch and enjoy the spring day. One of the victims left her bookbag in her friend's room. They later discovered that while they were outside, the bookbag was stolen by someone who entered the room. The bag contained books, personal property, and several credit cards. The following day the victim was notified by a loss prevention officer at Belk's Department Store that a male had attempted to use her credit card and the transaction was captured on video. Both victims viewed the video and identified the person as a male student living in the residence hall. The Police questioned the suspect, who admitted using the card but stated he found the bag in the Quad, kept the credit cards, and threw everything else in a dumpster at the Conoco station on Spring Garden Street. The dumpster had been emptied and police were not able to retrieve the property or confirm the story. Charges are to be made today, both criminally and on campus.

Possession with Intent to Sell and Deliver Crack Cocaine, Possession With Intent to Sell and Deliver Marijuana, Resist and Delay a Law Enforcement Officer

3-21-95, 8:27 p.m. An officer observed a vehicle on Gray Drive with what appeared to be an expired temporary tag. When he activated his blue lights to stop the vehicle on North Drive, both the male driver and passenger jumped from the vehicle and ran. The officer chased the driver behind Mary Foust and tackled him. The other male ran south through the fountain area and escaped. The captured driver then complained of chest pains and having difficulty breathing so an ambulance was called before proceeding with the investigation. The emergency medical responders examined him and said there, was nothing wrong with him, and the suspect refused further medical treatment. When the officer returned him to the vehicle, a search incident to arrest was conducted, and a quantity of marijuana and cocaine was found in the vehicle. A records check also revealed that the Greensboro Police had four outstanding warrants on the subject for Probation Violation, Possession with Intent to Sell and Deliver Crack Cocaine, Felony Larceny, Felony Possession of Stolen Property, and Assault on a Law Enforcement Officer. The suspect, Diego (NMN) Davis, a.k.a. Lamont Davis, Derrick Davis, and "X" of Greensboro, was arrested and placed under a $31,000 bond.

Suspicious Activity

3-21-95, 7:29 p.m. A female student reported that while she was travelling on I-85 in the Lexington area, a male in a vehicle travelling the same direction paced her vehicle and made several attempts to stop her. The vehicle followed her all the way to Holden Road, where she exited I-85 and he continued on toward Greensboro. Another female student reported the same thing happened to her with a male of the same description and vehicle. This also occurred on I-85 between Lexington and Greensboro. This victim has also seen the vehicle on campus. The suspect is a white male, approximately 40 years old, red curly hair, starting to gray, clean shaven and wearing a business suit. The suspect's vehicle is a green Ford Explorer, North Carolina license DPC 1721. The plate has been checked out and an alert put out for it. Anyone who observes the vehicle on campus is asked to call the police at 334-4444 to report it.

Larceny

3-18-95, 1:30 a.m. The disc jockey hired to provide music at a party at a fraternity house reported that someone took a black canvas case and at least 30 compact discs from a table while he was working the party. The victim said there were so many people around that he could not identify any suspect or witnesses. The value of the property was over $400.

"Pine Needles" sees little support

The students of UNCG have spoken, but not very loudly.

Once again, apathy has reared its ugly head and sucked the life out of another aspect of the University. Programs and projects are suffering defeat at the hands of unconcerned students.

When the University Media Board (UMB) put UNCG's yearbook, "Pine Needles," on the chopping block, no one came to the rescue. A meeting of the UMB, publicized for two weeks, was attended by only three concerned students. Is that to say that only three students on this campus support the idea of a yearbook? Apparently.

One could even take the assumption a step further—of the three students, one was the current Student Government President and the other two are lobbying for the position in the current election. Does this turnout suggest that the only people interested in UNCG are those already involved? Or does it say that self-interest motivated their attendance? Or, should we read this as meaning that these already active students are the only ones with the foresight to realize that this issue will affect generations to come?

Ultimately, the UMB voted to table the issue until the next meeting so that a final review could be conducted before deciding the fate of the former student publication. In two weeks, our university could join the ranks of a growing number of institutions no longer able to look back on its history through the eyes of a students' camera lens.

UMB Chairman Christopher Schwarzen pointed out that each of those Homecoming float memory books cost students about $130 in fees due to the small number sold. Looking at numbers like that, it becomes easier to see why "Pine Needles" was suspended in the first place.

Students needs have changed, the times have changed, and "Pine Needles" failed to keep pace. When student populations were in flux and campuses began drawing older, nontraditional students, yearbooks around the nation remained focused on the 22 year-old beer-and-party crowd. Keep in mind that older commuter students and those of the ACES variety are not the main source of apathy on this campus, contrary to popular belief. These were never the students that the yearbook or Spring Fling was intended for in the first place, so their lack of interest has not affected the students' desire for a lifelong memento of their college years. Too often, the burden of apathy gets dumped in the laps of these nontraditional students. This is not only unfair, it is downright untrue.

This week, students will again make a show of their unconcern as a few hundred cast their vote in the upcoming Student Government Elections. All students are invited to vote, which means that approximately 12,000 votes should be tallied Wednesday night. If history is any indicator, though, the two candidates that showed up at the UMB meeting may pull in 300 votes together.

UNCG is no more of a "suitcase campus" than any other. Even if that assumption were true, students should take the time to unpack their bags. It's probably too late for "Pine Needles," but maybe an effort can be made for next year's SG.

Letters to the Editor

Clearing up the EAF's protest activities

I am writing on behalf of the Environmental Awareness Foundation (EAF), and would like to clear up a few misconceptions about our campaign to preserve Peabody Park. This is a huge issue that has everyone on campus talking, but at the same time, misquoting EAF's stance.

First of all, we have always promoted the idea of the construction of music building. Our goal is to move the site, to preserve our last wooded area.

In response to those who feel EAF's tactics are too extreme, we would like to remind everyone that all of the students' other efforts to save Peabody Park have been ignored. EAF has conducted surveys, letter writing campaigns, petitioning, and meetings with administrators, faculty, the Chancellor and student government. These channels were all met with indifference by the Board of Trustees. Our only alternative was to resort to public demonstration.

Finally, EAF members did not participate in the chalking of the campus, nor did we remove surveying stakes, but have been accused of both actions. The effort to save the park is broad-based and stretches beyond the EAF membership.

Rick Spencer
Action Coordinator
Environmental Awareness Foundation

False facts in EAF protest flyer

[On] March 15, the EAF held a rally at the fountain to protest the construction of Peabody Park, after scrawling their message all over the walls and sidewalks of campus. The following basic facts are taken directly from a flyer distributed by the EAF at the rally, and my comments ensue.

"Peabody Park was purchased in 1859 with the money donated by philanthropist George Peabody [and] an agreement with Charles McIver (first President of The Woman's College) stated that the land would not be tampered with." As quoted in the News and Record on March 16, University counsel Lucien Capone III wrote, "No such restriction can be found in any of the correspondence(s) [between McIver and Peabody]. ...Neither the deed nor any gift of money contain restrictions that legally bind UNCG to maintain Peabody Park." Also, if there were restrictions on the development of Peabody Park, why has 60% of the park already been developed? Where was that agreement when the golf course, highrise residence halls, Phillips/Hawkins, etc. were built?

"The park was once nearly 60 acres, but now is 20 acres of hardwood forest on the north end of campus, behind the highrise dorms." The entire 180 acres of campus was once a hardwood forest, and in order to make this campus, some of it had to be cut down. But look around campus: there are oaks, pines, sweet gums, and more large trees that I don't even know the names of growing all over campus. Landscaping and natural beauty is an integral part of this campus, and though we can't have classes in the woods, we can enjoy the trees that are growing around our classroom buildings.

"The Board of Trustees are mainly business people who were never students [and] have no genuine vested interest in the University. Five of these men are high-level leaders of companies which have their offices on Market Street, the area of campus they want to 'open up,' oddly enough." I would like to know exactly which Trustees have offices on Market Street. This claim of ethics violations on the part of the Trustees is a very broad claim; in fact, some might see it as libel. Where's the proof?

"Peabody Park is home to foxes, raccoons, rare birds, and is in the migratory pattern of a rare bird species, as well as countless other varieties of plants and animals. Over 30 different kinds of trees can be found in the park." The campus as a whole is home to many, many animals[and] plants. Peabody Park is not the only place on campus, much less

Greensboro, [where] one can find an abundance of wildlife. Though the new music building will cause the loss of many trees, there will still be trees in that part of campus, in addition to the new trees, bushes, and flowers that will be planted as part of the landscaping plan. Besides, how many students at UNCG have ever gone to Peabody and looked for a fox? I don't think most students would mind being deprived of the opportunity.

The EAF includes in their list of demands a new site for the music building. What site do they propose? The EAF is not offering any solutions; they are just complaining. While the EAF may have 1000 signatures on their petition, I would like to know what the other 11,000 students of UNCG think. Maybe all 11,000 haven't signed the petition for a reason. And while the EAF claims that they are not against the new music building, only the destruction of the park, their radical methods and lack of a suggestion for an alternate site concern me as to their true intent.

Before one jumps to any conclusions, I personally am not for the destruction of Peabody Park. Rather, I am for a more rational approach to the problem and the solution. The fate of the campus should lay in the hands of all the students, not the few.

"Street Scene" played by UNCG theatre

Courtesy of the UNCG Theatre Department
Michael Johnson and Debra Kotulski will perform in Kurt Weil's opera "Street Scene."

By MEGAN HERRMAN
Senior Features Writer

"Everything has come together very well," said freshman Julie Turner. "The actors and the set are amazing."

Turner is a violinist in the full symphony orchestra that is playing for UNCG's production of Kurt Weil's opera "Street Scene."

According to Professor Robert Gutter, conductor of the orchestra, the score consists of "musical sections of arias and ensembles which are very intense."

"Street Scene" is a combination of musical theater and opera.

"Street Scene," an opera that is a combination of singing and spoken dialogue, takes place in New York in the 1940s. It is a statement of dazed language and poignancy. The story focuses on several families living in an apartment building.

Sam Kaplan, a young man aspiring to become a lawyer, and his best friend, Rose Maurrant, both live in the building with their parents.

Rose's father Frank drinks and is abusive to her and her mother, Anna.

As a result, Anna seeks the comfort of another man, leading to the dramatic conclusion of the opera.

Professor Robert Gutter, the director of the orchestra, feels that the show is going really well.

"It has a relevance for today's audience, especially with the O.J. Simpson trial since there is a double murder and wife abuse," said Gutter.

The set was constructed by students in a Scene Shop Lab, and they built the first and second floors, as well as a basement, of an apartment building.

James Caddy, a freshman, is working on the running crew for the show. "The set looks incredibly real, and the show consists of really good acting, singing, and 40s-style dancing."

Turner, from what she can hear, said that the show should be fabulous. "I wish that I could just sit back and watch it," she said.

The UNCG School of Music and the Department of Communication and Theatre will present "Street Scene" on Thursday and Friday, March 30 and 31, at 8 p.m.

There will also be a 2 p.m. matinee on Sunday, April 2. All performances will be in the Aycock Auditorium. Student tickets are $3 each, available through the EUC Box Office weekdays, noon to 4:30 p.m., or by calling 334-4849.

Composer George Rochberg will deliver the annual Phi Beta Kappa lecture on Monday, April 10, at UNCG. Rochberg's lecture, titled "The Dance of Polar Opposites: Symmetry and Asymmetry in Music," will be given in the Alumni House. It will follow a 7:30 p.m. induction ceremony for new members of the honorary society. The winner of the second Elma Josephine Hege Award also will be announced. The lecture is free and open to the public at no charge.

UNCG dance students move up to the top

from staff reports

David Mullen, Valerie Midgett, and Beth Wright will present the MFA Thesis Concert at the UNCG Dance Theater on March 30, 31, and April 1 at 8 p.m.

Mullen will present "Urban Landscape" which deals with issues of violence, homelessness, and drug addiction.

Mullen's presentation combines modern dance, hip-hop, jazz, and post-modern dance.

Mullen says that the work would not be termed commercial, yet it uses the contemporary music and movements in order to invoke the interest of the general public without compromising the creative artistic approach.

Midgett will present two new works. "Towards the Within" consists of six sections danced by women.

The piece is about a journey dealing with various aspects of the human condition.

Midgett's second dance, "Cafe Shabu," is loosely based on John Cale and Bob Newirth's "Last Day on Earth." Midgett says, "I've tried to create a place that doesn't really exist on earth, or in any particular place in time. I see the cafe as a metaphor for life and death, or as some sort of weigh station in between."

Wright will present

"Lifeorce" and another untitled work. Wright says, "Neither piece has a narrative, but both have certain themes to me. There is no getting it right to my work. I want people to think and feel, not fall asleep. People will have their own interpretations or reactions, which is good. It means they are thinking."

Does picking up garbage sound like any way to spend a weekend?

It did to the brothers of Sigma Phi Epsilon, who conducted their semester Highway Clean-up on their adopted stretch of Interstate 40 on Sunday, February 26. The clean-up was done in cooperation with the N.C. Adopt-a-Highway program, and was the beginning of a community conscious semester for the fraternity.

The next philanthropy project for Sig Ep is the annual Toilet Sit to collect funds for the American Heart Association. The sit will take place for 72 hours at the fountain from April 4-6. We appreciate your support.

Highlanders take two from Spartans

UNCG pitching gives up six home runs to Radford, drops to .500 in Big South competition

By STEVEN HUNTLEY

The UNCG Baseball team won one of three games against the Radford Highlanders in a three-game Big South Conference series at Radford, Virginia.

The Spartans entered the series with a 2-1 record in the Big South Conference and a 14-8 record overall, including wins over traditional national powers.

The Highlanders were 10-13 and struggling to get above .500.

In the first game of the series, Radford built an 8-2 lead behind home runs by Bill Brannan in the fourth and Kelley Dampeier in the fifth.

The Highlanders then gave up four runs in the top of the sixth and two more in the seventh to allow the Spartans to tie the game.

Highlander senior Duane Filchner hit a two-run home run in the bottom of the ninth to give Radford the 10-8 victory.

Radford's Travis Toms, the fourth pitcher on the day, picked up the victory to go to 1-1 on the season. Jason Parsons picked up the loss to fall to 4-3.

In the second game, Spartan pitcher Darren Tillmon pitched a six hitter and allowed only two runs on a Jeff Collins home run in the bottom of the second.

UNCG picked up two runs in the third inning on a single by Scott Young and then picked up another run in the top of the fourth on a leadoff home run by Tim Giles.

UNCG added two insurance runs in the top of the fifth on RBI singles by Matt Shuey and Giles.

On Sunday, the Spartans dropped the final game of the series, 6-3, to the Highlanders.

pitcher Jim Abbott who struck out a school record 15 Spartan batters on the afternoon.

Brad Beavers picked up the loss for the Spartans, extending his record to 1-2 on the year.

The Spartans gave up three home runs to the Highlander batters, including shots by Dampeier, Jeff Dean, and Donnie Fields.

The Spartans got multiple hit games from two batters. Nicky Phillips and Scott Young both managed a two of four hitting performance on the game.

The loss drops the Spartans to 3-3 in the Big South Conference and 15-10 overall.

The conference start is identical to the start enjoyed by the Spartans in their Championship season last year.

The Highlanders improved to 12-13 and are off to a 2-1 start in the Big South Conference; their series with the Spartans was their first of the year.

UNCG will return to action on Wednesday when they travel to Wake Forest before returning home for a non-conference game against Howard on Thursday and a three-game series against UNC Asheville beginning Saturday at 1 p.m.

Spartan pitcher Darren Tillmon winds up to deliver the pitch to UMBC. Tillmon was the only Spartan to record a victory over the weekend. The Spartans are 3-3 in Big South Conference competition this season. UNCG will host Howard on Thursday at War Memorial Stadium.

Spartans finish 4-2 at Winthrop event

By STEVEN HUNTLEY
Sports Editor

The UNCG Spartan softball team finished 4-2 over the weekend in the Winthrop Invitational in Rock Hill, South Carolina.

Twenty teams, including three teams from the Atlantic Coast Conference, competed in the three day event. The Spartans recorded wins over Georgia Tech, UNC Charlotte and Georgia Southern in pool play and defeated UNC Chapel Hill before falling to eventual champion Kent State in the elimination rounds.

The Spartans faced Georgia Tech in the first matchup of the day and used extra innings to defeat the Yellow Jackets, 5-4. The Spartans were trailing Georgia Tech, 2-1, heading into the seventh inning, but UNCG managed a run in the top of the seventh to force the extra frame of play. In the top of the eighth, the Spartans pushed three runs across the plate and gave up only two in the bottom of the inning to record the victory.

Erin Chandler pitched eight innings for the Spartans to record the win, her 11th of the year.

The Spartans met a familiar foe in the second game of pool play. UNCG met up with the Akron Zips for the third time this season losing 5-2.

The Spartans never led, and pitcher Winn Hazelgrove pitched seven innings in a losing effort. Shelby Maxwell gave up two Spartan runs on four hits to record the victory.

In the third game on Saturday, UNCG defeated UNC Charlotte 7-5 in 10 innings. The Spartans got three runs in the top of the third and held on to get the victory. Hazelgrove managed the win for the Spartans to improve her record to 9-

In the final game of pool play, the Spartans used a five-run explosion in the second inning and an insurance run in the third inning to record a 6-4 victory.

Chandler pitched another complete game for UNCG, her 12th victory on the year.

In the first round single elimination, the Spartans improved their record against UNC Chapel Hill to 3-0 on the year and broke a 1-1 tie with three runs in the fifth and sixth innings to advance to the round of eight. In the quarterfinal round UNCG was defeated by eventual champion Kent State, 10-2.

The Spartans trailed 4-2 heading into the bottom of the sixth when Kent State exploded for six runs to secure the victory.

The Spartans improved to 23-10 on the year and will return to action Thursday at 2 p.m. when they will host Kent State at Campus Field.

RIFKIN YOUNG/The Carolinian

The UNCG Softball team is 23-10 heading into a rematch with Kent State on Thursday at 2 p.m. The Spartans received Top 25 votes again this week.
