Greek, Egyptian Art Is on Exhibit in Gallery

The latest exhibit in the College Art gallery in Melver building is one of Greek and Egyptian art. Foremost in the collection are 75 unusual photographs made by Professor Hamann of Marburg university. These pictures present the idea of country and early art in Egypt.

They were lent to Woman's college by the American Federation of Art, Washington, D. C., and are especially recommended by the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Also included in the exhibit are some Greek vases which were lent by the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York city. In addition are two originals, one red-figured Athenian amphora, and one red-figured Athenian lekythos. There is also a plaster cast portrait of Augustus.

Masqueraders Group Sponsors Reading Of Great Plays

Mrs. Marion Fitz-Simons Gives 'Medea' in First Of Dramatic Series

Masqueraders, under the direction of Mrs. Marion Fitz-Simons, presented a reading of Euripides' "Medea" in the Alumnae house at 4:30 p.m., Sunday, March 9. Readings of great plays which appeal to a limited audience are being sponsored by Masqueraders each month. Mr. W. R. Taylor, director of Playmakers, will be in charge of the next reading.

Mrs. Fitz-Simons read the role of Medea; Dr. Charlton C. Jernigan, Jason; Mr. Taylor, Creon and Aegeus; Jean MacDonald, Catherine Hilderman, Mary Frances Cox, and Mary Elizabeth Childs read the minor roles and the choruses. Edith Goodman provided music at the piano.

Readings are presented in the form of radio productions. As many voices as there are people on the stage at a given time are used. Other techniques of radio, such as bridging the gaps of time or scene shifts with music and narrators, are also used. There is no definite schedule for future readings. Attendance at the readings is by invitation, which will be extended to groups to whom the plays may be of special interest. Since "Medea" is a Greek play, all Greek classes were invited to hear the reading.

Committee Meets

Dr. B. B. Kendrick, head of the Woman's college History department, will attend a meeting of the executive committee of the American History association in New York city on Saturday, March 15. Dr. Kendrick was appointed to the committee at the annual meeting of the association last December.

Alumnae House Is Center For Social Gatherings

One of the most beautiful buildings on the campus of Woman's college, the Alumnae house, belongs to students who already have graduated; but undergraduate students, too, visit its spick-and-span well-furnished rooms and carry on activities in its offices.

The Alumnae house was designed by Penrose V. Stout according to the plan of Homewood, the mansion of John Carroll, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The largest and perhaps the most beautiful room is the reception hall, or as it is generally known, the Virginia Dare room.

Two Murals

Two murals, one depicting the baptism of Virginia Dare and the other the finding of the Croatan tree, both of which were painted by Sidney Newbold and which hang at opposite ends of the Virginia Dare room, gave the room its name. The first girl to be born in North Carolina is now honored by the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina.

In the Virginia Dare room are held teas, informal lectures, and various other social gatherings of the students, faculty and alumnae of Woman's college. The International Relations club tea, for the campus refugee students

Fellowship Drive For Foreign Students Reaches Conclusion

Six Halls Collect Allotted Quotas; Faculty Division Surpasses Goal

With $440.95 in cash and $46 in pledges, the student drive for the Fellowship Fund for Foreign Students has nearly ended. Gray, Cotten, Colt, Kirkland, New Guilford, and South Spencer halls reached their allotted quotas. Mary Foust, "B," and North Spencer halls and the Town Students' association will continue their drives for a few more days in the hope of reaching their goals. The Presbyterian Fellowship group, a local young people's organization, and the Presbyterian council made a combined gift of $19.26. The goal for the student division of the drive was set at $550, and additional gifts will still be welcomed, announces Miss Evelyn Martin, counselor in New Guilford hall and treasurer for the drive.

Faculty Division

The faculty division of the drive had already contributed around $400, surpassing their goal of $350, in their drive held previous to that of the students. The town division has collected about $152.50 and contributions are still coming in. The alumnae division has not yet reported its collection.

The purpose of the drive was to raise money to provide scholarships for Woman's college's two refugee students, and to contribute to the World Student Service fund, an organization which is raising $100,000 net for students in China and in Europe who are attempting to continue their education during the war. In 1940 Woman's college joined a national effort to provide an education for refugee students for the duration of the war. This year the drive was supported by the college as a whole, with Dean W. C. Jackson as honorary chairman, in the hope of raising $1700 for this purpose.

Chairmen for Drive

Miss Helen Boyd, director of religious activities, has served as faculty chairman, and Mae Duckworth as student chairman.

Week's Tide

By CAROL PHILLIPS

Isolation of purposes is as impossible for the United States as isolation of attitude and policy. The stone of "morally obligatory aid" has been cast upon the waters and has produced an ever-widening wake of compulsion.

background and justification of the bill in a fire-side chat. Appropriations for Britain have started.

Meanwhile, Marshal Petain has asked the United States for over 550,000 tons of wheat to curtail, if not curtail, the terrible bread famine in France. At a press conference, Petain's Vice-Premier Jean Dorian verbally blasted the British blockade. He implied that if "their idiotic blockade" continued, France would be starved into conflict with her former ally. He accused the British of being less humane than the Germans, whose war atrocities have been publicized as surpassing the intentions of medieval torture chambers. Dorian said that the food blockade has not been effective as far as the Germans are concerned. Petain added that wheat would be used to feed 40,000,000 starving Frenchmen in unoccupied France and would be carried on French transport ships. If necessary, these transports would have battle escorts to break through the blockade.

The British reply that their problem envelops that of the French. Their concern is Europe, and they must act for the general benefit. The Axis problem is the world. United States aid to Britain may be repaid in revenge on the Pacific.

The Balkan area is being converted into a Nazi highway for a squeeze play upon the determined Greeks. In Belgrade, authoritative quarters said that Germany has told Yugoslavia that she must sign the Axis pact. Since this nation resisted the non-aggression decoy, it is being coerced into signing the more absolute pact. The negative tone of non-aggression is changed to positive submission. Yugoslavia will probably be occupied by Nazis in a Drang nach Suden within a week.

Turkey is less the enigma of former days. Threat upon the Dardanelles in the event of future German successes in the Balkans is inspiring action in Russia. Rumor has it that Stalin has told Turkey that she need fear no attack from Russia should the Turks go the way of the British.

Vichy has yielded French Indo-China to Thailand. The victory is a vicarious feather in the Japanese trophy room.

Spring is fulfilling its promise of bursting activity.

Musings on Music

By EDITH GOODMAN

This year students and townspeople have been privileged to hear concerts given by members of our music faculty. These concerts have been presented in honor of Dr. Wade R. Brown, former Dean of the School of Music. He is responsible for the many colored band uniforms you see running around on campus every spring. He did an excellent job of organizing the music of this campus and state. It is in recognition of these fine services that the present music faculty initiated Sunday afternoon recitals.

Sunday Concert

Miss Elizabeth Speits and Mr. Paul Onley, of our own music faculty, and Mr. Julian Gardner, formerly of the Royal Academy of London, now of Elton College, will present the last in this series, Sunday afternoon at 4:30 p. m. in Aycock auditorium. We are proud of our music faculty and commend them highly for making it possible for us to hear the best music of the masters and of today. The fact that these opportunities have been taken advantage of by more townspeople than students is indicative of the general attitude prevalent on this campus, especially toward our own talent. Appreciation, like charity, should begin at home.

Young Composers' Forum

The Young Composers' club is presenting its second open forum, Wednesday night, March 19, in the Music building. Watch the bulletin board for the definite time and place! Dr. Ruth Hannas will lead the discussion on "Contemporary Music." Here's a good chance for some of you who have been crooning, "We don't know what it's all about, but we want to," as an excuse for your ignorance, to learn.

John Kirkpatrick

It was interesting but sad to note how small a number of people were interested enough in American music to be present at John Kirkpatrick's excellent program of American music the other Sunday at Chapel Hill. Among the works presented was a "Sonata" by Roger Sessions, several MacDowell numbers, and Hunter Johnson's "Sonata for Piano." This Mr. Johnson, by the way, is a native of Benson, North Carolina, and writes for Martha Graham, one of the foremost exponents of the modern dance. Mr. Johnson has gone places.

Enterpe Club

The Enterpe club again deserves laurels for the musical program at Greensboro college, dedicated to the solidarity of North and South American music. Among the best numbers performed were movements from Norman Lockwood's "Quintet for Strings and Piano." This quintet is recognized by several well-informed faculty members as being one of the most outstanding contemporary compositions because of the composer's masterful combination of rhythms, dynamic shading, harmony, and structure. Also noteworthy was William Schuman's "Prelude for Women's Voices," the text taken from Thomas Wolfe's Look Homeward, Angel. Schuman has successfully interpreted Wolfe's words by his effective use of intervals and the whispered accompaniment to the solo part. "To a Lost Kitten," by Villa-Lobos was very well interpreted and sung by the Glee club. Mr. Onley did a beautiful job of "Iaria," also by Villa-Lobos.

Southern Meet for Music Educators

Reverberations from the Southern Conference for Music Educators in Charlotte, last weekend, which was attended by several of our students and faculty! The principal speaker was Dr. Howard Hanson, director of the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y. Quote Mr. Hanson: "Music is important because it is the greatest force in the world for sensitizing human emotions. In safeguarding our bodies in the struggle for physical existence, we must not lose our souls." In regard to the place of music in the United States, he said that "for the first time in the history of the nation, music has been democratized, with hundreds of thousands of American children performing for millions of Americans." "This," he said, "makes for a culture that is indigenous, that reaches down into the lives of the people and becomes a vitalizing spiritual faith. This kind of art is worth working and fighting for, and we shall probably have to fight for it!"

Dr. Hanson on Opera

Dr. Hanson referred to opera as "an art form grafted like a parasite upon the body cultural of America. It is sung in a language not our own, its music written by composers not our own and usually sung by people not our nationality." In contrast the speaker emphasized the progress made in symphonic orchestral and choral music in America recently.

New York Philharmonic

Sunday afternoon the New York Philharmonic presented Bernard Wagman's Third Symphony which was more comparable to impressionistic music than to modern music. Three pieces by Roy Harris were also presented, and as is to be expected by Mr. Harris, they were very nice. (Incidentally, there's a record of his Third Symphony in the Capehart room of the Music building). Mr. Baridrolli and the guest pianist certainly weren't very successful in their execution of the Schumann "Piano Concerto in A." The concerto is a beautiful one but was performed with lack of imagination and no feeling for the composition.

I could go on to mention the orchestra at the performances of the Ballet Russe and the Littlefield ballet, but perhaps they had better be left unmentioned.

A Phi Beta Kappa key lost several years ago by Harry M. Hubble, professor of Greek at Yale, was found the other day behind a book in the West Haven town clerk's office.

Congrats! And Some Poetry for Winning Candidates

When the College legislature ruled, in a speedy session last Monday night, that candidates running for office in the final elections should speak for themselves in the election mass meeting on Wednesday night, it was injecting invigorating juice into the campus political scene.

The editor was all set to launch a corker, she thought, of an editorial on "The Campus Political Scene." The editor intended to loquace on the election-by-merit system that has prevailed campus politics since the days of black stockings, middy blouses, and pampadours. She was all set to beat and beat on her typewriter and make it talk about a lot of important stuff. She was going to say that she thought the more politickin' that goes on around this college, the better for everybody concerned. She didn't know exactly why she was in favor of politickin', but she was going to figure that out after she started beating her typewriter . . . and the associate editors.

But the editor is tired of trying to figure things out; so if you don't mind, friends, the editor will just plug the holes in this column with some of her favorite poetry. Perhaps next week she will feel like the Goddess Hepburn in that story about Philadelphia and launch a corker, she will think, of an editorial on some big concept or other.

Before the editor launches into her favorite poetry she would like to congratulate each winning candidate in behalf of THE CAROLINIAN and say to each candidate this: "Listen, pal, you've got a big, important job to hold down next year. The student body trusted you enough to elect you. See that you do yourself and Woman's college up plenty dagdum proud."

The following lines are always sung by Ko-Ko in the Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "The Mikado." Sometimes they are sung by the editor in an off-key.

On a tree by a river a little tomtit
Sang "Willow, titwillow, titwillow!"

And I said to him, "Dicky-bird, why do you sit Singing 'Willow, titwillow, titwillow!'"

"Is it weakness of intellect, birdie?" I cried,
"Or a rather tough worm in your little inside?"

With a shake of his poor little head, he replied,

"Oh, willow, titwillow, titwillow!"

He slapped at his chest, as he sat on that bough
Singing "Willow, titwillow, titwillow!"

And a cold perspiration bespangled his brow,
"Oh, willow, titwillow, titwillow!"

He sobbed and he sighed, and a gurgle he gave,
Then he plunged himself into the billowy wave,

And an echo arose from the suicide's grave—
"Oh, willow, titwillow, titwillow!"

Now I feel just as sure as I'm sure that my name
Isn't Willow, titwillow, titwillow!

That 'twas blighted affection that made him exclaim,
"Oh, willow, titwillow, titwillow!"

And if you remain callous and obdurate, I
Shall perish as he did, and you will know why,

Though I probably shall not exclaim as I die,
"Oh, willow, titwillow, titwillow!"

And Nanki-Poo always sings the following lines in "The Mikado."

The flowers that bloom in the spring,
Tra la,

Breathe the promise of merry sunshine—
As we merrily dance and we sing

Tra la,
We welcome the hope that they bring,

Tra la,
Of a summer of roses and wine.

And that's what we mean when we say that a thing
Is welcome as flowers that bloom in the spring.

Tra la, la, la, la, la,
Tra la, la, la, la, la,

The flowers that bloom in the spring,
Tra la, la, la, la, la,

The finale to "The Mikado" is sung by all. And sometimes, by the editor, not at all.

For he's gone and married Yum-Yum—
Yum—Yum—Yum!

Your anger pray bury,
For all will be merry,
I think you had better succumb—
Cumb-cumb!

And join our expressions of glee!

Book Brief

By JEAN BERTRAM

Have you noticed? Book titles these days have an extraordinary perky way of introducing themselves. And when your columnist glimpsed Introducing Charles Dickens, she went right over and got acquainted. Introducing Charles Dickens is a brilliant and pep-appelling interpretation of "The Inimitable Boz," who even as a little boy impressed others with his power and vigor. Dashing down the street after a criminal, scribbling out his story just the minute before the paper hit the presses, arguing with his cartoonist, and penning two serials and several chapters of two different novels were only a few of the activities Charles Dickens crowded into his day.

Author of Book

As the author, May Lamberton Becker, put it: "(Dickens) ruthless genius used him, drove him, tore him, killed him, and left him." But a new interpretation is not the only delightful feature of Introducing Charles Dickens. Remembering that it is "the little things that count," Mrs. Becker and Dodd, Mead publishers have given the book a spicy make-up by the addition of quotations from Dickens' work to head each chapter and by the piquant illustrations drawn by Oscar Ogg.

Your columnist was quite intrigued with this biography that opens like a smooth novel:

"The boy paused at the top of the hill, pulled off his cap, and let the breeze blow back his thick brown hair. The climb had been long, more than two miles out from Rochester, uphill all the way, but there were flowers along the road on either side, and just as the slope grew sharp, the house had come in sight."

As the life of Dickens grows more hectic, the book sweeps forward with the reader aware not of the choice of words nor the style—which incidentally is very easy—but only of Dickens, the individual.

She Warns You

The publishers recommend the book "for everybody from fifteen up," well—I cannot resist flashing this caution light to those of you who might consider adding the book to your library corner: the author shows so freely how Dickens drew his characters from real-life acquaintances that the immature reader is likely to lose sight of Dickens' creative spirit and feel that he set down his characters exactly as he met them. Disregarding minor technicalities, however, you will enjoy a chuckly afternoon with Introducing Charles Dickens.

Welsh Rare-Bits

By BETTY WELSH

There's an oak tree outside my window. It stands as straight and unyielding as truth. Last autumn when winter was first announced with a flourish of determined blasts and icy sprays, its leaves were joyous. They made a glory of red and gold against the cheerless sky.

November

When November grew bitter instead of bracing, some of the more flamboyant leaves loosed their hold. They were not designed for endurance—but merely for gaiety.

December

November blended into December. The heavens lowered and rains spattered spitefully from them. The top branches of the tree were tousled ceaselessly by the giant hand of the wind. "Soon the tree will be bare," I thought. "Leaves are such fragile little things—they were meant for summer and sun and leisure."

Only a few scattered leaves clung to the frailer top branches then. Soon my oak would be vanquished. Then it would stand a stark grey outline traced along the horizon, giving no sign of life—a symbol of living death.

January

January came and the leaves that clasped the lower branches so tenaciously were like burnt toast. They rattled a sear chantey from morn till night. A chantey that rose and fell with the wind. Sometimes it was like a tidal wave, mounting and mounting to a triumphant crescendo. Again it was a dry whisper. But always they were there.

February

By now the oak tree was symbolic in my mind. It was planted firmly in the earth with strong roots that tapped unsuspected sources. It towered above the other trees, the house, and it pointed heavenward. It betrayed nothing of its inner pulsing. It design for spring. It only waited . . .

March

Now it is March, and the oak tree is a mottled pattern of brown and grey in the sunshine. The March winds rave and rave and the leaves flow tirelessly in the wind, but they are still there! I know now that they will stay there till reinforcements are sent. Soon new leaves, tiny and tender and incredibly green, will spread along the waiting branches.

Spring Song

Perhaps this sounds like an impossible flight of fancy, but all winter long I've watched that oak tree. It stands for so many things. I've drawn comfort from it and I've learned a lesson. I know now what the chantey is: "When winter comes, can spring be far behind?"

As sturdy as an oak.

'South of the Border' Is Theme Of Annual Town Student Dance

Kathryn Bain to Lead Figure at Formal

Kathryn Bain, dance chairman, and Doris Shaffer, president, will lead the figure at the town students' formal dance in Rosenthal gymnasium tomorrow night at 8:30 p.m. Shirley Smith and his 12-piece orchestra, "Sensations of the South," will provide music. Decorations will carry out the Latin-American theme of "South of the Border."

Latin-Americans

Fiesta lanterns, balcony windows, and gay colors will create the Latin-American atmosphere. The big gymnasium will be enclosed with an imitation wrought iron fence with gates at the entrance to the room and on both sides of the orchestra. ## Ten Rules Dean Harriet Elliott Writes Defense Article in March 'Good Housekeeping'

Dean Harriet Elliott of Woman's college, as Consumer commissioner of the National Defense Advisory commission has written a short article, "Ten Ways for You to Help National Defense," in the March issue of Good Housekeeping magazine.

"Women can do much in aiding national defense," said Miss Elliott. "Hunger, malnutrition, ignorance, misinformation, lack of adequate housing, clothing and warmth—these are the enemies within our gate, and here are ten things you can do to guard against them," the article continues.

"1. Go on with what you are doing, only do it better than before. It may not seem so exciting as something new, but it is vitally important.

"2. Begin now to learn all you can about food values and food substitutes. Some day, we may need to use substitutes in case future buying possibilities be curtailed.

"3. Guard against hysteria in buying. There is no shortage of food as yet so there is no need to buy, as many women have done, 10 to 20 pounds of sugar at a time.

"4. Know your facts before you start rumors about food shortage or food profiteering. The defense program has had nothing to do with any rise in the price of foods.

"5. Build a back log of skills against a day of emergency. Learn to handle tools and machines well. Women are fitted for jobs requiring dexterity, alertness and use of light in-

Mr. Robert Humber To Lecture March 20 At Club Meeting

Outstanding Speaker to Talk To International Relations Group at Alumnae House

Catherine Paris, president of the International Relations club, announces that Mr. Robert Humber will lecture on the "Plans for a Federation of the World" at 7:30 p.m., March 20, at the Alumnae house.

Mr. Humber is well prepared to lecture on his subject. He was graduated from Wake Forest college, after which he studied law at Harvard university. From Harvard he received a Rhodes scholarship. He furthered his study at Oxford university in England. During the vacations of his years in college, he traveled through the countries of Western Europe and the British Isles.

Studied in Paris

Three or four years after his work at Oxford, he went to Paris to continue his study of political science, political economics, and national relations. For 15 years, he lived in Paris where he has had great success in the oil industry.

About six years ago, Mr. Humber organized a school of international relations in Austria. He brought the leading figures in this field from America and Europe to lecture there. This school did much to further the study of international relations.

In the spring of 1940, Mr. Humber had returned from America after a nine months visit to his home in Paris. Because of the war and the unsettled conditions around Paris, he sent his wife and family to stay in southern France. Mr. Humber wanted to leave Paris until it was necessary. Then he drove south to join his family only a little ahead of the invaders.

Returns to Home State

The Humber family returned to Mr. Humber's original home in Greenville, North Carolina, in July, 1940. Since then he has been working on his world federation plans.

Since his return to the United States, Mr. Hunter has bought an island off the coast of North Carolina which formerly belonged to his family. There, on Davis Island, he has gathered prominent men, who, like him, are interested in a world federation. They elected a committee to take their plans before the State legislature for ratification. Then Mr. Humber plans for the senators and representatives to present the plans to the federal government.

Not only members of the International Relations club, but all girls who are interested, in this subject are invited to hear Mr. Humber lecture on March 20.

Barkley League Wins Gym Meet; Kirkland Receives Hall Honors

Annie Mae Parrish Holds First Place in Gymnastic Feats for March 7

Approximately 1500 enthusiastic, cheering spectators properly saluted "Old Glory" at the annual gym meet Friday, March 7. The attendance this year was considerably above that of last year.

The height of the excitement came with the announcement of Dr. W. C. Jackson that the Barkley league, composed of North Spencer, "A," "B," and Coit, was the winning league. Kirkland was the winning hall. The girls who received honors for excellence at gymnastics were Annie Mae Parrish, Martha Charnock, Lora Walters, Betty Lippman, Alice Calder, Edna Gibson, Betty Blauvelt, Mary White Thompson, and Mary Margaret Binford.

Relay Race

The highlight of the evening was the obstacle relay race between the house presidents, hall counselors, and faculty members who formed teams in their respective leagues.

The demonstration program was divided in two parts. The first part showed the contributions of these countries of the Old World to American culture—England, Palestine, Germany, Sweden, France, Scotland, Bohemia, and Denmark. The second part of the program was devoted to typical activities of American life, including dances from New England, South America, Mexico, North Carolina, and pyramids from Woman's college.

American Flag

The entire meet was climaxed by the formation of an American Flag of Sports formed by girls representing various types of recreational activities. The flag was created by the red, white, and blue kerchiefs worn by the girls.

The Woman's college band added much to the festivities, furnishing music throughout the program. It concluded the program with the playing of "God Bless America" and "College Song," which the spectators sang.

Miss Ethel Martus and Miss Dorothy Davis were the faculty heads of the meet. Lora Walters was the student head.

Ford Dance Group To Visit W. C. Campus

Members of the Ford Dance group will visit the Woman's college physical education department, with the compliments of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford, on Monday and Tuesday, March 17 and 18. This group will give instruction in the dances which were used for social purposes in the 1800's at 4:30 p. m. on each afternoon.

Benjamin Lovett, author of several books on traditional dances, will lead the group. Mr. Lovett brings several assistants and his orchestra to aid him. Lancers, quadrilles, minuets and many other types of rollicking country dances will be included on the program.

Mr. Lovett would especially like to have teachers and recreational instructors attend the program. Any college student who wishes to participate in the dancing may do so by seeing any member of the physical education staff. Visitors will be welcome both afternoons and may sit in the galleries.

Because of the appearance of Mr. Lovett at the Square Dance club, the social dancing class will not meet on Monday evening, March 17. It will meet on Monday, March 24.

Woman's College Ranks Fourth in Survey On Participation of Students in Athletics

As the 50th anniversary of the founding of Woman's college approaches, it is well to take inventory of the recreational activities and see where this college stands in comparison with other schools. According to a recent survey, the participation of Woman's college students in recreational and athletic programs as extra-curricula activities is fair but it could be better. Of the 13 schools studied, Woman's college ranked only fourth in the percentage of students participating. Woman's college's average season participation is 35% of the student body. The four colleges with a higher record are Florida State College for Women, 99%; Wellesley, 62%; Brenau, 42%.

Schools in Survey

The schools included in the survey were: Hollins college, Virginia; Wellesley college, Massachusetts; Texas State College for Women, Texas; Georgia State College for Women, Georgia; Mills college, California; Brenau college, Georgia; Meredith college, North Carolina; Converse college, South Carolina; Vassar college, New York; Randolph Macon Woman's college, Virginia; Florida State College for Women, Florida; and Woman's College of the University of North Carolina.

The reason Woman's college is not first in participation apparently is not because a wide program is not provided. It ranks, however, in the group offering the most activities. In the future the program will be even broader, for the Athletic association is working on plans to include more activities. The new lake also furnishes facilities that will make it possible to offer more sports and recreation. Other colleges that offer especially wide programs, including 17 or more activities, are Florida State College for Women, Wellesley, Mills college, Georgia State College for Women, and Vassar. Woman's college ranks with Wellesley and Florida State College for Women in the number of activities offered, according to questionnaires filled out by the athletic associations of the respective schools.

Hit Parade

If there were a Hit Parade for sports in women's colleges for 1941, the election would be as follows (one vote per person participating): swimming, tennis, camping, badminton, hockey, basketball, ballroom dancing, hiking, squash, Red Cross life saving. If there were a two-hour program and more sports could be included, perhaps these would be mentioned: modern dancing, riding, roller skating, golf, soft ball, archery, bowling, baseball, canoeing, crew, outings, volley ball, skiing, fencing, cycling, lacrosse, gymnastics, Red Cross aquatic instruction, battle board tennis, ping-pong, folk dancing, soccer, diving, and fishing.

Old Attitude

A school's attitude toward sports cannot be explained by the old alibi, "The place is just too big for school spirit." Figures obtained from the various schools indicate that the first two places in percentage participation went to colleges with an enrollment of over a thousand; the third place went to a smaller school; and fourth and fifth to those of over a thousand. This would seem to indicate that the size of the school has very little effect on the interest shown in sports.

Tournaments and awards always are a problem in a recreational program. Though some believe that awards are a poor practice, they still produce results, for the two schools that have abandoned them entirely hold 10th and 13th places in percentage participation. Of the 11 schools that give awards, seven use a point system and four do not. Of the schools of over a thousand enrollment, Wellesley and Woman's college regard inter-hall tournaments as the most successful, while Florida State College for Women, Vassar, and Georgia State College for Women regard inter-class tournaments as the most successful. All of the larger schools have both types of tournaments except Georgia State College for Women, which organizes its program entirely on inter-class basis.

Two Schools

Two schools, Georgia State College for Women and Texas State College for Women, have in accord with the increased emphasis on recreation named their associations Recreation association instead of Athletic association. Recreation associations include a wider range of activities than Athletic associations.

Co-recreation is also one of the newer trends in recreational programs. It is worth noting that the schools with the most co-recreational activities also have the most participation. Of the larger schools only one has no co-recreation. Among the activities that boys participate in are badminton, squash, swimming, battle board tennis, ping-pong, tennis, golf, baseball, social dancing, canoeing, bowling, riding, skiing, square dancing, "play nights" and archery.

Annual Swim Meet Will Be March 21

The Dormitory Splash party (formerly the Swim meet) will be held March 21 at 8 p. m. in the gymnasium pool. The only requirement for participation in the party is the attendance of at least five practices. The Splash party will be very informal and for all types of ability.

Following are the events that will be run: 25 yards free style, breast and side stroke for form, balloon race, back and trudgen for form, medley relay, plunge, elementary back stroke race, elementary back and breast stroke for form, and novelty relay and diving. At this time the winner on the Marathon race will be announced. The Barkley league is ahead at present with 280 lengths. Phillips follows closely with 260, and then Alexander and Elliot with 190 and 140, respectively.

Economist Hold Meet

It Says Here That March Has Influence on Styles

Grab your hats, gals! Here comes March and that lion of hers fast on our heels. Hair, hats, ribbon, skirts, umbrellas, and papers will soon be taking their annual fling. Girls, looking like advertisements for zephyr automobiles, will be scooting up trees and poking around in bushes looking for that old bean they loved so well.

Fashions will be definitely affected. Hair will be parted in patches and worn in the back or the front of the head, according to the direction of the wearer. Skirt lengths will be shortened several inches at frequent intervals. Ribbons will go out. Hats may become extinct, or they may be remodeled and worn as neck bands or they may be cut up and eaten as salad.

Anyone who leaves loose papers around on her desk will be sure to find them rearranged on her return. Term papers can often be assembled in this manner and scarcely affected as to organization.

Umbrellas will be indistinguishable from other flying debris.

The war in Europe will go on with little interruption. That's March for you.

Having just returned from a six-months expedition to the Philippines, Captain Craig will have first hand information and selected color motion pictures of the Philippines. He is co-designer of the Craig-Nohl diving dress, the second major development in diving since 1823.
