

Christmas belles provide holiday entertainment

For the eighth year, the Christmas Belles will help Triad area companies and organizations ring in the holiday season.

The Women's Choir at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro is presenting the Christmas Belles, ensembles of three to 10 singers that are available to perform at holiday functions scheduled between Dec. 1 and 16.

The group's programs are from 10 to 25 minutes in length, and audiences can request sacred and secular music and sing-alongs.

The Christmas Belles have entertained a variety of audiences over the years. They are available for companies, service clubs and private parties, said Dr. Richard Cox, director of the Women's Choir.

Individuals interested in reserving the Christmas Belles for a holiday function should call Cox at 910-334-5176 weekdays. He encourages people to make reservations by Nov. 15.

The Belles don't charge a fee, but request tax-deductible donations. There is a minimum of $50 for a 10-minute program.

Funds raised from performances will help cover the cost of the choir's trip to the American Choral Directors Association Southern Division convention in Charleston, S.C., this winter. The Women's Choir has been invited to perform at the convention in February.

The Women's Choir has performed throughout the United States and in Canada. Members are selected by audition at the beginning of the school year.

UNCG faculty writes book on Irish medical charities

Dr. Ronald D. Cassell, associate professor of history at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, has written a detailed history of medical relief for the poor in Ireland during the 19th century.

"Medical Charities, Medical Politics: The Irish Dispensary System and the Poor Law, 1836-1872" recently was published by the Royal Historical Society of London. The 181-page book provides "a clearer explanation of the medical care and public health aspects of 19th-century Irish poor law that have not been well understood," Cassell said.

Cassell's book focuses on the development of Irish medical charities in the 19th century. "Medical Charities, Medical Politics" traces the evolution of medical charities from a locally financed and organized collection of facilities into a national system of medical welfare for the poor.

A major reason that Cassell wrote "Medical Charities, Medical Politics" was to examine the debates and political perspectives in the 19th century regarding health care for the poor in Ireland.

The book was developed out of a dissertation that Cassell completed in the 1970s. The bulk of the research was conducted in Ireland and England, he said.

Cassell, a UNCG faculty member since 1966, recently served as interim head of the Department of History and is a senior fellow for the UNCG Cornelia Strong College Program. He is a specialist in modern British history, with a growing interest in military history.

Cassell is a former director of the UNCG Honors Program and a past recipient of the UNCG Alumni Teaching Excellence Award.

Students have many opportunities for leadership

Natalie Watson
News Editor

The Elliott University Center Office of Student Activities offers a plethora of opportunities for students to grow and develop their leadership skills.

Leadership UNCG is a program designed to explore leadership issues and provide students with the opportunities to develop and enhance a personal philosophy of leadership that includes self-understanding, respect for others, and acknowledgment. Students can choose from a variety of courses, including the EUC Fellows Program, the Spartan Leadership Academy, and the L.E.A.D. seminars.

Leadership Education and Development (LEAD) Seminars consist of workshops designed to provide the university community with the opportunity to understand and explore the concepts of leadership while at the same time assessing interests, improving skills and learning more about working with others.

Some of the issues discussed at the L.E.A.D. Seminars include Self-Defense, Leadership Styles, Gender Sensitivity, and Planning and Organizing.

The Seminars are facilitated by a combination of graduate students, faculty, and staff, according to their area of expertise. Heather Nolan, Student Activities Coordinator in charge of Leadership programs, accepts suggestions from students, faculty and staff concerning seminar topics.

According to Stuart Comfort, current Interim Assistant Director of Student Activities, an average of thirteen students have been attending the workshops this semester, with the highest attendance being at the interest inventory workshop and the self-defense workshop.

Student organizations count attending the L.E.A.D. seminars as one of their requirements for continued campus affiliation. Comfort asserts that the seminars serve as an excellent tool for the development of student organizations.

In addition to the L.E.A.D. seminars, Leadership UNCG also offers a variety of more controlled leadership development opportunities. While the L.E.A.D. workshops are open to all in the University community, students generally have to be enrolled in the certificate programs.

EUC Fellows is a four-year leadership development program designed specifically for UNCG students. It is a unique opportunity for students to learn about themselves and their leadership capabilities as they progress through college.

Leadership Education and Development (LEAD) Seminars provide understanding and exploration of leadership concepts

To create a sense of community among participants, students interact in small groups facilitated by a trained Leadership Advisor. Students involved in the EUC Fellows Program also enjoy the luxury of having individualized attention, as all Leadership Advisors are full-time staff members in the Student Activities Program Office.

The programming in the first year centers around personal development issues. These include communication skills, diverse community, counseling skills, wellness, suicide issues, etc.

The second year consist of workshops dealing with university leadership, and the third year program is dedicated to community service. During the last year, participants are recognized and inducted in the EUC Fellow Organization.

The Spartan Leadership Academy consists of 3 certificate programs designed to complement academic curricula. Each program will facilitate overall involvement as an active student and leader at UNCG.

The Personal Development Certificate will increase your knowledge of social, emotional, and health issues impacting college campuses and communities today.

The University Leadership Certificate will improve your leadership competence, enhance future leadership potential, develop practical application, and increase your understanding of leadership skills.

The S.T.A.R. (Students Taking Active Responsibility) Certificate will increase your knowledge of social issues, expose you to diverse groups of individuals, and will help you gain valuable training and work experience that can strengthen your resume.

Students are encouraged to call the Office of Student Activities at 334-5617 with information and registration information regarding Leader-

Annual Ebony Fashion Fair celebrates 40th anniversary

Johnnie Evans
Staff Writer

The legendary Ebony Fashion Fair is an annual event that brings to us the most eccentric fashions innovated by American, Italian, French, and British designers.

Ebony Fashion Fair's 40th Anniversary-The Jazz Age Of Fashions was sponsored by the Greensboro Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority as a scholarship benefit. In the past, they have raised over $190,000 in scholarships for college students.

The Jazz Age was the theme because this was the era in which Ebony Fashion Fair had its beginnings.

This was during the time of the famous Josephine Baker, the struggle of personal freedoms for women, and the unforgettable war of segregation. Fashions of the "Roaring Twenties" were modeled by beautiful women with poise and flare, much like the women of this time.

Rain wear and exotic prints were also eye-catching and showstopping, luring the audience on the edges of their seats, anticipating to see what was next.

Act I of the program consisted of "The Flapper Returns," "Fashions That Flirt," "Don't Rain On My Parade," and "Instincts Of The Wild". Act II was more formal and fashions were sultry, sexy, and seductive.

This particular act modeled the latest trends in swimwear, which were very much synonymous with the fashions we see today. Act II consisted of "Swimming Up Stream," "Back Down Memory Lane, 40 Years of Fashion," "The Cotton Club," and "The Passion Of Jazz".

This year's show was packed with allure and the quintessence of styles worn with pride and elegance by grandmothers, mothers, and by us.

Preservice teachers learn how to use technology in classroom through education programs

Steve Gilliam
Staff Writer

What a difference computers and software are making in the classroom today! Programs like Math Blaster, Number Munchers, Writing Center, Hyper Studio and Kid Pix are out there, ready for classroom use. Many schools have computers in their classrooms. Libraries have become media centers.

In the School of Education at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, the curriculum has been modified to help the teachers of tomorrow master the use of computer-based technology before they head into the classroom. All educational methods courses taught in the school now include a technology component.

"Technology has moved into most facets of life in America today and it will become more prevalent in the future," said Barbara B. Levin, an assistant professor of curriculum and instruction at UNCG who has had a long-term interest in technology.

"Instructional technology is a very good teaching tool, but it needs to be used more widely in the classroom to prepare children for the future."

Levin has an enthusiasm for her subject which her students pick up. Many of her lessons are taught in the new Instructional Technology Teaching Classroom in the School of Education. There, she and other faculty members work with Jean Camp, who is the school's coordinator of instructional technology for teacher education.

The classroom contains 25 Power Mac computers all mounted on work desks, a teaching station with an LCD computerized projector, two laser printers, a color inkjet printer, a multimedia station with a scanner, and assorted software to handle most instructional needs.

"We spend a lot of time learning about different computer tools and how you could use them in the classroom," said Levin. "Pre-service teachers today have greater expectations placed on them today to actually teach lessons using computers and to show children how to use the technology."

Those expectations will become requirements next year for those who want to teach in North Carolina, Levin said. The State Board of Education has mandated that teachers who apply for licensure in the state in 1999 will be required to pass a computer-competency skills test in grades K-12.

They also must submit technology portfolios which can demonstrate their integration of technology in content areas.

The UNCG School of Education is working toward meeting these requirements for spring 1998 graduates.

At UNCG, Levin's area of specialization is social studies education. But she has been the faculty leader for four years of the technology inquiry team in the Professional Development Schools (PDS) Program.

The PDS program in the School of Education is designed to give teacher candidates greater experience—approximately 500 hours of internship time in the classroom—before they actually do their student-teaching.

Inquiry teams are groups of 20-30 students who remain together through the junior and senior years and focus on specific areas, of which technology is one.

Regular team activities include taking classes together, carrying out internships at the same schools, learning to solve problems as a group, and student-teaching in the schools where they intern.

"As faculty members, our goal is to try to help them see the possibilities in using this technology," said Levin.

"Nothing will ever take the place of a teacher, but computers can be a great learning aid. I want my students to ask themselves, 'Is there any way I can use the computer to make this lesson better for the students?'"

Camp, as coordinator of instructional technology, works with students both in the elementary and middle grades programs, along with students who plan to teach at the high school level.

In all, there are 48 subject areas in which preservice teachers can specialize.

A former technology specialist with the Guilford County Schools, Camp got interested in technology some years back, explaining, "I didn't want my students to be too far ahead of me."

Most preservice teachers have some familiarity with computers these days, said Camp, who teaches the Library and Information Science 120 course, "Introduction to Instructional Technology."

The course is taken by most education students at UNCG. Very few of the preservice teachers are what Camp calls "technophobics"—people who are scared of computers—because many have grown up with them in their homes and most were exposed to them in high school.

"This course and technology integration in all the methods courses are helping these students see what a great resource the computer can be for teaching," said Camp.

AD/HD Disorder subject of conference at UNCG this month

Attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder (AD/HD) will be the topic of a day-long conference at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro on Monday, Nov. 10.

Titled "AD/HD: Strategies for Identification and Treatment Across the Life Span," the conference is designed for teachers, psychologists, social workers, and physicians.

It will provide the latest information and state-of-the-art strategies for identifying and treating AD/HD in children, adolescents and adults.

Hosting the event is the UNCG Department of Psychology, the UNCG Division of Continual Learning, the Guilford County Schools and the Greensboro Area Health Education Center.

Registration is through Continual Learning.

Information on costs, location and other details are available by calling Jenny Harrell weekdays at 334-5414 or at 1-800-306-9033 at UNCG. Full-day and half-day registration is available.

Among the topics to be covered will be school-based interventions for children and adolescents, managing children at home, resolving parent-adolescent conflict, adapting to college life, and facing the challenges of adulthood.

Coordinating the conference will be Dr. Arthur Anastopoulos, a UNCG associate professor of psychology, who said, "The conference is designed for professionals who work with individuals with AD/HD and for individuals and families affected by AD/HD."

It will provide up-to-date information on managing AD/HD on a daily basis."

Speakers will be Dr. George DuPaul, associate professor in the school psychology program at Lehigh University; Dr. Gwenyth Edwards, assistant professor in the departments of psychiatry and pediatrics of the University of Massachusetts Medical Center; Dr. Kevin Murphy, assistant professor in the Department of Psychiatry of the University of Massachusetts Medical Center; and Dr. Terri L. Shelton, visiting associate professor in the UNCG Department of Psychology.

The conference schedule will run as follows:

* Morning sessions, Anastopoulos on "Overview of AD/HD," DuPaul on "Meeting the Challenges of AD/HD: Best Practices for School-Based Intervention," Edwards on "Managing Children in the Home," and Murphy on "AD/HD and College: Challenges and Strategies for Successful Management."

* Afternoon sessions, Shelton on "Overview of AD/HD," DuPaul on "Secondary Students with AD/HD: Strategies for School Success," Edwards on "Resolving Parent-Adolescent Conflict" and Murphy on "AD/HD in Adults: Impact on Career, Family and Social Functioning."

Men's soccer hit stride as Southern Conference playoffs begin

Diana Collins
Staff Writer

The men's soccer squad defeated No. 17 Georgia Southern 4-0 Saturday to clinch the number-one seed in the Southern Conference.

The squad's first season in the conference has proven successful and the team eagerly looks forward to a conference tournament victory. If this feat is attained the Spartans will host a NCAA play-in game versus the Big South Conference victor on November 15th or 16th.

On Saturday All-American Sigi Eyjolfsson opened the match up with two goals.

His first came unassisted in the 23rd minute by way of a long shot to the upper left corner of the net. At the 27-minute mark Eyjolfsson struck again, this time with the help of freshman Justin Wisdo.

Spartan midfielder Matt Farris received a pass in the 59th minute from Sappia Venn, which he lofted beautifully over the head of the Eagles keeper and just under the crossbar.

This extraordinary shot created an awe-inspired reverberation from the crowd.

Luke Jamroz finished up the scoring campaign with his ninth of the season in the 90th minute of the match.

The Georgia Southern win advanced the Spartans to a home match versus The Citadel Bulldogs on Tuesday night.

Citadel was out on the field early Tuesday preparing for the game against the Spartans.

The team arrived over two hours early to get primed to play the number-one seed in the conference.

It seemed that in the early part of the game, this strategy paid off as the Bulldog's Josh Roach rebounded a ball off a Spartan defender for a goal.

The Spartans received their wake-up call, and answered it with a fury. Matt Farris took control with consecutive goals in the 10th and 11th minutes. His first goal was an unassisted, fierce long-range shot that passed swiftly by the keeper.

On his second goal, he received help from teammates Mark Pinch and Sappia Venn as he battled through the thick Bulldog defensive line to score.

The last goal of the half was produced by Sigi Eyjolfsson at the 16:21 mark. His goal was assisted by Nathan Horton, who passed the ball into space for wide-open Eyjolfsson to knock in.

Eyjolfsson holds the team high with 15 goals for the season.

The only other event of the half was an unfortunate hamstring injury for Sigi Eyjolfsson. Teammate Matt Farris displayed concern after the match with his statement, "Sigi is a great asset to the team and we hope his injury isn't too severe."

He has been playing really well lately, and he will be needed in the upcoming tournaments."

After the tragic multiple-fracture foot injury to back Chris Putland the Spartans are hoping to steer clear of further injuries.

After being out for the prescribed three weeks, Putland is hoping to make an appearance in Saturday's tournament match.

Currently, Brian Freeman has made the transition from midfield to the back line to hold the Spartans' defense together. Freeman had a brilliant match against the Bulldogs in which he kept control of the backfield and distributed the ball neatly to the midfield.

Clearly, his experience and status as a veteran player of the game have been a tremendous benefit to the Spartans. Teammate Matt Farris claimed, "Brian has definitely helped our team in the back since Chris has been out."

Our starting eleven is performing well in light of the changes and the execution from players coming off the bench is giving us great depth as a team."

The second half of play created further anguish for The Citadel coach and players as the Spartans amassed four more goals.

The fourth goal of the match was one of a series of three from North Carolina native Luke Jamroz. He began his stunning hattrick with a one-touch shot past the Bulldog keeper.

His goal was assisted by a short pass from Spartan back Jimmy Kaup.

Jamroz's second and third goals came within minutes of each other at the 61:53 and 65:01 marks.

His second goal came after the ball was moved in a series of quick, small passes around the box. Sappia Venn and Steven Magee managed to get the ball to Luke's feet at which time he pushed it to the right and beat the keeper for the goal.

The goal which gave Jamroz the much-desired hattrick for the match came off a cross from Rusty Pierce at 65:07. Jamroz placed another perfect one-touch ball on the frame of the goal, which the goalie was unable to get to. The hattrick gives Jamroz twelve goals for his season campaign.

Sophomore Rob Banzhaf topped off the Spartans' night with goal number seven at the 80:52 mark. Banzhaf hit a beautiful curving ball off a pass from Jeremy Wisdo which found the back of the Bulldog net.

Saturday, the Spartans move up to quarterfinals of the tournament as they face Georgia Southern for yet another time.

The Spartans seem to be at an advantage as they go on to play a team they beat 4-0 less than a week ago, but this assumption has been the downfall of many great teams. The Spartans can't let their guard down because the Eagles will doubtless approach the game with vengeance on their minds.

Matt Farris stated in a level-headed manner, "I think that if we play up to our potential we can beat them. We are playing better now than we were mid-season and we have become more productive as a team." Clearly, seasoned players that have experience with tournament pressure will be essential as the Spartans surge ahead.

The Spartans next match is scheduled for this Saturday at 5 PM in Greenville, SC.

Go out and support the Spartans as they face Georgia Southern in the semifinals of the Southern Conference Tournament.

Diana Collins/THE CAROLINIAN

Luke Jamroz slides the ball by The Citadel goalkeeper Tuesday night. Jamroz scored three separate times for a hat trick. The Spartans beat the Eagles 7-1, which advances them to the semifinal round of the Southern Conference Tournament in Greenville, SC.

Spartans defeat Demon Deacons

Diana Collins
Staff Writer

The Women's volleyball squad took on Wake Forest Tuesday night in Fleming Gymnasium.

The match marked their last home game until Nov. 14th. The team will take on Western Carolina, UT-Chattanooga, and NC State before returning home for their last two regular season games.

The Spartans began well with 15-10 and 15-0 wins in the initial two games of the match. The Spartans seemed to be holding their own and showed promise of ousting Wake Forest in 3 games.

Unfortunately, the Spartans took a drastic turn in game three with a 0-15 loss. The vitality and determination that the Spartans showed in the first games was nowhere to be seen.

The Spartans failed to attain a single kill, while Wake obtained ten. Wake Forest managed to get through the game without a single error while the Spartans accumulated 8. The Demon Deacons clearly took hold of the game as they shut out the frustrated Spartans.

In the fourth game, UNCG scored six points, but that was all they could muster as Wake ended up with a 15-6 victory. Wake accumulated 20 kills to the Spartans' 14.

Fortunately, the Spartans held their ground and pushed their game up a notch in the fifth to come back to win 15-12.

Kelley Evans walked away from the game with the team highs for kills and digs with 14 and 20, while Becky Moore accumulated 11 kills. Jessica Chappell created 45 of the team's 48 sets to assist the Spartans with the win.

As the season winds down, it will be important for the Spartans to play as a unit and wind up their season on a winning note. Having three away matches in a row this late in the season will be a test for the team's endurance and composure.

The Spartans now hold a 14-14 overall record, and 7-6 for the conference.

The next home volleyball match is scheduled for 7 PM, November 14th in Fleming Gymnasium.

Come support Spartan volleyball as the squad takes on conference rival Georgia Southern. The match is free with a valid student ID.

The UNCG women's soccer team captures the Southern conference

George Kourtsounis
Sports Editor

The UNCG Spartans' women's soccer team captured the Southern Conference Tournament over the weekend. The Spartans, who had rolled through the new league with an unblemished mark during the season, proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that they are the dominant team in the Southern Conference and are about to continue their journey towards national prominence.

The tournament began with an 11-0 annihilation of the ETSU Buccaneers in which the Spartans held the Buccaneers without a shot. Offensively, the Spartans were a juggernaut and team leaders Kati Kantanen and Ali Lord demonstrated their skill by each notching a hat trick and adding three assists. Senior Katie Bullington added two goals and an assist in the rout. The Spartans fired a remarkable 50 shots at the Buccaneer goalkeeper, and the 11-0 win was the largest margin of victory since a 12-0 blanking of Lenoir-Rhyne in 1990.

With the positive momentum of an impressive quarterfinal showing, the Spartans took on host, the Davidson Wildcats in the conference semifinals. The top-seeded Spartans came into the match looking to tie a season record for victories.

UNCG, who is currently ranked in the top 25 at #25, looked to improve on their ranking with an impressive showing in the conference tournament. The Spartans did impress as they sent the partisan Davidson crowd home unhappy with a 4-0 loss that was not nearly as close as the score indicated.

The Spartans collected their sixteenth win in twenty-one matches, and junior goalkeeper notched her 11th shutout of the season, tying the school record.

Ali Lord started off the scoring in the ninth minute of the match, with the assists going to Kati Kantanen and Shannon Carey. The Spartans would not tally another goal until the second half of the match. By doing so, Lord became the first player in Spartan history to score twenty or more goals in consecutive seasons.

It was a remarkable weekend for Lord, as she broke the school's career scoring record held by Kerry Powell in the match against East Tennessee State in UNCG's first-round match Tuesday. Lord has tallied 52 goals for her career, one shy of Powell's mark. Lord also had 21 assists for a total 125 career points.

The Spartans struck again when Danica Baker scored in the 60th minute with the assist going to Ali Lord. Senior Kim Rosenberg put the match out of reach in the sixty-ninth minute with a goal that put the Spartans up with a commanding 3-0 lead. Kati Kantanen closed out the scoring at the 73:31 mark, netting her 18th goal of the season.

Kantanen, who ranks among the nation's top 10 leading scorers, also had two assists in the match which raised her team-record total to 19. During her three year career, Kantanen has established herself as one of the country's most balanced players and, along with her teammate Lord, provides Coach Jack Poland with one of the most devastating one-two punches in the nation.

The Spartans, who had outscored their opponents by a score of 15-0 going into the conference final, had a lot of positive momentum going into the match with the Wofford Terriers. The Spartans had to feel confident, because they had downed the Terriers 4-3 in their lone regular-season meeting in Spartanburg, SC on September 3.

The Spartans came out with an incredible desire and simply out-executed the Terriers in a 9-0 blowout that gave UNCG its first conference title in their initial year of Southern Conference play. The Terriers, who were also in their first year in the conference, fell victim to a team on a mission.

UNCG scored three goals in the first half and never looked back. Dana Tilley opened the scoring in the 13th minute, with the assist going to Pa'tra Glavin. Lord would continue the UNCG domination in the 21st minute. This goal would be a historic one for Lord, as her 53rd career goal placed her first on the all-time scoring list, surpassing Kerry Powell, who had previously held the mark for four seasons. The Spartans would score again in the first half as Kati Kantanen, who had assisted on Lord's historic goal took a pass from Kelley Merriss and rifled it past Wofford netminder Deanna Moschos.

With the Spartans ahead 3-0 going into the second half of play, it was clear that Wofford was no match for the talented and determined UNCG squad. Kantanen scored her second consecutive goal in the 56th minute. Lord scored two minutes late to give the Spartans an insurmountable 5-0 advantage. Katie Bullington would add two goals, the first coming in the 67th minute, and the second, coming at the 86:50 mark. Bullington's goal came just 21 seconds after Kantanen completed her hat trick. Kerri Currutt also had a goal at the 77:34 mark to complete the Spartan onslaught.

On the defensive side of the ball, Paula Domitrovits recorded her third consecutive shutout in the tournament, and 12th of the season, breaking a 7-year-old mark previously held by Laura Mussulman.

Ali Lord led the tournament scoring with goals in three matches, giving her a total of 22 for the season. Kati Kantanen added six to give her 21 for the season, just one behind Lord. The Spartans 24-0 scoring differential was indicative of how well they've consistently played all season. With their success in the tournament, the Spartans now stand at 17-5, setting a new team record for victories in a season.

Coach Jack Poland commented, "We've obviously made adjustments and proved we could play in November." He continued, "We've never been head-and-shoulders above the conference like this before, so I'm extremely proud of our team. I think we have finally legitimized ourselves on the national scene. This is a young conference, and there are good players and the conference will get better and better as time goes on."

The Spartans dominated the tournament and that was evidenced in the awards ceremony, as well. Senior Kim Rosenberg was named Tournament MVP. Kati Kantanen, Ali Lord and Danica Baker, Lynsey McLean, Paula Domitrovits and Raila Maisonlahti were also named to the All-Tournament team, as well.

The Spartans also dominated the Southern Conference postseason honors as well. Lynsey McLean was named Freshman of the Year, Jack Poland was the Coach of the Year and Kati Kantanen was named Player of the Year. The dominance showed this season by the Spartans was simply remarkable, especially given that it was only their first season in conference play.

With the Southern Conference Tournament title in hand, the Spartans now focus on the NCAA Tournament play-in game versus the Big South Conference Tournament victor. This should give the Spartans a chance to rekindle an old rivalry. The Spartans, who are a sure bet to climb in the national rankings after such a dominant performance, will be heavily favored in the play-in match which they will host on Tuesday, November 11.

UNCG is now just one step away from its second consecutive appearance in the NCAA Tournament. The Spartans, who were an at-large selection last year, lost to James Madison University 3-1 in the first round at home last year. They would like nothing better than to avenge that loss this season. The Spartans, who stand at 17-5, could conceivably be an at-large selection this season if they were to falter Tuesday.

However, they would rather not leave anything to chance, and seem focused on the task at hand and moving one step closer to their goal of consistent success in the NCI Tournament.

GIVE US TIME TO REPAY YOUR LOAN.

After just three years in the Army, your college loan could be a thing of the past. Under the Army's Loan Repayment program, each year you serve on active duty reduces your indebtedness by one-third or $1,500, whichever amount is greater, up to a $65,000 limit.

This offer applies to Perkins Loans, Stafford Loans and certain other federally insured loans which are not in default.

And this is just the first of many benefits the Army will give you. Get the whole story from your Army Recruiter.
