

Rape forum scheduled at UNCG about Ronald Cotton

A forum on the Ronald Cotton case, in which a Burlington man was falsely convicted of rape and freed 11 years later on DNA evidence, will be held on Saturday, April 25, at UNCG. The event is open to faculty and students free of charge.

Cotton was twice convicted of rape and sentenced to life in prison. After serving 11 years, he was released on the basis of DNA evidence which ultimately led to the conviction of the actual perpetrator. This forum will bring face-to-face the central figures in the case, including Ronald Cotton and Jennifer Thompson, who was the victim. Discussion will focus on the legal and ethical dilemmas that confronted police and attorneys on both sides.

Titled "Law, Ethics, and Justice: Beyond the Adversarial Process," the conference has been approved by the N.C. State Bar for three hours of continuing legal education ethics credit. UNCG continuing education credits are also available.

To attend, students and faculty must register through the UNCG Division of Continual Learning (334-5414) by Friday, April 17.

Sickle cell benefit scheduled for April 18-19 at UNCG

The Sickle Cell Disease Association of the Piedmont has been selected by Revlon Products to host a Sickle Cell Revlon Hair-A-Thon on April 18-19, 1998. This 24-hour fundraiser will be held at Leon's Beauty School on West Lee St. in Greensboro from 6 pm Saturday through 6 pm Sunday.

At least 350 hairstylists, barbers, and nail technicians from throughout the Piedmont area will donate their time and talents to make this fundraiser a success. All services for men and women will be offered at approximately half price to attract maximum consumer participation.

The Sickle Cell Revlon Hair-A-Thon will be a "fun" fundraiser because each donor will go home with something new, whether it is a new hairdo or a manicure. More important, every dollar spent will help children and adults who suffer from the effects of sickle cell disease.

So, make plans to come out and help support this cause on April 18-19. If there are any questions about the event, please call 274-1507.

New director appointed at UNCG's Center of Education

Jane R. Shoemaker has been appointed director of the Center for Educational Studies and Development at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

She succeeds Dr. Mary Avery. Under Shoemaker's direction, the center will continue to offer counseling and consulting services and psychoeducational evaluations for learning disabilities. Additionally, the center will continue to provide a reading clinic, professional development seminars and a review course for the National Counselor Examination.

Other center offerings will include psychoeducational evaluations for the gifted, foreign language cultural enrichment, a study skills clinic and a mathematics clinic.

Before coming to UNCG in 1997, Shoemaker served as coordinator of Educational Talent Search and established a child care program for returning adult students at Clarion University of Pennsylvania. She also coordinated a variety of academic support, parent education, student recruitment and teacher in-service programs.

Shoemaker received both her undergraduate and her master's in education degrees from Clarion University of Pennsylvania.

Where's The Line...

Diana Collins/THE CAROLINIAN

Having no line during registration at UNCG used to be an odd site, but not anymore. With web and phone registration now available, students don't have to wait in line for hours because what used to take hours now only takes minutes.

Speech-language pathology now in masters program

Staff Reports

Five graduate students have been selected for a new master's program in adolescent language disorders at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, which will benefit North Carolina educators helping young people with language problems.

The program's first students are Beverly Silfan of 1018-F. W. Barton St., Greensboro; Rebecca Adams Sluder of 145-3 Crowne Drive, Winston-Salem; Jessica B. Pollard of 2026 Storm Canyon Road, Winston-Salem; Jody Leigh Litwin of 62 Virginia Drive, Manhasset, N.Y.; and Wendy Ann Kerr of 145 Park St., Dallas, Pa.

The program has begun through a first-year grant of $120,289 from the U.S. Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services, which is part of the U.S. Department of Education.

During the next three years, grants for the project are expected to total $400,594.

Dr. Jacqueline M. Cimorelli and Vicki McCready, faculty members in UNCG's program in communication sciences and disorders, are the project directors.

The project coordinator is Perry F. Flynn, lecturer in communication sciences and disorders who was previously lead speech-language pathologist with the Rockingham County Schools.

The project will prepare master's level, certified speech-language pathologists to work specifically with adolescents who have language disabilities.

Ultimately, 15 students will receive stipends through the project while seeking master's degrees at UNCG.

The students who earn master's degrees will be obligated to spend at least two years working with adolescents with language disabilities in the North Carolina public schools.

The speech-language pathologists would help middle school and high school youth. A major goal of the project is to fill a void by training qualified speech-language pathologists to help adolescents.

Many middle schools and high schools offer limited speech-language services, with emphasis having been given to early childhood intervention. One of the most pressing needs of the North Carolina public schools is hiring adequately trained speech-language pathologists.

As part of the project, a clinic to assist adolescents with language disorders will be held during the summers of 1998 and 1999 at UNCG.

The clinic also will allow UNCG students to receive further training by working with adolescents.

Most companies taking conservative when it comes to the internet

Info Services

Several companies are emerging as "trail blazers" in their use of the Internet for electronic commerce, although most businesses still continue to take a conservative approach toward using the technology, according to an ongoing study being done by two faculty members at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Titled "Business Use of the Internet and Electronic Commerce," the study surveyed 110 national companies to determine the extent to which they are using the Web for business activities. The firms ranged in size from annual sales of less than $1 million to over $10 billion. Included were banks and companies in manufacturing, retail/wholesale, publishing, communications and utilities, medical and health care, consulting, education and construction.

The researchers, Dr. Pierre Balthazard and Dr. Chang Koh, are faculty members in the Department of Information Systems and Operations Management in the Joseph M. Bryan School of Business and Economics at UNCG.

"When you average all the companies together, it appears that businesses continue to take a conservative approach to use of the Internet," said Balthazard. "But with some of the companies, we've been seeing usage of the Web for business emerging strongly.

"As companies have harvested the technology and expanded its uses, we're seeing new and different applications by companies that are trail blazers in their different industries.

They are breaking away from the pack. And we're even seeing that some outsider companies, that traditionally have not been a major part of an industry, are becoming trail blazers in that industry because they have learned how to use the technology."

The major use for business Web sites, Balthazard and Koh said, is still for information purposes and on-line catalogs.

But very good Web sites have been developed which bring the consumer into the process and allow the person to interact with the site by computer. This creates "value added" for the products that are sold on the Web and for the sales experience.

"Face it, what we see is that just about every good and service is available on the Web for people who are willing to look for it," said Balthazard. "On that score people are looking for the lowest price. Companies that are succeeding are the ones who don't trivialize business to a comparison of prices."

Many companies have developed thropological Society's meeting in Wilmington.

Woodall co-wrote the paper, titled "Aging, Identity and Possessions: Issues of Methodology," with Dr. Thomas K. Fitzgerald, a UNCG anthropology professor.

Woodall has been working as an undergraduate research assistant on Fitzgerald's study of older adults' attitudes about their material possessions. When people retire, they may move to smaller homes. This often forces them to make decisions about which possessions to keep and which ones to sell or give away. Woodall has been interviewing adults over age 65 to gauge their attitudes about their possessions.

Fitzgerald said it is rare for undergraduates to be selected to present papers at Southern Anthropological Society meetings.

Woodall, an anthropology major, is the daughter of Ned and Julie Woodall of 4444 Robinhood Road, Winston-Salem. She plans to attend graduate school to study cultural anthropology.

Friendship Sertoma Club grants scholarship

Cynthia Ann Dedo, a senior at The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, has received a $500 scholarship from Friendship Sertoma Club of Greensboro for second semester, next year.

Dedo is a senior majoring in education of deaf children in the UNCG Department of Communication. She is the daughter of Doug and Gay Dedo of 1430 N. Lake Way, Palm Beach, Fla.

Dedo also received a $500 Sertoma Scholarship for first semester. She is a member of the campus chapter of the University Association of Educators of the Deaf.

Each year, the Friendship Sertoma Club awards scholarships to undergraduate students who are majoring in education of the deaf. The Sertoma Club is an international service organization that focuses on raising funds for the hearing impaired.

good Web sites and homepages. Among the best examples that they cite as well-developed, interactive Web sites that show innovative uses of technology are the following: Expedia.com (travel), Revlon.com (cosmetics), Amazon.com (bookselling), Autobytel.com (automobile purchase information), Virtualvin.com (wines), Realtor.com (real estate), Online.com, Kraftfoods.com and Wal-mart.com.

Koh said that companies will continue to invest in technology to use the Internet for business. The average cost spent on producing a Web site, he said, rose by almost 60 percent, from $13,000 in 1996 to $22,000 in 1997. A couple of companies, he said, had spent close to $1 million to produce their sites.

The study, however, indicated that some companies were pulling back from the technology, said Koh. "Apparently they don't see the Web as a business tool," he said. "Other companies are investing heavily in the technology and hoping they can be more competitive and increase their market."

"Eventually what determines winners and losers is whether you are making a profit. At this point in time, this doesn't apply to the Internet. It's still too early, but many companies believe that it is important to pursue it as a strategic business tool. With any technology, it takes time before the practical and realistic potential can be realized."

In the past year, Koh and Balthazard have revised the focus of their study. They saw that applications of the Internet vary widely from industry to industry and company to company.

"The only unchanging fact we have noticed here is that everything is changing," they wrote at the conclusion of their study.

"The Internet is no longer considered just a medium for posting information to customers. It can change the way employees communicate with customers, business partners and other employees. It can expand the scope of a business while shrinking its value chain and it can provide a catalyst for redesigning business processes."

Spartans continues to lead Southern Conference

Spartan Sports Weekly

The UNC-Greensboro baseball team kept a hold on its first place position in the Southern Conference over this past weekend.

The Spartans faced Furman in a three game home series at War Memorial Stadium.

On Saturday UNCG took both games of a doubleheader from the visiting Paladins.

In the first game Jason Parsons pitched 4 1/3 innings of relief work, allowing only two hits to earn the victory as the Spartans won 6-3. The outing improved Parson's record to 6-1.

Kenny Vawter went 3-4 at the plate with an RBI and a run scored to lead the team in batting.

In the second game Spartan pitching again paved the way for a UNCG win as the Spartans took a 2-0 victory.

Corey McDonald earned the win allowing five hits in six innings while striking out five. McDonald is currently on a 13 scoreless innings streak and has a 4-1 record. Ted Toler finished the shutout effort to get the save.

Dominic Pattie hit 3-3 with an RBI to help the Spartans get the runs they needed.

Sunday's game was a shocker as Furman snapped their 10-game losing streak to defeat UNCG 7-5.

UNCG struggled against Paladin pitcher Toby Davis who pitched eight innings. Davis struck out six in the process and allowed only four hits.

Despite the loss UNCG retained their lead in the Southern Conference standings with a 1/2 game lead over The Citadel. Currently the Spartans are 15-3 in the conference and 27-14 overall. The ESPN/USA Today Coaches' Poll has UNCG ranked 47th in the nation.

Last week UNCG defeated Wake forest on the road by a score of 8-6 April 8. The Spartans were helped by sloppy playing by the Demon Deacons who gave UNCG six runs on eight walks and three errors.

Diana Collins/THE CAROLINIAN

The Spartan baseball team only has 9 games left this season, so come out and cheer them on before it's all over. Their next home game is today at 3pm. The game takes place at War Memorial Stadium and is against Appalachian State.

Today the Spartans are home to play Appalachian State at 3:00 pm. This weekend they travel to Davidson for a three-game series.

There are only nine games remaining in the season before the Southern Conference Tournament at the Citadel April 30 - May 3.

Men's golf finishes sixth in Conference Tournament

Spartan Sports Weekly

The University of North Carolina Greensboro men's golf team competed in their first ever Southern Conference Tournament April 13 and 14 at the Carolina Country Club in Spartanburg, SC. They came away with a sixth place finish out of 11 teams competing.

In the first round on Monday the Spartans hit a 306 placing them in seventh for round two.

Leading the way for UNCG were Andy Crain, shooting a 72, and Jason Martin, who shot a 75.

Furman was enjoying first place after the first round with an impressive score of 283 as some members of their team were below seventy.

On Tuesday UNCG fared much better. They placed third in the second round with a solid score of 293.

Crain improved his score by one stroke with a 71 to lead the Spartans. J.J. Morgan helped his cause with a 73.

Wofford enjoyed home field advantage in the second round, shooting the best round of the tournament at 281.

The second round boosted Wofford and East Tennessee State, who shot a 282, above Furman for the final standings.

Wofford and ETSU tied for first in the championship with cumulative scores of 571.

The Spartans shot a total of 599, five strokes behind Georgia Southern and six ahead of Davidson.

Rion Moore of Wofford had the best individual score of 138.

Crain tied for fourth individually with his 143 performance that was one stroke under par. Morgan was also in the top 25 with a combined score of 151.

NFL Draft offering top talent during this weekends draft

Associated Press

The NFL Draft always provides some needed football entertainment for fans already hungry for the fall season. This weekend's draft promises to see some interesting decisions and many last minute deals.

The Indianapolis Colts get the first choice from the field and will definitely use it on a new quarterback.

The only two worth considering are Peyton Manning of Tennessee and Ryan Leaf of Washington State.

Both show potential for being great in the NFL which makes the Colts' decision a difficult one although they have hinted they will draft Manning.

Manning's and Leaf's stats are almost identical. Their differences lie in their style of playing.

Manning threw 287 completions out of 477 attempts last season. He racked up 3,819 yards and had 36 touchdowns to counter 11 interceptions. He likes to run and is good at throwing off-balance.

Leaf had 210 completions in 375 attempts as he lead Washington State to the Rose Bowl. His numbers show 3,637 yards, 33 touchdowns, and 10 interceptions. In contrast to Manning, Leaf prefers to stay in the pocket and simply shun hits with his bigger size. He throws perfect passes in the mid-zone but has been criticized for his lack of accuracy on longer passes. If available San Diego will be sure to grab him.

Arizona has the third pick and will probably try to strengthen their defense which was lacking this past season.

Andre Wadsworth, a DE for Florida State, and Heisman winning Charles Woodson, who was known as Mr. Versatility while playing for Michigan, are the top defensive prospects.

Arizona will probably take Wadsworth simply due to the fact that Woodson is questionable as to where he fits best into a roster. His strength is definitely at cornerback but Michigan proved he has offensive and special teams talent as well. He has been compared to Deion Sanders in both speed and style.

Wadsworth consistently plays hard-nosed football at DE which is closer to what the Cardinals need. He had 57 tackles and 16 sacks last year at FSU to lead the ACC.

Whoever Arizona picks Oakland will grab the other in the fourth slot.

The lowly Bears of Chicago have the fifth pick and may opt to trade for more picks later in the draft since their entire team needs rebuilding.

The most notable players sure to go early are Randy Moss of Marshall, Curtis Enis of Penn State, and Fred Taylor of Florida.

Moss is the best receiving candidate the draft has seen in years. Any team could use him to boost their offensive output including Chicago, New Orleans, and Dallas. All three teams have expressed interest in Moss and are have top ten picks.

As for Enis and Taylor the only debate is to which teams want these running backs the most.

Enis offers a big size that helps him run over defensive lines. Taylor gains his yard with more cuts and quickness. He gained 1,292 yards for Florida last season.

Several teams are in need of a good running back including New England who lost Curtis Martin to the New York Jets a month ago. The Patriots may try to trade to gain a higher pick in order to get one of the two. However, there are many teams ahead of them who will definitely take either Enis or Taylor if available.

Yankees, Angels games postponed due to stadium structural problems

Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) - Part of the House that Ruth Built came crashing down Monday, just days before its 75th birthday.

A 500-pound steel joint smashed into the Yankee Stadium stands, forcing postponement of two games between the New York Yankees and Anaheim Angels and possibly shifting another to Shea Stadium.

There were no fans inside baseball's most storied landmark when the steel chunk, dating to the park's original 1923 construction, fell an estimated 40 feet from the underside of the upper deck into the mezzanine section and landed on seats between third base and left field about 2 p.m.

More than 20,000 people had been expected at Monday night's game at the stadium. Mayor Rudy Giuliani said someone almost certainly would have been killed if the collapse had happened during the game.

The 18-inch expansion joint, used to connect beams, crushed one of the blue plastic seats to pieces and gouged a 6-inch hole in the concrete. The joint tore another hole in the ceiling of the upper deck.

Night games Monday and Tuesday were postponed, and the Yankees later announced they would play the Angels Wednesday at Shea Stadium, home of the rival New York Mets. The Mets are also scheduled to play at Shea that day against the Chicago Cubs.

"As a Yankee fan, I'd rather that we were playing, but as a mayor we have to make sure it's safe," Giuliani said at the stadium, which is owned by the city and leased to the team.

Babe Ruth christened Yankee Stadium with a homer the day it opened, April 18, 1923, and it has been home to baseball's greatest players ever since. Hall of Famers like Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Joe DiMaggio, Mickey Mantle and Reggie Jackson have helped the Yankees win 23 World Series championships.

"It's a real shame this happened. This is a shrine to baseball," Angels manager Terry Collins said.

Inspection crews were to work through the night Monday, and a replacement joint was being built in the Bronx. Giuliani said no other problems had been discovered as of 11 p.m.

If the park is not fixed in time, the Yankees and Detroit Tigers may move their three-game weekend series to Shea.

The Tigers and Yankees, however, may play instead at Tiger Stadium if the repairs are not finished.

Bill LeSuer, the Angels' muscle therapist, was walking on the field toward the hallowed Monument Park beyond the left-field fence when the joint fell and landed in section 22, row B, seat 7.

Stadium superintendent Bob Wilkinson said the ballpark is inspected once a year. He said crews would check "every nook and cranny."
