

RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS WEEK BEGINS SUNDAY

Dikeans Hold First Formal of Season

Bill Vandendries' Orchestra Will Play For Society Prom

Dikeans society will hold the first formal dance of the year on Saturday, October 21, at 8:30 p. m. in Rosenthal gymnasium.

In the meeting line will be: Linda Bowman, dance chairman, with Bryan Morgan; Alpha Stevens, president, with Charles Kermode; and Miss Nancy Linda Lewis, faculty sponsor. Bill Vandendries and his orchestra from Wake Forest will play.

The gymnasium will be decorated in the World's Fair theme, with imitation children set in the walls through which one can see the skyline of New York. Evelyn Horne and Frances Manning are in charge of the decorations. Those participating in the figure skated by Blanche Anderson will appear from behind a periscope. The small gymnasium, where punch will be served, is arranged as a roof garden.

"Girls in Uniform" Stars Jean McDonald

First Play-Like Production Includes All-Woman Cast Of Veteran and New Talent

A large, all-woman cast using more new talent than ever before, with a veteran Play-Like, Jean McDonald, in the leading role bids fair to make "Girls in Uniform," first Play-Like production of the year, one of its top-ranking performances. Ten changes of scenery during the play represents an interesting experiment for the Play-Like and new responsibilities for the stage crew.

Avril Gantley is supervising the building of the set which Mr. Wilbur Dorwin designed. Elizabeth Gardner and the stage crew are working with her. Johannes Biet and Dorothy Johnson have charge of the lighting effects. Leah Cronin and her crew are making the costumes.

The play is particularly timely now because it is about a German school which was the hardest discipline in educating the girls of the school. Although the play is written about the regime before the rise of Hitler, the methods of the fanatical teachers who wish to restore the empire seem to be such the same as the present training of young people in Nazi Germany.

Home Economics Head Speaks to Asheville Group

Miss Margaret Edwards, head of the Home Economics department, was the guest speaker at the District Educational meeting in Asheville on Friday, October 21. Miss Edwards spoke on "The Growing Teacher in a Growing Program."

General Program of Religious Emphasis Week Offers Various Program of Activities

Typical program for a day of Religious Emphasis week, including general plans, is given below. Complete programs for the week may be obtained on request from the Religious Activities center in the basement of South Hall.

7 a. m.—Breakfast for Committee of One Hundred and guest leaders, small new dining hall.

8:45 a. m.—Radio talk, WBIG.

10-12 a. m.—Personal conferences with leaders; morning hours—class discussions (see bulletin board).

1-2 p. m.—Seminars (except Tuesday when Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton speaks in chapel).

All Roads Lead to Carolina-Penn Game

Girls interested in going to the Carolina-Pennsylvania game in Philadelphia, October 28, at round-trip rate of $10, on buses which will form a part of a caravan from the University of North Carolina (including Woman's college) are asked to get in touch with Valerie Powell in Woman's 2 before Tuesday, October 24.

Buses will leave Greensboro Friday at 10 a. m. and arrive in Philadelphia that night. More than 20 buses are expected to make the trip from Carolina and Woman's college. A pep meeting will be held in Washington Friday, according to plans.

"Look" magazine, it is rumored, will use pictures of the caravan, featuring especially the girls of the Greater university.

Valerie, in charge of plans for the trip, announces that a down payment of $5 for fare must be paid by Tuesday.

American Ballet Group Performs at College

Lincoln Kirstein Directs Two Presentations Composed of Three American Scenes

The American Ballet Caravan presented two performances in Aycock auditorium on Wednesday, October 18, at 8:15 p. m. and at 8:30 p. m., under the direction of Lincoln Kirstein, founder and director. The Caravan is composed entirely of American dancers interpreting the American scene in ballet form, with American musicians and painters. This is its second trans-continental tour.

The matinee performance consisted of Bach's "Air and Variations"; "Filling Station," a ballet cartoon exalting the filling station operator; and an American saga of the West, "Billy the Kid."

"Filling Station," "Billy the Kid," and "Charade: Debutante" completed the evening performance. The dance themes were familiar to contemporary Americans, no literature being necessary to explain the ballets. The featured dancers were Lew Christensen, ballet-master; Marie Jeanne, premiere ballerina; Giselle Caccialanza, and Eugene Loring, character dancer.

Natalie Krug Is New Head Of Sociology Group

Natalie Krug has been elected to take the place of Lettie Hamlett as president of the Sociology club. Lettie resigned because of ill health.

Beverly Barksdale, Anne Tillinghast, and Edith Turner reported on their summer work in sociology at the first meeting of the club on October 2. Plans for a race relations survey were discussed. Mr. N. C. Newbold, influential leader in the field of race relations will supervise the survey which will be published when it is completed.

Prominent Visitors Will Hold Informal Discussions Next Week

Mrs. Annie Funderburk Announces Embassy Plan For Students in Dormitories

Mrs. Annie Beam Funderburk, counselor and chairman of the residence halls committee for Religious Emphasis week, has announced complete details for the "Embassy plan" which will enable students to talk with leaders informally in the residence halls.

The following women will be among those who will visit Woman's college: Miss Betty Farrow, executive secretary of the Y. W. C. A., University of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Hornell Hart, Duke University; Miss Frances P. Greenough, national field student secretary of the Department of Student Work in the Board of Education of the Northern Baptist convention; Mrs. Douglas Horton, New York city; Dr. Mary E. Markley, secretary of the Board of Education of the United Lutheran church in America; and Mrs. Wells Harrington, former assistant secretary of the National Y. W. C. A.

Visitors Will Stay in Dormitories

Mrs. Horton and Miss Farrow will stay in the Alumnae house; Dr. Markley, in Miss Evelyn Martin's suite in New Guilford; Miss Greenough, in 214 Mary Foust; Mrs. Hart, in 26 Woman's; and Mrs. Harrington, in the guest room of New Dormitory A. Girls are invited to drop by these rooms in the evenings after dinner or from 10 to 10:30 for informal discussions.

Freshmen May Attend Discussions

There will also be visitors in other residence halls immediately after dinner who will lead discussions in the parlors. These include: Dr. Paul Braisted, Kirkland; Dr. Warner Hall, North Spencer; and Dr. Worth M. Tippy, Shaw. Mrs. Horton and Miss Farrow will be in South Sencer and New Dormitory B, respectively, after dinner.

Committee of One Hundred Meets in Recreation Park

Eric Linden Will Play In Stage Production Of "Golden Boy"

Greensboro Junior League Will Sponsor Three Other Plays During Coming Year

Eric Linden, well-known star of stage and screen, will play the role of Joe Bonaparte in "Golden Boy" tonight at Aycock auditorium. The story of a talented young violinist who turns to prize-fighting to make a quick fortune, "Golden Boy" is Clifford Odets' Group Theater hit of New York, London, and Chicago, which is being presented on tour by the Legitimate Theater Corporation of America. The Junior League is sponsoring this and three other plays to which students of the Woman's college were able to buy season tickets at reduced prices.

Bernice Claire, singing star of the Australian hit, "I Married an Angel," will take the part of Lorna Moon, the girl whom Joe Bonaparte loves, and Robert Leonard will portray Joe's father, an Italian fruit peddler, who is disillusioned because his son has given up a career as a concert violinist to climb to fame in the prize ring. Jay Adler is cast in the role of Eddie Fuselli, prize ring character.

Eric Linden Is Popular Screen Star

Mr. Linden, who has played in 30 screen productions, including "Ab, Wilderness" and "A Family Affair," has a featured role in "Gone With the Wind," forthcoming M-G-M picture. He was selected by the Group Theater to play the title role in the London production, which ran more than a year in England and which was one of last season's stage hits. He was born in New York, attended public schools.

Handsome Lew Christensen Talks Ballet With Reporter

Master of Troupe Enters Profession at Early Age of 17

By PEGGY DEAN

"Hello," said tall, blond, handsome Lew Christensen, balletmaster of the American Ballet caravan, and your reporter forthwith swallowed her tongue. "Mind if I limber up while I'm talking to you?" he asked (it was ten minutes of eight on Wednesday night backstage in Aycock).

"N-n-no," stammered your reporter wondering if Mr. Christensen was a flesh-and-blood American or actually a Greek god masquerading. He flexed long, muscled legs; pirouetted on tall tip-toe; kicked high and wide in the immediate vicinity of your reporter's nose. Then, as he scraped his feet in a little patch of resin, said tongue-swallower asked: "How did you happen to get in ballet?"

"Family—uh (kick)—my family never danced—puff (kick)—they always taught—(twirl)."

"How old were you when you first started dancing?"

"Bout 12 years old—uh (bend, bend, kick)—whoosh."

"How old when you gave your first public performance?"

"I was 17 my first performance."

"Where are you from, Mr. Christensen? And your name—it sounds Swedish."

"No, my name's Danish—third generation in this country. I'm originally from Utah, but I live in New York now—(kick, kick, twirl, point-toe)."

"Is there ever an off-season in ballet?"

"Usu(kick)ally for us there's not an off-season. We're on the road 'til Christmas; then we stop for a few weeks. We also stop during Holy week."

"Well, this may seem a bit personal, but how old are you, and are you married?"

"I'm close to 28, and I'm not—(kick, kick)—married!"

"Ah," said your reporter, and queried some more, but not on personal matters. She found out that men in ballet "never go up on their toes," for

University Sermon Initiates Six-Day Campus Program

Program Includes Radio Broadcasts, Seminars, Conferences, and Teas

Religious Emphasis week on Woman's college campus opens officially Sunday evening at 8 p. m. with the University sermon by Dr. Roswell Barnes, associate secretary of the Federal Council of Churches on the Department of International Justice and Goodwill. Dr. Barnes will preach on "Beyond Disillusionment."

Although the week officially opens Sunday evening, a number of events have been arranged to take place previous to the University sermon. Saturday afternoon the Committee of One Hundred and the visiting leaders will have a retreat at the city recreation park. Sunday morning, pupils in six Greensboro churches and one at Guilford will be filled by visiting speakers here for the week. At 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Jackson will have an informal reception at their home for the faculty honoring the guest leaders. After the sermon Sunday evening, there will be open house in Alumnae house.

WBIG Will Give Program

Each morning at 7, Monday through Thursday, the Committee of One Hundred and guest leaders will have breakfast together in the small dining room under the new dining hall. At 8:45 each morning, one of the visiting speakers will give a 15-minute talk over radio station WBIG. The morning hours will be devoted to personal conferences and classroom discussions. Each day, Monday through Friday, except Tuesday, at 1 p. m., there will be seminars on men's and women's relations, led by Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, outstanding author and lecturer on the family and problems of youth. The afternoon program will include classroom discussions; Skeptics' Questions.

Town Students Honor Freshmen Tuesday

Doris Shaffer Directs Social Committee; College Heads Are Guests on Program

Dr. Walter C. Jackson, dean of administration, and Miss Harriet Elliott, dean of women, were guest speakers at the Town Students' dinner given in honor of the freshmen Tuesday evening, October 17, in the new small dining room.

Doris Shaffer, social chairman, was in charge of the arrangements; Marty Cockfield and Christine Allen, invitations; and Virginia Vache, decorations. Other guests present were Miss Viva Playfoot and Miss Elizabeth Yates, town student adviser.

Carolinian Dresses Up For New Season

The CAROLINIAN has had its face lifted. Its new type is called Erbar Bold Condensed. It offers compactness, excellent letter count, legibility, and is designed to simplify headline-writing and to increase readability.

When the CAROLINIAN entered a competition sponsored by the Associated Collegiate press last spring it was recommended that the paper adopt lower and upper case letters in heads. The new type is the new sans-serif type face which is used extensively by many progressive papers.

The CAROLINIAN has purchased a supply of 24 point and 18 point for its new type face.

Eunice King Will Head Intercollegiate Club

Eunice King was elected president of the Greensboro Intercollegiate Commission on Race Relations at the first meeting of the commission which was held at the home of Dr. A. D. Beittel, Guilford college, on October 5.

Nancy Ferguson, a member of the local "Y" cabinet, has been appointed representative from Woman's college on the commission.

Bull Session But a Difference!

Religious Emphasis Week

... begins on the campus officially with the University sermon Sunday afternoon. It is the first Religious Emphasis week that this student generation has known. It is the first week-long hey-day for our frequently mentioned, but also frequently disregarded "long, long thoughts." Someone has begun to work on the assumption that college students are more than creatures distinguished principally (as they have been portrayed in magazines and movies) for their concern over whether or not to push up the sleeves of a cardigan. Someone, apparently, has realized that every girl occasionally wonders why and whither. Someone has begun to answer with a nation-wide plan the question raised by many intelligent students who feel as they advance that they cannot reconcile their old convictions with their new knowledge. (Go on.)

We Are One of Three

... Southern colleges selected by the University Christian mission to receive the benefit of its distinguished guidance. We are, indeed, the only Southern woman's college selected, the other two institutions, University of Florida and University of South Carolina, being co-educational.

Representative students, faculty and townspeople have served on the committee of 100 to work out plans for the week. Religious organizations on the campus are official sponsors for the program which will make possible talks, seminars, discussion groups and directed gab-fests. If you think you're not the type, stop and reconsider! (There's still more.)

Head and Shoulders Above

... others of their group, the leaders who will visit our campus are stand-outs in various fields—economics, theology, philosophy, vocational guidance, men-women relations, personal problems, education and social action. Such names as Rabbi Israel, Dr. Roswell Barnes, President Frank Graham, Dr. Hornell Hart, and Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton have been drawing cards in bringing our delegates to conferences near by and at a distance. And now at Woman's college, we have an unlimited opportunity to untie knots and unlock closed doors. We have a chance to evaluate our own aforementioned "long, long thoughts" in the light of the best thought on the subject by men and women who know. You are cordially invited to a house-party at your own house. And your guests—who may be rooming just down the hall from you—will be, undoubtedly, the life of the party! It's a party you can't afford to miss. See you there!

Grass Grows Slow

Numerous and daily growing campus paths offer eloquent testimony of the short memories of students here.

Have you forgotten the anti-campus-cutting campaign of last year? Have you forgotten our worthy antecedent, Maxine Garner, and her "I'm looking at you" talk at mass meeting? Have you forgotten that 2,216 pairs of feet in the wrong places are rapidly making of our campus a crazy quilt of unsightly paths? Have you forgotten that we have boasted of the beauty of the Woman's college campus?

And when you've done it—what do you have to show for that split second you save by going on the wrong side of the trash can by the old bell? Or that instant you may gain by walking across the grass at the side of McIver? Or the half minute that you saved altogether in one day by cutting campus seven times?

If necessary, start for classes that half of one minute early—but spare the grass!

"Ancient and honored is the tradition among textbook writers that a book must have weight to have value. Therefore, those fat volumes you see under the arms of students aren't encyclopedias or congressional records. Rather they are four or five pounds of assorted literature, history, philosophy and what-have-you."

The Carolinian staff wishes to express sympathy for Dr. Malcolm C. Hooke in the recent death of his brother.

Have You Read...?

By MARGARET COIT

The Troubles with Tigers, by William Saroyan.

Those readers, unaccustomed to the mysteries of William Saroyan's writing, will upon reading this book be likely to ask, "What is the trouble with Saroyan?" The volume is composed of a number of sketches called short stories, but as in most cases they have no plots, descriptions, punctuation or characters. It is obvious that they are a unique form of literature. Their peculiar eccentricity has forced many critics against their will to acclaim Mr. Saroyan as a genius. His recent prize-winning play, My Heart's in the Highlands, confirmed his right to serious consideration.

Prose Is Lyrical

The stories in this book are comparable to emotional outbursts of Thomas Wolfe written in the clipped style of Ernest Hemingway. They have little construction or form, and are often merely lyrical outbursts of the search for beauty, love, fame, or the fight against starvation of a young author, William Saroyan.

The dialogue is tense, jerky, profane, often accompanied with columns of he saids, I saids, and she saids. The sentences are short. Yet there is a more relaxed atmosphere in this book than in Saroyan's earlier works. His former bitterness and intensely radical style is now suffused with mellow humor.

Writer Resembles Paul Green

Saroyan is thirty-one years old. He is California's other great contribution to modern literature. Unlike John Steinbeck, he has not shown that he has the perseverance to write a novel. His talents are developing however, for he has now turned to play writing. Although of Armenian parentage, some of his photographs show an amazing resemblance to another famous playwright, Paul Green.

The feeling that Saroyan has inspired among readers and critics of contemporary literature is well expressed by the following quotation: "The world can never be entirely desolate so long as Bill Saroyan is pounding out his boyish, excited, lovely thoughts and dreams."

CALLING LONG DISTANCE

By JEAN COONEY

It is beginning to look as if the British are meeting just a little greater competition than they bargained for. The success of the Allied campaigns against Germany depends to a great extent on the efficiency of the British blockade of the North Sea. The recent loss of the battleship "Royal Oak" has been the greatest blow so far to the English pride in their navy.

On the other hand, this event is a source of great delight to the Germans. In the last war, their submarines were not at all successful against anything except old battleships, but the "Royal Oak" had just been reconducted.

Speaking of ships, it is interesting to note that the British merchant marine is said to be twenty per cent smaller (in tonnage) than in 1914. All of which tends to make the Embargo repeal of doubtful benefit to Great Britain. Let's also notice here, a statement made by William Rhodes Davis, "middleman" for the expropriated American and British oil interests in Mexico. He claims that three ships with oil consigned by his firm for Norway had been captured and held on the suspicion that Germany was the ultimate destination. Is the doctrine of "continuous voyage" legal or not? I guess one might as well ask, "Does international law exist today or not?"

But the crowning blow of the week came in the announcement of the Anglo-Russian treaty. Under its terms, England is to receive lumber in return for rubber and tin. Is Britain fighting a war against aggression, or is she trying to protect her own supremacy in Europe (gained by many aggressive deeds on her own part) and willing to go to any end to do it? Russia is not democratic, and certainly does not support the anti-aggression policy of the Allies. But Britain is at war, and is not at all particular where she gets the assistance to carry on the war. By way of partial explanation, however, don't we all forget our primary principles and resort to free-for-all methods when a good fight starts? Why, you can't even keep fouls out of the prize ring, when there are a few paltry thousands at stake.

Colonel Lindbergh really got himself slapped down politely but properly last week. With criticism coming from all directions, the most outstanding comes from Senator Pittman. He thanked the Colonel very nicely for the glory he brought to the United States by his many achievements, but told him to keep his nose out of affairs beyond his comprehension. Few of us approve the aviator's policy of running from one country to the other trading information he has gathered for an old piece of iron, but judge the truth of his question, "If we repeal the arms embargo with the idea of assisting one of the warring sides to overcome the other, then why mislead ourselves by talk of neutrality?"

What Russia's position is at present, nobody knows—but I'm willing to bet that one mustached gentleman would give his eye-teeth to find out—and his name isn't Chamberlain, either. Germans living in the Russian-protected Baltic states are running home to Germany, which looks as if they don't

FACTS and FIGURES

By MAUDE STATON

Facts:

In case your attention hasn't been called to the fact, it's winter again. Last Sunday was a shiverer all right.

Drag out the red flannels, gals, and let's keep warm. I think that would be a swell style for us to resurrect for ourselves—even if a bit undercover.

I'm glad I got in a walk out as far as the Roar and Castle and back on what appears to have been the last real day of fall. You know when you only chase back and forth to your room, to classes, and to the dining rooms about six times a day, it's nice to get in a little exercise. Maybe I'm wrong, but I seriously think that I'm getting muscle bound. I daydream now of the days when W. C. has more dormitories down in the park and the cars on the miniature railways run to McIver and Curry every fifteen minutes. Well, all right! but if it keeps on somebody will at least have to supply skates.

Extra! Only forty-five more shopping-days until Christmas! and maybe two Thanksgivings to celebrate! Dollar marks take on added importance. I've been trying to think up some money making schemes. I'm seriously considering bringing out a condensed version of "Readers Digest" each month for those souls who are really in a BIG rush.

On the other hand, I am also working on a budget which breaks in and snuffs up new saddle shoes to get them over that trying "new" period that they all go through. Best results seem to be coming from my exterminator compound which only works on early morning "comic" radio announcers. Orders for the latter are coming in at surprising speed, especially from Greensboro and vicinity. I'd be very interested to hear about any of your own enrichment schemes. No manuscripts will be returned, however.

I am doing a Winchell job this week and bringing you the lowdown. Of course it may be merely advertising propaganda, but, listen, you practice teachers, several High Pointers have informed me confidentially that they marry off their teachers over at the Point at top speed. A new record each year! It may only be a rumor so don't all of you go stampeding the superintendents' offices. I am merely making a suggestion, mind you,—guaranteeing nothing.

Figures:

I can't resist what a young visitor to Hilda Brady said after looking over the campus. Quote: "I can't wait to get home and buy me one of those long, sloppy sweaters and button it up half way, and get some flat heeled shoes, and one of those pork pie hats and lots of ten cent store jewelry." Unquote! I guess that is a pretty good picture of us, whether we like it or not.

The prize for losing things goes to Sue Sweeney this week (and every other). I even find her unopened mail strewn around the campus. Fancy getting enough mail to be able to lose some and not realize it.

Helen Gray Whitley has the most fascinating necklace made of snake vertebrae. She made it herself, too. I'm afraid snake dissecting won't become very popular around here even for art and beauty's sake, tho'.

Event of the Century! Save up your pennies, gals, in anticipation of Mr. A. C. Hall's book of epitaphs. At last the contents of that famous little notebook of his are to be divulged to a reading public, and there are sure to be some "rare ones" in the midst. His students have had samples of his unlimited store, and all will be eagerly awaiting the published book. Hope you won't keep us waiting long, Mr. Hall.

Journally Speaking

By EDITHA MORRIS

Though the campus taste usually runs to Vogue, Harper's Magazine, and Life, there are at least a hundred other magazines available to the students, to be found in the periodical room of the library. Especially at this time, there can be found articles of widespread importance and far-reaching vision in numberless other magazines.

There Is Talk of 1940

Though the war news has overshadowed all other news in the past few weeks, there is still some talk of the coming presidential nominations, and Elmer Davis, who has been analyzing world news nightly for radio listeners, has written an article in the October Harper's, entitled "Roosevelt, the Rich Man's Alibi," in which he argues the question of a third term for the President. He is of the opinion that even though Big Business is his chief opponent, it should be his best friend, for he has put the business world on its feet, after several lean years. He has shouldered their burdens and taken blame for all their shortcomings. A conservative administration could not cope with the problems that are now taken in stride. With an administration of this kind, the wage-hour law would be repealed, and the Labor Relations Act would be made unworkable. Poor men also have the vote, and would never vote for a ticket of this kind. Although Mr. Davis does not approve of the third term idea, he comes to the conclusion that there are worse things, and at this time there seems to be no man to take over where Mr. Roosevelt would leave off.

Celia Durham is really doing this marriage thing right. Now she comes out with the startling fact that calcium is the third greatest cause of divorce. So we're drinking two bottles of milk instead of one now—just in case we should get married.

And it certainly looks as if half the campus—well, almost half of it—is doing just that this past week. First Ebbie Hackney decides that she will extend a regular plain old Saturday night date into a matrimonial experience and returns to the alma mater as Mrs. So and So. They had been planning it for some time.

Just to avoid changing the subject, did you know that Norma Chatham, '38, married her Freddie last Friday night in South Carolina? Ah, me!—"always a bridesmaid, but never a bride!"

Today they rush up to us with "Did you know Pam was married?" and we've finally had them quiet long enough to find out that Pam Karlin is now Mrs. Leon R. de Wick of Long Island, New York, no less.

The blue book test answers seemed funnier this year than all the years before. The freshman who said that campus strolling was restricted to dark alleys has the right idea. Also the one who said that the only person who could unlock the doors after the house president had locked them was Miss Elliott.

The annual picture oh's and ah's and groans and moans is on with return of the first proofs. Won't all these little funny dodads of hair look hilarious in a few years when we look through our yearbooks?

Faison really takes the cake for absent-mindedness. She has been planning for months to go to Columbia for the week-end for a game on the 28th and for a couple of days before and after too. Well, Wednesday she just by chance happened to be looking at a game schedule and with horrified eyes saw that the week-end she was supposed to go was this one. With a great deal of wiring and telephoning she fixed it up with the "escort" and is down there now by the hand of fate.

It looked so perfectly natural to see Mike Gault on campus that it was five minutes after we saw her that we remembered that we should do more than just speak to her. That Chatham Hall job of hers is really a slave-driving one—no morning classes to teach, no Monday classes, and only four afternoon classes a week. Let's all be Phys. Ed's. Soft stuff!

We wonder why they call Billie Tillinghast "CL"? (!!!)

Future Carolina student takes afternoon nap in the Beehive! Although he refused to give autographs, the seven-weeks-old heart-throb of the campus condescended to smile on a few lucky admirers.

Then there is the sad story about what Betsy Trotter said when Miss Taylor asked her why she couldn't go to French class, but maybe you'd better ask Betsy. We're bashful.

SOS to all brothers! Wanted: date for approximately six members of the Dikane dance figure tomorrow night. As the paper goes to press, these unfortunate are still dateless. If you see this before Saturday night, come a-running.

Woman's College Participates In Cultural Study

Juniors from Five State Colleges Take Tests to Aid Research Workers

Woman's college has been selected by the North Carolina College conference as one of five schools to participate in a comparative study of cultural backgrounds to be made of junior transfers and non-transfers. Miss Mary Taylor Moore, registrar, stated Tuesday, October 10, Wednesday afternoon Dr. J. A. Highsmith, head of the psychology department, gave the tests to transfers and an equal group of juniors chosen at random.

Miss Moore is Woman's college's representative on the committee on cooperative research appointed to find the differences in preparation of students from junior and four-year colleges. Carolina, State, Meredith, and Wake Forest, as well as Woman's college students took the tests on social studies, literature, fine arts, science, and mathematics.

The report of the committee is to be read at an open meeting of the conference which will be held October 24 and 25 at the O. Henry hotel. The general theme of the meeting will concern the education that students are now receiving in schools throughout the state.

Recordak Projector Is New Library Feature

Students May Read Old Copies Of Favorite Newspapers With New Film Projector

Students wishing to read old copies of the New York Times or the New York Herald Tribune may do so now without turning through numerous pages of a bound volume. The library has a Recordak library projector, and films of the newspapers mentioned above. The films are obtained from research libraries, and are much less cumbersome than the huge bound volumes of the same newspapers. Films of manuscripts and other reading material out of print can be secured at a small price more than the postage for mailing a copy would be.

The projector is easily manipulated, and the length-wise view is much better than the horizontal view of the old-type recordak which is used for reading magazines and parts of books. The latter one is in the periodical room, downstairs, and the newer one is used in the stacks. The films are on rolls enclosed in small boxes, and each roll is numbered as it comes in. The rolls are catalogued just as the library books. The use of the recordak is a valuable addition to the library.

Lost Articles Find Way To Haven On Campus

"Glasses are never called for," said Miss Mae Lattimore, Dean Harriet Elliott's woman Friday, in speaking of the college lost and found which she maintains in the office of the Dean of Women, Administration building. "That's what worries me. Now the good fountain pens and the money always find the right home. But the glasses—"

Miss Lattimore urges all students to call for lost books, pens, wearing apparel, keys, whatnot, and particularly glasses, for there's a good chance of finding them in the lost and found department. She also urges all finders to turn over found articles to her.

New Traffic Rules Aid Post Office Fans

The new traffic regulations at the post office have their virtues as well as their shortcomings. The virtue angle will probably be disputed by Alice Arey, Charlotte Moseley or Frances Whalin, who are among those on the new police force. They undoubtedly feel as if they are taking honey away from a bear. But in reality they have the bear's best interest at heart. By the "in one door and out the other" method these girls are putting an end to the former practice of going in like a lion and coming out like a lamb. It is hoped that the lamb status will prevail from now on.

In view of these facts the Animal Kingdom of Woman's college should accept the old Chinese adage, "It is better to receive your mail standing up than to take defeat in de face."

Journally Speaking

zines on campus and there is one article in the October issue that is worthy of mention. It reveals the stories of the women behind the thrones, so to speak, in the troubled Europe of today, and is Jerry Allen's "Directors of Destiny." The names of the men who rule the Continent are known, but what about the women who control them? Hitler's mother, Mrs. Neville Chamberlain, Edda Mussolini Clano, and the others have all had their influence and are still the guiding lights in this world of tumult.

Fortune is beginning a series of articles on Germany to give the background for the present conflict. The economic structure of the country is contemplated in this month's issue, and in coming months they will study what lies behind the Hitler machine, and what makes it go. How Dr. Fuhrer has made the best of the country's resources, with pictures and maps to illustrate, is the first topic to be taken up. Also there is a recent map of Europe before the partition of Poland. Watch for others to come.

Football Takes Limelight

Appropriate to campus life at this season of the year is football, but that also has its seamy side, as will be found in the October issue of the American Mercury, in an article called "What Price College Football?" by John R. Tunis. This is an expose of professionalism in our favorite sport, and even says some things not very complimentary about our favorite teams. Articles such as this have been appearing for several years, but little has been done to remedy existing conditions, to make college football an amateur sport.

Education Faces Challenge

Attention, all you prospective teachers! Survey Graphic has devoted the entire October issue to the challenge of democracy to education. All phases of the educational process, from kindergarten to adult education, are included, and special attention is paid to Negro schooling and occupations for the unemployed youth of today. Always the democratic aspect is stressed, and the chance offered to all people in America for their betterment.

All of education does not come from books, and a great deal may be gleaned from periodicals, so browse around in them occasionally to help formulate your own personal opinion on the world in general. A well informed citizenry will make this country a much better place in which to live! (with respects to Walter Winchell).

W. C. Students Get War News Direct from Europe

Louise Meroney and Johanna Boet Hear From Foreign Girls

At least two girls at W. C. know how far-spread the influence of the war can be, having learned it through foreign correspondents. They are Louise Meroney and Johanna Boet.

Louise writes to Marguerita Cas-saba, a French girl in Algiers, Algeria. A friend gave Louise the name of another girl in Algiers but the letters returned to America unanswered. Marguerita wrote and explained to Louise that the girl had disappeared. And so their correspondence began.

Marguerita is 18, dark, and small. She was born in Algiers, where her father is a French army officer. She has two brothers fighting now in the French army. Marguerita attends a girl's preparatory school, called Providence school, in Algiers.

She belongs to the very small circle of French society. She has as many privileges and is as free as American girls.

Louise says she hasn't heard from Marguerita since the war began. Her last letters, in which Marguerita told her that she would not be able to get letters through when war came, were censored with heavy black ink.

Jo Boet Writes to Cousin

Jo Boet writes to her cousin in Alkmaar, Holland. Jo explains that her parents are from Holland and that she herself has visited there twice. Her cousin writes about her life and her school. Her freedom is limited and people are very strict on the young set in Holland.

In school she learned French, Spanish, German, and English, instead of one language, as we are accustomed to learning. Students study one course at a time, take an exam on that subject, and begin studying another. They have no outside activities during the school year and take everything much more seriously than do American young people.

Dr. B. B. Kendrick, Head of History Department, Speaks On "Consolation of History"

Dr. B. B. Kendrick, head of the history department, spoke to a meeting of the School Masters club at a dinner in the Home Economics cafeteria on Wednesday, October 18. The subject of his speech was "Consolation of History."

"At the present time, we are inclined to think that the world is in a very bad situation," Dr. Kendrick pointed out. He admitted that this was true, but went on to say that the world has always been in something of a crisis. He pointed out that, if one would read the magazines and newspapers in this country or in England dated October 18, 1839, he would find that the writers of that day seemed to be under as much stress and strain as writers of today.

"Not only has the world usually managed to survive almost every kind of catastrophe, but more often than not catastrophic events are followed by a new and higher level of human achievement," Dr. Kendrick explained.

MISS WILMINA ROWLAND Reviews BOOKS ON RELIGION

Selecting a one-foot shelf of religious books for students is a stiff assignment! A way of meeting the difficulty is to insist that one must be allowed to distinguish between beginners and more advanced readers. Thus, without being too obvious about it, one has two one-foot shelves of books. The first is captioned "A Freshman Bookshelf," the second "A Senior Bookshelf." Sophomores and juniors, curl up in a chair wherever you feel most comfortable!

A Freshman Bookshelf

In The Reason for Living, Robert R. Wicks, the Dean of the Chapel at Princeton, approaches some of the persistent questions of life which have been put to him by students. He "begins where you are," and you'll like him for that.

Walter Horton in his book God gives you a deepened understanding of the Christian idea of God and advances reasons for believing in this kind of God. His book is good for dissipating the "vague oblong blur" which describes the conception of God which most of us have when we are freshmen.

John Bennett's Christianity and Our World will stab you broad awake if you haven't realized that there is a connection between Christianity and the mad, sad world in which you're living. It's a brief orientation course in being a responsible adult.

Horton's and Bennett's books are in the Hazen series on Religion (only 62 pages—only 50¢!), as is Robert L. Calhoun's profound little volume What Is Man? This book makes good parallel reading for anybody who wants to understand sociology, psychology, theology and any number of other -ologies which have to do with that strange species Homo sapiens.

An admirable book is Elliott and Bone's The Sex Life of Youth. Though brief, it gives help at an amazing number of points. The final chapter on "Religion and Sex" is one which is not often included in books on the subject of men's and women's relations.

Georgia Harkness' book Religious Living will give you real insight into what is involved in a way of life that is significant. It is simple—almost too simple, you think, until you begin to try to do some of the things she talks about.

Probably every freshman owns a Bible when she comes to college. Whether she reads it is a moot question. She might find it refreshingly different to read the Bible in a new translation such as Moffatt's, which comes closer to our modern speech than does the King James version. Old words and expressions come alive in the most amazing way.

An imaginary supplement to the story of the four gospels is the little book By An Unknown Disciple. Here a present-day writer gives us a beautiful and appealing "fifth gospel" which contains many profound insights about Jesus.

A book of Prayers for Students is of value whether or not you have ever before used other people's prayers to help you with your own. This is a British Student Christian movement product which has run into many editions.

A Senior Bookshelf

(Warning: Most of this is heavy stuff!)

You will find that Problems in Personal Religious Living, by H. M. Wieman, meets much student thought where it now stands. Dr. Wieman discusses concrete religious problems from a very original angle.

If you want to hear down on some problems of religious philosophy, try E. W. Lyman's The Meaning and Truth of Religion. He talks about the meaning of Christian theism in its relation to other ideas of God, and the argument for its truth.

Part of the religious illiteracy which characterizes the average college campus is due to a woeful lack of knowledge of that best-seller, the Bible. If you need help in discovering it, try Harry Emerson Fosdick's A Guide to Understanding the Bible. This is one of the great religious books of the decade from the standpoint of both scholarship and literary expression.

Some of the rest of our religious illiteracy is due to a lack of understanding of historical Christianity. In Edwyn Bevan's classic Christianity, we get an interpretation of the organic growth of Christianity from its origins to the present day.

Weatherhead and Graves gives us a volume entitled The Mastery of Sex Through Psychology and Religion. The Eric Linden, popular juvenile leading man of the movies and stage, who will be seen here in the leading role of the stage production of Clifford Odets "Golden Boy" which will be presented tonight at 8:30 in Aycock auditorium under the auspices of the Greensboro Theatre guild.

Last Call for Annual Pictures

Your last chance to have your annual picture taken or retaken will be next week, Lois Guyer, "Pine Needles" editor, has announced. Notices will be posted in the post office about the days that pictures will be taken.

Hinshaw Entertains Cotten With Informal Dance

The girls of Hinshaw hall are entertaining the girls of Cotten hall at an informal dance Saturday night, October 21, from 8:30 p. m. until 11 p. m. in Spencer game room.

Harriet Jones, social chairman of Hinshaw hall, has appointed the following chairmen: Reception, Anne Boyette; floor, Jane Rush; refreshment, Edith Rutherford; decoration, Zada Nicholson; and wraps, Emily Gravely.

The receiving line will be composed of the following: Mrs. Anne Fulton Carter, counselor in Cotten hall; Miss Elizabeth Hathaway, counselor in Hinshaw hall; Anne Boyette, Annie Braswell, Harriet Jones and Vesta Slaughter.

approach is unusual. You will find it an illuminating and helpful book.

V. E. Demand's God, Man and Society is an introduction to Christian sociology. Demand is British; read Halford Luccock's Christian Faith and Economic Change for an American approach to social problems in the name of Christianity. And read anything Luccock writes for his delightful style!

No mature student of present-day Christianity can escape Reinhold Niebuhr, the first American to deliver the famous Gifford lectures since William James. Try your wings on his An Interpretation of Christian Ethics. It is a good example of the Niebuhrian point of view from which both orthodoxy and liberalism are criticized.

You will want to read something of John Macmurray, too, to be au courant with present-day religious thought. Creative Society is a study of the relation of Christianity to Communism which will make you sit up and take notice.

Douglas Steere has written a slender volume called Prayer and Worship which is a simple yet profound consideration of a subject that has stirred the hearts of men since the dawn of religion. If his sixty-eight pages are not enough there is an admirable bibliography at the end of the book.

Calling Long Distance

trust Stalin too much. Perhaps that old saying would apply here, "My enemies I know; but God protect me from my friends."

Little Finland is standing up staunchly against her huge neighbor, but she will, no doubt, succumb in the end. Russia may tread easily here, as she has provoked a good deal of criticism already. Nobody seemed to mind what happened to Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania, but Finland is another matter. If there be such a thing, Finland is probably the most honest nation today, and deserves all the protection and support she can get. As you see, those war debts are a thorn in my side and may scratch many times in the future.

To present an optimistic side, some Frenchmen of the usual unknown but competent sources listed a few reasons why they feel Germany will not succeed in a general battle.

1. Strategic—Germany made a grave error in attacking Poland first and giving Britain and France a chance to mobilize.

2. Man-Power—German strength is about one-half that of Kaiser Wilhelm in 1914 (excluding armored units) and some of these will have to be detailed to keep order in Poland and Czechoslovakia.

3. Possible Zones of Action—It would be disastrous to attack the Maginot line, and again, the Polish campaign allowed time for mobilization of such neutrals as might be invaded.

4. Material—The Allies have not been idle in the six weeks it took to subdue Poland, and it will take at least twelve months before the Russians can lend assistance, be they still of that frame of mind.

5. Aviation—All that seems to be in the Allies' favor is the courage and general excellence of their fliers.

There are still many questions to be answered: has the Russo-German alliance broken up the Anti-Comintern pact? Will Italy remain neutral? Who will dominate the Balkans? What is Germany waiting for, when it seems evident that the Allies will not take the offensive? And on and on. I cannot answer them and there are very few who can. Rigid censorship is keeping us in the dark.

Religious Emphasis Week Will Feature Skeptic's Questions

Mr. Robert Giffen Will Lead Discussion Daily In Town Students' Room

Skeptic's question box is a feature of Religious Emphasis week which will be of much interest to a number of students. It will be conducted by Mr. Robert Giffen, campus secretary of the University Christian mission. Mr. Giffen was formerly assistant to the Dean of the Chapel at the University of Chicago, and he will soon take up his duties as Presbyterian student pastor at Princeton university.

The Skeptic's hour will be held from 4 to 5 p. m. in the Town Students' room, beginning Monday, and will continue at the same hour daily if there is sufficient demand. The poll conducted by the seminars committee earlier this fall proved that there are a number of questions in which students are interested, and it is expected that the Skeptic's question box will help clear up some of the doubts and uncertainties in students' minds.

Students and faculty are invited to visit the Town Students' room during the hour to listen to the discussion and to participate in it.
